OXFORD.—EAST OXFORD THEATRE.—Lessees, East Oxford Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stuart's company opened here on Easter Monday for a stock season with The Shaughraun. Mr. Karl Edwards gives a lively impersonation of Conn, and is generally amusing; Mr. E. Holland Day does well as Robert Ffolliott, and Mr. John Soden is natural as Father Dolan; Miss Evie Conway enacts Arte O'Neal; Miss Mabel Parker is successful as Mrs. O'Kelly; and Miss Elma C. Turner delineates Claire Ffolliott effectively.

NEW THEATRE, LTD. — Managing-Director, Mr. C. C. Dorrill; Assistant-Manager, Mr. G. T. Lucas. — Remembering the great success that attended their variety season last September, the management have this vacation again made arrangements with Mr Milton Bode for a similar season, which opened on Easter Monday, when the theatre was packed at both houses. Mephisto tops the bill with his wonderful illusions; Vandinoff is uncommonly good as a lightning artist; Hall Bert gives a marvellous exhibition as the elastic comedian; Charles Grantley scores heavily as an unusual comedian; and other successful turns are contributed by Tom E. Dean, new comedian; Mollie Watson, vocalist and comedienne; the Sisters Dudley, vocal duettists; and Miss Ada Tilley and company, in the farcical episode A Call to Arms. The premier Imperial pictures conclude a capital programme.

PAISLEY.—PAISLEY THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—The Lizzetti troupe of lady acrobats and tumblers, singers and dancers, top the bill, and their versatile entertainment is thoroughly appreciated; Tom Jones is a comedian of quaint and original methods; the Macdonald troupe of Highland dancers give an artistic and smart exhibition; J. C. Lawrence, Scotch comedian, performs in his usual humorous manner; Mary J. Meek, ballad vocalist, is warmly applauded; as a ventriloquist Cyril Marcill furnishes a capital entertainment; Mollie Angarde is a dainty comedienne and sings well; and the Delmore Comedy Trio keep the fun well sustained in their clever skit In a Pix.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jack R. Bostock.—Lady Mansel and her talented juveniles contribute the chief turn to this week's programme, and are as entertaining as ever; Lily Burnand scores as a burlesque actress, her singing and deportment being alike excellent; Chorley and Conner are a couple of smart patter comedians and clever dancers; Billy Oswald and Madge Locke are amusing in their farcical sketch *The Prince's.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Agate.—Large holiday crowds testify to the continued popularity of Two Little Drummer Boys. In the title-rôles the Misses Maggie English and Maud Douglas give an excellent account of themselves. Mr. Edward Bekker gives an admirable rendering of Captain Kingsley, V.C. The play is well staged and acted by an able company. Prince's Pictures precede each performance.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Captain E. H. Warren-Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—Of a well-varied and entertaining programme the chief item is a realistic episode entitled The Adder's Tooth, presented by Louis Taylor's company. It is an exciting miniature melodrama, which holds the attention of the audience throughout. The Six Cattaneos are a clever and amusing troupe of hand-balancers and acrobats; S. Bedford and company provide much mirth by their farcical sketch, entitled The Second Mrs. Chester; the Sisters Deyland are charming duettists and danseuses; and the Raymond Trio are a clever troupe of musicians and dancers. The following also contribute excellent turns: Lily Dunne, Harry Nelson (comedian), Allsopp and Beckwith (comedy duo), and Payne's Bio-Photoscope.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—This house was absolutely packed on Monday, the star attraction being Little Tich, whose songs "The Park Keeper," "Queen of the Fairies," and "A Risky Thing to Do," sung with his well-known drollery, kept the audience in continuous laughter. George Newburn gave clever impersonations of well-known music-hall stars. Other artists winning favour were Hayes and Watson, Curwen and Bell, Maud Esmond, Margaret Ismay and her white coons, and Jack Rossiyn.

King's.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Claude Marner.—Three crowded houses tested this week's fare with evident appreciation. On Monday a military episode, The King, was elaborately presented by Reginald Eyre and company, Mr. Henry Bedford's portrayal of the old sergeant being very good; the coloured comedians Scott and Whaley are laughter-makers; Samuel Eton, the silent comedian, is very comical; Mr. Arthur Aldridge's fine tenor voice is heard to advantage; Seener and Fridkin's Imperial Russian Troupe of singers and dancers are admired; a farcical skit, Cupid's Arms, is provided by Frank Danby; and J. C. Piddock, Iris Banfield, Hector and Lottetta, the Christie Duo, and the Anzonia Trio are also on the bill.

Preston.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, the Exors. of the late W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Alban Newton.—The attraction for Easter is The Chorus Lady, including Mr. William Mollison and Miss Annie Hughes. Mr. William Mollison is exactly suited to the part of Dan Mallory, which he portrays in a most natural manner; Mr. Fred A. Marston is a success as Patrick O'Brien; Mr. Henry Deas in the part of Dick Crawford is decidedly good; Messrs. Ernest Kendrick and James Calender, as the two stable boys, the Duke and Jakey, acquit themselves capably; Miss Agnese D'Aragon gives a clever character sketch of the old wardrobe woman at the theatre; Miss Josephine Woodward plays with feeling as Mrs. O'Brien; Miss Elsie Vron-Neville as Nora O'Brien displays much ability; and Miss Annie Hughes as Patricia O'Brien wins all hearts, and turns her audience from laughter to tears, and vice versâ, in a truly marvellous manner.

Royal Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—As mirth-providers it would be hard to beat the Six Brothers Luck in their sketch H.M.S. Perhaps; Ida Kessanly's fox-terriers are a marvel of animal training; the Claymore Trio, dancing club jugglers, give a clever and novel turn; the Six White Boys, in speciality singing and dancing, come in for a good reception; Hayman and Franklin's players in a laughable Hebrew sketch Toplitsky cause much merriment; and A Lesson in Domestic Economy on the Bioscope concludes.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page; General-Manageress, Mrs. M. M. Clarkson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. E. Clarkson.—Fred Granville's Productions, Ltd., in the domestic drama, An Old Man's Darling, is doing good business here this week.—Mr. S. Radcliffe as George Ricroft is excellent; Mr. Stanley S. Gordon as Jack Lee plays in a natural and convincing manner; Mr. Ernest Wingfield as Cuthbert Blackstand makes an accomplished villain; Mr. Frank Masters is capital as the cool American Silas C. Spratt; Mr. E. W. Duxfield is a typical Parson Hartley; Mr. Bert Dench as Billy Barleycorn adds much to the humour; and Miss Jennie Hallworth is a vivacious Molly. Miss Violet Wingfield is clever as Dick; Miss Lillian Beaumont displays ability as Mary Winters; Miss Nina Vaughton in the title-rôle of Bessie Earnshaw gives a sympathetic rendering; and Miss Emilie Entwistle both acts and sings well. Miss Lily Ashby's Martha Earnshaw is a capital bit of acting.

Radcliffe.—Grand Opera House.—Sole Owner, Mr. Geo. T. Santé; Acting-Manager, Mr. James Boothman.—Mr. Evelyn A'Dell and company are receiving much support in The Old Home. As Daddy Dean Mr. Charles Franmore gives a most realistic rendering; while Miss Nina Blake Adams as Hazel Dean is seen to perfection. The acting of Mr. Evelyn A'Dell as the Rev. Eric Armstrong deserves high commendation; Miss Harriette Loydall as Bridget Donoghon is effective throughout; Mr. Fred L. Connynhame deserves praise as Sam Adams; and the villainies of Lord Avondale are in the safe hands of Mr. Horatio Sinclair. The elaborate properties of the third act are also worthy of special mention.

Ramsgate.—Royal Palace Theatre.—Under the sole direction of Mr. Chas. Evans; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry Bowman.—Mr. Dickie Clare's comedians have been diverting large audiences at the Palace Theatre this week with performances of the lively musical play, Lucky Lisa. Miss Madge Brownie is delightfully vivacious in the title-rôle, and her contributions help in large measure to enhance the success of the show; Mr. Clare himself is admirable in a comic triple part; as the Judge he is immense; and others who do good work are Miss Vesta Brownie, Miss Constance Bellamy, and Mr. J. W. Benson. Smart dances are performed by the Jesmond Trio.

Marina Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. J. Attack.—Holiday audiences thoroughly enjoyed the programmes given twice nightly here. The animated pictures are varied and interesting, and Mal Vern, who is described as "the laughing cyclone," has given some much-appreciated turns.

Royal Victoria Theatre and Pavilion.—Proprietor, Ramsgate Corporation; Lessee, Mr. T. R. Price; Manager, Mr. Charles Price.—On Sunday evening the Pavilion, which promises to do good business under its new and enterprising management, was packed to hear a capital programme of music by the band of the 2nd Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers. During the week the fine skating rink at the Pavilion has been extensively patronised. The bookings for the summer dramatic season are very attractive.

Rawtenstall.—Grand Theatre.—Lessees, The Manchester Electric Theatres, Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. E. Renshaw.—The pictures here include All on Account of Milk, Generous Rivals, Music Hath Charms, Pygmalion, A Forgotten Watch, Performing Lions, The Sham Sword Swallower, and Quick, I'm on Fire! most of which are exceptionally interesting or humorous. The variety turns are supplied by Gertie Rex, a charming comedienne, who is deservedly applauded; and Hector and Lorraine, described as novelty grotesque comedians, in their series of original items, are heartily applauded.

Reading.—Royal County Theatre.—Proprietors and Managers, Mr. Milton Bode and Mr. Edward Compton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. A. Evans.—Mrs. Brown-Potter, supported by a strong company, is appearing this week in the powerful French drama Madame X. Mrs. Brown-Potter displays her histrionic powers to the greatest advantage in the character of Jacqueline Fleuriot; Mr. Leonard Fagden is excellent in the part of Louis Fleuriot; Mr. Douglas Allington is efficient as Raymond; the humorous element is well provided for by Mr. Thomas Sidney as Perissard, and Mr. H. Breckmann as Merivel; and all the other parts are in good hands. The company is under the able management of Messrs. Baring Bros. (by arrangement with Chas. Frohman and H. W. Savage).—A matinée was given on Wednesday, which was well attended, and good business has been done throughout the week.

The Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco; Stage-Manager, Mr. A. Burridge.—A splendid holiday programme is being presented here for Easter week, Brown, Le Clerq, and company appear successfully in a comedy absurdity, Black Justice; the Sisters Robertson are acceptable duettists and dancers; Corcoran Bros. present a clever musical speciality; the Seaside Girls give an up-to-date "Bathing" scena in dashing style; Will Harris and Charles Banks are both good comedians; Florrie Delamere is an accomplished comedienne and specialty dancer; and Grant and Grant, American octoroons, gain great applause for their excellent singing and dancing. The Bioscope completes the show.

Vaudeville Electric Theatre (Broad-street).—The popularity of this place of entertainment is shown by the fact that it has had to be considerably enlarged. The extension was opened last week, and a capital series of living pictures, including reproductions of the Boat Race and Grand National Steeplechase, have drawn crowded houses throughout the holidays.

West's Picture Palace (West-street).—A splendid series of pictures are being displayed here, and excellent business is being done.

The Roller Skating Rink, Vastern-road, has been thronged during the holidays, many enthusiasts remaining throughout the day on Good Friday and Easter Monday. The floor is in excellent condition and a good band adds to the attractions.

Ryde.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessees, The Cinematograph Industrial Corporation, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. George Aubrey; Manager, Mr. Chas. Collins.—Apparently animated pictures are to be a permanent attraction in Ryde, as each week has brought an increasing number of patrons to the theatre. On Monday, when a new arrangement of two houses a night was started, Mr. George Aubrey, the general-manager, had the greatest difficulty in coping with the influx of visitors, and hundreds had to be turned away at each performance. An especially attractive programme was presented, the films including a representation of the Life of Napoleon, and a pathetic episode entitled Laddie. Amongst the variety turns, Miss Maudie Zedna, a talented acrobatic dancer, found favour.

Salford.—Prince of Wales's.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds is producing The King's Romance here. An account appears elsewhere.

Regent Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. R. H. Lee.—Dave Samuels, the American Hebrew comedian, smartly heads an excellent programme this week. The Richards Trio of comedy acrobats do some very clever work; The Broken Statue is a very comical absurdity by Charles Harvey and company; Talbot and Pearce give a delightful Japanese musical scena; May Lilian Levey gets much applause for her male impersonation songs; Lily Black, comedienne, Louis J. Seymour, light comedian, Rose Gower, vocalist, W. B. Raby, comedian, and Dorothy Watson, in songs at the piano also appear with advantage.

Royal Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; General-Manager, Mr. H. Winstanley; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. J. Boyle.—Fred Karno's Football Match, with Will Poluski as Stiffy, the goalkeeper, keeps the house in roars; Dave Carter has a good reception for his tenor songs; Zeleski does some marvellous contortionistic work. Smart turns are also given by Ruby Roya, comedienne and dancer; Cadwell and Verne, in pretty scena Early-Closing Day, and Fanny Humber, in musical bells, &c., act.

Opera House and Assembly Rooms, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Shepherd.—The Regent Animated Pictures this week include Wild Duck Hunting, Maggie's Dolly Day with Boy Scouts, The Course of True Love, Sword and the King, Cloister Touch, and Pals. Mr. Tom Sherlock is assisted by the audience with his song "Because I love you."

Central Hall (Blackfriars Road).—Proprietors, Matt Raymond Co.; Manager, Mr. A. H. Gilbert.—The Raymond Pictures continue to draw well this week, and include several excellent films.

New Central Hall (Pendleton).—Proprietor, Mr. Thomas Whiteley; Manager, Mr. Gilbert Bruce.—Love's Tragedy, A White Lie, A Brave Woman's Resource, Poor Musician, Eloping with Auntie, and Oxford and Cambridge Boatrace are among this week's films here.

Scarborough.—Londesborough Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Waddington; Manager, Mr. J. T. Carpenter.—Mr. Chas. Constant's company opened here on Saturday night with Florodora. Mr. Johnny Schofield causes considerable merriment as Anthony Tweedlepunch; the rôle of Cyrus Gilfain is very ably sustained by Mr. Stanley White; Miss Kate Lester is distinctly successful as Lady Holyrood; Mr. Courtier Dutton is a commendable Frank Abercoed; Mr. Johnny Junior is good as Arthur Dougal; Miss Danby is a pleasing Angela Gilfain; and Miss Daisy Lake gives a good rendering of Dolores. The minor parts are in capable hands. "La Danse des Apaches" is cleverly executed by Miss Josephine Ellis and Mr. Johnny Junior.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Garside; Manager, Mr. F. P. Morgan.—Auguste Van Biene and Son's company are appearing here in Man and Wife, with Mr. Jerrold Ord as Paul. Mr. George Overa as the Cripple, and Miss Kate Hallam as Marcelle.

The Spa.—Proprietors, Cliff Bridge Co.; Manager, Mr. H. Chambers.—The musical season commenced here on Thursday, the 24th ult., when an excellent programme was submitted, those responsible for the same being the Baroness Von Eckardstein's private band, with Mr. C. H. Allan conducting, and the Queer Quakers' Costume Concert Party.

The Aquarium.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. W. Kitchingman; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Bench.—A lengthy programme here includes the troupe of lady swimmers, Victor Newman (impersonator), the New Macs, Johnny Dwyer, Ethel Thompson (vocalist), the RaHis, in a sketch, E. J. Sheldon (comedian), J. Holland and company, in a small sketch, Rex Kempton (dancer), and the Bioscope.

The New Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock.—Mr. Louis Calvert's company is the Easter attraction here with Sunday, with Miss Janet Lind in the title-rôle.

Seacombe.—King's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Kiernan.—Mr. Frank Bertram's company is here with The Breed of the Treshams. Lieut. Beresby, "the Rat," receives a clever and powerful interpretation from Mr. Sydney Bland; Mr. Alfred Holles presents a vigorous and convincing portraiture of Viscount Dorsington, and the unenviable rôle of Col. Clement Hungerford is skilfully played by Mr. George Butler; Mr. Walter Jackson gets in some sound work as Cornet the Hon. Francis Tresham, and Miss Grace Harlington scores as Batty; Miss Mildred Hodson proves herself admirably adapted for the exacting part of the Hon. Margaret Hungerford, which she plays with commendable ability. The massed scenes are excellently managed, and the play is a distinct success.

Sheerness.—Hippodrome.—Managing Director, Mr. Adam Seebold; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ted Williams.—Crowded audiences witnessed the two performances here on Monday. Mrs. Mark Melford and company head the bill in the screaming absurdity Planted, and cause much laughter. The scenery is excellent. Harry Bancroft, actor-vocalist, in his well-known style, contributes several pleasing items. A notable turn is that of Sydney Russell's Four Sydney Girls, who have a flattering reception; Emmie Ames does exceedingly well in a charming song scena, "Emmie's Christmas Tree"; other numbers are contributed by Harry Desmond, eccentric comedian; Lillie Hales, queen of the wooden shoes; Bert Anderson, conjurer; Tom Garland, ventriloquist; and the Hippodrome Pictures.

Sheffield.—Lyceum Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—On Easter Monday a crowded audience received with loud and enthusiastic applause Mr. Walter Howard's romantic play, The Prince and the Beggar Maid, magnificently mounted, and acted with the requisite spirit and dash by Messrs. Paumier and Howard's powerful company. The rôle of the gallant hero, Prince Hildred, fitted Mr. Alfred Goddard like the proverbial glove, and Mr. Walter Howard's Prince Olaf was a most commendable and convincing performance. In the pleasing part of the Maid Miss Verity Page realised the author's conception; Miss Annie Saker looked charming as Princess Monica, and she acted in a graceful and effective manner; Mr. Victor Rae was good as Michael; and all the other characters were played with energy, tempered by discretion. The scenery, costumes, and accessories were admirable, and the entire performance showed artistic care and perfect stage-management.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Henfrey Aldred.—The new and interesting domestic and sensational drama, When a Lass Loves, well staged and excellently acted, is being performed to large holiday audiences this week by Mr. Tom Cruven's company.

Alexandra Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—On Monday Mr. Will Casey's company opened to a good house in the new emotional comedy-drama, An Unwedded Wife. The great local favourite, Miss Chrissie Dunbar, was a handsome, well-dressed, and emotional representative of Lady Marion, and good work was done by Miss Ethel Spence, Miss Annie Mitchell, Little Doris, and Messrs. E. St. Clair Forbes, Will Casey, Gilbert Elvin, Arthur Cheeves, H. Hammerton, Frank Masters, E. Turner, R. Younge, and W. Fisher.

Empire Palace.—The Moss Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—The enterprising management have provided a novelty to latter-day audiences this week in the shape of a genuine Italian comic ballet d'action, performed with characteristic grace and animation by Signor Rossi's ballet troupe, with special scenery and effects. The generous bill of fare also includes Miss Alexandra Dagmar, a splendidly costumed burlesque artist; the elegant and talented Sisters Caselli, vocalists and dancers; the Tom Davies Trio, sensational loopists; Messrs. Farr and Farland, comedians and patter merchants; Mr. Dion Wade, comic singer; the Channings, novelty act; Miss Dot Hardy, soubrette; Mr. Charles Santon, vocalist; the Bioscope, with artistic new pictures; and Mlle. Juliette's famous trained sea lions, in a pleasing and humorous entertainment.

The Hippodrome.—The Thomas Barrasford Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Poole.—A fine array of talent was billed here for the holidays, the following artists being well received by big houses on Monday:—Ye Colonial Septette, in a vocal sketch, "Old Halloween"; the Three Braggs, acrobats, in "The Human Bridge"; the Forsythes, in a humorous trifle, La Poupée; Miss Dorothy Gould, a chic comedienne; Mr. Dan Whitley, a quaint and diverting comic vocalist; Miss Lily Bell, serio-comic; the Waltons, lively Chinese acrobats and drolls; Mr. George Rapley, comedian; the Bijou Troupe of clever juveniles, in Pansy's Birthday; Mr. Herbert Dickeson's company, in a laughable farce, A Fair Exchange; and Miss Alice Hoodless, in an artistic and well-staged entertainment realising famous Academy pictures.

Shrewsbury.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Director, Mr. W. Yates Gregory; General-Manager, Mr. Thos. Baugh.—Mr. J. Leigh Cameron's excellent company was here on the first three nights of this week with the exciting drama, The Great Awakening. Mr. Chris A. Olga played with care and ability the part of James Selby, an escaped convict; Mr. Andrew Esmond made a dignified and highly successful Sir Henry Marton; Mr. Basil Mitchell merited considerable praise as Jack Marton; Mr. Tom Arkinstall as Guy Logan, the unprincipled adventurer, performed the part most creditably; Mr. Chas. H. Mortimer was a manly and thoroughly capable Capt. Harry Lambart; Mr. Walter Rousby as Billy Brass, his servant, extracted plenty of humour from the rôle; Mr. Harry Hoyland acted creditably as Richard Wilson; Mr. Harry Spencer made a capital waiter as Antoine; Mr. Neville Giordans as Dr. Lang acquitted himself satisfactorily; and Mr. R. J. Turner as Sergt. Brew was worthy of praise.

Smethwick.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. C. Barnard; Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson.—Another Man's Wife, presented by Mr. Fred Granville's Productions, Limited, is proving a great attraction. Mr. Alfred D. Adams presents a finished study of Carlos De Vergas; Mr. Fred Granville sustains the character of the villain, Paul Bernstoff, with realism; Mr. Geoffrey Sutherland is responsible for a manly study of Gilbert Eardley; an amusing portrayal of Sam Smiles comes from Mr. Willie Reid, ably assisted by Miss Marion Mayne as Tibby; Mr. Leonard Marshall is a droll Andy Bremmer; Mr. Fred Forde a dignified Count Pelikoff; Mr. Edwin Davis appears to advantage as Colonel Matterson; and Lucy De Vergas' fortunes are portrayed in a distinctly effective manner by Miss Ruby Loncraine. Miss Lilian Radbourne ably portrays Inez De Castro, an adventuress; Miss Lily Griffin makes a lively Maisie.

Southampton.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fredk. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Weston.—The holiday attraction is Pinkie and the Fairies, charmingly presented by Messrs. Max Montesole and Angus McLeod's company. The juvenile performers are all wonderfully clever, Miss Kathleen Yorke being a dainty Pinkie; Miss Aileen Faithful is a charming Elf Pickle; Miss Hetty Kenyon, a smart dancer, as Queen of the Fairies; Miss Dollie Summers an amusing Herald; and Miss Lucie Caine a fascinating Cinderella. All the "grown-ups" are capital, and the mounting is superb.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and W. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Yardley.—The Easter bill of fare is a most attractive one. Vesta Tilley is, of course, the trump card, and her delightful male impersonations are received with thunders of applause. She sings five songs at every performance, and then the audience clamour for more. Fred Russell and his "Coster Joe" constitute the ventriloquial star, and the programme is further contributed to by Fred Evans, in a smart protean skit; Bert Weston, a clever comedian; the Dixon Trio, banjoists and dancers; Zethus, cornet soloist and imitator; and Addie Adell, vocalist. The Hippodrome pictures depict the Oxford and Cambridge Boatrace.

Palace.—Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Trussell.—The principal attraction here is A. C. Lilly and company, in the military sketch Drummed Out, which is very successfully played. The Selbinis give a wonderful cycling act; Tom Gott is an entertaining dialect comedian; Gladys Witton, vocalist, Baker and de Sales, Reg. Ewen, and Burley and Burley also successfully contribute.

The Philharmonic Hall and Empire Theatre are both receiving good patronage. The films, which cover a wide series of subjects, appeal to all tastes.

Southport.—Opera House and Winter Gardens.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Percy Hutchison; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Clarkson.—A great attraction is provided for the Easter holiday week by the Moody-Manners Grand Opera company, who opened here on Monday, in Faust. A magnificent interpretation of Gounod's celebrated opera was presented to a packed and enthusiastic house. Mr. Charles Manners once again appeared in the rôle of Mephistopheles, which he depicted with weird and realistic effect, his grand vocal ability and high histrionic power being warmly applauded; Miss Kate Anderson presented a brilliant and charming study of the beautiful Marguerita, her singing throughout, especially in the famous Jewel Song being superb; the title-part was sustained by Mr. Seth Hughes with striking success, alike in a dramatic and vocal sense, his fine tenor voice being heard to great advantage; Mr. Lewys James was a highly commendable representative of Valentine, his vocal numbers being finely rendered; Miss Bessie Weir found favour with her artistic portrayal of Siebel. The choruses were admirably rendered, and the orchestra, under the able conductorship of Mr. Cuthbert Hawley, contributed to the success of a very enjoyable performance. The programme for the week includes Samson and Delilah, Tannhäuser, Carmen, La Tosca, and Il Trovatore.

South Shields.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. John Coulson.—Mr. T. Arthur Jones presents When Other Lips to crowded houses. Mr. John Davidson portrays the hero Ted Daunton in a breezy manner; Mr. T. Arthur Jones is very successful as P. B. Jenkins, M.D.; Miss Marie Daventry is a sweet and charming Ruth Lingley; Miss Florence Melrose-Millett submits a powerful delineation of Octavia; the comedy element is strongly represented by Mr. Charles Preece as Tommy Neccles, Mr. F. Thorpe Tracey as Duddle Topwash, and Miss Mary Neilson as Kitty Topwash. The mounting is all that can be desired.

Empire Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Ernest Bridgen.—The chief item is George Lashwood, with a budget of new songs, who has a flattering reception; a powerful and romantic sketch, entitled The Last of the Desmonds, is well received; Mabel Mavis, wonderful musician and entertainer on the glassophone and piano, is much appreciated; Edith Fink is a dainty comedienne; good vocalism is submitted by Leah Arden; Phil Herman, vocal comedian, Mme. Mercer, illustrated songstress, Consell and Mills, and the Bioscope complete the programme.

Spennymoor.—Cambridge Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. David Collins.—The principal attraction here in a strong list of varieties is Consul, the almost man, and large crowds attend nightly; Will Netta's Singing Jockeys, Miss Daisy Silcott, comedienne, Mr. W. H. Downs, coloured tenor, Ess and Hoey, Canadian ski and skate dancers, and Jack and Willie, hand and head balancers, are also in the bill.

St. Helens.—Theatre and Opera House.—General-Manager, Mr. A. McLeod Loader; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Harry E. Johnson.—The special attraction here is The Bondman, presented by Mr. Wentworth Croke's principal company, and crowded houses are the order of the night. Mr. Philip Darien's Jason is an admirable piece of acting, which thoroughly pleased the audience, and at the same time moves them to pity; no less successful is Mr. Stanley Harrison, who, in the part of Michael Sunlocks, wins golden opinions; Mr. Wilfrid Beckwith makes an excellent Adam Fairbrother; and Miss Madge Lanerton gives a realistic touch to the rôle of Mrs. Fairbrother. Highly finished character studies are supplied by Mr. W. H. Rotheram, who doubles Grandfather and Father Ferrati. All praise is due to Miss Violet Macaree for her portrayal of Greeba, which is full of tender womanly feeling and deep pathos. The play is staged elaborately.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. Leo Welsker.—The Harvey Boys, in their capital turn, give great satisfaction; Mr. and Mrs. Alaskas are clever; Ross and Lewis gain much applause for droll eccentricity; Little Pam is a smart boy; and Edith Haley is encored for her songs. Harry Bickley is very amusing in dialogue; and Bert Woodward's bicycle act is well done.

Stockport.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—Mr. Morton Powell's company, in A Girl's Temptation, has proved a capital attraction for the Easter holidays. Mr Frank V. Fenn gives a powerful impersonation of Guy Warren; Mr. Clifton Earle acts effectively as Mark Claw; as Basile Warren Mr. Charles Herbert portrays the character with ability; the Hon. Charles Clade is pleasingly presented by Mr. Tim Handley; and Mr. Freddie Bentley is genuinely funny as Sammy Sniggles. Miss Gertrude Gilbert acts feelingly as Kate Stirling; Miss Winnie Donovan is a capable Lady Constance Heathfield; and Miss Blanche Lee appears with marked success as Annie Brown.

Empire.—Proprietors, The Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—The popular comedians Cullen and Carthy and Little Cluley are again here, creating abundant laughter, and another favourite is Adah Payne, who sings delightfully The De Breans in their Japanese performance are entertaining; Arabella Allen in characters from famous authors gives clever and interesting impersonations; Mollie Doon is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; Tennyson and Wallis are amusing comedians; a laughable sketch is presented by Ralph and Nellie Howard; and Joe S. Atkin meets with a fair share of success.

Stockton-on-Tees.—Castle Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Cecil Imeson.—The Woman in the Case is here this week. Miss Winifred Pearson, as Claire Foster, plays with dramatic skill; Miss Kathleen Russell makes a fine Margaret Rolfe; Mr. W. Kershaw a powerful Julian Rolfe; Mr. James Lindsay excels in the part of Thompson. Her Ladyship's Guest precedes.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Stainton.—The Kremo Family, one of the finest combinations of Risley acrobats, gave a wonderful performance here; Bert Williams, ventriloquist, is popular; Tom Kelso and Edie George have a successful sporting act, Yoicks and a Yoke, distinguished by excellent singing and dancing; Blanco White and Miss Clifford are interesting vaudeville entertainers; Leolin is a clever novelty juggler; Stanley and Groenop submit a banjo speciality act; Frank Solbey is a pleasing comedian; the Countees are harmonising duettists; and the Bioscope concludes.

Grand Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—The romantic play The Woman Pays is presented by Mr. Thorne's company. Miss Alice Greenwood as Madge Armstrong is all that can be desired; Miss Kate Blair makes a good Nell Morland; Mr. Phil Harper a powerful Sid Armstrong; and Mr. Raymond Thomas is very good as Roger Marchant.

Stoke-on-Trent.—The Hippodrome.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Arthur Burton.—The Columbia Trio contribute some amusing vocal selections, which are highly appreciated; Belrose and De Velin are vocalists whose contributions have a well-merited reception; Sidney Brandon's character impersonations are good; George Geoffries is a clever dancer and mimic; the Sisters Brenton are charming comediennes and dancers; and very clever in her line as a trapeze artist is Lily Le Breton. Also to be noted are Silly Billy Elliott, Jessie Wilton, and the Perfection pictures.

Stourbridge.—Alhambra Theatre and Palace of Varieties.—General-Manager, Mr. Douglas C. Phelps.—Leo Carle, with his one-man comedy-drama, The Betrayed Professor, is here; the Belmonts give a dancing turn; Herman and Evelyn are a capital duo; and Seigel and Fields, in a drawing-room act, foot the bill.

Sunderland.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Dunn.—Messrs. Matthew H. Glenville and Fred Osmond's company is here, in For Wife and Kingdom. Miss Hettie Zilwood does justice to the part of the Duchess Marie; Miss Lilian Malvern is excellent as Esther; and Miss Margaret R. Frame acts forcibly as Camille von Nestolde. Mr. Reginald T. Fox gives a capital rendering of Capt. Maximilian Lubeck; as also does Mr. Frank Sutherland of General von Nestolde; Mr. Albert Guyon as Baron Breslaw is an effective villain; and the humour is in the good hands of Miss Alice Buckland (Nita Constadt) and Audrey Canning (Ottillie Schwartz) and Messrs. Chas. H. Gallier (Sergt. Offenbach) and Fred Osmonde (Karl Ludhayr).

Palace Theatre.—Proprietors, Hamilton's Picture and Variety Co.—Phil Rees' Stable Lads, in their novel racing act, entitled Not a Crook, are proving a great draw; the Wedburns, comedians and instrumentalists, are also scoring well; while Fame and Fortune cause much amusement. The principal picture is one of travel, entitled Through Bangkok.

Avenue Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—Large audiences are being attracted by an excellent programme. Kell and Kelso win favour with their humorous song and smart simultaneous dancing; William's Welsh Minstrels contribute some fine vocal work, which is much admired; The Tattooed Arm is a good dramatic film, and The United States Army is equally effective.

Empire Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—At the top of an excellent programme is Alice Raymond, with her company of instrumentalists, in her musical scena, "A Night in Egypt"—great skill is displayed in the playing of various wind instruments, and the scenic effects are most elaborate; Leonora Chadburn's young stars also contribute a pleasing musical act, entitled "A Picnic up the River," in which there is some capital singing and dancing; the Bros. O'Brien are highly successful in their skilful horizontal bar feats; Harry Friskey supplies a humorous juggling turn, which is the cause of much laughter; Alf Gibson, comedian, puts himself on good terms with his audience by his droll manner; and Charles Vincent, comedian, is equally well received. Billy Hobbs is enthusiastically applauded for his clever dancing; and a capital film on the Bioscope concludes.

King's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. S. F. Davidson; General-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Townrow. Mr. George Dance's company is presenting Our Miss Gibbs before crowded houses. Miss Kathleen Courtney fills the title-rôle with much grace and charm, singing and speaking with equal facility; Miss Nancy Hervyn submits a convincing and finished study of Madame Jeanne, the modiste; Miss Gladys Ivery furnishes a pretty conception of the part of Lady Elizabeth, and is responsible for some capital vocalism; while as her mother, the Duchess of Minster, Miss Winifred Knightly could scarcely be excelled; Miss Jeannie Richards plays with effect as Mrs. Farquhar; Mr. Tom Shelford as the Hon. Hughie Pierrepont causes endless laughter; Mr. Theodore Leonard's cousin Timothy is well-nigh perfect; Mr. J. E. Stevenson is an adroit Slithers; and Mr. R. M. Strachan is good as Mr. Toplady. Mr. Craufurd Kent gives a meritorious and emotional performance of Lord Rynsford; and Mr. Ernest Darrell as Earl St. Ives is a typical representative of the peerage. The dancing and chorus work is exceptionally well done, and the scenery is of a high order.

Swindon.—Empire Theatre.—Proprietors, The Wiltshire Entertainments Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Manners.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company in The Arcadians provide a capital holiday attraction. Mr. Chas. A. Stephenson gives a decidedly humorous impersonation of James Smith; Mr. Alfred Beers scores a success as Peter Doodey; Mr. Arthur S. MacDonald ably portrays Jack Meadows; the Bobby of Mr. Syril Lane is very good; as also is Mr. Wallace G. Court as Sir George Paddock. Mr. Horace Nye is commendable as Time; Miss Gertrude Alyward infuses plenty of humour into the part of Mrs. Smith; Miss Molly McIntyre makes a pleasing Eileen Cavanagh; Cryseа finds a capable exponent in Miss Violet Roberts; and Sombra is charmingly represented by Miss Sybil Tancredi. The smaller characters and chorus help to complete an excellent production.

County Electric Pavilion.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur E. Melborne.—The pictures this week include The Duke's Plan, The Betraying Mirror, Lake of Lucerne, A Prince's Word of Honour, Life of Moses, and a fine film of Swindon and Newcastle Cup Tie.

Todmorden.—Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Richard Dewhirst.—A hearty reception was given Mr. Morton Powell's excellent company on Monday, when How Girls are Brought to Ruin was presented to a large audience. The much-wronged Jessie Burton is portrayed with great power and sympathy by Miss Isla Garnet-Vayne; Mrs. Morton Powell acts her part of Minnie Waters to perfection; Miss Jeannie Risley is good as Lucy Lawton, and Mrs. Burton (Jessie's stepmother), is cleverly depicted by Miss Kathryn Eckhart; Miss Addie Adair is very capable as Mrs. Slut; Mr. Harry Scott gives a thoroughly convincing performance of Harry Hailing; Mr. Edward M. Heanley's delineation of Philip Edge is noticeable for its perfect composure and clearness of utterance; Solomon Sleek is well played by Mr. Alaric Burton; Mr. Sydney Bryant is funny as Jack Jossle, and Mr. Julian Mitchell as Mr. Sterling wins well-merited applause.

Olympia Picture Palace.—Proprietors, Messrs. A. and H. Andrews; Manager, Mr. Charles Tyers.—A good house assembled here on Monday night, when an interesting programme was presented. Perhaps the best film is A Story of Circus Life. Other good ones are Into the Shadow, Fisherman's Bride, and on mont; a very amusing version of Coombes was given by Mr. F. Wilson Lowther; and Mr. Victor Howard and Miss Linda Arthur were smart and interesting juveniles.

KING'S PALACE.—Record patronage is being bestowed on this popular hall, where good pictures are always shown. Attractive varieties are Adelina, Miss Annie Lang, and The Vaudevilles.

WEST HARTLEPOOL. — GRAND THEATRE. — Lessee, Mr. Fred Grenville.—Mr. George Edwardes's company, in The Merry Widow, is the attraction here. As Sonia Miss Phyllis Le Grand is charming and delightful, and Mr. Fred Leslie as Prince Danilo is extremely artistic and effective also in his acting. Encores are frequent for the famous waltz. Mr. Edward D'Arcy has a splendid conception of the character of Baron Popoff, and screams of laughter reward his efforts. Frou Frou is admirably impersonated by Miss Katie May, and Mr. Fred Fowler is highly successful in the rôle of Nisch. The Apache dance has also to be repeated many times.

EMPIRE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. G. F. Thompson.—The large holiday audiences are delighted with the bill of fare provided here this week. The Craggs are always very popular at West Hartlepool, but they are greatly enhancing their reputation this week with their act, "Territorials; or, England's Last Hope." Their acrobatic feats, we need hardly say, are performed with brilliance and dexterity, and Billy, as usual, causes much fun. Charlier, French ventriloquist and comedian, works his dummies with extreme smartness, especially in the dances; the Two St. Johns are in great favour, they are very clever as musical comedians, campanologists, and dancers; Mona Garrick's scenes from various plays make a great impression; and Carl Howard, the "Komic Un," assisted by Miss Lily Foy, the vanishing lady, causes a great deal of mirth. Dacey and Lewis are good entertainers, and Arthur Albert, actor and vocalist, takes well.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — KNIGHTSTONE PAVILION AND OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Mr. Norman V. Norman's répertoire company is paying another visit here, and on Monday The Marriage of Kitty was staged. Mr. Norman V. Norman acted with his usual ability as Sir Reginald Belsize; Mr. Frederick Lock gave a clever interpretation of John Travers; Mr. Norman Leslie excelled as Norbury; and Mr. Alfred Wiltshire did well as Hampton. Miss Beatrice Wilson has never been seen to better advantage than in the character of Kitty; Miss Kathlene Lewis proved herself a thorough artist as Madam de Semiano; and Miss Betty Stanard was delightful as Rosaline. Caste and David Garrick are in the week's bill.

GRAND PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. John H. Stevenson.—Mr. J. W. Cordiner's Dare-Devil Dorothy company is visiting the town for the second time. Mr. Geo. A. Fox was excellent as Capt. Geo. Fielding; as the scoundrel, Capt. Edward Dudley, Mr. Robert Gilbert did good work; Mr. Deane Cliffe was praiseworthy as Featherstone Haugh; Mr. James Salter was an extremely comical Silas Crump; Mr. W. H. Troutbeck as Smith is entitled to eulogy; Miss Kathleen Stewart made a charming Ruth Montrose, and Miss Gertrude de Lacy was equally successful as Dorothy Montrose; Miss Lillie Elvido as Rosy and Miss Iris Elvido as Polly were both much appreciated, especially for their dancing; Miss Madge Delta did well as Maud, and Miss Nellie Harcourt was satisfactory as Judith.

WEYMOUTH.—PAVILION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. R. Wallis.—Miss Florence Glossop-Harris's company opened on Bank Holiday for six nights' Shakespearean productions, commencing with The Merchant of Venice. Miss Harris gave a fine rendering of Portia; and Mr. Frank Collier's Shylock was a powerful embodiment. Mr. H. P. Owen as Antonio, Mr. James Mason as Salarino, Mr. Eugene Weliesley as Salanio, Mr. J. H. Irvine as Bassanio, Mr. Vernon O. Crabtree as Gratiano, and Mr. Murray Kinnell as Lorenzo all rendering valuable support. Miss Mary Goulden made a charming Nerissa; and Miss Madge Spencer capably represented Stephano. Miss Ine Cameron was a winning Jessica; and Mr. Arthur Seaton and Mr. Frank Mayes as Launcelot Gobbo and old Gobbo won hearty approval. Mr. Owen Ediss was very good as Leonardo; and Mr. H. P. Owen did well as Tubal.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Company.—Pete is being presented here to crowded audiences. Mr. F. Victor gives a powerful impersonation of the title-rôle; Mr. Alfred Lugg sustains the rôle of Philip Christian with ability; Mr. Maurice Yorke is a conspicuous success as Ross Christian; Mr. Ellis J. Preston gives a capital portrayal of Cæsar Cregreen; Miss Constance Bachner makes a sympathetic Kate; and admirable assistance is rendered by Miss A. Eden as Nancy.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Company.—Achmed Ibrahim's Troupe of Bedouin Arabs are loudly applauded for their skilful acrobatic and tumbling performance; Victor Kelly is an eccentric comedian of considerable merit; Tom Joy, "the man without a smile," also creates much laughter; Dancit, "the Australian nugget," dances himself into favour; Jennion's Marionettes are entertaining; Eva Chadwick is encored for her vocal selections; mirth is derived from the comedy juggling of Wisper; and the eccentric triple-bar act by the Maros, and other capital items are supplied by the Stein-Esthors, and Beattie Bloom, comedienne.

WISHAW, N.B. — PAVILION.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; General-Manager, Mr. René Clayton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Fred Nimse.—The Tokio troupe of Japanese Oriental Entertainers, in a series of daring and bewildering feats, are here this week. Captain Devereux's dramatic and pugilistic dogs are decidedly clever; the Boston Twins, comedians and dancers, are well received; Stanley and Vandyke, in a comedy act, are good; Emma Don and Co., in her scena, On the Thames Embankment, are excellent. A fine series of films is shown on the bioscope.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles Barnard; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lewis M. Chapman.—The holding capacity of this popular house was severely taxed on Monday night, when a crowded audience watched with intense interest Her Secret Lover, presented by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company. Mr. Arthur St. John is the possessor of those attributes which go to make a popular hero, and gives a thoroughly consistent portrayal of Gilbert Seymour; another excellent performance is that of Mr. Walter H. Wilson as the sturdy Captain Darrell Rose; Mr. Alfred Stretton succeeds in rousing the ire of the audience as John Strange; and Mr. Robert Lord is an effective Mr. Murfield. Welcome comic relief is provided by Mr. Victor Vernon as Billy Burley and Miss Lynn Darlington as Jane Wilkes, and their efforts to amuse are ably seconded by Mr. J. Newton-Cowley as Jim Jones. The evil machinations of Alicia Royale are realistically portrayed by Miss Flora Leslie; and Miss Laura Walker is to be highly complimented upon her exceptionally clever treatment of the trying part of the unfortunate heroine, Alice Seymour. The scenery is on an elaborate scale.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Vivian Evans.—Both houses here on Monday were packed with holiday-makers. Sandy McNab and company head the list in The Egyptian Mummy, which simply convulses the house; another side-splitting turn is that of Wild, Willie, and West as the three bouncing navvies; Paller and Cussick cause amusement in The Funny Side of Life; Walker and Lake are capital patter purveyors; Ethel Loftus contributes some genuine low comedy; and L. W. Harris, light comedian, and Gladys Archbutt, comedienne, complete.

WORCESTER. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Evans.—The star turn is Mr. John Warren, who gives an excellent display of conjuring and illusions, winding up with a sketch entitled The Magic Carpet. A whistler of considerable ability, Miss Mollie Wynter, together with Mr. Warren, in the part of a British officer, Mr. F. G. Fenn as Milligan, Mr. H. J. Collis as a Sergeant, and Mr. Frank Morton as an Afghan, find scope in the sketch for the display of individual ability. The Pichel Troupe of acrobats and tumblers are deservedly popular; and Mr. W. P. Sheen proves himself a most diverting comedian; the Bros. Carney give a clever vocal scena; and Miss Molly Dale and Miss Madge Bryce are attractive vocalists.

WORKINGTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers.—Very fine presentments of Moths, Camille, and From Frou, with Miss Henrietta Schrier as Pushia Leach, Marguerite Gautier, and Mlle. Gilbert Brigard. This charming actress infuses life into every character she plays, and her acting is much appreciated. Mr. J. C. Lodge Percy as Lord Jura is grave, dignified, and excellent all round; Mr. Andrew Money is an ideal Russian Prince; whilst Miss Veronica Clinton invests her parts with artistic talent.

CARNEGIE HALL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers.—A fine set of films includes The Colleen's Touch. Little Violette, male impersonator, sings and dances well; and Frank Selford and Ethel Mars give us something crisp and fresh in comic songs.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Mac.—The "erratic" juggler, Jean Kram, causes roars of laughter. Mr. Billie Barrieton sings selections with ease and power; Mr. Fred Davis makes a welcome call with his comedy songs. The Best Man Wins is a good set of films.

WORTHING. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. C. Adolf Seebold.—During the first three nights of the week the farcical comedy, entitled The Artfulness of Ada, was presented here by Miss Madge Crichton and company, and was very well received. Miss Crichton as Ada Byron-Bruce was in delightful mood, and gained frequent applause; Mrs. Googlie was in the hands of Miss Kate Kearney, who acted the character in a droll manner; Mrs. Glynn was undertaken by Miss Valerie Crespin with successful results; and Miss Ethel Hart was easy and natural as Lucy. A breezy exposition of Robert Byron-Bruce was given by Mr. Frank Tennant; Mr. J. F. Knowles and Mr. Alick Chumley as Fred Spencer and Tom Senoaks respectively afforded pleasure; and McClosky and Colonel Duval were capably portrayed by Miss Nellie Shirley and Mr. Stanley B. Farbridge. The comedy was preceded by a one-act version of Auld Robin Grey, in which the characters were portrayed by Messrs. Alick Chumley and J. Forbes Knowles (the author), and Miss Valerie Crespin. The attraction for the week-end is Paid in Full, presented by Mr. Geo. Waters and a strong company.

WREXHAM. — EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. J. Scott.—There is another grand display of pictures here this week, including The Orphans (a new dramatic picture), Axemen and Roughriders, Her Road to Ruin (another fine drama), An Error of Justice, A Day's Holiday (a laughable film), Wealth and Its Disadvantages, &c. The other chief attractions are a comedy sketch, Cabby Knows His Fare, by Messrs. Henshall and Forster, which is highly appreciated; and Miss May Sinclair, a popular comedienne.

YORK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington.—Great success has attended the efforts of the York Amateur Operatic and Dramatic Society, who have delighted large audiences during the week.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager Mr. Sidney Brooke.—Long Live the King is a well-written and neatly played sketch; Little Zola causes much amusement by his antics; as of yore, Annie Purcell sings with much grace and charm; Sara Rosebury in Lancashire songs and stories, is particularly clever; Ferguson and Mack are comedians of the first rank; and the Lyric Mummers give a capital show. Cossett and Partner introduce some clever dogs; and Harry Meegan causes much amusement.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Bowman; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. E. Bradley.—The wonderful paintings by the Countess Bekoffeca have attracted large audiences during the week. St. Vincent Ellesmere is a fine singer; and the bioscope pictures are, as usual, high-class.

VICTORIA HALL.—Lessee, Mr. Sidney Bacon Resident-Manager, Mr. Bert Rutter.—The description of the Oxford and Cambridge Boat Race has proved very popular. The Triumphant Hero and other fine films are well received; and Harry Harvey's efforts meet with much success.

AMUSEMENTS IN BRUSSELS,

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

All our places of amusement have renewed their programmes, and are in full swing. The Monnaie was giving on Easter Sunday the thirty-third performance of Puccini's fine opera Madame Butterfly. This has been the success of the operatic season. At the Parc, Capus is on the bill with his clever comedy, Les Deux Ecoles. The Galeries have been attracting fairly good audiences with Rostand's Chantecler.

The Scala and the Alhambra are drawing the crowds with revues, and the Vaudeville holds a success with Théodore et Cie. At the Olympia we have to register roars of laughter and full houses to hear a very clever skit on Brussels life and Brusseleers' morals by Frantz Fonson and F. Wicheler. It is called Le Mariage de Mlle. Beulemans, and is a good satire on the Belgian people and customs. Fonson, one of the authors, is the manager of the Olympia and of the Galeries.

The Palais d'Ete reopened its doors as usual on Easter Eve; the programme is "A1." Miss Dagmar Dunbar dances very nimbly; Roger de Beaumercy is making songs to order and to the minute; the Three Stewarts are interesting equilibrists; Rio Hartmann show good canine actors and actresses; Douglas is a fine Parisian singer; the Three Bounding Pattersons have a right to call themselves the world's greatest trampolin bar artists; and the mysterious Durga sends a piano flying through space with the ease of a Japanese fanning off paper butterflies; Smote and Smote are good eccentrics; Harry Lamore made a hit with his antics either as a Chinese conjurer, a comic juggler, or a wire equilibrist. But the stars of the evening were the Leamy Troupe in their sensational aerial act. The girls are young and pretty, and they work with such spirit and gracefulness that the public grow quite enthusiastic. Mr. Leamy himself, looking younger than ever, has his well-deserved share of the ovations bestowed on his accomplished pupils. The artistic manager, Mr. Malpertuis, can be congratulated once more on the programme he has so conscientiously selected for his patrons.

SIR EDWARD CLARKE, in a letter to the Times, apropos the performances of Julius Cæsar which are to be given during the present Shakespeare Festival at His Majesty's Theatre, says: "I notice that Julius Cæsar is to be played seven times, six times in the evening and once in the afternoon. Is it too much to ask that on these occasions, or at all events on some of them, we may be permitted to see Julius Cæsar as Shakespeare wrote it, without the clumsy additions which were made by another hand? It is hardly possible that any student of Shakespeare, or, indeed, any lover of poetry, can believe that the Fifth Act, as we now have it, was written by the great master to whom we unquestionably owe the earlier acts."

SIR EDWARD CLARKE then goes on to say that, of the 350 lines contained in the act, the whole of the 336 which precede, "This was the noblest Roman of them all," the final words of Antony and Octavius over the body of Brutus, are "at a dead level of dulness, without a single gleam of elevation of thought or distinction of phrase." Sir Herbert Tree replies: "Sir Edward Clarke mentioned this matter to me a year or two ago, when we were playing Julius Cæsar, but I did not then have time to give it attention. I have a great respect for Sir Edward Clarke's knowledge of Shakespeare and Shakespearean acting. It is obvious that these lines in the fifth act were filled in by another hand than Shakespeare's, and we have always found them very difficult to get over when giving the play here. They have little point, and make little effect.

"I AM inclined to agree with Sir Edward Clarke that if they were omitted it would shorten the play enough to permit more passages being given from the earlier scenes. It would also obviate the employment of so many supers in the battle scenes of the act. At the same time, it would be a rather drastic use of the blue pencil to cut 336 lines from an act which contains only 350. However, now that the subject has been brought up again, I shall certainly give it my attention, and shall possibly make some extensive cuts in the act for the performances we are about to give."

THE chief attractions at the Ayr Picture Palace entertainment resort this week are The Indian, Annette Kellerman, Cabin Boy to King, The Witch of the Glen, and The Mexican's Revenge. Much mirth is caused by My Lord in Livery, The Cabbage, and The Ruse that Failed.

VERDI AND HIS FRIENDS.

"Verdi," says Mr. Louis Engel, in "From Mozart to Mario, "did for Italian music what Meyerbeer did for French music, what Wagner did for German music. He enhanced the importance of the orchestra, and paid much more attention to the declamatory performance of the meaning; and without going into the sometimes childish significance of every word, of every syllable I might say, as Wagner does with his exaggerated use of Leitmotive, he disdained, as Rossini notably did, in his last operas, to let the singers reap the whole benefit of the musical circus riding; and forced them to be actors as well, and to combine the expression of the music with the expression of the words, the great though exaggerated doctrine of Wagner. Combining this new principle with a nearly unprecedented flow of melody, it is easy to understand that Nabucco was expected to make a great sensation, so much so that when, according to usage, Verdi took his place at the beginning between the double-bass and the solo violoncello Merighi, the latter said to him before the overture began: 'Maestro, I would give something to stand in your place to-night.' I have particular pleasure in mentioning this Merighi, because we all owe him something. He was the teacher of Piatti, the idol of the Monday Popular audiences. Merighi's expectations were not only fulfilled, but surpassed to an extent not common in those times. Touching is the modesty of the composer, who, after the performance, went home with a friend to their modest lodging in the fourth floor of a house in the Strada degli Andeghari. The friend, proud of him, said—'Well, I hope you are satisfied?' 'To tell you the truth,' said Verdi, 'when, after the finale of the first act, the whole public got up shouting, vociferating, gesticulating, I was really afraid they mocked at the poor composer, or that they meant to treat me somewhat—practically. I confess I hoped for success, but I did not look for such a triumph.'

"According to the well-known maxim that nothing succeeds like success, the town was at once full of the young composer's name; and though he was not so young as to be a miracle like Mozart, who conducted his first opera at the age of fifteen, he was young enough to arouse in the inflammable hearts of his countrymen the confident hope of a nuova gloria! Merelli, who had, in fact, forced upon Verdi the series of triumphs which this first perspective opened, and had from the first shown himself his staunch friend, was, of course, too happy, and pressed Verdi in his arms with Italian impulsiveness. 'Yes,' said Verdi, 'it is all very fine; now you embrace me, but last year, when I was in want of eight pounds, you refused me!' 'What,' said Merelli, 'I refused you! Who says that?' Verdi having named the friend who returned without money from him, Merelli took Verdi at once to him, and then it came out that this man, too shy to ask Merelli for money on behalf of Verdi, had never said a word about it, and when Verdi asked for the result of his message, only shrugged his shoulders; and when Verdi said in despair, 'No money?' he simply said, 'No.' Thus he lied without actually telling a lie, and left Merelli under the suspicion of unkindness. This is a common perfidy. Schiller, in his 'Cabale und Liebe' ('Love and Intrigue'), gives a sharp rebuke to such ambiguous conduct. Louise, in love and despair, finds life unbearable, and tells her father that she is going to jump into the river. 'And did you consider,' asks her father, 'what mortal sin you commit by taking your own life?' 'Well,' says the girl, 'I have made up my mind to ask the Lord's pardon while I am jumping in.' 'That is,' says the father, 'you offer to repent of your theft the moment you know the stolen goods to be secure, and beyond retrieving.' This is just what this man did, and that is why one should be so careful not to believe in gossips. 'Gossips and go-betweens,' says Schiller, 'have done more harm with their tongues than dagger and poison in murderers' hands ever did.'

"The moment the matter was cleared up, Verdi saw that he had no reason to doubt Merelli's friendship; in fact, as was clearly proved, it was to his friendly pressure that he owed the return to a career which was soon to be so successful. It would not be quite inappropriate, 'I reckon,' as the Americans say, to state that the prima donna, who powerfully contributed to the success of Nabucco by her brilliant execution, her dramatic power, and an unusually fine voice, was Mlle. Giuseppina Strepponi, who did what I know of no other great singer—she stopped her career while in full possession of her vocal power, her youth and beauty; an extraordinary fact, seeing that usually singers, especially ladies, will never get old, will never stop singing even after youth and voice have left them. Mlle. Strepponi interests us also for quite another reason, for she married, and whom do you think? The subject of these pages, Giuseppe Verdi.

"Merelli next sent for Verdi, and told him that, it having been decided that he should compose the opera d'obbligo for the next season, a contract en blanc was prepared. 'Fill in your conditions,' he said, 'and what you write shall be executed.' Verdi asked £300, which was granted. And Ricordi paid for his right of publication £100, which is rather less than what a certain French composer made an English publisher pay for his copyright in England, viz., £4,000, although this latter opera proved such a failure in Paris that it never was engraved here, the publisher not wishing to throw away good money for engraving after bad money paid for copyright. Nabucco was played in London in 1857 by both Italian opera companies, though under different names—at Her Majesty's under Lumley, and at Covent Carden under F. Gye.

"Verdi's celebrity at one time was such that he only had one rival, and that was Donizetti. Poor Donizetti, who died soon afterwards of softening of the brain, already began to give signs of failing, but notwithstanding his professional jealousy he fully recognised and admitted Verdi's genius. A false modesty was rather characteristic of the man. I remember having once spoken to him about Rossini. 'Oh,' said he, 'nous ne sommes que de pauvres imitateurs.' I was not the dupe of this, and I said: 'Don't you think Rossini wrote with an immense facility a large number of great works?' 'Oh, quite without precedent,' he said, a certain little sneer lurking in the corner of his eye. 'Oh,' I said, 'but you have written over forty operatic scores to my knowledge.' 'Forty-five,' said he, depreciatingly. 'Well,' I said, 'and Rossini?' 'Thirty-four, so far as I know,' he replied, barely trying to suppress a satisfied smile. Yet Rossini, who with his magnificent William Tell voluntarily closed his career, was, so to say, not among living rivals, because he worked no more; but Verdi, who stood on the other end of the ladder, beginning to climb up and threatening to come on very fast, gave Donizetti serious ground for reflection. He was, however, both too honourable and too shrewd to speak ill of Verdi, and once when in his lazy moments he sat down in a fauteuil by the side of the piano and made me play a number of his own motivos and some of Meyerbeer's and Verdi's, especially the quartet from Rigoletto, he suddenly jumped up and said: 'It is magnificent; now tell me frankly, is it or is it not more important (plus large) than the sextet of Lucia?' 'Can you tell me, maestro,' I said, 'whether a dark beauty or a fair-haired one can be called handsomer? They are both absolute masterpieces, both certain of a long-enduring success, of an eternal encore so long as opera will be given; why must one be handsomer than the other?'"

THE METHODS OF IBSEN.

"Ibsen," wrote Mr. William Archer recently in an interesting article on "The Genesis of Ibsen's Dramas" in the Fortnightly Review, "was far from being one of the playwrights who have their plays clearly and definitely mapped out before they put pen to paper. Even in the second draft of his first act of Pillars of Society he is still fumbling around after his characters and their relations. The germ of the play, I imagine, lay in its title; at any rate, the phrase occurs and is emphasised early in the first draft. The chief 'pillar of society' was from the first conceived as one of the energetic manufacturer-merchants, with a score of irons in the fire, who are leading figures in all the minor Norwegian towns; and it was of course evident from the first that this pillar of society must be in some way flawed or hollow. But the precise nature of the flaw seems to have been undetermined even when the first draft of the first act was finished. At any rate, Bernick at that point shows none of the uneasiness which in the completed play the return of Johan and Lona naturally causes him; nor is there any preparation in the laying-out of the second act for the great scene between him and Johan in which the true state of matters is revealed. It may be noted that the list of characters includes 'Madam Dorf,' Dina's mother, the woman with whom Bernick had had the intrigue which he contrived to fasten on Johan Tönnesen. In the completed play she has been dead for years; but in the first draft she is alive, and Dina is in the habit of paying her surreptitious visits. We may assume, I think, that Ibsen contemplated some intervention on her part to clear Johan's character and bring the guilt home to Bernick. While she is alive, at any rate, he can scarcely have had the idea of making Bernick try to suppress the scandal by sending Johan and his documents to sea in a coffin-ship. This could not occur to him while the best possible witness to the true state of affairs was living at his very doors. So that evidently the matter of the third and fourth acts, the complication of the seaworthy Palm Tree and unseaworthy Indian Girl, and the flight of Bernick's son Olaf on board the latter, was still far from the poet's conception.

"A prominent character in both drafts of the first act is Bernick's blind mother, who has quite disappeared from the finished play. Mrs. Bernick, and Johan and Hilmar Tönnesen are all three children of a blustering old curmudgeon Mads Tönnesen, nicknamed 'the badger.' He was destined to drop out entirely, his nickname, and some traits of his character, being transferred to Morten Kiil in An Enemy of the People. In the first draft Bernick is still arguing for the proposed railway, against the opposition of his business associates; in the completed play the whole argument is conducted behind the scenes, and Bernick has triumphed before he makes his first appearance. This is a good instance of condensation. Another instance may be found in the treatment of Johan Tönnesen and Lona Hessel. In the first draft they are not half-brother and sister, but only, it would seem, distant cousins; they have not been together in America; and it is by pure chance that they arrive on the same day. We first hear of Johan in the following passage. Knap, Bernick's clerk, rushes and tells of the arrival of a ship in need of repairs:

"'BERNICK. Bravo! . . . What ship is it?

"'KNAP. The barque Indian Girl, from New York, with dye-stuffs from Brazil to Petersburg.

"'BERNICK. And the Captain?

"'KNAP. The captain was swept overboard, and the mate is lying ill, delirious. But a sailor that was on board as passenger took the command, and has brought the ship in. . . .

"'BERNICK. You have spoken to him, then?

"'KNAP. Yes. . . . Here is his card

"'BERNICK (reads). "John Rawlinson, Esqre., New Orleans."'

"In the second draft the name 'Rawlinson' is changed to 'Tennyson,' which is supposed to be an Anglicised form of 'Tönnesen.' Presently Captain Rawlinson and the crew of the Indian Girl are seen coming up the street, and remarks are made on their ruffianly appearance:

"'MRS. SALVESEN. The captain is almost the worst of them; he looks just like a robber.

"'RECTOR RORLUND. Yes, he's the sort of man that would stick to nothing.

"'BERNICK. They are foreigners, Rector. One mustn't expect too much of them.'

"Then he goes out on the verandah and drops into English:

"'BERNICK (bowing and calling out). Good-morning. Master Rawlinson! This way, if you please, sir! I am Master Bernick!

"'CAPTAIN RAWLINSON (waves his handkerchief and calls). Very well, Karsten; but first, three hurrah for the old grævling (badger).'

"And the sailors pass on to make a demonstration before the house of old Tönnesen, Rawlinson-Tönnesen's father. Meanwhile Lona Hessel has arrived quite independently by the Hamburg steamer: in one version it is this steamer that has towed the Indian Girl into port. We see, then, that Ibsen wrote two complete drafts of the first act before he realised how unnecessary was this intervention of the long arm of coincidence, and made Johan and Lona arrive together and act in concert throughout.

"In the earliest draft there occurs near the end of Act I. a farcical scene which would have been very shocking to those critics who are pained by Ibsen's 'suburbanism.' The reading-party of ladies is on the point of breaking up when "'THE CUSTOM-HOUSE OFFICER'S SERVANT (enters by the garden gate). The master told me to say that the mistress must come home at once; the cook has spoilt the fish-soup.

"'MRS. RUMMEL. Oh, these servants, these servants! One can't trust them for a moment! Good-bye, good-bye; we shall meet to-morrow. (Exit hastily.)

"'MRS. SALVESEN. Yes, that's what comes of trusting your house to servants.

"'THE APOTHECARY'S TWO LITTLE GIRLS (at the garden gate). Mama, mama, you must come and look after Nicolai; he's fallen into the washing-tub. . . .

"'MRS. SALVESEN. Oh, these children, these children! Good-bye! I must run as fast as I can. (Rushes out.)

"'MRS. HOLT. Yes, that's what happens when you have everything standing open. I make it a rule to keep everything under lock and key; and the keys I keep here (indicating her pocket).

"'THE POSTMAN (comes tearing down the street). Oh, Lord, ma'am, you must make haste home! The steamer will get away without the mail.

"'MRS. HOLT. The steamer?

"'THE POSTMAN. Yes; the second bell has rung, and the postmaster can't get on board with the mail until you come home.

"'MRS. HOLT. What nonsense! Can't he get the mail off without me?

"'THE POSTMAN. No, for you've locked up his trousers in the wardrobe.

"'MRS. HOLT. Oh, goodness gracious! These men, these men! They can never do a thing for themselves!' (Rushes out with the Postman.)

"One cannot actually bewail the loss of this scene. I may add that the coffee-parliament of ladies, which disappears after the first act of the completed play, was apparently at first intended to run through the whole action."

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

MELBOURNE, FEB. 22.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business-Manager, Mr. B. J. Tait.—Though still running to excellent business, the gorgeous pantomime Aladdin will only be staged for nine more nights, as Mr. Williamson has already made all arrangements to stage the production in Sydney at Easter. On Saturday evening, March 3, Mr. Julius Knight, supported by a strong company, will produce the striking play, The Lion and the Mouse, for the first time in Melbourne. This piece has just completed a highly successful season in Sydney, where it has been running for the past five weeks.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Clyde Meynell and Rupert Clarke; Business-Manager, Mr. Arthur Levy.—On Saturday evening a large audience followed the stormy career of Count Hannibal with close interest. Stanley Weyman's hero is an attractive figure, and the manner in which he wins his wife, and afterwards woos her, is most unconventional. But the play is excellent in every way. Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton are admirably suited in their respective rôles. On Wednesday afternoon there will be a special matinée in aid of the Musical and Dramatic Benevolent Fund. Framed photos of Miss Brayton are to be given as prizes, each member of the audience having a chance. The winners of the photos will receive them from the hands of the gifted actress. The present Oscar Asche-Lily Brayton season closes here to-morrow evening.

KING'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. William Anderson; Business-Manager, Mr. Julius Grant.—The excellent representation of Walter Howard's play, The Prince and the Beggar Maid, is meeting with marked appreciation. The attendances through the week were large, and the applause of the audience on every occasion unstinted. The play is on a higher plane than others we have been accustomed to witness in Melbourne. The cast is an exceptionally good one. The three leading figures on the men's side are filled by such capable actors as Messrs. Geo. Cross, Rutland Beckett, and Roy Redgrave. The Captain Hector of Mr. Edmund Duggan stands out clearly as a personality, unforced and natural, with touches of humour and becoming gravity, a distinct and creditable impersonation, which is accorded due recognition by the patrons of this theatre.

OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Aydon.—A welcome addition was made to the programme here last night, when Mr. W. A. Robyns (late of Daly's Theatre, London), a splendid basso-cantante, who comes to Melbourne with excellent credentials, made his first appearance, and indicated the musical advance of the "halls" by singing Schumann's great song, "The Two Grenadiers," a welcome change from the everlasting American ballad. He met with a most cordial reception from a large house. Mr. Robyns sings with that ease and grace which only long experience can produce. The Brothers Martine, comedy acrobats, also made their first appearance, and gave an exceedingly clever "turn," which met with great approval. Houdini, the arch mystery, is still proving a strong draw. The ease with which this artist releases himself from awkward positions serves to keep the audience in a state of wonderment throughout his turn. The Australian Dartos appear in several clever dances. Mr. Fred Curran is a great favourite with the "gods"; his songs are funny, and his patter entertaining. Other artists appearing with success at present include Will White, the Harmonious Huxams, the Donelleys, the Two Colliers, Bob Lloyd, and May Lewis.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. James Brennan; Business-Manager, Mr. Harry Brennan.—Mr. Brennan provided a good programme for his patrons on Saturday evening. There was a large attendance, and all the turns in the bill were approved of. The Grottons, in their Grecian gladiator act, and the Morissey Brothers, were especially good; and clever turns were supplied by the Kelso Brothers, Mr. T. Stanley, Miss B. Ashman, the Smith Sisters, and others. Several new Bioscope pictures were shown on the Miorama.

THERE was a bumper attendance at the Bijou Theatre on Saturday evening, when the programme of World's pictures provided was received with unqualified approval. Pictures which found special favour were the Antwerp Zoo, The Braggart, The Clerk's Downfall, and a number of views depicting Queensland scenery.

HOYT'S pictures at St. George's Hall continue to be well patronised. A complete change of programme weekly serves to supply the public with a great variety of subjects.

THERE was a full house at West's Picture Palace on Saturday evening, when the usual assortment of new pictures was presented. A touching domestic drama, entitled Into the Shadow, was admired. The Commonwealth series, showing the Australian Cadets in camp, called forth loud applause.

THE Rajah Rham Singh has written a play. He wants to show the British public how an Indian can feel who thoroughly understands the British point of view. His piece deals with the subject of the Indian Mutiny of 1857, and in it he discusses caste, religion, and social customs from the Britisher's point of view. He takes a young Indian prince—a part he plays himself—who comes to Cawnpore and wages war on Nana Sahib out of the love he bears for a young girl who is in the power of the despot. The piece contains six speaking parts and sixty auxiliaries. It will be an expensive production, and he is anxious to produce it himself in the West End as soon as ever he can make arrangements. Later he hopes to present a play called The Fatal Ring, an adaptation of Shakuntalla, a play written by Kalydasa, the Shakespeare of India.

MR. GEORGE TYLER, the American manager, is in London making arrangements for the production of The Dawn of a To-morrow, in which Miss Eleanor Robson made such a success in the United States. The piece is by Mrs. Hodgson Burnett, and Miss Gertrude Elliott will come to England to play Miss Robson's part. The piece is thoroughly English, and deals with slum life. The central figure is a young girl—a mere child—a product of Whitechapel, whose pure life radiates goodness on all around her, and whose influence rehabilitates not merely the moral character, but the actual physical health of a man who has left his own surroundings to die in an unknown region.

THIS man—a baronet—a political and social figure of his day—has had all the world can offer him. But the doctors have given him up, and he goes down into the East End to die in a hovel. The second act takes place in Whitechapel, where the child's hope and cheerfulness and her courage and goodness change the baronet's views of life and restore him to health and happiness.

MR. TYLER confesses that Sir Herbert Tree "astonishes" him. Mr. Tyler thinks Sir Herbert is like no one else in the wide world. "He puts up huge productions, stages them perfectly, engages all the best people, and sends them—nowhere! You get perfection, and he pays the piper—but how can it pay him?" asks the American. "In America," he says, "we may not 'make good' in New York—but we have a vast country with huge tours, and so we get back all we may have lost in the centre. But a production at His Majesty's is an end in itself. For good or bad, all that taste and wealth can suggest is done—and there's an end."

LONDON AND SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.
On Monday, March 28, the Play entitled
"THE BREED OF THE TRESHAMS."

Mr. J. B. Mulholland could hardly have placed before his patrons for the Easter holidays a greater attraction than Mr. Martin Harvey in The Breed of the Treshams, the consequence being that at Monday's performances, both afternoon and evening, the theatre was crowded to excess. The strong dramatic situations which abound throughout the play created the utmost excitement and attention, and Mr. Martin Harvey and his clever company were the recipients of innumerable richly-deserved curtain calls. Mr. Martin Harvey has made the part of Rat Reresby peculiarly his own, and time has so ripened his characterisation that it stands as a masterly and perfect performance. Admirable support was given by that very capable actor Mr. Charles Glenney in the part of Colonel the Hon. Clement Hungerford; Mr. Owen Roughwood made an excellent impression as Colonel Sir Henry Curwen; and Colonel Bagshaw was well handled by Mr. Fred Wright, sen. A meritorious performance of Viscount Dorsington was given by Mr. Philip Newland, and Captain Stanhope received skilful treatment at the hands of Mr. Edward Combermere. Mr. Alfred Mansfield was a worthy Captain Rashleigh, and Lieutenant Willoughby was smartly impersonated by Mr. Denholm Muir. Mr. Leonard Craske's rendering of Cornet Tresham was admirable, and received much approbation; and Mr. Percy Foster as Cornet Kit Peyton gives good support. A piece of really vigorous acting is that of Mr. George Cooke as Corporal Lumsford; and Mr. B. A. Pittar did well as Corporal Saxton. A very pleasing performance of the Hon. Margaret Hungerford was given by Miss Brenda Gibson, whose efforts evoked much applause; Miss Bessie Elder makes a successful Mrs. Baghaw; and Mis Sybil Walsh a bright Helena Pierrepoint. Miss N. de Sylva as the boy Batty plays with sincere earnestness and expression, gaining every praise. The scenery, appointments, and costumes were in every way appropriate. The Only Way was given during the latter part of the week with every sign of success.

THE MARLBOROUGH.
On Easter Monday, March 28, the Farcical Comedy, by Brandon Thomas, entitled
"CHARLEY'S AUNT."

Old friends are dear friends, and holiday crowds have given a great welcome to Charley's Aunt this week at the Marlborough. This delightful personage, during the many years everyone has known her, has always been a very welcome visitor in all parts of the world, and the dear old lady runs just as nimbly as ever she did. Mr. Brandon Thomas has got together an excellent company, among them being Mr. Stanley Cooke, playing the name part. If our memory is not at fault, Mr. Cooke in the early days of Lord Fancourt Babberley understudied Mr. W. S. Penley in this part. To-day he just revels in his interpretation of the irresponsible but big-hearted Babbs, and as in Mr. John Sims Woolley (Jack Chesney) and Mr. Robert Burnett (Charles Wykeham) he has two very energetic supporters, the fun, as it was long ago at the old Globe, is well kept up to the proper pitch throughout the three acts, and people laughed at the weird old lady—the native of Brazil, "where the nuts come from, you know," and who again is "no ordinary woman"—till their sides ached. Mr. Roy Byford as Stephen Spettigue, the solicitor, has made up magnificently and has a distinctive style of his own that one is inclined to think gets even more laughs than his predecessors in the part have obtained. Mr. Brandon Thomas's Sir Francis Chesney is also very good. The four ladies engaged are Miss Audrey Stafford, a stately, calm, and dignified Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez; Miss Ruth Henton, a dainty and pretty Kitty Verdun; Miss Phyllis Back, also prepossessing and engaging, as old Spettigue's niece; and Miss Bertha Wilson, petite and winsome, as the orphan Ela Delahay.

Mr. John B. Buckstone's fine old one-act play Good for Nothing preceded Charley's Aunt, and the part of the incorrigible Nan was splendidly given by Miss Amy Brandon Thomas. Tom Dibbles, the old gardener, and Harry Collier, the railway foreman, "Nan's two fathers," were very finely played by Mr. Brandon Thomas and Mr. Roy Byford. From first to last the two actors worked up to one another, causing one continuous ripple of laughter, the one with his insistence that he takes everything "calmly and quietly," and the other with his oft-repeated accusation that his partner is "always puttin' on the gel." Mr. Thomas with his present company provides as fine a night's entertainment as can be found anywhere.

THE CORONET.
On Monday, March 28, the Musical Comedy, entitled
"A COUNTRY GIRL."

Charmingly exploited by Messrs. Dudley Bennett and T. C. Wray's company, this pretty pastoral of Devonshire life and habits is very well mounted, and giving great delight. As the young naval officer, Geoffrey Chaloner, Mr. Nelson Hancock both sings and acts well; Mr. St. John Hamund makes a very droll figure of the Rajah of Bhong; the part of Barry, the indefatigable, resourceful, and brazen servant of Geoffrey Chaloner, is played by Mr. Coningsby Brierley with irrepressible gaiety and good spirits; Miss Ann Hickisch is a bright, rompish Nan, and is a great favourite with the audience; Miss Dorothea Temple as Marjorie Joy sings very sweetly, and acts with dignity and pathos, winning all hearts; Princess Melaneh is agreeably rendered by Miss Myfanwy Newell, and her attendant, Miss Madge Redding, looks extremely picturesque; and the sparkling and versatile Sophie is safe in the hands of Miss Hilda Darrell. Mr. Percy Everard as Sir Joseph Verity, and Mr. H. B. Hargreaves as Douglas Verity, are highly amusing in their particular way; Miss Florence Linton as Mrs. St. Quinton, Miss Violet de Lacy as Lady Anchester, and Miss Vi Small as Lady Arnot do all that is required of them extremely well; and a number of charming ladies form a strong and efficient chorus. Mr. Enlyn Baker wields the baton as musical director, Mr. Joseph Bruce is stage-manager, and Mr. St. John Hamund is general-manager for the company.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.
On Monday, March 28, the Play, entitled
"A MESSAGE FROM MARS."

Mr. Richard Ganthony's fanciful play, A Message from Mars, proved a potent attraction for Easter week at the Kennington Theatre. On Monday a house, crowded in every part with an enthusiastic audience, gave Mr. Frederick Mouillot's production a great reception. The interesting and instructive story of the transformation of Horace Parker, the selfish and cynical man of the world of the first act, into the warm-hearted and generous philanthropist of the final scene was followed with rapt attention in all parts of the house, and the efforts of the strong company which Mr. Mouillot has sent on tour under the direction of Mr. Douglas Eley were rewarded with several curtain calls. The stage effects and illusions were remarkably well managed, and the second act constituted quite an effective example of stagecraft. That excellent actor, Mr. F. Vernon Travers, gave a clever sketch of the difficult rôle of Horace Parker, delineating the various phases of his conversion at the hands of the Messenger from Mars with great skill. As the Messenger from Mars, Mr. W. H. Brougham won a triumph. Of fine stage presence and sonorous voice, of which he made full use, Mr. Brougham was the very embodiment of the chastening Martian which the author's fancy has conjured up. Miss Rose Helene made an attractive and interesting Minnie Templar; Miss Aubrey Ashton impersonated the generous-souled aunt, Miss Parker, in a manner which won well-merited encomiums; Miss Mary Buckstone was well placed as Mrs. Clarence; Mr. Danelle Green gave a clever study of the policeman; Mr. Norman Clark's sketch of the tramp was a "live" piece of stage portraiture; Mr. Cecil Kerr deserved warm praise for his conception of Arthur Dicey; and Miss Ray Denton made a sprightly Bella, the housemaid. The rôles of Mr. Fergusson and Dr. Chapman were ably sustained by Mr. Howard Leslie and Mr. Percy Tyler; Mr. Eustace French creditably presented Sir Ernest Vivian; Miss Dolly Camp made a pathetic figure as little Minnie, the lost child; and Master Leonard Crisp created some fun as the light-fingered waif nicknamed the Emperor. Mr. F. Bentley as Jim, Mr. F. Fitzgerald as the watchman, Miss E. O'Dempsey as the flower girl, Miss Katherine Camp as the poor woman, Miss Vanbrough as Polly, Master T. George as the newsboy, Master H. Lloyd as the servant, Mr. Harry Brooks as Muggeridge, Mr. Louis Carbaret as Shellingford, and Mr. Harold Davidson as Sir Roland Wright all deserve mention.

DALSTON THEATRE.
On Monday, March 28, the Play entitled
"THE FATAL WEDDING."

Mr. Percy Williams is presenting this week at the Dalston Theatre the play of New York life, by Theo. Kremer, entitled The Fatal Wedding. Mr. Edward Lloyd as Howard Wilson, the wealthy gentleman who divorces his wife, as he subsequently ascertains, under the most groundless circumstances, sustains the character in manly style, and imparts quite the necessary amount of self-confidence to the impersonation. Mr. Cyril Melton is Robert Curtis, the man about town, who, together with Cora Wilson, an adventuress, plots to the discomfort of Howard Wilson and his long-suffering wife. Miss Leah Marlborough plays Cora Wilson, accepting the hisses which reward herself and her evil-minded partner with quite a professional smile of resignation. Cora's death scene at the altar, where she is finally shot by Curtis, is realistic, and provides the requisite title picture for the play. As Mabel Wilson, Howard's wife, Miss Ethel Kay admirably sustains the sympathetic interest; and as Jessie, "the little mother," Miss Marie Wilson gains many admirers, not only for her all-round good acting, but for her ability as a songstress and dancer. As Bridget, the "lady cook," Miss Blanche Huber figures well as an honest Hibernian; and as Toto, a French butler, Mr. Harry M. Vernon is responsible for a deal of laughter. Mr. Watson Hume is a droll Peter Schwartz, and Mr. Frank Ashley cuts a comical figure as O'Reilly, a New York police constable.

BRIXTON THEATRE.
On Monday, March 28, the Drama, entitled
"WOMAN AND WINE."

Mr. Fred Melville could not have selected a more attractive play than this old Pavilion Theatre success for the Easter holidays. Although seen here more than once, it still has a powerful hold on playgoers of this populous suburb, and on Monday, at both afternoon and evening performances, was received with much enthusiasm. In her original part of Marcel, Miss V. St. Lawrence made a marked impression, her acting reaching a high standard. Miss East Robertson also was very powerful as La Colombe, a very arduous and trying part. Mr. Guy Williams ably filled the part of Dick Seymour; and praise is due to Mr. Raymond Chester for his skill in depicting Hugh Seymour. Mr. Charles M. East was very effective as Alphonse Beaudet; Mr. Will Smith was entirely satisfactory as Pierre; and Mr Percy Cahill was at home as the geological professor, Sewter. Charles Sewter was nicely played by Mr. J. A. Hughes; Phineas Collins found a clever exponent in the hands of Mr. Frank Woodville; Mr. James Manning was able as Mark Perkins; and Mr. A. Heathcote rendered service as Duc d'Arnac. Mr. Charles Coombs made an effective President of the Court. Miss May Dallas (Janet), Miss Kate Browne (Madame Perinet), Miss Edith Marchant (Saxonne) all were good; while Miss Gertrude Tate was engaging as Hugh Seymour's ward, Mary Andrews.

THE BRITANNIA.
On Monday, March 28, the Drama entitled
"ROGUES OF THE TURF."

The well-known sporting comedy drama by Max Goldberg, entitled Rogues of the Turf, is being presented here by Mr. John F. Preston's company, and is proving a draw. Mr. Preston has spared no effort to ensure a successful production, and has engaged the services of Mr. Fred Lawrence, a favourite locally, who takes the part of Moses Solomons. The introduction of three racehorses into the piece is much appreciated. Mr. Preston plays the part of Joe Flaxman, the trainer, and portrays a character instinct with manliness and zeal for his employer's interests, his sporting maxims and allusions being much applauded. As Lady Heathcote, Miss Mabelle F. Barlow displays considerable ability, either as "an old man's darling" or an accomplice of the rogues of the turf. The leader of the latter is Captain Dudley Clifton, a part in which Mr. W. Howard Barlow acts with distinction. Moses Solomons affords Mr. Fred Lawrence plenty of scope for humorous sideplay, and his efforts are very effective. Mr. Arthur Hartley as Sir Gerald Heathcote acts well; and Mr. William Rea as Arthur Somerton acts in convincing fashion. Mr. Horace Custins as an apprentice jockey invests his part with refreshing humour; and Mr. Arthur Leighton as Steye Burton gives a good representation of a fashionable jockey. Very winning and charming is Miss Ethel Rainforth as Nellie Flaxman; and Miss Mabel Fare does well as Phyllis Wurzel. Messrs. Tom Phillips, Cas Jackson, Frank Ernestone, and Alfred Wade also lend valuable assistance.

ARTILLERY THEATRE, WOOLWICH.
On Monday, March 28, the Comedy, entitled
"DOLLY REFORMING HERSELF."

Playing to a packed house on Monday evening last Mr. Walner Gregory's company in Dolly Reforming Herself were well repaid for the mirth-provoking and talented interpretation they gave of Henry Arthur Jones' amusing comedy. The large holiday crowd that filled the theatre to overflowing showed their keen appreciation of both the play and the players, and evinced unmistakable signs of their hearty enjoyment by continuous laughter, which at numerous points culminated in emphatic expressions of approbation. Miss Henrietta Watson sustains the rôle of Mrs. Harry Telfer (Dolly) in a very natural manner, and, being a gifted and experienced humorist, she brings the fine points of the play into excellent relief, and lavish applause is bestowed, and deservedly so, upon her efforts, which maintain for her strong claims on the poular favour. Miss Vera Beringer also achieves distinction in the character of Mrs. Sturgess (Renée), the love-sick married woman, and her clever characterisation is very flatteringly received. Harry Telfer is capitally undertaken by Mr. Bertram Forsyth, who merits commendation for a judiciously rendered portrayal. Mr. Tom Mowbray provokes considerable hilarity as Matthew Borron, his easy and good humoured delineation producing a very happy and successful result, for which he is recompensed in a far from stinted fashion. Captain Lucas Wentworth is ably represented by Mr. Geoffrey Besant; Mr. Leonard Shepherd offers a good rendering of Professor Sturgess; Mr. Walter Grey as the Rev. James Pilcher makes the most of his opportunities; while Miss Mary Southbere and Mr. Robert Newsom as Peters and Criddle respectively complete the cast.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.
On Monday, March 28, the Drama, entitled
"HOME, SWEET HOME."

Presented by Messrs. Travis Green and Arthur Hinton, the drama Home, Sweet Home, which is written by Mr. Frank Lindo, is proving a great attraction here this week, and on Easter Monday evening the large audience which filled the theatre expressed hearty approval of the fare set before them, and were generous of their applause. The drama, which is admirably cast, is also adequately mounted and dressed. Mr. Arthur Hinton as Stephen Armitage finds plenty of scope for his abilities in the character of a young fisherman and captain of the lifeboat; his opportunities are in no way lost sight of, and he renders the sentimental part in a manly and spirited fashion which is flatteringly acknowledged. As Joan Miss Florence Zillwood offers a powerful delineation, and scores most successfully; Mr. Fred G. Kay does well as the bluff old fisherman David Armitage; the Duke of Ancaster is suitably undertaken by Mr. Chas. Clifford; Mr. G. Moreton-Williams submits a carefully-prepared study of the scheming Lucas Lyle, which is vigorously hissed; Mr. Arthur Beaufort offers an amusing portrait of the Hon. Percy; Dick Redmayne is judiciously played by Mr. Walter Clarke; Mr. A. Kirwin is suitably placed as the old salt Soloman Keary, and the same may be said of Miss Lizzie Routhe as Gaffer. Mr. Rupert Larry cuts a funny figure as Lord Silvermore; Mr. Charlton Morton makes the most of his chances as Dr. Granby; Miss Florrie Hayes is lively and amusing as Sybil Fay, and scores well; Miss M. Camfield sustains the rôle of Lady Summerton in an aristocratic manner; and little Hilda Vokes is clever and natural as Dora.

PAVILION THEATRE, E.
On Easter Monday, the New Sensational Play, by Lesser Columbus, entitled
"THE WORLD, THE FLESH, AND THE DEVIL."

Very vivid, but well relieved throughout with comic business, is that remarkable play, by Lesser Columbus, The World, the Flesh, and the Devil, which was revived at the Pavilion Theatre, Mile End-road, on Monday last. It is more than a year since this strongly-written drama was produced at this theatre. Judging from the splendid business being done on the night of our visit, The World, the Flesh, and the Devil made a great impression on the patrons of the Pavilion in February, 1909, and the comments of those in the auditorium led one to the belief that the re-engagement was a highly appreciated one. On Wednesday night Mr. John Sargent, who played the part of the drunken old reprobate Rupert Dyke, tool of his satanic majesty Nicholas Brophy, fell ill very suddenly. The management was in a great predicament—for there was no understudy—until the author himself, Mr. Lawrence Cowen, volunteered just as the curtain was going up on the first act to go on and do his best. Now Mr. Cowen, although well-known as a dramatic author, had never faced the footlights before, and, except for having actually written the lines himself, had never studied the part. To him belongs, therefore, the greatest credit for the way he went through a very difficult and very heavy character interpretation. Seldom was the prompter required, and it is to be hoped that Mr. Cowen will be seen on the stage at other times than those necessitated through a gap having been made in the ranks of his company.

The entire production since we last saw it has been considerably revised, and goes with the greatest smoothness and quickness from start to finish. It is well dressed and mounted, and, as the programme informs us, is on a great scale, worthy of "the Drury Lane of the East." Several times during the evening it was lucky for Mr. Henry Doughty as the demon barrister Nicholas Brophy that a good distance separated gallery and balcony from the stage. His villainy was so perfectly played that, it is safe to say, at times, could the "gods" have laid hands on him, there would have been little left of him to tell the tale. Gertrude Grant, barmaid, was a very lovable character in the hands of Miss Dora Hammersley. This young lady never exaggerated her woes, spoke up clearly and well, and got right to the hearts of the people. We commend her to the notice of all West End managers requiring a sweet-faced, convincing heroine, whose enunciation and general bearing shows careful and studied training.

In the main the company is excellent. The lovelorn widow, Mrs. Jenkins (Miss Constance Coopman), is a very humerous character in her efforts to secure Mr. Johnson, the butler (Mr. Will Harman), for her second venture. The bounder, Bertie Brunton (Mr. Walter Langford), joins these two in a very fine musical trio in the bar of the Prince Regent, and between them contrive some very funny situations. Mr. Lawrence Maitland as Lucifer and Co.'s managing clerk is responsible for some good acting in some cross-talk with Nicholas Brophy. Miss Violet Hammersley as Beatrice Cuthbert is extremely good.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.
On Monday, March 28, the Drama, entitled
"THE STILL ALARM."

The enterprising management here have provided a fine Easter attraction in that well-known drama The Still Alarm, played by Messrs. Glenville and Osmond's company. In addition to a company of talented actors and actresses, there are the two trained horses, rejoicing in the names of Bucephalus and Pegasus, also the greyhound, Laddie, whose antics are a constant source of delight both to juveniles and grown-ups. Mr. Matthew H. Glenville is the hero, Jack Manley, and fully lives up to the name. Aided by fine physical proportions, he makes a fine figure of a man as the Chief of the N.Y. Fire Brigade. Mr. Gerald Kennedy is the scoundrelly John Bird, whose many villainies call down on his head much execration; Mr. Edward Hobart is a very effective Willie Manley, and a good singing voice enhances his excellent light acting; Mr. Henry C. Gilfin gives a capital character sketch of the bibulous actor, Doc. Wilber; Mr. Lewis Gardon plays well as Franklyn Fordham; Mr. C. Barmand is a bright messenger boy; Mr. J. Sutton Pateman is the cause of much honest laughter as the jovial old fireman Joe Jones; Miss Beatrice Shirley makes an effective heroine of the much-tried Elinor Fordham; Miss Lydia Audre is an arch and pretty Carrie Wilber, and sings sweetly of "a little boy in the gallery"; and Miss Mabel Veriton makes a homely and sympathetic Mrs. Manley. The general mounting leaves little to be desired, the scene depicting the New York Central Fire Station being finely done. The excellent orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Wm. Stephenson, is responsible for some good music between the acts. The Bioscope at the finish still continues a very effective feature of the programme here.

BROADWAY THEATRE.
On Monday, March 28, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Walter Howard, entitled
"THE PRINCE AND BEGGAR MAID."

This excellent play has been the holiday attraction here, and has drawn crowded houses, the development of the story being followed with intense interest until the final fall of the curtain. Mr. G. Mayor-Cooke plays Prince Hildred of Sylvania in convincing and manly style, and looks remarkably well in a handsome uniform. Prince Michael has a clever representative in Mr. Lionel Gadsden, who won much sympathy for the unhappy Prince. Mr. Ernest Cox was very good indeed as Prince Olaf. Mr. Ernest Gray proved himself an actor of considerable ability by his performance of the dumb servant, Nathan, and his efforts added considerably to the success of the play. Mr. J. Chamberlain as Col. Wellenburg, Mr. Arnold Cameron as Col. Schwartz, Mr. Fred Upton as Capt. Karsburg, Mr. Sharpe as Lieut. Hapsburg, Mr. Sydney as Capt. Keller, Mr. W. Smythson as Capt. Leopold, Mr. Edward Bowen as Major Weaner, and Mr. Hines as Capt. Ardenne all did exceedingly well. Mr. Hanley presented a lifelike portrait of the Bishop of Illyria, Mr. Robert Noble is an earnest and effective Capt. Hector, Mr. Richard Lane was good as Lieut. Karl Stromberg, and Mr. W. Bearley was a good bugler. Miss Ethel Patrick was a charming representative of Camiola, Miss Mona Hungerford was an attractive and clever Viola, and Miss Stella Campbell made a decided success by her delightful impersonation of Princess Monica of Illyria. Mr. Francis Hawley is general-manager of the company, and Mr. Lionel Gadsden stage-manager.

THE GRAND, FULHAM.
On Monday, March 28, the Musical Comedy, entitled
"THE CINGALEE."

The spring bookings at Mr. Robert Arthur's Fulham theatre make up a strong list, not the least attractive of which is The Cingalee. Mr. Frederick Merer, the able general-manager of the pretty house, has had the pleasure of welcoming crowded holiday audiences throughout the week, and Mr. Haldane Crichton's company has been received with open arms. All the principals have found favour, the most abundant being lavished upon Mr. Jack Crichton, a distinctly original comedian, with unlimited resources for fun making. His eccentricities as the volatile Baboo lawyer keep the house overflowing with mirth, no small measure of the effect obtained being due to a special facility for whimsical make-up. As the Hon. Harry Vereker Mr. Arthur Cartwright is a typical comic opera hero. His fine baritone rings melodiously in "My Little Cingalee," which is heartily encored. Miss Florence Watson is the Nanoya, whom she dresses and acts daintily. Her strong and cultivated voice is heard with harmonious effect in "The Cinnamon Tree," the delicate effects of which are artistically obtained. Miss Ida Ernest makes a winsome English girl of Peggy Sabine, acting with never-failing animation and charm. Her "Golliwog" duet with Mr. Crichton is amusingly done, and the various scenes between the vivacious pair prove always diverting. Mr. Scott Cullen makes a handsome, buoyant, cheery youth of Bobby Warren, his love scene with Lady Patricia Vane, portrayed in refined style by Miss Pauline Hague, with the duet "You and I," being effectively rendered and greatly enjoyed. A distinct success is achieved by Mr. F. W. Ford in the part of Sir Peter Lotus, whose splenetic utterances are admirably delivered. Mr. Ford makes much of the "after-dinner" scene, which is carried out in refreshingly humorous style. Mr. Douglas Munro makes a grotesque oddity of the high and mighty Boobhamba, a part out of which he extracts all the fun possible; and Mr. Ernest Tritschler is a picturesque Captain of the Guard. Excellent work is put in by Misses Winnie Murray, Mercy June, Violet Cowen, and Edie Burton as the plantation tea girls. A novelty introduced into the production is a "vampire dance," in which Miss Sadie Thompson goes through the movements associated with that measure with sinuous grace. The subsidiary parts are all efficiently rendered, and chorus is numerous and well drilled.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.
On Saturday, March 26, the Musical Play, entitled
"MISS HOOK OF HOLLAND."

Judging from the crowded state of the house on the opening night of the engagement, no more popular attraction could have been secured for the holiday programme than Miss Hook of Holland, in which Mr. George Dance's company has been appearing here during the present week. The comedy is sent on the road with a completeness and attention to detail that one naturally looks for in any of Mr. Dance's organisations, and is played by a company who, one and all, contrive to impart an air of originality to their impersonations. Especially so is this to be noticed in the case of Mr. Alfred Wellesley, whose Mr. Hook, although totally different in style from the original, is as richly dry and unctuously humorous a performance as one could wish. As Sally Hook Miss Marie Studholme brings considerable vivacity to bear on her work, and never allows things to flag while she is on the stage. Miss Maud Denny submits a clever character-sketch of Nina, giving all possible point to her songs. Mr. Frank H. Crimp as Bandmaster Van Vuyt has the most catchy number in the piece, to which he does full justice, and plays the part easily and naturally. The fun of the production is added to by Mr. Fred Lyne's entertaining performance of Simon Slinks, and Mr. Frederick Hobb's excellent representative of Captain Paap. In other parts Messrs. Charles Ross and Lacy E. Mills, and Misses Hilda Gordon, Lillian Constance, and Lina Imperiali add to the general success. Praise is due to the chorus and orchestra for their excellent work under the direction of Mr. Clement Locknane.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.
Cavaliere F. Castellano's Italian Grand Opera Company are meeting with a much increased measure of success here, where they conclude a week's re-engagement to-night. The houses have been well filled at each performance, the répertoire including Il Trovatore, Carmen, Rigoletto, Il Barbiere di Siviglia, Ernani, Traviata, Cavalleria Rusticana, and Faust. In the numerous company are some vocalists of exceptional merit, and their efforts have been acknowledged by repeated recalls. So successful have been the two visits that it is understood that another visit of a fortnight's duration has been arranged for the autumn.

Mr. Creston Clarke, the actor, nephew of Edwin Booth and grandson of Junius Booth, died at the Winyah Sanatorium, Asheville, N.C., on the 21st ult. of tuberculosis. He was forty-four years old.

Creston Clarke was an actor and playwright, known better in the South and West than in New York city. He was the second son of John Sleeper Clarke and Asia Booth Clarke, and a nephew of Edwin Booth. He was born in 1865, and received his education in London and Paris. His professional career began in England at the Adelphi Theatre, where he played François to his uncle's Richelieu. He remained in England from 1882 to 1886, in support of his uncle and his father.

In 1886 he went to America and joined Lester Wallack's stock company, where he remained until it went out of existence. He was then a member of the Augustin Daly company until he organised a company of his own, appearing on tour as a star in Shakespearean plays. For ten years he toured at the head of his own company in a classical répertoire. In 1897 he produced his own romantic play, The Last of his Race, in which he appeared for some time. In 1906 he made a starring tour in Monsieur Beaucaire, and in 1907 and 1908 played in The Power that Governs. His wife was Adelaide Prince, an actress. She and his brother, Wilfred Clarke, survive him.

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

MR. E. HOGGAN-ARMADALE

AS MATHIAS,
AT THE PALACE THEATRE, SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA.

Mr. Hoggan-Armadale, who came to us as a stranger, with out any Press booming, proved himself an actor of great talent. His masterly conception of the difficult part of Mathias, together with his beautiful voice, soon found favour with the audience, and this excellent artist gave us a performance such as is seldom, if ever, seen in Sydney. If a few of the boomed and so-called "stars" who are thrust upon us in this city would take a pattern from Mr. Armadale, the profession would soon become—what it ought to be—a work of art. Every fibre of this fine actor's soul was extended in his magnificent portrayal of one of the greatest performances ever given in Sydney.—Sydney Kookaburra, Nov. 20, 1909.

It is many years since Australians had the opportunity of seeing any actor of note in "The Bells." At the Palace, yesterday, Mr. Hoggan-Armadale was seen in the principal character, a rôle demanding much versatility and emotional changes. The audience were given an artistic treat by Mr. Hoggan-Armadale. This is the first of a series of performances, and if yesterday's can be taken as a criterion, they will be a success. Mr. Armadale's portrayal of the man on the verge of ruin, and as the conscience-stricken burgomaster, was a splendid one throughout.—Sydney Sunday Times, Oct. 24, 1909.

Hoggan-Armadale, a well-seasoned and robust English actor, plays the part of Mathias. As the haggard Mathias who hears the jingle of ghostly sleigh-bells and dreams of vengeance till he goes mad, he does his heavy scoring with a generous hand. But he is more effective in his occasional quiet passages. One or two of his minor-key speeches, more particularly that to his prospective son-in-law, are excellently rendered. — Sydney Bulletin, Oct. 29, 1909.

Mr. Hoggan-Armadale, an English actor now visiting Australia, played an effective Mathias in a production of "The Bells" at the Palace Theatre on Saturday. He is of active presence, has a well-trained voice, and showed in such scenes as "The Dream," wherein he describes the murder, that he possesses adequate power and judgment. Altogether, his performance was a convincing one. The management of his voice was decidedly effective. The speech to Christian in the second act was spoken really well, and in "The Dream" it was noticed that the actor consistently maintained the low and telling monotone with which he began to recite the events of the fateful Christmas Eve. The nervous agony of the man under the remorse from which he suffered was illustrated cleverly.—Sydney Daily Telegraph, Oct. 25, 1909.

Success marked the first appearance of Mr. Armadale at the Palace Theatre. His impersonation of Mathias was a strong and convincing one throughout, and in "The Dream" he realised all anticipations.—Sydney Referee, Oct. 27, 1909.

THE COMING OPERA SEASON.

The grand opera season at Covent Garden, which will open on Saturday, April 23, promises to be an interesting one. The season will commence with La Traviata, with Mme. Tetrazzini, Mr. Sammarco, and Mr. McCormack. Already every seat, save a few orchestra stalls and one or two boxes, has been applied for for the two complete cycles of Der Ring and Tristan und Isolde, and this year no extra performances of fragments of Der Ring will be given, though possibly Tristan may be heard outside the cycle. The performances of the various "Ring" dramas, with the exception of Das Rheingold, will begin in the afternoon, a "dinner-hour" being allowed between the first and second acts. Dress will be optional at these Wagnerian performances, though ladies will have to remove their hats and bonnets. The two "Ring" cycles will begin respectively on April 25 and May 3, and the two Tristan performances will be given on May 17 and May 12.

The operas will be sung in three languages, though four choruses, English, Italian, German, and French, have been engaged. In French we are to hear Laparra's Habanera, Louise and Pelléas are to be repeated, with Faust, Romeo, and Samson et Dalila. In German, Der Ring and Tristan complete the list. The catalogue of Italian operas includes a resuscitation of Linda di Chamounix, Lakmé (which has not been heard in England for some years), Puccini's Manon Lescaut, Tosca, Madama Butterfly, La Bohème, with Aïda, Il Barbière, Lucia, Otello, Rigoletto, Sonnambula, Trovatore, and Gli Ugonotti. Baron F. d'Erlanger's Tess also will be revived.

Among the new sopranos are Mesdames Elizabeth Amsden, who took part in the recent performances of The Wreckers; H. Demellier, a singer from the Opéra Comique, who "created" the rôle of Pilar in Habanera on its production; Zorah Dorly, a dramatic soprano from Brussels; Gauthier, who is to play Yniold in Debussy's work; Amy Evans, new to grand opera, who is to sing the Bird and the first Rhine-daughter; and Sarah Streletzki.

Familiar favourites are Mesdames Melba, safely returned from her tour in her native land; Tetrazzini; Destinn, now of London and New York; Edvina (who is at present studying Melisande's rôle under Debussy in Paris); Edith Evans; Knüpfer-Egli, who has been absent too long; Maria Kousnietzoff, who comes from the Opera in Paris for June and July; Lalla Miranda; Minnie Saltzmann-Stevens, who is to essay Isolde's rôle for the first time; and Marthe Symiane, from Brussels.

One new contralto has been engaged—Mme. Alice Mutch—but Mme. Kirkby Lunn, who has been on a concert tour in the United States, Mesdames Edna Thornton, Edith Clegg, Bérat, and Jane Bourgeois are all to be heard. A long list of tenors includes MM. Paul Franz, from Paris; Arthur Lheureux, from Brussels; Riccardo Martin, a French-Canadian of American fame; Nicholas Rostowsky, from St. Petersburg; Carl Strätz, who will share the Siegfried rôles with Peter Cornelius; Johannes Sembach, engaged as Loge and as Siegmund; Nichola Zerola, an heroic tenor; and Sydney Russell, who has sung the parts of Froh and Melot. Also engaged are MM. Cornelius, who will sing Tristan for the first time, and Dalmoré, D'Oisly, McCormack, and Hans Bechstein, Warnery, and Zucchi.

Newcomers among the basses and baritones are MM. Baklanoff, from St. Petersburg, whose voice is said to be glorious; Edmund Burke, a Canadian, who succeeded Marcoux at The Hague; Fenton; Johannes Fönss, a Danish Hagen and Hunding; Lestelly, more or less a successor of the great Renaud; Malatesta, a bass-buffo; and Josef Schlembach, with MM. Bourbon, Crabbé, Murray Davey, Galletti, Marcoux, Sammarco, Schutzendorf, who will impersonate Gunther, Zador, and Anton van Rooy.

The conductors are Dr. Hans Richter and MM. Campanini, Frigara, Panizza, and Percy Pitt, and the directors are the Marquis of Ripon, Lord Esher, Baron F. d'Erlanger, Mr. H. V. Higgins, with Mr. Percy Pitt as musical director and Mr. Neil Forsyth as general manager.

Mr. William Collier, the American comedian, in his current success, A Lucky Star, has to engage an "aunt" to act as a chaperon to two young ladies. The "aunt" is required to speak English with a Scotch accent. The one he engages fails in this particular, however, and Mr. Collier undertakes to instruct her. First of all she must speak with a "burr," and not call him Ronald but "R-r-r-ronald." The Scotch dialect, he tells her, is "a cross between a cry and a gargle."

"THE WELSH MAID."

A Musical Drama, in Prologue and Three Acts, by James Bateman, Lyrics by C. F. Hornibrook and Music by Harry Richardson, Produced at the Prince's Theatre, Horwich, on Monday, March 28.

Caradoc Howell .....Mr. Victor Cannon
Jack Francis .....Mr. Laurie H. Stuart
Philip Seymour .....Mr. Cecil Parkes
James Seymour .....Mr. Herbert de Ville
Dafydd Thomas .....Mr. William Pemm
Owen Evans .....Mr. Mornington Lewis
Shon Thomas .....Mr. E. Richardson
Elsa .....Miss Bertha Beresford
Elsie .....Miss Marie Beresford
Maudie .....Miss Florrie Beresford
Phœbe .....Miss Josephine Allbutt
Ann Llewellyn .....Miss T. Thompson
Sally Davis .....Miss Madge Raymonde
Mrs. Jones .....Miss Theresa Spencer
Jenny Jones .....Miss Zeta Murdock

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The piece provides a story of Welsh life. The prologue is laid in the cottage of one Caradoc Howell, a devout Welshman, whose hobby is astronomy and the reading of horoscopes. His daughter Ruth has been betrayed by the unscrupulous James Seymour, who brutally leaves her to her fate. Not daring to face her parents, Ruth leaves a note wishing them good-bye and goes to end her life, and they are informed that Ruth has thrown herself into the lake. The shock kills the mother, and the father vows vengeance on his daughter's betrayer.

Act 1 opens in the gardens of Dafyn Hall, Anglesea, the ancestral home of the Jones family, the occasion being the coming of age of Jenny, the heiress of Dafyn. James Seymour appears, and by means of a forged marriage certificate endeavours to induce Jenny's mother to prevent her daughter's engagement to James Francis, a young Welsh singer, and to compel Jenny to accept him (Seymour) in his place. A heated scene takes place between Jenny and Seymour, when Caradoc enters, recognises Seymour, and at the end of the act, during the masquerade ball, discloses his identity to the confusion of the villain.

In Act 2 Seymour is bringing pressure to bear upon Mrs. Jones to force Jenny to comply with his desire, and on her blank refusal persuades her mother to have her kept a prisoner in the strong-room. Seymour enters, and after a fruitless attempt to gain her hand shows her a forged letter purporting to be from Francis to another woman. In her agitation Jenny doubts Francis's honour, and is ready to accede to Seymour's wishes. In the meantime Caradoc and Francis enter by a secret passage and rescue Jenny. Caradoc, in a fine, dramatic scene, exposes the treachery and forgeries of Seymour.

The final act is again the Gardens of Dafyn Hall, six months later. Jack Francis has scored a success in London as a Welsh singer, and on his return his marriage with Jenny is celebrated with much jubilation, during which Seymour returns, a haggard and broken-down drunkard. In his delirium the scene of Ruth's (his victim) death is vividly depicted. The plays ends with the death of Seymour at the hands of Caradoc, who himself succumbs to heart disease.

The part of Jenny Jones, the Welsh maid, was charmingly undertaken by Miss Zeta Murdock, who is possessed of a sweet soprano voice, unstinted applause being bestowed on her singing. Mr. Herbert de Ville gave a very forcible rendering of the unscrupulous James Seymour, creating quite a shudder in the final scene; Mr. Victor Cannon gave a very fine exposition of the old astrologer Caradoc, and his singing was highly appreciated; Mr. Laurie H. Stuart's Jack Francis was a manly part, capitally portrayed, and his songs and duets with Jenny were quite a feature of the piece. Mr. William Pomm was responsible for unlimited comedy, and created roars of laughter, being ably assisted by Mis Madge Raymonde, whose singing, dancing, and versatile business were distinctly good, their characters as Dafydd Thomas, a Welsh wag from Llanfair P.G., and Sally Davis, maid at the Hall, suiting them to a nicety. Miss Theresa Spencer gave a sympathetic and pretty rendering of the timid Mrs. Jones; Miss Josephine Allbutt as Phœbe sang herself into the affections of the audience; the sisters Beresford, as maids at Dafyn Hall, kept the piece going with some very pretty songs and fine dancing. The musical conductor, Mr. Leo H. Croke, worked very hard and effectively.

THE GLOSSOP-HARRIS SHAKESPEAREAN COMPANY AT WEYMOUTH.

When Miss Florence Glossop-Harris and her company first displayed their talent before a Weymouth audience, some twelve months since, they won for themselves a reputation that was amply demonstrated in the eager audience which awaited the rising of the curtain for The Merchant of Venice on Monday night. It was an audience expecting great things, and it was not disappointed, for the way in which this—perhaps the best known of Shakespeare's works—was enacted impressed one with the sincerity of its conception, a feature that revealed itself in the no less clever execution. This remark applies to the artists individually and collectively. Each created an atmosphere of realism, and never did one give a suspicion of "acting." From the opening scene, the street in Venice, where Antonio agrees to stand bond to Shylock for Bassanio, the depth of feeling infused into the parts compels the fullest interest. From thence it is maintained until the curtain falls on the two happy husbands with their rings restored. As Shylock, Mr. Frank Cellier gave a portrayal that defies anything in the way of adverse criticism. He diffused parsimony all around him, spoke with a lust for lucre—a love that was only to be contrasted with his hate for Antonio. In the court scene his dramatic qualities were seen to the best advantage. He was almost sensationally intense in demanding his bond, and in preparing to take it he created a real thrill. His quick change of mood from the wild ecstacy of his triumphant malice to the tragic despondency of his defeat was amazingly accomplished. One minute he excited hate, the next minute he was a broken old man suffering all the agony that came from the spoiling of his excessive joy. He excited pity. Even the intensity of his rancour was not strong enough to resist the surging pity borne of his despairing throes. It was a rare piece of acting, acting so well concealed that its appealing pathos was almost too real. Miss Florence Glossop-Harris took Portia, and interpreted the romance of the part with all its poetic charm. She was best in her exhortations to Shylock, and the discourse on Mercy, which she delivered with a measured deliberation which brought out the real beauty of the words. It is sometimes difficult to speak some of the longer passages in Shakespeare's works, and at the same time to maintain the requisite dramatic qualities. But this obstacle Miss Glossop-Harris easily surmounted, and in all her endeavours she aired the wit and subtlety of the writing and retained the essentials of its romanticism. She was superb in the love scene, and in her gay chat to Nerissa, describing her attire for the journey to Venice, the merry abandon which marked her gesture was delightful. The rôle was undoubtedly a great success.—Weymouth Standard, March 29, 1910.

Signor Grasso scored another success at the Lyric Theatre on Wednesday, when the Sicilians presented A Santa Lucia, a heartrending tragedy. The part of Rosella was enacted by Signorina Marinella Bragaglia.

"THE KING'S ROMANCE."

Play, in Four Acts, by E. Vivian Edmonds, Produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Salford, on Easter Monday, March 28.

Prince Andreas .....Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds
Baron Cavonia .....Mr. Walter A. Chetham
Count Bavantia .....Mr. Wm. Manning
Colonel Ventigue .....Mr. Chas. Wharton
Captain Berg .....Mr. Cecil Calmere
Alderman Stene .....Mr. Thos. V. King
Bartoy .....Mr. Ernest C. Edwards
Gerantgne .....Mr. Frank Eastly
Vera Nevairre .....Miss Mary Austin
Paul Nevairre .....Mr. Wm. H. Dewhurst
The Curé .....Mr. G. Lyon Hastings
Michael Vacurat .....Mr. Geo. P. Porteous
Lizette .....Miss Ethel Vinroy
Madame Pomeroy .....Miss Bella Power
Jean Pomeroy .....Mr. Geo. Toft
Fragot .....Mr. Arthur A. Valentine

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds's interesting play opens in a room in a palace where one of a king's chief Ministers, Count Bavantia, is reading particulars of the Prince's public engagements on the morrow, and instructing the officers of the household in their several duties. Baron Cavonia, a confidential Minister, and friend of the Prince, desires an audience, but the Count says it is too late. While they are talking the Prince enters, and dispenses with the Count's services for the night. The Prince, who is the second son of the reigning monarch, has been making—with the aid of Bartoy, his major-domo—clandestine excursions while it was thought he was in bed, and he tells his old friend the Baron of his meeting a beautiful girl and passing himself off as an artist under the name of Andreas Cordellia. They are hopelessly in love. The Baron advises him, as he may become king, to give up the idea, and almost persuades him to do so, when Bartoy brings a note from Vera saying she is in trouble. The Prince and Bartoy ride on horseback to Bandio, some seven leagues away, and the Prince says he will be back in time for his first engagement in the morning.

In the second scene, in a curè's garden, Vera and her brother Paul, who live with their uncle, appear. She is much troubled about Paul, as he slips away during the night to attend anarchist meetings, under the direction of his friend, Vacurat, the leader of the "Sons of Freedom." Michael persuades Paul to help him to win Vera. Michael offers himself to Vera, but she refuses, as she detests him. He becomes furious, and threatens her, when he is disturbed by the appearance of Prince Andreas and Bartoy.

The pair being left alone, Vera lets Andreas know that their intimacy has brought on her serious trouble. Michael suspects the identity of Andreas, and overhears the conversation. The Baron appears, and begs Andreas to return, and he is about to go, when Paul, who has been told by Michael that Andreas has betrayed his sister, strikes the Prince. The Curè enters, and Andreas decides to be married to Vera at once, the Curè leading them to the church.

In the second act we are at the home of the "artist" on the first birthday of a son. The happy mother and baby and relations who have come with presents are expecting Andreas, the father (who has been away some time), to make everything pleasant. There is much homely fun introduced, till Paul appears in rags and travel-stained, fleeing from justice, and imploring to be hidden till he can get away at night. His sister consents, after much persuasion by Paul and Lizette, to lock him up in her bedroom and tell anyone that he has been there the whole of the previous night. Paul has been selected to assassinate the King and Crown Prince, and he has accomplished the deed. Michael comes and gets Paul, who has changed into some of Andreas' clothes, to escape to a certain place, where he will meet him. Michael sees Andreas coming, and does not wish to meet him, so he creeps unobserved into the bedroom, and Vera afterwards locks the door. The Baron has an idea where to find Andreas, and comes to tell him that he is the King, and must come home. Vera finds out who Andreas is, and he wishes to get his cloak out of the bedroom. He asks for the key, and finds that there is a man there, who has "been there all night." Michael, when released, says he came at Vera's invitation. Andreas will not listen to her denial. Michael, who is known as an anarchist, is arrested, and the new King leaves Vera to her fate as an unfaithful wife.

The King is determined to calm the disturbed state of the people, and his Ministers have arranged that he shall marry a certain Princess. The Count's desire is to get Vera out of the way, and she is to be arrested; but she cannot be found. Meantime Paul is caught, and Michael turns King's evidence to save his neck, denouncing Paul as the murderer. Vera comes to intercede for her brother's life. Lizette is with her. The Count, having got all the information he wants, dismisses the prisoners to their cells, and leaves instructions with an officer to follow and arrest the woman "in the black cloak." Bartoy, in order that Vera may get to the King, arranges for her to change cloaks with Lizette, who is arrested. He take Vera to the King, and she pleads for her brother's life. Paul, who gloried in the assasination, refused to give any names of accomplices except that of Michael, and was put on the rack. He is brought before the King, explains that Vera is innocent, and dies. Michael is allowed to go free. The Princess who is to marry the King is announced, but the King says he will be faithful to Vera. She, however, tells him to do his duty to the country.

The last act is in Vera's apartments. She and Lizette are packing up to leave for England, where she has taken a farm in Hampshire. The King's wedding is to be celebrated on the morrow, and he goes to the chapel to pray at night; but he wishes to see his child, Bartoy having found out accidentally where Vera is and informed the King. Michael Vacurat, having been told by Vera that she also hates the "King," gives her particulars of a plot to assassinate him on his entering the chapel. She informs the Baron, who comes to seek the King, and he takes the King's cloak and goes to the chapel. Vera tells the King of the plot, and Michael comes to gloat over the death of the King An explosion occurs, and the King is thought to be killed, but Michael turns round and sees him alive. They fight with swords, and Michael is killed. The King hears the shouts of the revolutionaries, and finds his way out of his difficulty in letting them think that he—the King—is really dead. He and Vera agree to go together to Hampshire.

The bulk of the work is thrown on Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds, who rises to the occasion in a masterly manner; and on Miss Mary Austin, who makes an ideal true Vera, working with excellent tact. The true friend, Baron Cavonia, who gives his life for his King, is ably played by Mr. Walter A. Chetham. Mr. Wm. H. Dewhurst as Paul, Mr. Geo P. Porteous as Michael, Mr. W. Manning as Count Bavantia, and Mr. Ernest C. Edwards as Bartoy do very good work. The comedy is sustained by Miss Ethel Vinroy (Lizette), Miss Bella Power (Madame Pomeroy), Mr. George Toft (Jean Pomeroy), and Mr. Arthur A. Valentine (Fragot). The other characters are in good hands. The staging, scenery, and dresses are effective, and we shall be surprised if the play is not a good money-maker.

A copyright performance of a new one-act play by Mr. Hall Caine, entitled The Red Shirt, was given on Tuesday at the Queen's Theatre. The play is adapted from the author's novel, "The Eternal City," and the scene is laid in Rome, Garibaldi being the principal character.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS DAISY MAY.

Miss Daisy May, a pupil of Miss Jennie Franklin (La Femme Grossmith), commenced her professional career by appearing as Cedric Errol, in Little Lord Fauntleroy to the Earl of Mr. Will Dennis. In this exacting part she scored an immediate sucess, Mr. Dennis, who has played the Earl of Dorincourt with many "Little Lords," both in London and the provinces, regarding Miss Daisy May's performance as the most sympathetic and responsive of them all. On returning from this tour Miss May resumed her lessons in playing, singing, and dancing under Miss Franklin, who introduced her to Mr. Trevor Lowe, which resulted in an engagement to sing a song entitled "The Waif" (written by Miss Franklin) in the prologue of the fairy play, Sylvia in Sunland, at the West Pier, Brighton. Mr. Lowe was so pleased with the singer that he put in a special part for her, that of the Princess, in which rôle she introduced a humorus song, and thoroughly proved her versatility. After the run of Sylvia in Sunland, Miss May had her first experience of vaudeville by appearing in "The Waif" at the matinée held at Mr. Barrasford's Hippodrome, in aid of the Brighton Police Fund, for the poor children of the town. In the autumn of last year Miss May was engaged for Derek Jesson, in His House in Order, with Mr. Herbert Ralland's company, a part in which she gave every satisfaction.

The popular pastime of roller skating has a devotee in Miss May, who is quite an expert on the "rollers." In fact, while in a town on the present tour, the manager of the rink at which she was skating made her an excellent offer to remain and take up a position as instructress. Miss May replied, "Thank you, but I would much rather be an actress." Miss May has a song with an earhaunting melody in which she introduces her dancing on roller skates. She hopes shortly to extend her performance in vaudeville, featuring several of the smart songs written for her by Miss Franklin. Being only fifteen years of age, and with the ability she undoubtedly possesses, both as an actress and singer of songs, pathetic and humorous, Miss May should make a name for herself.

MR. DUDLEY STUART.

The son of a doctor, Mr. Dudley Stuart was originally intended to follow his father's profession; but having no liking for medicine, he chose the more bohemian life of the theatre. His first engagement was with Miss Annie Hughes in A Country Mouse, under the management of Mr.

MR. DUDLEY STUART.

Percy Hutchison, with whom he remained for a short tour. He was then engaged by Mrs. Lewis Waller as general understudy in The Admiral's Lady, when he was equal to the necessity of playing Capt. Braddon at a few hours' notice. After this followed an engagement with Messrs. Addison Bright and Walter Maxwell in Merely Mary Ann, playing the part of the Rev. Samuel Smudge; then for a period came a series of juvenile parts in drama. In 1906 he was engaged by Mr. Charles Steuart to play Mr. James Carew's part in The Little Stranger. Following this came a suburban tour with Aug. Van Biene in The Broken Melody.

For eighteen months Mr. Stuart was under the management of Mr. W. Payne Seddon, playing the juvenile leads in Charley's Aunt, The Night of the Party, and The Private Secretary. He has also played Pryce Ridgeley in His House in Order for two tours. Mr. Stuart was recently playing Chas. Hawtrey's part (Horace Parker) in A Message from Mars. His hobbies are golf, yachting, and tennis. He is a great believer in all outdoor exercises, and much prefers country life to that of town.

The New Theatre, Aberdare, will be closed for the next nine weeks, during which time extensive alterations will be made.

"RED 'RIA."

A New Play, in one act, by Gertrude and Jack Landa, Produced by Miss Horniman's company at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, on Monday, March 28.

'Ria .....Miss Edyth Goodall
Mrs. Perkins .....Miss Louise Holbrook
Countess Polhurst .....Miss Darragh
Major Fitzaylivin .....Mr. Ian Maclaren

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The tone of this play is very much in keeping with certain modern ideas on the class question, and one does not at all wonder to see it included among the enterprises of Miss Horniman at this up-to-date theatre, where a piece of current sociology, dramatically presented, is almost always sure of being well received. Red 'Ria, a tall girl with red hair, is apparently the daughter of Mrs. Perkins, and we see her in the domestic hovel—it is little else—just returned sullenly from work on a Saturday afternoon. There are six other offspring, whom we do not see; Mr. Perkins is, as usual, at some neighbouring public-house, having an idea that he need not work overmuch while 'Ria is bringing wages home. Him also we do not set eyes on; and perhaps it is as well, for it appears that the sight of him has the effect on 'Ria of making her square up and fight him, to bring him to his senses—not a very edifying spectacle. To-day 'Ria is peculiarly bitter, for she has "got the sack." Something in her temperament is the cause of this, something that is bitterly resentful of the circumstances of her existence. Life is not as it should be. To add to the bitterness of it all, there is the contrast presented by the charitably-minded Countess Polhurst, who, as Mrs. Perkins says, has been a good friend to them, and who is even now in the district giving doles. But 'Ria does not envy the Countess; she simply resents the charity, which she looks upon as a mere diversion of the rich—an undue sort of patronage by people whose lives are "rotten," and who are unworthy of their privileges. She is in the humour to give the Countess a piece of her mind on the subject; and presently, when she has practically kicked Mrs. Perkins out of the room, and the lady enters, 'Ria does indeed unburden herself to a pretty tune. The Countess is hurt and abashed; she merely wants to help 'Ria to another situation, but no attempt at conciliation can stem the torrent of the girl's abuse. By degrees a meaning of it all creeps in; 'Ria confesses that she is not the daughter of the Perkins's; and the discerning playgoer, hearing that she does not know her parentage, and already conscious of an indomitable pride in this vehement denizen of the slums, begins to perceive a quality of blood in her. This takes off the edge of his surprise when a subsequent incident discloses the fact that she is the daughter of a veritable aristocrat. The latter, we are led to infer, is none other than the brother of the Countess. This gentleman calls for his sister while the latter is out of the room, and recognises in 'Ria the unmistakable features of a woman who was much besought by gentlemen in her day. 'Ria has an instinct for this visitor, Major Fitzaylivin, but she is not softened by it. She cannot forget that the rich are "a rotten lot," and in the end she sinks down under the shame of being the child of one of them.

On the face of it, the situation is absurd and irrational; yet for the psychologist there is also food for thought. The authors have dealt not so much with incident as with meanings, and the dialogue is at once natural and suggestive.

As for the acting, Miss Edyth Goodall has, in our opinion, done nothing better than this virulent and exacting character-depiction of Red 'Ria, though one might imagine a less strenuous and equally effective interpretation. Temperament is in every line and every attitude of the part. Equally lifelike, but in quite another level, was the Mrs. Perkins of Miss Louise Holbrook, who gave a wonderfully realistic depiction of the tolerant, suffering slut of a housewife to whom hardship and a drunken, lazy husband are second nature. Miss Darragh's Countess Polhurst was a polished and sensitive performance; and Mr. Ian Maclaren conveyed all that was required in his presentment of Major Fitzaylivin.

"For years," says Stephen Fiske in Sports of the Times, "I have contended that no reputable manager should engage any actress or actor who is not a member of the Actors' Fund. This has been called the application of trades union methods to an artistic profession; but the Actors' Fund confers the benefits of a trades union upon poor, sick, and dead professionals, and ought to be as loyally supported. Any person who does not care two dollars a year for his or her own future and unfortunate comrades would be better employed as a strike-breaker than on the stage. The officials of the Actors' Fund are like Janet's father in the Scotch story—they willna gang sae far as to admit thot. But they have gone farther than ever before—they have taken a long step forward—in a circular urging managers to give Actors' Fund members the first chance when making up their companies. 'In other words,' says the circular, 'membership of the Actors' Fund should be the first requisite to granting an interview to the actor, actress, or others in the profession when seeking engagements.' From 'the first requisite' to 'the indispensable requisite' is only a change of phrase. This achieved, the great charity that I planned thirty years ago, and that others have nobly and munificently maintained and developed, will be established as firmly and perpetually as the Rockefeller Foundation.

"The opening of a registration Bureau in connection with the Actors' Fund removes the last vestige of an excuse for any professional to stay outside of it. Now, upon the annual payment of only three dollars a year dues and fees—one cent a day of the professional year—the Actors' Fund not only takes care of members when they are poor or ill, or dead, but finds engagements for them while they are able to work. Superintendent McGrath writes that 2,500 members are now registered—the largest membership the Fund has ever had. They comprise women and men in all branches of the profession.

"No commissions are charged for engagements secured through the bureau. Several leading managers have already agreed to send to the Fund bureau when making up their companies for the summer and for next season. But the Fund asks and needs that all managers, great or small, shall take the same pledge. The stars can help by registering their names and making their contracts through the bureau. Though proverbially indifferent to their own interests and ignorant or neglectful of the simplest principles of pecuniary business, the rank and file will follow where managers and stars lead.

"The Actors' Fund should—and will eventually—number 25,000 instead of 2,500 members. It should be as impossible for any man or woman without a certificate of Fund membership to obtain an engagement on the American stage as it is for any person to practice law without being admitted to the Bar, or medicine without a M.D. diploma. This is a consummation devoutly to be wished, and it will come either by the enactment of a special law or by the voluntary action of such managerial associations as the Theatrical Syndicate or the Shubert's Incorporation."

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, March 23.—Sister Beatrice, a "miracle play" in two acts, by Maurice Maeterlinck, was performed for the first time in this country at the New Theatre on the 14th inst., and Miss Edith Wynne Matthison scored a conspicuous success in the title-rôle, receiving unanimous praise from the critics for her impressive and beautiful portrayal. Miss Matthison's interpretation was soul-stirring, and the play was produced by Mr. George Foster Platt in a highly praiseworthy manner. Its exquisite symbolism was, therefore, made clear, and its effectiveness was enhanced by the incidental music of Herr Max Marschalck. Various translations of Maeterlinck's play have been made for English readers, but in this instance a new version, in prose, was prepared for the New Theatre by Mr. Edward Knoblauch.

The story of Sister Beatrice has been told by John Davidson in "A Ballad of a Nun," and by Adelaide Anne Procter in "A Legend of Provence." Both of these author's versions are based on a mediæval legend, but Maeterlinck, it is said, had recourse to the original Dutch version for his story. Sister Beatrice is an inmate of a convent near Louvain, in the thirteenth century. Prompted by her love for Prince Bellidor, she leaves the convent at early morn and joins the Prince, who has come for her. Before she goes, she kneels before the image of the Virgin, and prays for a sign. Shall she go or stay? No sign is given, and Sister Beatrice departs on horseback with her lover. But her morning task is performed, though she herself is absent, for the bell-rope moves up and down, and the great bell tolls for matins as the horses gallop away. As the massive doors of the convent are closed, the lamp above the sacred image flashes three times, and the statue of the Virgin comes to life. Descending from the pedestal, she assumes the veil and mantle that Sister Beatrice has left behind, softly singing the while. "There is no sin where there is no hate," she says. She takes the nun's place at the convent door, and distributes garments to the poor. As she lifts the "shrouds for the dead and swaddling clothes for the new-born" from the basket, they glow with light and colour in her hands. Discovered by the nuns, who believe her to be Sister Beatrice, she is denounced for wearing fabrics of rich material beneath her cloak, and at the command of a priest is taken to the chapel for punishment. Her holiness is indicated, however, by miraculous signs. Clouds issue from the altar, garlands of flowers fall about them, and a shower of silver sparks. "Beatrice is holy! It is we who have sinned," they cry. In the next act Beatrice returns. Twenty years have passed, and during this period the Virgin has taken her place in the sisterhood and performed her duties. The sisters have wondered at the vacant niche; but, remembering the miraculous signs, have believed that the Virgin returned to Heaven, since they had a living saint in their midst. But now the image is in its place again, and she who was Sister Beatrice is aged and infirm. Wearing once more the veil and mantle which the Virgin has left by the pedestal, she tells a sad story of her years of suffering, and is placed on her death-bed, the nuns believing that her mind is deranged by a sudden illness, and that she has never been away from them. Thus she dies:—

"And weeping sisters laid her in her tomb, Crowned with a wreath of perfumed hawthorn bloom."

Mr. Pedro Cordoba as Prince Bellidor, Mrs. Harriet Otis Dellenbaugh as the Abbess, Miss Olive Wyndham as Sister Eglantine, and Mr. Ben Johnson as a Priest, played their parts admirably.

The fourth act of Ibsen's Brand was presented as a curtain-raiser. Dreary and depressing, it was endured by the audience for the sake of what was to follow. Mr. William Archer's version was not used, but an excised translation in blank verse, and the translator's name was not given.

The first performance at the Metropolitan Opera House of an opera in English by an American composer took place on the 18th inst., when The Pipe of Desire, by Frederick S. Converse, was given, the house being crowded. The text, in metrical prose, was written by George Edward Barton, also an American, and tells a whimsical story in one act. Jolan, a shepherd, who is about to wed Naoia, falls in with a crowd of salamanders, gnomes, and sylphs, in the midst of a spring revel. The Old One, a sort of Wagnerian character, pipes for them to dance. Jolan, anxious to play on the pipe, snatches it from the Old One, and when he plays it proves his undoing, for it calls his betrothed to him from a sick bed, and she comes staggering through the forest, and expires in his arms. Then Jolan dies also across the body of his beloved. Thus the warning uttered by the Old One is literally fulfilled, for he has said:—

"'Tis the Pipe God gave Lilith,
And she played to man in Eden,
But its charm was rent by woman;
Now we play its potent music
That those in solitude may hear.
And continue, restless, wandering,
Searching ever . . .
Let thy tune, now sad, now merry,
Wax and wane with every breath;
Let the joy of love's beginning
Blend into the chant of death.
Let the mortal who dares play thee
Without knowledge of thy mood,
Play in terror at thy meaning,
And die when he has understood."

Mme. Louise Homer appeared as Naoia, Mr. Riccardo Martin as Jolan, Mr. Clarence Whitehill as the Old One, Miss Leonora Sparkes as the First Sylph, and Mr. Herbert Witherspoon as the First Gnome.

Mr. Henry Lee, the well-known impersonator, has acquired a one-act play, called After Banking Hours, in which he will appear alternately as two brothers, one a banker and the other a burglar, who meet before a bank safe, which both are planning to rob. Mr. Lee intends to take the play on a tour around the world.

Mr. James Forbes, who wrote The Chorus Lady, is about to launch a new American comedy from his pen, entitled The Commuters, meaning the season ticket suburbanites, who have long been a butt of the comic papers.

"Strife," by John Galsworthy, was to have been presented by the New Theatre company in Philadelphia, but the Director of Public Safety informed the management that the performance might add to the trouble caused by the street-car strike in that city, as the theme of the play was the conflict between Capital and Labour. The engagement was therefore cancelled. Mr. Lee Shubert said, however, that the Philadelphians must have been misinformed, as the story of Strife was an argument for the peaceable adjustment of labour difficulties, and would not be likely to inflame the minds of those who witnessed it. To prove this, an extra performance of the play is to be given at the New Theatre, New York, when the Mayor of Philadelphia and the strike leaders will be invited to attend.

M. Charles Dalmorès, the tenor, who was recently condemned to pay £5,000 to the New York Metropolitan Opera House for a breach of contract, declared that he would not disburse the money, and while the sheriff's officers were watching the dockyards he walked past them in the uniform of a member of the band of the steamship Potsdam. As the steamer left the dock M. Dalmorès played the cornet triumphantly.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

SIR CHARLES WYNDHAM'S American tour has been one of the most successful which he has ever undertaken, and Mr. Hubert Henry Davies's Mollusc has proved a veritable gold mine both in its economy of cast and its attractiveness. Miss Mary Moore was unfortunately obliged by ill-health to abandon her original part in the play, and go to Egypt to recuperate; but transference to a warmer climate has been most beneficial, and Miss Moore is returning to England ready to appear with Sir Charles at the Criterion in the summer, first in The Mollusc and afterwards in The Case of Rebellious Susan.

SIR HERBERT TREE'S idea of a joint benefit for Mr. Hermann Vezin and Mrs. John Billington was an excellent one, and the special matinée which will be given shortly at His Majesty's is certain to be well attended. Mrs. Kendal will recite, and there will be many selections from Shakespeare in the programme.

SIR JOHN HARE has altered his intention of visiting Canada this spring, but may possibly go to America in the autumn for a short tour.

ONE of the best portraits at the private view at Sir Luke Fildes's house in Holland Park on Thursday was a half-length of Mr. George Alexander, whom the painter of "The Casual Ward" and "The Doctor" has represented wearing his usual genial smile and with the healthy colour induced by horse exercise and by frequent visits to Mr. Alexander's pretty country cottage at Chorley Wood. The likeness is excellent, and the execution, of course, unimpeachable.

MR. FORBES ROBERTSON has changed his plans, having accepted the official invitation of Earl Gray, Governor-General of Canada, to cross the border, and appear in The Passing of the Third Floor Back, before he returns to England. Mr. Forbes Robertson will accordingly bring his remarkably successful season at Maxine Elliott's Theatre to a close on Saturday, April 9, and will proceed to Montreal, opening there on Monday, April 11, at the Princess Theatre. He will play in Ottawa on April 18 and 19; in Kingston on April 20; Hamilton, April 21 and 22; Ontario, April 23; Buffalo and Rochester during the week of April 25; and Toronto from May 2 to 6. He will sail for England from New York on May 11. Earl Grey will be present at his performance at Maxine Elliott's Theatre on Thursday, March 24.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY'S production of King Richard III. at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, on April 13, will be in five acts and eighteen scenes. The scenery has been executed by Messrs. William Telbin and George J. Dodson; the dresses have been designed and made by Miss D. Carleton Smyth; the heraldry has been prepared under the supervision of the Rev. E. E. Dorling; the fighting has been organised by Mr. Alfred Mansfield; and the music, comprising the overture and that incidental to the production, has been composed by Mr. William Hudson, Mr. Martin Harvey's talented musical-director.

THE cast is as follows:—King Edward IV., Mr. F. Stoney; Edward, Prince of Wales, Miss Brenda Gibson; Richard, Duke of York, Miss Beatrice Ainley; George, Duke of Clarence, Mr. Owen Roughwood; Richard, Duke of Gloucester (afterwards King Richard III.), Mr. Martin Harvey; the Duke of Buckingham, Mr. Charles Glenney; the Duke of Norfolk, Mr. C. George; Henry, Earl of Richmond, Mr. Philip Hewland; Lord Stanley, Mr. Fred Wright, sen.; Marquis of Dorset, Mr. Leonard Craske; Sir William Brandon, Mr. D. Holm; Sir William Catesby, Mr. Alfred Mansfield; Sir Richard Ratcliffe, Mr. Edward Combermore; Sir James Tyrrel, Mr. B. A. Pittar; First Murderer, Mr. George Cooke; Second Murderer, Mr. Percy Foster; Queen Margaret, Miss Mary Rorke; Queen Elizabeth, Miss Sybil Walsh; Lady Anne, Miss N. de Silva.

"AN interesting correspondence has been going on between Mr. William Farren and Sir Arthur Pinero, apropos of Trelawny of the Wells. Mr. Farren has written:—After reading the article with the above title in to-day's paper, will you allow an actor of what you call "the old school of rodomontade" to assert that Trelawny of the Wells is distinctly not a true picture of London life on the stage in the Victorian sixties? The picture presents possibly a very funny view of the actor's calling, but its taste and tone may certainly be called into question when one remembers that the artist was himself at one time an actor. The other "true pictures of London life" may or may not be equally distorted. I never had the honour of acquaintance with a Vice-Chancellor, and if the hectoring, bullying vulgar personage in Trelawny of the Wells is a "true picture," then the legal profession will scarcely feel gratified; but I had the acquaintance of actors of all ranks in the sixties, and the actor who scraped his boots on the chair rail, and who used the dinner napkin as a pocket-handkerchief was a personage whose vulgarities never would have been tolerated by Samuel Phelps, whose work at Sadler's Wells Theatre many still hold in honourable remembrance.

SIR ARTHUR PINERO writes in reply:—"In spite of his objection to Trelawny of the Wells as a picture of theatrical life in the early sixties, Mr. Farren instances two pieces of stage 'business' which he describes as vulgar and untrue. Perhaps Mr. Farren will allow me to inform him that these vulgarities neither appear in the book of the play nor were suggested by me at rehearsal. He must attribute their introduction to the 'taste and tone' of a member of his own calling, not to the author. And may I remind Mr. Farren that Trelawny of the Wells professes to deal with Sadler's Wells Theatre in its days of decay, and not as it was during Mr. Phelps's distinguished management; and that, moreover, the piece is designed to appeal to persons with some sense of humour?"

MR. ROBERT PATEMAN wishes to express his heartfelt gratitude to the many friends—so numerous are they that he is unable to reply to all individually—who have shown him such kindly sympathy in connection with the heavy loss he has lately suffered in the death of his dear and only daughter Roberta.

AN uncomfortable situation was revealed the other evening before the rising of the curtain at the Pavilion Theatre, Mile End-road, where "Lesser Columbus's" drama, The World, the Flesh, and the Devil, is being played this week. The principal part, that of an old broken-down man, on whose shoulders the chief interest of the play may be said to hang, was unexpectedly left without an exponent, through the sudden illness of Mr. John Sargent and his understudy. The unpleasant necessity of dismissing the audience was about to be felt, when the author, who had never before appeared on the stage, decided to undertake the rôle. His success was extraordinary, the audience calling him before the curtain no less than twelve times at the conclusion of one act, and giving him an ovation at the final fall of the curtain. All the same, Mr. Cowen is understood to have expressed the hope that his hitherto unrevealed histrionic powers, due doubtless to his experience in Parliamentary candidature, may not be called upon again.

MR. CHARLES FROHMAN has purchased a light comedy of English country life, in three acts, by Anthony Hope and Cosmo Gordon Lennox, entitled Helen's Path, and will produce it at the Duke of York's Theatre this season. Mr. Frohman has also commissioned Mr. Louis N. Parker to prepare an English version of Chantecler for the American company which will perform the piece. Mr. Parker has also written for Mr. Frohman an adaptation of Henri Lavedan's Sire, while Mr. Rudolf Besier has been translating Bataille's La Vierge Folle into English for Mr. Frohman, who is a liberal employer of English adapters.

MISS AUGUSTA HAVILAND will conclude her engagement with Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree on April 18. She is the original Aunt Caroline in Pinkies and the Fairies at His Majesty's Theatre, and since the reproduction at Christmas has been playing the part successfully on tour with the whole of His Majesty's Theatre company. She will also be remembered as having successfully played Mrs. Wiggs, the leading character in Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, also as Mrs. Harroway in Miss Evelyn Millard's season at the Garrick in Idols.

MR. AND MRS. AUSTIN G. MELFORD came to grief on Monday morning, whilst returning from a visit to friends in Naphill, Buckinghamshire. On their way to the station, the trap was overturned whilst coming down the steep hill three miles outside High Wycombe. Miss Gertrude Robins, who may be remembered as the authoress of Makeshifts, which obtained much favourable notice upon its production at the Coronet a short time ago, was also in the trap, and was lucky in getting off with a severe shaking. Miss Jessie Winter (Mrs. Melford), less fortunate, severely sprained her ankle. Help was obtained, and she was carried back to Naphill, where she is still the guest of Miss Robins. Mr. Melford was able to continue his journey to town, and reached Drury Lane Theatre in time for the morning performance.

CROWDED houses attended the performances of Mr. Edward Compton's Comedy Company at the King's Theatre, Kirkcaldy, last week. David Garrick was the performance on Saturday, and at its conclusion an ovation from the large assembly drew from Mr. Compton the following remarks:—"Ladies and gentlemen,—I thank you for your very hearty reception to-night, and am glad to find you have not forgotten me in the three years that have passed since my last visit to Kirkcaldy. During that time there has occurred a change of management of this beautiful house. In Mr. Cavanagh, your new manager, I am pleased to see the son of very old friends of mine; he is a young man, and if you will give him time it will be his endeavour to place before you the best of the companies that are on the road. I wish him every success, for his own and for his father's and mother's sake."

MR. JAMES WELCH, when the run of When Knights Were Bold at the Criterion comes to an end, probably in June, will take a well-earned holiday, starting on a tour in the provinces in August.

MR. AND MRS. F. R. BENSON and their Shakespearean company will take a prominent part in the London Shakespeare Festival at His Majesty's Theatre. On Monday evening, April 18, The Taming of the Shrew will be given, with the following cast:—Petruchio, Mr. F. R. Benson; Biondello, Mr. Eric Maxon; Lucentio, Mr. Murray Carrington; Baptista, Mr. Alfred Brydone; Gremio, Mr. H. O. Nicholson; Bianca, Miss Nora Lancaster; Curtis, Miss Elinor Aickin; and Katharina, Mrs. F. R. Benson. On Tuesday afternoon, April 19, Coriolanus will be performed, thus cast:—Caius Marcius, Mr. F. R. Benson; Tullus Aufidius, Mr. Eric Maxon; Meninius, Mr. Alfred Brydone; Junius Brutus, Mr. Moffat Johnston; Sicinius Velutus, Mr. Murray Carrington; Valeria, Miss Violet Farebrother; Virgilia, Miss Nora Lancaster; and Volumnia, Miss Genevieve Ward.

SEVERAL alterations have been made in the cast of that successful drama, Dame Nature, which is now playing to good houses at the Garrick Theatre. Mr. Reginald Eyre has replaced Mr. F. Kinsey Pelle in the part of Henry Greville, Mr. Richard Carfax succeeds Mr. Eyre as Taylor, and Mr. J. A. Bentham is now seen as Roussell, formerly played by Mr. George Bealby. The most important change, however, is the appearance of Miss Lilian Braithwaite in Miss Nancy Price's part of the Princess de Chabran. Miss Braithwaite suggests the existence of a softer vein in the Princess's nature than Miss Price indicated, and the perfect accomplishment and impressive individuality of Miss Braithwaite are again conspicuous and successful. The conclusion of the play has been judiciously modified in the interests of the heroine, so splendidly embodied by Miss Ethel Irving.

A POLICE-CONSTABLE was being violently assaulted at Addiscombe on Wednesday by William Apps, of Ely-road, Croydon, and was lying on the ground when two members of The Merry Peasant company, now appearing at the Croydon Theatre, came along. They rescued the officer, who was almost exhausted, and on Thursday the Croydon Bench sent Apps to prison for six months.

MR. JERROLD ROBERTSHAW left Charing Cross last evening for Brindisi, en route for Australia, sailing thence per P.O. ss. China for Sydney, where he is under engagement to Messrs. Rupert Clarke and Clyde Meynell. He opens in Pete at the Criterion Theatre in that city towards the end of May.

A CORRESPONDENT wants to obtain a humorous recitation—"At the Telephone" or a similar title—by Jerome K. Jerome, who himself forgets even the name of the publisher. Our readers may be able to inform us.

MR. HARRY J. CRANE has been appointed manager of the Grand Theatre, Nottingham, and assumes office in a week's time.

MR AND MRS. WM. MACLAREN terminate to-night, at the New Theatre Royal, Blackburn, their fifth year of tour with Claudian. The company goes out again at the end of August, the bookings running well into next year. Meanwhile, Mr. and Mrs. Maclaren will make holiday in Scotland, returning in time to prepare for another revival of the evergreen Adelphi drama Proof, the rights of which they have held for some ten years by arrangement with Messrs. French. This play has been "rested" for two years, and will be sent out August Bank Holiday with an excellent all-round cast, the bookings including some of the best money-making dates in the country.

IN the vestibule of the King's Theatre, Kirkcaldy, last week was displayed an old day bill, dated April 18, 1845, headed "Victoria Theatre, Kirkcaldy," and setting forth particulars of a visit of Mr. Edmund Glover's company from Edinburgh, with Miss E. Montague as the star artist. This Miss Montague is the mother of Mr. Edward Compton, who was fulfilling a three nights' engagement there. The bill was presented to Mr. Compton by Mr. Spence, of Bath-street, Glasgow, when he was recently at the King's Theatre there. Mr. Compton's mother, we are happy to add, is still hale and hearty in her ninetieth year, and resides at St. Leonards.

MR. J. BANNISTER HOWARD'S season at the Crystal Palace will terminate unusually early this spring, owing to the preparations in hand for the "Festival of Empire." Next week is the last professional engagement for the season, when The Girl from Kay's will be performed. The following week the Sydenham Hill Operatic Society will give three performances and a matinée of La Fille de Madame Angot, and on Saturday evening, April 23, there will be a grand gala night, when practically all the principal artists that have taken part in the pantomimes for the last four years will appear.

THE "Old Bensonian" matinée on Tuesday afternoon, May 3, the casts for which have already been given in this column, will be one of the most interesting performances of the forthcoming Shakespeare Festival at Stratford-upon-Avon, and will be contributed to by many of the foremost actors of the present day. It is a great tribute to Mr. F. R. Benson that so many of his old followers should be willing to journey to Stratford to testify their appreciation of, and devotion to, their old chief. Mr. Otho Stuart, who has organised the matinée, will take his band of players down from London by special train, returning the same afternoon.

MR. PATRICK KIRWAN writes: "Now that, through the fine performance of the Sicilians and the projected production in the Shakespeare Festival, Othello is once more talked about, may I ask if it would not be an improvement to the play if the reading of the first folio were substituted for the usual rendering of the quarto in the beginning of the great jealousy scene of the third act? The usual rendering now given runs, as in the quarto, 'Did Michael Cassio, when you wooed my lady, know of your love?" Now, the first folio has it, 'Did Michael Cassio, when HE wooed my lady, know of your love?' thus making Cassio a former rival to the Moor in the wooing of Desdemona.

"IT is needless to point out how much stronger such a reading makes Othello's trust, and how much more reason it seems to give for his jealousy. It was fair rivalry. He 'went between us very oft,' and yet, once Desdemona had declared her choice in the Moor, the affair was considered as settled and over between the two men, who continued friends until Iago instilled the poison into the mind of one of them. Would it not be interesting if one of our future Othellos were to give this reading to the part?"

A FEATURE of Mr. H. Bernhardt's concert on Good Friday evening at St. James's Hall was a monologue from the pen of Mr. Sabben Clare, entitled A Moment of Doubt, in which Miss Ella Erskine, the charming actress-authoress, displayed considerable vivacity and gaiety. Lady Isobel is beset with bills. There are debts everywhere, without apparently a stiver to pay. The inconveniences of impecuniosity worry her a little; but then there is the consolation of Fred's devotion to her. But Fred has no wealth; Dobbs, a middle-aged millionaire, has; and Dobbs proposes by letter. Shall she accept? She decides in the affirmative; for, after all, this love is often the mere fabric of a vision—an unsubstantial dream, and the dollars of Dobbs would count for much in Lady Isobel's social pilgrimage.

THERE are, however, other thoughts in her mind that tell her Fred has her heart. After all, there is much to be said in favour of love's young dream, and she tears up the letter to Dobbs. The next post brings a letter from Fred to announce his accession to property, and the horizon of the young couple is without a cloud. Miss Erskine, in the wayward moods of the heroine, completely held the house, and her Lady Isobel should be seen again. It was a fascinating portrait of a young society woman.

MR. ALEX. MACLEAN will produce a new romantic drama of Jacobite days at the Theatre Royal, Margate, on April 11, preparatory to bringing the piece to London. The play, which has been written for Mr. Maclean by Miss Dorothea Moore, is called My Lady Bellamy. Among those appearing will be Miss Laura Leigh in the title-rôle, Mr. E. H. Brooke as William of Orange, Miss Mary Palmer as the Queen, and Mr. Maclean as the Jacobite, Sir Gervase Bellamy. During the week Mr. Maclean will also take an opportunity of producing a one-act version of David Garrick, and of appearing in Mr. H. C. Ferraby's one-act tragedy The Catastrophe.

MR. LAURENCE IRVING and Miss Mabel Hackney recently returned to New York and fulfilled an engagement at the West-End Theatre. They appeared in The Affinity, and repeated their success. They then began rehearsals of Eugene Brieux's play The Three Daughters of Monsieur Dupont, which was produced in Paris a few years ago and has now been translated by Mr. Irving.

"THE DOLLAR PRINCESS" at Daly's has been doing extraordinary business this Eastertide. Mr. Robert Michaelis and Miss Lily Elsie have quite won the hearts of the habitués of this successful theatre, and the piece goes even better than it did on the first night.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY has engaged for his production of Richard III. Mrs. A. B. Cross (Miss Minnie Watersford), for so many years associated with The Manxman.

THE firm of Strong and Buckmaster, one of the partners in which is Mr. Albert A. Strong, the expert on copyright and theatrical law, has now been joined by Mr. Arthur Bolden, B.A., who has hitherto practised at 40, Chancery-lane, London. The style of the firm will in future be Strong, Buckmaster, and Bolden.

IT is not generally known that Mr. Frank Curzon, the popular manager of Wyndham's and the Prince of Wales' theatres and part author of the highly-successful musical comedy The Balkan Princess, is brother to Mr. Mallaby Deeley, M.P., the Unionist member for Harrow.

MR. CHARLES HAWTREY has already engaged Mr. Eric Lewis, Mr. Arthur Playfair, Miss Maud Cressall, Miss Gwynne Herbert, Miss Frances Wetherell, and Miss Clare Greet to appear in The Naked Truth at Wyndham's Theatre on the conclusion of the run of The Little Damozel.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY, after a very long interval, is revisiting the Kennington Theatre next week. For the first three nights The Breed of the Treshams will fill the programme, while on Thursday and Friday and Saturday The Only Way will be played.

"THE CRUISE OF THE CONSTANCE," a new comedy, with music by Violet Hatherley and Charles Winchcomb, of which we were enabled to give a most favourable report on its production at Worthing last June, will open a long tour at the Opera House, Cheltenham, on April 18. The principal character will be in the hands of Mr. Chas. McNaughton, a younger brother of the famous McNaughtons, who has already done excellent service in musical comedy. The cast will also include Messrs. Fredk. Hobbs, Albert Kavanagh, Claud Casey, and Chas. McLagan, and Misses Ruby Ryan, Carlotta Sylvaro, Mollie Shine, Trissie March, Mary Dandridge, Maudi Jennings, and Irene Verona. Mr. Walter Gifford, released by Mr. Frank Curzon, will officiate as Press representative. Mr. Wm. Collard will be acting-manager for Harry W. Lumley; and the piece will be produced by E. T. Steyne.

MRS. WIGHTMAN COOPER (Miss Irene Carrington) will be very grateful if those of our readers who are Freemasons will do all in their power to assist her to secure the election of her son, Richard Wightman Cooper, aged nine, to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys at the April election. Mr. J. W. Matthews has sent Mrs. Wightman 100 votes and Mr. Edward Terry 423.

A MEETING of sympathisers with the National Theatre was held on Wednesday in University House, College-road, Leeds, for the purpose of discussing practical methods of supporting the project. Mr. Herbert Thompson, president of the Leeds Playgoers' Society, was voted to the chair, the attendance unfortunately being very small.

THE Chairman said that in this country we had a way, when we wished to commemorate anyone, of giving ourselves something we liked very much. Shakespeare himself needed no memorial; his works were a sufficient memorial. But the coming tercentenary of our greatest dramatist was a very good opportunity of giving ourselves something we wanted. What we did want in this country above everything else in the dramatic line was a theatre independent of commercial interests, where could be given the good things that people ought to see and hear, rather than the things they wanted to see and hear. For that reason he was very much interested in the movement, quite apart from the great man it was hoped to commemorate.

MR. H. S. PERRIS, of the National Committee, speaking of the need for a national theatre, said one might go for twenty years in London without having a chance of seeing the greater part of Shakespeare's actable plays, while at almost any moment it would be very easy to go into the provinces and not see a play of Shakespeare's on the boards. At present he believed there was not a single play of Shakespeare's being acted in London. The proposal was, if the theatre was built, that there should never be a single week in the ordinary theatrical year in which the thousands who visited London would not have an opportunity of seeing Shakespeare performed by a highly-skilled répertoire company.

THEY did not intend that only the plays of Shakespeare should be acted at the National Theatre. Provisional bye-laws, which had already been drafted, laid it down that at least one Shakespearean play a week should be acted. The other performances would be, perhaps, old English comedy, the finest versions of plays by foreign dramatists, and sometimes new plays if these were of sufficient merit. If the scheme were perfected there would be for the theatre an endowment of £10,000 a year, which would ensure against the terrible loss which many private enterprises had involved. The late Sir Henry Irving and Sir Herbert Tree had made heroic efforts, but the fact remained that Shakespeare, if it did not spell failure, did not spell dividends.

A SUM of £500,000 was needed as a permanent endowment, which was just the amount which the Comédie Française received from the State. It was proposed to appeal to the whole of the English-speaking race for money. The promoters of the scheme thought it would be indecent to make any appeal to foreigners, but they would welcome and be proud of any gift that came from abroad. The municipality of Venice had sent a gift, and gifts had been received from Germany, where the enthusiasm for Shakespeare sometimes put us to shame. The Central Committee hoped to establish a complete network of local committees all over the country and spreading over the Colonies and the United States, and by this means build up a great body of public interest and sympathy for the scheme, thus securing the necessary funds. One generous contributor had given £70,000, and they would gladly accept large gifts, but he wished it to be understood that they were anxious to secure a large number of small subscriptions. Truly regarded, a national theatre was one of the most splendid educational endowments to which any man could contribute. It would be a driving force and a standard of taste which did not now exist in our theatrical enterprise.

THE Chairman said that Leeds had not been recognised for great enthusiasm in intellectual matters. There was a University in the city, from which he trusted that Leeds would in process of time be leavened, but it would take a long time. "We are a slow people to move," he added, "but when we are moved there is something solid and weighty behind us. At least I try to think so. There are a great many things to be said on this question, but perhaps they had better be left unsaid. If I proceed I might say something disagreeable about Leeds."

IN reply to questions, Mr. Perris said he thought the example of a national theatre would result in time in the establishment of municipal theatres in the large centres. He suggested that a committee should be formed in Leeds of people who were favourable to the scheme, and that the committee should, between now and the autumn, undertake spade work on behalf of the idea. It would then be possible in the autumn to organise a big public meeting, to be addressed by well-known speakers, and thus to secure the auspicious opening of a public fund.

A LARGE and influential committee was subsequently elected, many ladies and gentlemen having already signified their willingness to act on such a body.

THE Ibsen Club (under the direction of Miss Catherine Lewis) will continue its present season by a performance of Hedda Gabler to-morrow (Sunday) evening at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane.

ON Saturday night last, with The Dollar Princess the record of the Opera House, Southport, at ordinary prices, was beaten. Never since the theatre has been built has there been such a house, and over 400 people were turned away at early doors. This week, with the Moody-Manners Opera Co., including Charles Manners, Fanny Moody, Joseph O'Mara, Phillip Brozel, Madame Zelie De Lussan, and Madame de Vere Sapio, the booking is phenomenal.

THE Moss Empire suburban theatres have particularly attractive programmes next week. At the Alexandra, Stoke Newington, Mr. Percy Hutchison and company will appear in Brewster's Millions, and at the Broadway, New Cross, Mr. J. B. Howard's company will present The Earl and the Girl.

MR. H. HAMILTON STEWART completed his seventh tour of Sherlock Holmes at Kelly's Theatre, Liverpool, a fortnight ago. That this fascinating play has lost none of its hold upon the public was proved by the crowds that flocked to each performance.

AT the Opera House, Cheltenham, on Monday next, Mr. Stewart will commence his second tour of The Mummy and the Humming Bird, from Wyndham's Theatre. As in Sherlock Holmes, Mr. Stewart himself plays the leading part, Lord Lumley (originally played by Sir Charles Wyndham), and the cast also includes Mr. Lewin-Mannering, Mr. Percy Marmont, Mr. Lancelot Lowder, and Miss A. Bruce-Joy, in the principal parts. The bookings include Portsmouth, Southport, Blackpool, Scarborough, Harrogate, York, Yarmouth, Eastbourne, Folkestone, and Hastings. The business arrangements are in the hands of Mr. G. Potter.

MR. TOM CRAVEN successfully opened his fourth tour with his Lady Detective drama at the Theatre Royal, Sheffield, last Monday. The company include many of the original cast, who have been under Mr. Craven's banner several times. Mr. Craven visits Sheffield, Liverpool, Birkenhead, York, Glasgow, Bury, and several suburban theatres. The manager is Mr. Louis Palgrave. Mr. Craven hopes to produce his new hustling farcical comedy early in May. He has decided after all to adhere to his original intention, and entitle the farce It isn't Cricket. When a Lass Loves will in the autumn court the attention of American and Colonial playgoers.

GREAT preparations are being made at Stratford-on-Avon for the Shakespeare Festival, which will open on April 22 with Sir Herbert Tree's production of Hamlet, without scenery, in which Sir Herbert Tree will be supported by Miss Marie Lohr as Ophelia and Mr. Eric Maxon as the King. In the civic decorations festoons of evergreen are to be utilised, and gardeners all over the country have promised to send three miles of foliage with which the streets and country lanes are to be lined.

ON the 23rd, the date of the poet's birthday, the usual floral procession will start from the birthplace to Holy Trinity Church. In the evening The Two Gentlemen of Verona will be performed, Mrs. F. R. Benson appearing as Julia and Miss Nora Lancaster as Silvia.

ON May Day hundreds of children from neighbouring villages will take part in an open-air fête, including dancing milkmaids, Jacks-in-the-Green, and competitions in folk songs and Morris dancing. The production of the £300 prize play on May 5 will be an interesting event. The successful authoress is Mrs. Lionel MARKS, the wife of a professor at Harvard University.

MR. PERCY HUTCHISON created a great impression as Monty Brewster, on paying his first visit to the Theatre Royal, Nottingham, with his Wyndham's Theatre company, and production of Brewster's Millions. Last Monday, and throughout the week seats have been at a premium, and the reception accorded to Mr. Hutchison on making his appearance was a flattering tribute to his universal popularity as an actor-manager and producer. The great ship scene has never been seen to greater advantage, and round after round of applause burst forth when the curtain rose and revealed this marvellous combination of stage craft and electrical effects.

THE Hutchison management have scored yet another triumph with Rudolf Besier's comedy, Don, still running at the Kingsway Theatre. The initial provincial production took place at the Gaiety Theatre, Hastings, on Monday, and was received by a packed audience with the utmost enthusiasm. Mr. Hutchison has booked an extended tour for this great attraction.

MR. GILBERT PAYNE is to produce a new musical comedy extravaganza entitled The Marriage Mart, at Her Majesty's Theatre, Carlisle, on Monday, April 11. The piece has been written by Mr. Payne, who plays the principal comedy part, and is the successor to his musical comedy, The Honeymoon, which he has toured during the past four years. The production will be under the management of Mr. Harry Marvello.

MRS. GEORGE DAVENTRY asks us to state that all arrangements respecting the oil painting of her late husband will be completed on April 14th at five o'clock, at her flat, 36, Wightman-road, Harringay, London, N. She begs to thank very sincerely all who have so kindly subscribed.

MR. HUGH MONTGOMERY and Miss Marie Harcourt concluded yesterday a three years' engagement with Mr. Wentworth Croke, having played the parts of Magnus and Aunt Margaret in The Prodigal Son upwards of 800 nights. During the summer season they played Carlisle and Corney in a new version of East Lynne, written by Mr. Montgomery for Mr. Croke. Mr. Montgomery has been retained by Miss Grace Lester for her notable sketch, Her Ruined Life.

MR. ARTHUR LAW RAYNOR, who has concluded three months' engagement with Mr. Ernest Stevens as business-manager for his Cinderella company, has been engaged by Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow in the same capacity for The Little Damozel tour.

"A DAUGHTER OF DOYLE'S," a new three-act comedy by Sybil Michell, will be produced at the Worthing Theatre on Thursday, April 7. The performance, which will be repeated the two following evenings and at a matinée on Saturday, will be in aid of the district nurses, and will be under the patronage of her Grace the Duchess of Norfolk.

MR. G. MORTON-WILLIAMS concludes to-night a most enjoyable engagement as Lucas Lyle, the heavy lead in Home, Sweet Home, which he has been playing with Messrs. Green and Hinton's company since Christmas.

MISS IDA MOLESWORTH and Mr. Mark Blow's two companies started on Easter Monday with The Little Damozel, one at the Opera House, Tunbridge Wells, and the other at the West Pier, Brighton, where The Little Damozel broke all records. Next week one company will be at the Prince's, Bristol, and the other at Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne.

THE attraction next week at the Marlborough Theatre will be the ever-popular musical comedy A Country Girl, which has been delighting holiday audiences at the Coronet this week. The company, which is an exceptionally strong one, includes Miss Anna Hickish as Nan, Miss Hilda Darrell as Sophie, Miss Dorothea Temple as Marjorie, Mr. Coningsby Brierly as Barry, Mr. St. John Hamund as the Rajah, and Mr. Nelson Hancock as Challoner. There is a fine chorus, and the mounting is liberal and effective.

MR. JAMES HUSSEY is desirous of thanking Mr. Louis Calvert for a most comfortable engagement of nearly three and a half years in Sunday. On Saturday night he will have played the part of Lively for the 812th time.

MR. WILLIAM MOLLISON will produce at the Grand Theatre, Blackpool, on Monday, a new one-act play by Leon M. Lion, which will show Mr. Mollison in a fine dramatic part. It is an adaptation from a story of Mr. Tom Gallon's. Mr. Mollison will present it nightly during his present tour of The Chorus Lady, after which he intends bringing it to the West End.

ON the site of the old Pavilion at Chorlton-cum-Hardy, Manchester, has risen a large and capacious building, with a seating capacity of nearly 1,500, called the New Theatre, which was opened on Easter Monday with Miss Lancashire, Ltd. Situated in one of the best residential parts of the city, the new theatre should prove a welcome addition to existing places of amusement.

THOSE able American managers the Messrs. Shubert have decided that for the future no free passes will be issued for any theatre either in New York or the United States of which they have the control. Exception is, however, to be made of the Press. A professional matinée is to be given of each play produced under the Shuberts' direction about two or three weeks after each New York premiere.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Tight.

Miss Marie Dressler has been appearing at a Philadelphia theatre in a musical farce called Tillie's Nightmare, by Edgar Smith and A. Baldwin Sloane. Tillie is a boarding-house drudge. She falls asleep after digesting the conglomeration of news and imagination to be found in the Sunday papers, and in a dream is transported to New York, where she marries her sweetheart, finding him a millionaire at the head of a huge department store. Their honeymoon is spent on a yacht, and Tillie is dreadfully seasick off the coast of Coney Island. She journeys to Paris and assists an inventor to become the champion aeroplanist of the world; goes aloft in his flying machine, and is carried to the North Pole, where the aviator lightens ship by heaving Tillie overboard, and has all sorts of adventures before she wakes up and resumes her drudgery. The scene in the department store, and Miss Dressler's mimic attacks of mal-de-mer are said to be very funny. To cure the malady she takes some champagne, which gives her an opportunity to sing "I'm tight." In another number, "What I could do on the stage," Miss Dressler indulges in a number of burlesque imitations. That she has not quite recovered from the acute attack of Anglophobia that seized her after her unfortunate experiences in London is evident when she takes a stage Englishman by the ear and tells him what she thinks of his people. (Applause.)

Miss Burke on Nationality.

Miss Billie Burke, in discussing Mrs. Dot and her previous success, Love Watches, with an interviewer, said that the former play made a surer appeal to English and American audiences because it was a play of English life, and Mr. Maugham was so contemporaneous in his comedies. His play was so true to the life it represented that at times Miss Burke almost thought herself back in London listening to old friends. She had found it interesting to study one of the characters in the play, and to note how differently the English and the Americans regarded him.

Said Miss Burke:—"The servant, James, in the first act is very impudent—as you know. He answers his master, give him advice and almost the lie, and will not leave the room until actually ordered out. That kind of a servant is a rarity indeed in England—so much so that the character of an impertinent, even though epigrammatically impertinent, man-servant must have struck the English audiences of Mrs. Dot as perfectly killing in its ridiculousness. But, if you notice, the sauciness of James is not at all wondered at by the audiences that see and hear Mrs. Dot here at the Lyceum.

"An impudent servant is not a novelty to Americans. If he answers back that is because he is a servant, or perhaps it is his prerogative as a servant. If he is clever in his answers, so much the better, but it does not strike our American mind that his mere impudence is especially unusual or humorous. Our experience with servants has been too terrific to be amused or even surprised at the impudence of one of that tribe. But, aside from the eccentricities of that one character—or rather because his eccentricities in England are commonplaces in America—Mr. Maugham's wit and satire are every bit as keenly to our liking as if the Lyceum Theatre were nightly filled by a thoroughly London public."

Couldn't See It.

In Mr. George Grossmith, senior's, delightful book, "Piano and I," there are many notable anecdotes, a few of which we cull here. "In one town towards the South of England," writes Mr. Grossmith, "I was giving a sketch (the title of which I have forgotten), and amongst the items was a good-natured dig at the then prevailing fashion of young men in immaculate evening dress writing their engagements, at a reception, down on their shirt cuffs. If a lady said to one of these gentlemen, 'Oh, so pleased to see you; do dine with us next Thursday,' he would reply, 'Charmed!' and wrote it down on his linen. Thinking that I would chaff this little folly, I said—'I knew a young Johnny who was most systematic. You won't be able to see this joke, but I assure you this young man was very systematic, and copied his shirt-cuff invitations into a regular engagement book at the end of a fortnight. See?' Some of the audience would pretend to see, then I addressed them again—'I still think you don't see,' and on I went. But at this particular place an old gentleman awaited me at the artist's door, and rather severely addressing me, said, 'About that shirt-cuff joke, were you trying to make fools of us all or what?' I replied, 'You don't mean to tell me you didn't see the point?' He said almost violently, 'No, nor anyone else; so explain it.' I said in my most explanatory manner, 'The point is, being a systematic young man, at the end of the fortnight he copied them into a book because he was sending his shirt to the wash.' 'Oh!' said the old gentleman, 'but you didn't say that.'"

Very Respectable.

Mr. Grossmith had an amusing experience at Pontypool. "It was at the time when the 'Black List' was in force, and the portraits of those numbered on that formidable list were hung up in the public-house bars, with the instructions that the landlords were forbidden to supply those customers with alcoholic nourishment. Two Welsh miners (as I read in the papers) were discussing a large lithograph portrait of myself announcing my recital at the little hall. They evidently did not, or could not, read the details of the recital underneath, for one miner said to the other: 'That's a very sad sight, to see a decently-dressed, respectable-looking man like that placed upon the Black List.'"

Rinking and Rolling.

Mr. Grossmith was persuaded to go skating in America. A little boy showed him some figure-skating:—"I said reprovingly, 'I never go in for fancy skating.' I spoke the truth; for that moment, tragic as it may appear, I went down on my back suddenly. The boy helped me to rise, and I excused myself by saying—'I beg your pardon, I do go in for fancy skating, and that is an example of it.' Being a young gentleman, he kept silent."

Impersonating Paderewski.

Paderewski and Mr. Grossmith were once staying in the same hotel at Boston, U.S.A. "I had to go down to the office about some dispatches or something," writes Mr. Grossmith, "and I found on the counter piles of books. I said to the assistant manager: 'What on earth are these? They look like albums.' He said, 'Say, Mr. Grawsmith, they are autograph books.' I replied innocently, 'But I've two or three up in my room already.' The response to me was, 'Say, these are not for you, Mr. Grawsmith, they are for Mr. Paderewski to sign.' A lot of people were waiting for their books, and I said in their hearing: 'I'll see that they are attended to.' I went round to the left passage. I had grown my hair pretty long at that period as I was doing a sketch called The Paderewski Craze. I removed my hat, took off my overcoat as well as my pince-nez, rumpled my hair over my head, stuck a silk handkerchief into my collar to resemble a tie, and went to the office again, and in a loud voice said: "I cannot sign any more autographs to-day; leave them on the counter, and I'll try and do them to-morrow.' Young girls, footmen, &c., fled in a hurry, taking the books; but I learned the next day they were brought back again, and that Paderewski had kindly signed them."

Mr. Arthur Collins revived The Whip at Drury Lane Theatre on Saturday evening with a success which was a conclusive proof that the popularity of the piece was not at all exhausted by its previous run. The Whip is, indeed, a very happy example of the class of play to which it belongs. Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton's story is strong, direct, and sensational, concocted and combined with care, ingenuity, and plentifully supplied with comic relief. But the great strength of The Whip is that it deals so extensively with Sport. A writer on English society has said that sport in all its phases is the great bond which keeps the country together. Hunting and racing are the most intense and real interests, the most disinterested tastes of thousands of Englishmen and Englishwomen. Even those who are prevented by considerations of expense and occupation from indulging in the first of these enjoyments are not entirely prevented from taking part in the second; and the small "punter" and the aristocratic plunger are brethren "under their skins." Thus a melodrama dealing with the "horsey interest" is usually successful. The great stage of Drury Lane Theatre enables the management to present such pieces on a scale of realism and completeness which defies competition, and the liberality which Mr. Collins has always shown in catering for his patrons meets with a response which more than repays the expenditure.

Never have Mr. Collins's enterprise and ability been more conclusively shown than in the case of The Whip. Perhaps the scene which will linger longest in the memories of those who have seen the drama is the superb reproduction of a hunting banquet in the Great Hall of Falconhurst in the second act. Never has realism in the setting of a table been carried further than in this unforgettable display. The festive board is decked with no mere theatrical splendour. Every detail is arranged and supplied with a care and solicitude for accuracy which are marvellous; and it is a marvel also how each evening the numerous adornments and decorations are removed and stored without loss or breakage. The next great landmark in this extraordinary representation of reality is the famous collision scene at Manfield Junction. Never in the history of stage collisions—and the railway accident has been a favourite, both at Drury Lane and elsewhere—has the annihilation of a horse-box by a locomotive been presented so plausibly. The engine is a very clever bit of stage carpentry and contrivance; and the details of railway working, the panoramic scenery, and the ingenious lighting of the stage make the result doubly successful. But only for a scene does the interest become mechanical and cease to be equine. The "sport of kings" is allowed to exert its charm in the last act, when the sympathetic incident of a jockey almost prevented by trickery from winning his race is followed by a most ingenious and effective imitation of the rapid rush of a field of horses in contention for a stake of £2,000. The means which are employed are not, we believe, entirely novel, but the application is so appropriate and so excellently contrived that The Whip concludes amidst a frenzy of applause.

Nor is The Whip solely dependent on its mounting for its success. If The Whip were played with the simple scenery which contented the last generation, when the introduction of a hansom cab on the stage drew all playgoing London to gaze upon an innovation so extraordinary, it would still make a powerful effect on the feelings of the spectators. For the play is admirably cast and the characters so strongly sustained as to rivet themselves in the memory. Few can forget the villain of Mr. Cecil Keightley, a creation of the most acute and incisive sort—strong yet refined, resolute yet finished, and endowed with a flavour of devilish irony which wins for the personage the detestation of every honest man in the audience. Mr. Keightley's Sartorys, in the worst of his wickedness, is always polished and plausible, and the character stands out unmistakably. A pathetic and harrowing performance is Mr. Basil Gill's Rev. Verner Haslam. Rarely have remorse and mental suffering been more poignantly represented on the boards. One of the most impressive and memorable performances in the production is Mr. Charles Rock's Joe Kelly. The rough, crude vigour of the brutal betting man is shown with the unsparing energy and earnestness which Mr. Rock devotes to all his impersonations. The rôle of Hubert, Earl of Brancaster, is less prominent than heroes of melodrama often are, but Mr. Vincent Clive makes the most of it, and sustains it with the highest credit. The type of the foxhunting English gentleman is reproduced with astonishing fidelity by Mr. Alfred Bucklaw, whose fine personality greatly assists him; and Mr. George Barrett's Tom Lambert is worthy of the best traditions of plebeian comedy. It is impossible to think of Mr. Barrett's richly-humorous conception without coupling with it the delightfully droll reading of the rôle of the Hon. Mrs. Beamish which is supplied by that excellent and experienced actress, Miss Fanny Brough; and Miss Jennie Bateman's Lady Diana Sartorys—so fresh, so true, and so easily alert and affectionate—wins all hearts from the outset. Miss Nancy Price, who has the gift of satire and cynicism, and is unequalled in the art of representing an unscrupulous, hardened, and crafty adventuress, employs her talents to the very best advantage as Mrs D'Aquila; and Miss Madge Fabian and Mr. Cecil Cameron as the too-honest and simple brother and sister act with passion, pathos, and proficiency. Mr. Austin G. Melford's Tom Foster could hardly be bettered; and Mr. Charles Blackall's Captain Rayner even improves on acquaintance, Miss May Warley's Lady Antrobus well bearing the test of a second examination. Again are the transcendent talents of Mr. Henry Emden, Mr. Bruce Smith, and Mr. R. McCleery demonstrated by the superb sets which they have provided for the production of the play; and the Drury Lane orchestra, under the expert baton of Mr. J. M. Glover, is once more unimpeachable. But, after all, it is to the great projector and overseer of the enterprise that the greatest credit must be given; and we heartily congratulate Mr. Arthur Collins on the well-deserved reward which he has won. His able and energetic manager, Mr. Sidney Smith, will be busily employed during the next few months.

DEATH OF H. J. LOVEDAY.

We deeply regret to announce the death at his residence at Strawberry Hill at one o'clock on Tuesday morning of Mr. Henry Joseph Loveday, so long stage-manager to Sir Henry Irving, Mr. Loveday, who was born in 1838, had been in failing health for some time. He never recovered from the shock caused by the death of his beloved "chief" in 1905, and last September he had the misfortune to slip and fall on a piece of orange peel in a street in Liverpool, and the accident caused an illness from which he never recovered.

Irving and Loveday met for the first time in Edinburgh in 1858, where Irving's future stage-manager was the chief violin player in the orchestra of the Theatre Royal, and Irving was a member of Wyndham's stock company.

When Henry Irving produced Richard III. at the Lyceum on January 29, 1877, H. J. Loveday's engagement with his "chief" began, and continued for over thirty years. Mr. Loveday was a clever artist, and his ability in sketching often stood Irving in good stead. He was much more to Irving than a mere stage-manager. Irving consulted him as to his future productions and as to the general conduct of his business. In Irving's trips to America Mr. Loveday travelled with him, and not with the company, which commonly crossed by another boat.

Mr. Loveday was near at hand on that tragic night at Bradford when Sir Henry breathed his last. In 1905 he became stage-manager to Mr. Martin Harvey, with whom he went on tour in the following year.

The deceased was over seventy years of age, and leaves a widow, one son, and two daughters.

One of the late Mr. Loveday's daughters was Miss Nellie Loveday, who acted at Toole's, and who is now Mrs. William Robins, the wife of Mr. George Alexander's musical director at the St. James's. The other daughter married Mr. Cecil Paget, the manager of the Crown Theatre, Peckham.

Many anecdotes were told of the late "Harry" Loveday, who was extremely popular. The Lyceum Theatre company were once playing at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, and it was found, late one Saturday night, that a certain property—a tree trunk required for use in Hamlet—was not forthcoming. So directions were given to one of the men—by name Arnott—to get it ready in time for the performance on Tuesday. On Monday morning, on arriving at the theatre, Mr. J. B. Howard, the manager, found that the theatre had been broken into and a quantity of stores abstracted. Arnott was brought under suspicion, and Howard peremptorily sent for him.

"I hear that you broke into my theatre and used up a lot of my stores," he said.

"Yes, sir. The theatre was shut up, and there was no time."

"Time has nothing to do with it, sir. Why did you do it?"

"Well, Mr. Howard, the governor ordered it, and Mr. Loveday told me not to lose any time in getting ready, as we had to rehearse to-day."

"But, sir," inquired Howard, still indignant, "if Mr. Loveday was to tell you to take down the flies of my theatre, would you do that too?"

"Certainly, sir," answered Arnott.

"In that case," said Howard, "I have nothing more to say. I only wish that my men would work like that."

Mr. Loveday used to tell a story, which greatly amused him, of a fire which took place at the old Edinburgh Hotel, opposite the Scott Memorial, Edinburgh. He, Mr. Bram Stoker, and Sir Henry Irving were sitting late at supper in the hotel when the fire broke out, and they left their room to watch the work of an energetic night porter, who was doing his best to extinguish the flames.

When they reached the part of the building where the fire was located they found an irate guest in a long white nightgown denouncing the porter for disturbing his sleep, and declaring that he would not endure being awakened by anyone's "infernal stupidity in setting the house on fire." He stormed and raged, without any effort to help in putting out the flames, and was still talking when Sir Henry, Mr. Loveday, and Mr. Bram Stoker returned to their room.

"I wish I had that fellow's self-conceit," said Sir Henry Irving; "with that I could do anything."

Mr. H. B. Irving, the chairman of the projected Loveday benefit, in an interview, says:—"Loveday was a gentle, lovable man, very loyal to my father, invariably kind to the staff, and a keen worker. I believe there was no one for whom Sir Henry had a greater affection than for his stage-manager."

"H. J. Loveday," writes Miss Ellen Terry in "The Story of My Life," "was as absolutely devoted to Henry as anyone except his fox-terrier, Fussy. Loveday's loyalty made him agree with everything that Henry said, however preposterous; and didn't Henry trade on it sometimes!"

Miss Terry relates how on one occasion Sir Henry while making-up took a white lily out of a bowl and began to stripe and dot the petals with a stick of grease-paint.

"Pretty flower, isn't it?" he asked Miss Terry.

"Oh, don't be ridiculous," she said.

"You wait. We'll show it to Loveday."

The latter agreed with his chief that the flower was very pretty.

"I always like those lilies," he added innocently. "A friend of mine has his garden full of them, and he says they're not so difficult to grow if only you give them enough water."

"Henry's delight at having 'taken in' Loveday was childish," says Miss Terry. "But sometimes I think Loveday must have seen through these innocent jokes, only he wouldn't have spoiled the guv'nor's bit of fun for the world."

Mrs. Martin Harvey (Miss de Silva), who has known Mr. Loveday intimately since her childhood, said: "Mr. Loveday gave up his violin and his beloved music in order to join Sir Henry, the friend of his youth, and in all my life I have never known so strong and sincere a tie to exist between two men.

"It was always a favourite promise of Sir Henry's that when both grew old they should take a cottage near each other. Sir Henry laughingly foreshadowed that he would read the plays while Mr. Loveday played his old violin. That wish was never realised.

"They were very, very dear friends," said Mrs. Harvey, "and I think that Mr. Loveday was the only man that really got into Sir Henry's heart.

"Toole and Sir Henry, Mr. Loveday and his brother George (who was Mr. Toole's stage-manager), were inseparables. Coming home every night after the theatre, these four used to take it in turns to buy the supper!" Mr. George Alexander had a high opinion of Mr. Loveday.

"He was a wonderfully kind creature," says Mr. Alexander. "He had a genius for doing the pleasant thing. To young actors he was the god out of the machine—giving the encouraging word and saying the right thing at the moment when the beginner was most in need of help. It was his sheer lovableness that endeared him to all who knew him. It was not 'tact.' That is too gross a word. He did the kind thing and said the kind thing. He won us all by his simple sweetness."

Mr. Bram Stoker, in his "Personal Reminiscences of Henry Irving," paid a high tribute to Loveday's value. Mr. Stoker wrote:—"Irving could do much, and would have in the long run done at least the bulk of what he intended; but he never could have done all he did without the assistance of his friend and trusty stage-lieutenant, H. J. Loveday, who through the whole of his management stood beside him in all his creative work and shaped into permanent form his lofty ideas of stage effect. To Loveday and the able staff under him, whose devotion and zeal were above all praise, the continued excellence of the Lyceum plays had to be mainly trusted."

THE FUNERAL.

The funeral took place at Kensal Green Cemetery on Friday. There was a large assembly, which included Mrs. Raleigh, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Acton Bond, Mr. and Mrs. Robins, Mr. Dillon Croker, Mr. H. A. White, Miss Loveday, Mr. Meredith Ball, Mr. Clarence Leighton, Mr. and Mrs. Bram Stoker, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Harvey, Mr. Austin Brereton, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Heirn, Mrs. Frank, Mr. Charles Glenney, Mr. L. M. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Hodgkinson, Mrs. Bloor, Mr. Goodwin, Mrs. Tabb, Dr. Middlemist, Mr. Alfred Rivers, Mr. Harry J. Britt, Miss Barlow, Mrs. Saxby, Mr. Coltson, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Paget, Mr. J. H. Barnes, and Mr. H. B. Irving.

Wreaths were sent by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Harvey, Master and Miss Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander, Mrs. Aria, Miss Mamie Cohn, Miss Loveday, Miss Allen, Mr. and Mrs. James Heirn, Mrs. Tabb, Mrs. Carton, Mr. Clarence Leighton, Mr. and Mrs. Cellier, Miss Emery, Miss Ellen Terry, Miss Craig, Miss Maitland, Mr. H. B. Irving, Mr. Austin Brereton, the Green Room Club, Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin, Mr. Martin Harvey's staff, Mr. Alfred Watson, "Patty" (sixty years a friend of the deceased), Mr. Geoffrey Franks, Mrs Howson and family, Mr. Cyril Hemington, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Monroe, Mrs. Raleigh, Mr. Harry Irving Loveday (son), Mrs. Loveday (wife), Mr. and Mrs Cecil Paget, Mr. and Mrs. Robins, Elinore and Jack Paget, Mr. and Mrs. Hodgkinson, the Actors' Benevolent Fund, Dr. Tilbury, Mr. and Mrs. White, the Royal General Theatrical Fund, Dr. Marston Clark, Mr. Martin Harvey's company, Mr. Charles H. Price, Mr. and Mrs. Beatty Kingston, Dr. and Mrs. Middlemist, Miss Genevieve Ward, Miss Ifa Johneon, and Sir Alec and Lady Mackenzie.

The Burial Service was read by the Rev. Culford Major, of Chundersley, Essex, assisted by the Rev. B. C. H. Andrew, the cemetery chaplain. The body was laid in the family grave.

LONDON SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL.

The adoption of the above title for a series of what may be termed Birthday Revivals of the Bard at His Majesty's is synonymous with the broadening out as it were of the yearly scheme inaugurated a few years since at the theatre named by Sir Herbert Tree, whose company up to the present year had been the medium through which Shakespeare was presented. Now, under the auspices of a committee of actor-managers and others, of which Sir Herbert is chairman, we are to have approved performances of Shakespearean character and plays by other stars and other companies in a repertory season of five weeks, and this was launched on Monday with The Merry Wives of Windsor, a favourite opening comedy at former Tree festivals. The work as presented seemed to be irradiated by one vast substantial smile; the nimble spirit of mirth indeed never seemed to be absent from any scene; and the career of humour sped its way with tripping feet. Sir Herbert Tree himself set a fine example of robustious gaiety as that rotund gallant Sir John Falstaff. "The Falstaff of The Merry Wives," says Hartley Coleridge, "is not the Falstaff of Henry VI. It is a big-bellied impostor, assuming his name and style, or, at best, it is Falstaff in his dotage." Sir Herbert's creation of the fat knight suggests the bon vivieur, an unquestioned belief in his power as a lady-killer, and a conceit as colossal as his corpus. His laugh has the self-satisfied chuckle, his eye the roguish twinkle, that seem to be inseparable from the part. This spirit of jollity receives no check even after the ducking in the Thames, and Sir John's invariable remedy, which he sounds to the depths amid the titters of the house, is a stoup of sack. Miss Ellen Terry returned to His Majesty's on Monday as Mistress Page, the comeliest of married coquettes, with an irresistible laugh and an infectious gaiety. Miss Terry's companion in mischief, Mistress Ford, was once again Lady Tree, and the resounding jollity of the famous buckbasket scene spread from the stage to the house. Never indeed has the triumph of broad-backed, robustious comedy been greater than in this scene, in which Mr. Lyn Harding, the latest representative of Ford, made an admirable foil by his fine exhibition of raging jealousy. Mr. Edward Sass made Bardolph humorously drunk; Mr. Hubert Carter's command of Shakespearean character was shown by his clever reading of Pistol; and to the blunt directness of Mine Host of the Garter—a part associated with the imperishable memory of Lal Brough—Mr. Nigel Playfair did full justice. Mr. E. M. Robson was always an amusing Sir Hugh Evans; and Dr. Caius was a droll conception in the keeping of that sound actor Mr. W. Haviland, the scene of the combat between the two being a roar from beginning to end. Mr. Henry Ainley made a romantic wooer of Master Fenton; and Mistress Quickly found favour through the excellent humour of Miss Kate Phillips, one of our best impersonators of Shakespearean serving-wenches. Miss Iris Hoey as Mistress Anne Page sang prettily in the last scene; Mr. C. H. Croker-King's Master Slender was as foolish a gaby as one could possibly desire; and an excellent impersonation of Nym goes to the credit of Mr. Harry C. Hewitt. Mr. Henry Morrell as Rugby, Mr. J. W. Braithwaite as Simple, and Mr. Jules Shaw as Master Page completed an admirable cast. The joyous dance at the conclusion was carried through amid great applause from a packed house on Monday. Sir Herbert Tree, who confessed himself fat and scant of breath, thanked the audience for the kindest of receptions, and made a graceful reference to Miss Ellen Terry.

"ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE."

Drama, in Three Acts, by Paul Armstrong, suggested by O. Henry's Short Story, "A Retrieved Reformation," performed for the first time in London at the Comedy Theatre on Tuesday, March 29.

Doyle .....Mr. Guy Standing
Miss Webster .....Miss Grace Murielle
Mrs. Moore .....Miss Florence Harwood
Rose Lane .....Miss Alexandra Carlisle
Bill Avery .....Mr. Harry Nicholls
Red Joclyn .....Mr. C. M. Hallard
Blickendolfenbach .....Mr. Herman de Lange
Handler .....Mr. Lyston Lyle
Smith .....Mr. Gissing Walters
Clerk .....Mr. Harry Gerrish
Robert Fay .....Mr. Herbert Bunston
Blinky Davis .....Mr. D. J. Williams
Dick the Rat .....Mr. Fred Cremlin
William Lane .....Mr. T. Gideon Warren
Bobby Lane .....Mr. Frank Thorndike
Kitty Lane .....Miss Marjorie Dane
Lee Randall .....Mr. Gerald du Maurier

Alias Jimmy Valentine, which was produced in Chicago, and was well received in New York, adds another to the list of plays in which the hero is a thief; but the adventures of Lee Randall, who is gifted with a marvellous power of opening the "combination" locks of safes by the sense of touch alone, create legitimate sympathy, because, soon after we first meet him he determines to reform, and adheres to his resolve in the face of discouraging difficulties. His adherence to the path of honesty involves the telling of a number of lies; but Randall's heart is in the right place, and by his concluding act of heroism he completes his popularity with the audience.

The piece is remarkable for the realistic representation which is given in the first act of an office in Sing-Sing Prison, New York, its officials, and the prisoners under their control. Handler, the warden, is a disbeliever in the innocence which is claimed by so many of the inmates, and his scepticism is justified in the case of a young man named Lee Randall, who has been fortunate enough to save from the attack of a thief Rose Lane, the niece of the Lieut.-Governor of New York, who comes to inspect the prison. Randall is brought in, and explains away the circumstantial evidence which led to his conviction. It appears, we may mention, that he was guilty not only of this crime but of a burglary on a bank at Springfield, Massachusetts. The Lieut.-Governor, in gratitude for the rescue of his niece, procures a pardon for Randall, and in the next act he appears, properly clothed, at the Hotel Albany, New York.

Here he is exposed to severe temptation. He has not yet expiated the bank robbery, and a detective named Doyle threatens that, unless Randall will play informer with respect to an old convict named Bill Avery, he (Doyle) will have him re-arrested for the Springfield crime. Randall refuses; and then Avery and another old pal of his called Red Joclyn arrive, and almost succeed in inducing him to return to a career of crime. But his love for Rose gives him strength to resist, and her father secures for him a post in a bank in Illinois.

Here we find him in the third act, after an interval of three years, in which he has risen to be cashier, having installed Red Joclyn, whom he has converted to honesty, as watchman. But Doyle, who has been on Randall's track, has discovered his place of refuge, and calls upon him at the bank. Randall, however, is prepared to deny his identity with the criminal Jimmy Valentine. He has collected a number of newspaper cuttings relating to the doings of a namesake of his during the last three years, and has induced Bill Avery, whose son-in-law is a photographer, to represent him, by a double negative, seated at a public banquet on the very date on which Jimmy Valentine left Sing-Sing. He has also managed to remove a certain distinctive scar on his right arm; and when Doyle arrives the detective is completely "bluffed" by Randall's coolness and readiness.

But in the end Doyle is not deceived. Rose's younger sister, Kitty, a charming child, is locked up by accident in the safe which stands in the cellar of the bank, and, to save her life, Randall consents to exercise his old sensitiveness of touch. After he has released little Kitty, he turns to find Doyle watching him with amusement; but the detective is so much affected by the love and grief of Rose Lane when she learns that Randall is to be again imprisoned, that he offers to forget the Springfield burglary, and thus leave Randall free to continue the practice of honesty and marry his employer's daughter.

Mr. Gerald du Maurier gave a very clever and ingenious embodiment of Lee Randall, from his entrance, with all the sly and watchful cunning of the criminal, to his final triumph over his painful past. The shades of character were most delicately distinguished, and the embodiment was marked by acuteness as well as refinement. Miss Alexandra Carlisle's frank charm and personal beauty won all hearts for her Rose Lane, and the occasional comedy of the performance was delightful. A real and very original and effective interpretation of the rôle of the detective was supplied by Mr. Guy Standing; and the inimitable Mr. Harry Nicholls mixed humour and bitterness in a judicious blend as the elderly thief, Bill Avery. Mr. C. M. Hallard, capitally made up, and with a most appropriate hoarseness, contributed a very convincing creation of Red Joclyn; and Mr. Herman de Lange was alert and amusing as an excitable little German inventor. Mr. Lyston Lyle's prison warden stood out by reason of its strength, steadiness, and reality; and Miss Grace Murielle and Miss Florence Harwood were quaint and comical as two fussy, philanthropic dames. Mr. Harry Gerrish played the bank clerk neatly; Mr. Gissing Walters was excellent as Smith; Mr. Herbert Bunston was easy and "superior" as Robert Fay; Mr. D. J. Williams and Mr. Fred Cremlin gave clever character sketches of two confirmed criminals; Mr. T. Gideon Warren doing good work as William Lane. Special praise must be given to the winning performances of Master Frank Thorndike and Miss Marjorie Dane as two very quaint juveniles, Miss Dane being especially amusing. The interiors of which the setting consisted were supplied most satisfactorily by Messrs. Frank Tyars, jun., Mr. Walter Hann, jun., Mr. J. Raphael, and Mr. F. L. Schmitz; and the piece, which was produced by Mr. Gustav von Seyffertitz, of the Empire Theatre, New York, had a favourable reception from a deeply interested audience.

Mr. and Mrs. John Walters' Babes in the Wood company is at the Albert Theatre, Brighouse. The Babes are capitally represented by the Misses F. Parkinson and K. Chester; Miss V. Thorne makes a dashing Robin Hood; Miss Kitty Fiske is charming as Maid Marion; Miss C. Nottingham is also smart as Will Scarlett; Miss Hilda Hemus wins all hearts as Fairy Goodheart; Mr. Ally Benson is well to the fore as Dame Flossy; Mr. Tom Lewis is most excellent as the Baron, and provides plenty of merriment; we have an old favourite in Mr. W. Bland, who undoubtedly "shines"; the Robbers are ably represented by Aytoun and Dale; the scenery and dresses are beautiful; specialities are introduced by the Daniels, Mr. Tom Lewis, Mr. Ally Benson, Mr. J. R. Catton, Emerald Quartette, Sweet Sixteen Ballet Troupe.

"ADVENTURES OF THE BLACK HAND."

A Miniature Melodrama, Produced at Sadler's Wells on Monday, March 28.

Nick Carter .....Mr. Bernard Mervyn
Patsey .....Mr. Hyland T. O'Shea
Col. Maxim Zuropski .....Mr. James Skea
Marie .....Little Phyllis Howe
Paul Vandoff .....Mr. F. B. Woulfe
Mme. Zaleska .....Miss Phyllis Dailley
Marie Nurse .....Miss Mamie Rendle

This proved to be yet another one of the exciting adventures of the famous detective, Nick Carter, in his many attempts to stamp out the Black Hand gang of criminals. If anything, it outrivals in sensational incident those that have preceded it in the same series. Mr. Fred Moule informs us that he is the sole author of the present little sketch, which is excellently played by a capable company headed by Mr. Bernard Mervyn. The story deals with how Mme. Zaleska—a part very forcefully acted by Miss Phyllis Dailley, seeks to get her husband released from prison, where he has been put by Colonel Zuropski, the Russian Chief of Police. Although the police officer is Madame's brother, he declines to set free his criminal relative, which prompts the lady to vow vengeance on him. Now Maxim Zuropski has a little daughter, to whom he is passionately attached, and Madame, knowing this, determines to strike for revenge through the child. So she plots to blow up the little one, and the Black Hand gang is called upon to aid and abet her in the attempt. But she has reckoned without Nick Carter, who has been engaged by the Colonel to help him to exterminate the Black Hand gang. It need scarcely be recorded that the famous detective thwarts the beautiful fiend, who in the final scene is caught in a trap of her own contriving, and is electrocuted. Nick Carter has a companion in all his adventures in one Patsey, very humorously played by Mr. Hyland T. O'Shea. Mr. Bernard Mervyn does some very fine work as the famous detective, and it may be said that in this particular adventure he has made an even better study of the character than has been the case previously. All his hairbreadth escapes and many dare-devil situations in the little piece are greatly to the liking of the Sadler's Wells audiences, and Mr. Fred Baugh may be heartily complimented on this production, which, we understand, was under his direction. The part of Paul Vandoff was very capably taken by Mr. F. B. Woulfe, and the ladies concerned supported the action of the little piece very creditably.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.

A very large and orderly Bank Holiday crowd patronised the Park and Palace on Easter Monday, and well were they catered for both inside and out. No less than eight military bands were stationed in different parts of the enclosure, and their efforts were thoroughly appreciated. In the Bijou Theatre Mr. Walter Jay Stevens' Peerless Pierrots and Comical Musical Clowns and the Merry Masher Minstrels gave highly-amusing performances. Captain Henry's largely-augmented zoological collection, removed to new quarters in the Londesborough Hall, was always full of gratified visitors. The large theatre, which has been newly decorated, presented a continuous show of electric animated pictures, enlivened at intervals by those funny comedians Merryman and Jester. Two large balloons, handled by the Royal medallist, Auguste Gaudron, were utilised near the racecourse in the park. In one the intrepid aeronaut sailed with his friends in a right-away ascent, and from the other his protegée, Miss Dolly Shepherd, accomplished a graceful parachute descent amidst the plaudits of the vast crowd, the lady, who is probably not more than twenty-three years of age, being highly complimented upon her daring achievement.

Mr. Fred J. Connor's Grand Circus, from Douglas, Isle of Man, gave three shows in the Central Hall; at the last two money was refused, and when it is known that the large orchestra was claimed for the "gods," and holds 2,000 people, the financial aspect of the business must have been gratifying in the extreme. Leoni, the extraordinary silver thread balancer, and Almero, the sensational gymnast on the swing pole, were enthusiastically cheered; John Watson's performing pony, Jubilee, and George Madigan's clever troupe of fox-terriers were animal exhibits of high class; Milton and Horton must almost have lived on the triple horizontal bars, so thoroughly at home did they appear; Mons. Jean, the artistic horseback juggler, and John Irvin, the dexterous foot equilibrist, were artists of ability; Miss Ada Pinder, the graceful equestrienne, with her performing horse, collie dog, and trained flight of pigeons, was the recipient of well-earned plaudits; Signor Antonio and De Ora, on the trapeze, added much to the general success; and Captain Roberts, the Army staff trumpeter and musician, with his troupe of auxiliary athletes, produced a show that can only be credited when seen. Rabbit, Tony, and Frisky, who kept the audience, especially the juveniles, in a continuous merriment, and one of the funniest skits was the introduction of The Coster's Derby Day. The Palace entertainments practically concluded with a very fine pyrotechnic display on the Lake Island by James Pain.

Mr. Editor,—Sir,—In your criticism last week re the production For Old Times' Sake, you attribute the performance of Wallace Rivington to Mr. Harold Riley. I beg to state that I played the part, and the fact of a different name being mentioned was due to an error in the programme.—Yours faithfully, Edwin Beverley.

"THE MAN OF FORTY FACES."

Sketch, Produced at the Bedford on Monday, March 28.

Hamilton Cleek .....Mr. Leonard Mortimer
Dollops .....Mr. Harold Brough
Gaston Merode .....Mr. Howard Templeton
Baron de Carjorne .....Mr. D. T. Hennessy
Margot .....Miss Constance Elgin
Ailsa Lorne .....Miss Ida Clifford

This new sketch is the first of a series founded on the stories written by T. W. Hanshew, now appearing in Cassell's Saturday Journal, and which have been dramatised by Mr. Leonard Mortimer, who is now presenting this one for the first time. There are a series of riddles which are solved in a marvellous manner by Hamilton Cleek, the detective, and this present one deals with the problem of the Red Claw. The scene is laid in Paris, where the Baron De Carjorne resides. Margot, the Queen of the Apaches, and Gaston are endeavouring to secure from the Baron some secret plans of fortifications which they can dispose of to a certain European Power who are plotting against England. "The Red Claw" is an unseen hand who has perpetrated many outrages, and this the Baron fears. His niece Ailsa, knowing of Cleek, calls in his aid, and, after a series of most thrilling adventures, he brings the criminals to bay at the café, The Twisted Arm, a haunt of the Apaches, where, after a terrific struggle, they are secured.

The story is most exciting and is well told, keeping the excitement at a high pitch throughout. Mr. Leonard Mortimer is in his usual form as Cleek, and gives a capital delineation of the character. The rest of the parts are ably sustained, notably by Miss Constance Elgin as Margot, and Miss Ida Clifford, who plays Ailsa in such a charming manner. There are three scenes, all of which are capitally mounted. A word of tribute is due to Mr. Percy Ashdown, who has written the incidental music. The sketch had a most flattering reception, which it richly deserved.

Miss Millie Payne is meeting with great success in the provinces with her "Chantecler" song. Her make-up for this number as a rooster is greatly admired and commented upon by Press and public.

Miss Lydia Neilson, who has been touring the provinces with her quintette of boys and girls, met with a great reception at Dewsbury last week. Her original scena, An Impromptu Rehearsal, will be seen in London shortly.

The latest quotations for music-hall shares are as follows: Alhambra, 1⅞; Empire (15s. paid), 1⅞; ditto (10s. paid), 1½; London Pavilion (5), 3½; ditto Pref. (5), 5; Metropolitan, ⅝; Moss' Empires (5), 4½; Oxford (5), 6¼; Palace Theatre (9s. paid), 1; Tivoli, New (5), 6¼.

Messrs. Verner and Dent have in hand a new duologue, entitled "The Missing Earl," written and composed by Percy Edgar. It will contain three new and original numbers and some smart cross-talk, and will shortly be produced in the London halls.

New Hippodrome.—Lessees, Mr. and Mrs. C. Routledge.—Mr. Fred Newman's British Empire Picture Company is enjoying a most popular time here. This week's entertainment is quite up to the mark of excellence already attained. The variety turns are excellent, especially the marionette entertainment given by Chester and Lee.

Mr. Charles Hartley and Miss Ethel Gordon Paull will bring to a conclusion on April 7 a seven months' tour. During that period they have given 149 entertainments in England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Belgium, Italy, Madeira, and the Canary Isles. The distance covered during the tour was, roughly speaking, about 35,000 miles.

Miss Florrie Forde has been very ill for the last fortnight with a severe attack of influenza and tonsilitis, but is rapidly recovering, and hopes to resume business on April 11 at Kilburn Empire and Canterbury, where she will produce, for the first time in London, her two great Blackpool successes, "Rip Van Winkle" and "'Tis a faded picture."

The Leigh Theatre Royal, of which the lessees and managers are Messrs. Tolfree and Harry Slingsby, opened on Monday night with an excellent variety programme, which included Mr. Theo. C. Le Gar's sketch Music, the Conqueror; Kydd and Kydd, amusing patter comedians; the Sisters Geretti, clever trapeze artists; the Sisters Henderson, speciality artists; Marie Kay, a pleasing comedienne and dancer; Florence Smithers and company with their sketch Our Mary Jane, which is decidedly humorous; Bert Welde and Dorothy Wynne in a clever juggling and dancing act; Johnson and De Vere in a comedy cycling act; and Mr. Charles Hatch, comedian.

A Yorkshire couple and their children visiting Blackpool at Easter had a very uncomfortable experience. They went for a ride on the big wheel, which, after it had traversed about three-quarters of the circle, suddenly stopped. They waited half an hour, believing that something had gone wrong, but they saw the lights in the grounds being extinguished, so they shouted for help, but were unheard. Finally, by striking matches and holding them against the carriage windows they attracted attention, and a crowd gathered. The police sent for the manager, and steam was got up, and after a two hours' wait, release came. The voyagers—especially the children—were very cold, but they soon recovered.

ISABELLA AND THE PURITANS.

Miss Mary Suddard, in an article on "The Poet and the Puritan" in the Contemporary Review, thoughtfully analyses the character of Isabella in Measure for Measure. Miss Suddard says: "Isabella represents Puritanism under its most favourable aspect. Puritanism, from the beginning, seems to have exercised on the women of England the same fascination that Jansenism, its continental congener, exercised on the women of France. Had Isabella been allowed to follow out her self-appointed course, she would have developed into an Angélique Arnauld. All woman's yearning, devotion, and self-sacrifice absorbed by Italian Juliet are absorbed by principle in Isabella. Her intellect delights in vanquishing the difficulties of puritanic (in the play symbolised as conventual) discipline; her heart delights in offering itself up, unrewarded, yet undiscouraged, to an unattainable ideal. As St. Simeon Stylites exulted in straining the cord of penance round his waist 'as tight as he could knot the noose,' so Isabella, the young disciple of a young religion, exults in multiplying the restrictions of puritanic rule. Her very first words strike the keynote of her character, so intense in its moderation, so passionate in its self-control:

Isabella: Have you nuns no farther privileges?
Nun: Are not these large enough?
Isabella: Yes, truly; I speak not as desiring more,
But rather wishing a more strict restraint
Upon this sisterhood, the votaries of St. Clare.

A generation of such women would soon ensure the triumph of Puritanism in England. The chief object of the new discipline was to establish law, and the very mainspring of Isabella's nature is obedience to law, whatever suffering such obedience may entail:

'I had rather my brother die by the law than that my son should be unlawfully born.'

This obedience to the external law is only the outward sign of obedience to the moral law within. No considerations of human affection can weigh against principle. Rather than violate the virginal ideal of purity imposed by principle, Isabella will stifle the voice of feeling, sacrifice her brother without a tear: 'More than our brother is our chastity'; indeed, at the very thought, inspired principle puts into her mouth the language of the Christian virgins uttered fifteen hundred years before. To repel the attacks of the tempter, her voice thrills with the ecstasy of martyrdom:

'Were I under the terms of death
The impression of keen whips I'd wear as rubies,
And strip myself to death as to a bed
That longing I've been sick for, ere I'd yield
My body up to shame.'

Contrast this unflinching adherence to principle with the yielding of Isabella's prototype, Cassandra, in the original play, and you will have caught the difference in spirit between the Renaissance ideal of mercy to the individual and the puritanic ideal of obedience to the law. Isabella, for the first time perhaps in English literature, displays the wonderful power of Puritanism in conquering nature, that strength which has become the backbone of the Englishwoman's character, that implicit obedience to the laws of truth and chastity which silences alike the casuistry of conscience and the promptings of passion in Jenny Deans and Jane Eyre respectively.

"And yet has Isabella so completely broken with the tradition of the Renaissance? In truth, this strength of principle had always lain dormant in the Englishwoman's nature. The frankness and fidelity of Chaucer's Dorigen needed little transformation to develop into the Shakespearean heroine, and Shakespeare's women are all Puritans at heart. The latent tendencies of all are simply brought to consciousness in Isabella. She is first cousin, if not sister, to Imogen and Desdemona.

"As the highest type of Renaissance woman shares Isabella's austerity of principle, so Isabella shares the other's impulsiveness of emotion. As live water may be seen dashing and dancing along under thin ice, so feeling in Isabella seems always on the point of bursting through the set coldness of puritanic or conventual reserve; puritanic principles merely fit over the more delicate impulses of her own nature to shield their purity from harm. Puritanism for her meant no more than a moral discipline, it served simply to protect the delicacy of feelings it could not eradicate. When the time comes, the husk slips off like the sheath off a catkin, leaving a silken tenderness beneath, soon to blossom out in frequent tremulous beauty.

"Had Isabella always remained a voluntary prisoner in her convent, wrapt in silent meditation, only peeping out through a grating—in other words, could she have held fast to her puritanic principles without bringing them to the test of fact, the slumbering warmth of her nature could only have been divined from an occasional flash, it would never have burnt through to a steady glow and shone out in its own eventual radiance. But Isabella is brought into contact with real life, and with life in the form that her nature and training teach her 'to most abhor.' She is forced to plead for sin, to become the apologist of human frailty and human passion. The first crisis of her moral life reveals to her the inadequacy of her principles to cope with problems whose magnitude she had never before realised. Her icicles of logic, which seemed before so fair and firm, thaw, dwindle, melt away at the first warm breath of feeling. Or to be more accurate, the logic of the intellect is transcended by the logic of emotion. In Isabella, as in most women, the logic of the intellect moves in extremely narrow grooves. It had sufficed to regulate her own personal judgment, opinions, and conduct. But a finer intuition tells her it will no longer apply to the case she has undertaken to defend. This new need calls forth the supple logic of emotion, reaching the right solutions by the wrong means, ignoring all the processes of formal reasoning, yet instinctively working itself out to a result no formal reasoning could have given. The struggle between the two, and her fruitless efforts to reconcile them, are what confers its half-pathetic, half-humorous interest on her first interview with Angelo:

'There is a vice that most I do abhor
And most desire should meet the blow of justice;
For which I would not plead but that I must;
For which I must not plead but that I am
At war 'twixt will and will not.'

This contention of principle and feeling, at which she herself seems frightened and abashed, is leading her into a higher sphere. In Shakespeare's women feeling always carries principle along with it, not denying its validity, but extending its application.

"Struggle as she will,
'A something wild within her breast,
A greater than all knowledge'

beats her down, not love, but charity, the divine Amor. It takes her back to the gracious mercy, the infinite forgiveness of the Redeemer:

'Why all the souls that were were forfeit once,
And he who best the 'vantage might have took
Found out the remedy.'

From such a height she may look down, with an indignation too holy to be scorn, on the petty rules and regulations of 'proud man, dressed in a little brief authority,' as no better than the gambols of an angry ape,

'Playing such fantastic tricks before high heaven
As make the angels weep.'

"But what has become of her Puritanism? In her highest, most heroic burst, her early training has been not only transcended, but unconsciously condemned. Contact with real life has thrown her back on Christianity before the sorrow and suffering of humanity. Puritanic morality she had thought so lofty, now seems narrow; its solutions she had thought so just seem almost flippant. Through Isabella the master poet of the Renaissance pays Puritanism a magnanimous tribute and takes at the same time a worthy and magnificent revenge.

"Shakespeare is, however, very far from wishing to prove the inability of Puritanism to retain a firm hold on its disciples. Over against the complex character of Isabella he sets the more elementary nature of Angelo. On him Puritanism has set its distinctive and ineffaceable seal. We have said that Isabella used the austerity of Puritanism as a moral discipline for her own passionate nature. Angelo turns this purely personal and spiritual discipline into a mechanical drill to be applied to all minds alike. Puritanic principle, as before said, serves rather as a shell to protect her tenderest feelings from injury; Angelo, carrying his narrow logic to its extreme consequences, tries to assimilate the creature to the shell, to fossilise the living heart within. Puritanism appealed to Isabella through its superhuman difficulty of application; it appeals to Angelo, on the contrary, through its extreme simplicity. What acts as a restraint on a passionate heart serves as a support to a cold intellect. Live entirely by the brain, suppress feeling, and puritanic morality becomes the easiest to follow. The only penalty Angelo will have to pay for his complete surrender to puritanic rule is loss of power, under any circumstances whatever, to shake off the habits of mind he has acquired. The difference in the effect of such a discipline on the superior and the average mind can only be brought out by contact with reality. Angelo, like Isabella, brings his Puritanism to the test of fact and, to the credit of the strength, if not the liberality of his training, preserves its logical integrity much longer. The paradox of the situation requires one Puritan to convert the other. (See Charles Hugo's preface to the play). Isabella, forced by her instinct to desert her own tenets, beckons to Angelo to follow her up to the summit she has reached. In their first interview the faith of both is shaken. But the result of the crisis is widely different in the complex and the elementary nature."

Miss Gladys Ford-Havitt wishes to thank Mr. and Mrs. Giffard for a delightful tour with Mr. Louis Calvert's Sunday company.

The third annual benefit for the Railway Servants' Orphans' Fund, by the kindness of the directorate, took place on Good Friday at Barrasford's Hippodrome, Sheffield. The house was crowded, and a first-rate sacred concert by professional and local artists was much enjoyed, and the augmented orchestra, conducted by Mr. Hahn, the talented musical director of the Hippodrome, gave several classical selections in a perfect manner. By the generosity of the Barrasford Co., artists, band, and staff, the funds of a deserving society will again be greatly increased, and Mr. Franx Poole, the popular local manager, deserves all praise for doing so much to promote the general success.

Messrs. Hinton and Green's company is presenting Her Fatal Marriage at the Bilston Royal and Hippodrome, and the keen appreciation shown by a regular Bank Holiday audience on Monday justifies the choice. Mr. Jerrold Heather displays conspicuous ability as Captain Vigo, and Mr. Colin Heather also does well as Wilfred Grey; Miss Winefred Rutland displays skill as well as natural charm as the heroine, Lily; Miss Hilda Shirley depicts the character of Myra with earnestness. The comedy parts are well sustained by Mr. Tod Squires and Miss Laura Wright.

Mr. Geo. A. De Gray and Harry Masterman's company in The Angel of His Dreams opened at the Miners' Theatre, Ashington, on Monday. As the Rev. Christian Esdaile Mr. Geo. A. De Gray acts with ability; Mr. Wallace Campbell is well suited as Major Dudley Ferras; Mr. Chas. Arnold as Sir Francis Tregarthen is good; as Roy Ferras Mr. Robert Hall does good work; Miss Edna Earl as Milly St. Austell is excellent; Miss Effie Bartlett gives an earnest interpretation of Hilda; Little Dorris Brereton as Lulu is clever; and Mr. Mayo Stanley as Sam Tippet is satisfactory; in the rôle of Bessie Sparkles we have a gifted exponent in Miss Etta Turner.

The Queen's Theatre, Dublin, has been beautifully redecorated. The auditorium presents a pleasing appearance, the seats having been reupholstered, cleaned, and renovated. Large mirrors have been placed in different parts of the theatre, and small ones in each of the boxes, adding in no small measure to the general brightness of the colour scheme. The various bars in the theatre have been refurnished and re-painted, making them as comfortable as possible, and a row of arc lamps added to the lighting effects on the stage make it possible to secure a more brilliant effect than hitherto. The front of the orchestra has been decorated in charming colours, and the pit brightly and warmly re-painted. The front of the theatre presents a very handsome appearance, having been thoroughly done up, and the ladies' room has been enlarged and refurnished. In this room ladies may have tea, coffee, or other refreshments served during the intervals. The theatre is now one of the cosiest and handsomest in the country.

Mme. Adah Payne, late of the Moody-Manners principal opera company, is this week paying a fourth visit within nineteen months to the Empire, Stockport, and, judging from the reception her singing is meeting with this week, Mme. Payne seems as popular in this town as ever.

Mr Cyril Maude, recently at the Coliseum, has now returned to the Playhouse. He expressed, when a child, a keen desire to be the Bishop of London, but a little later the embryo actor-manager was obsessed with the lesser ambition of going on the stage. He did so after a little farming, taking up parts in the provincial tours of Criterion comedy. His first success, so he tells us in his reminiscences in the Strand Magazine, was in the tragic part of Austin Woodville in Henry Hamilton and Mark Quinton's clever drama Handfast, produced at a matinée at the Prince of Wales's Theatre on May 13, 1887.

In the same year he appeared at the Grand, Islington, in the drama Racing, written by the Great Macdermott, who turned out many theatrical pieces, and afterwards produced sketches at the halls. Mr. Cyril Maude's part was the Duke of Courtland, and Mac introduced in a scene of the racecourse his adaptation of the Boulangist song "Le Père la Victoire," entitled "Jubilation Day."

In a recent "Talk About Old London," which appeared in the London Evening News, headed "Fifty Years of Music Hall," Mr. Barnard, of Chatham, doubtless by a slip of memory, stated that Tom Browne, of Birmingham, tried to dispose of the famous song, "Daddy wouldn't buy me a bow-wow," to anyone he met. As is well known, the number was by Mr. Joseph Tabrar, who some fifteen years ago, at the London Pavilion, wrote, composed, and sold the song to Miss Vesta Victoria, all within the space of one hour. Our contemporary has since publicly corrected the error.

SHAKESPEARE'S DISILLUSIONS.

"There came a time," wrote Robert Gray in "The True Hamlet," "when a great change took place in Shakespeare's attitude to his surroundings. Human progress, like that of the incoming tide, is marked by waves constantly advancing and receding, although the tide is all the while insensibly rising. The backward wash of the wave was beginning to be felt in the Court of Elizabeth. Before long Shakespeare was to experience a serious disillusionment, which was to try his faith in mankind almost to breaking-point, and for a time to embitter him to the verge of misanthropy. He was to learn by sad experience a deeper distrust of womankind. He saw and pictured women like Cleopatra, 'half Queen, half gipsy'; or, like Lady Macbeth, ambitious and heartless; or, like Cressida, odious and wanton. He saw the mob of his time, easily cozened by flatteries and incapable of gratitude to benefactors, and it inspired him with scorn of the 'groundlings'—'the rank-scented many'—as he calls them. Down in the open yard, which constituted the pit of Shakespeare's day, the 'understanding gentlemen of the ground' stood in their black smocks and goatskin jerkins with a plentiful sprinkling of puritan zealots, on whose eyes the drama was the work of Satan. There they cracked their jests, or amused themselves pelting the stage with nut-shells, apple peel, corks, sausage ends, pebbles, and such like tributes to genius. The playwrights of the day exhausted epigram in holding them up to scorn. Shakespeare himself had felt their attacks. Witness the allusion in Hamlet to that excellent play, which was never acted 'or if it was, not above once, for it pleased not the million.' 'Twas caviare to the general.'

"If Shakespeare's scorn flamed out ever and anon, as for example in Julius Cæsar, against the plebeian party, it was even more intense when turned upon its corrupt and time-serving leaders. We have it on the authority of Lord Macaulay that towards the end of Queen Elizabeth's reign her court was the most corrupt in Europe. Its profligacies grew year by year until, in the time of her immediate successor, according to the acknowledgment of the elder Disraeli, the morals of the court became appalling. All decency was set aside. Courtiers who passed their days in dissolute idleness and preposterous luxury were stained by infamous vices. The tone of the court was vicious throughout—intercourse between the sexes disgraceful. Bribes were taken by judges, even by the great Lord Chancellor himself. The unhappy victims of courtly malevolence were sent without trial to languish in the Tower, and sometimes, despite laws to the contrary, were tortured on the rack, as in the case of Peacham, whom Lord Bacon examined under torture.

Shakespeare stood by and saw the development of much of this. He saw prostrations of courtiers and flatterers of all kinds, intrigue, conspiracy, violation of oaths, personal unworthiness and ingratitude in high places, Jacks in office, ignorant of what they were most assured. He saw the State rent in two by party strife between the families of the Cecils and Essexes—those gaining the favour of one immediately earning the rancour of the other; and, as fruit of these dissensions, he saw his friend Essex beheaded and his patron the Earl of Southampton sent to the Tower. He saw Lord Bacon prostitute his great talents to impeach the nobleman to whose bounty he stood most deeply indebted. He must have heard the fawning tongue of time-serving courtiers lick the absurd pomp of the doting Elizabeth, until, as Macaulay tells us, the cruel truth could no longer be hid in the closing years of her reign that those whom she trusted and promoted never loved her, were ceasing to fear her, and were conspiring to desert her. He saw, in a word, insincerity and pretension elbow ruthlessly aside merit and nobility of mind; friends turn into enemies; women prove untrue; politicians treacherous; a court steeped to the eyes in intrigue; grace and goodness of life flouted; fortune blind; and fate cruel.

"There go in procession through his plays of this period examples of almost every phase of human wickedness. In Lear we have the eloquent dissimulation of Goneril and Regan. In Macbeth, ambition steeped in guilt. In Othello power and connubial felicity undermined by treachery. In Julius Cæsar, conspiracies. In Antony and Cleopatra, the destruction of a nation through faithlessness and sensuality.

"Shakespeare seems to sum all in the words of Gloucester in Lear. 'We have seen,' he says, 'the best of our time. Machination, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders follow us disquietly to our graves; cunning and treachey at work like a mole in the earth; the noble and true-hearted Kent banished—his offence, honesty. 'Tis strange!' Strange indeed that dissimulation and deceit, that fine speeches unapproved by deeds, should flourish, while quiet integrity is left to die of neglect—the physician killed, and the fee bestowed upon the foul disease.

"The apparent hopelessness of all this sank deep into the heart and mind of Shakespeare, and is reproduced in the play of Hamlet. In this play he gives the fullest expression to his feelings upon a great problem of life. What hope has suffering virtue in a world of rogues? This question he seems to have asked himself, and he gives in this play for himself and for us all time, a wise man's answer to this riddle of existence.

"Furnished with the key which these circumstances of his life and time afford, I propose now to examine this great treasure-house of the intellect. It is full of sparkling gems, but the passages are intricate, and some guidance to enable us to explore them is necessary. To whom are we to apply? To Hazlitt or Charles Lamb? It would be misleading. To Steevens or Dr. Johnston? Of a surety, no! To Goethe or Brandes? With all deference, I think not even entirely to them. There is only one infallible guide—Shakespeare himself, if we will only concern ourselves with his greatness and not our own, place our hands trustfully in his, and take for granted that to transcendant genius he added capable judgment and ripened experience. In this way we shall find that the difficulties which have beset many in the interpretation of this play are imaginary, and that its story is direct, coherent, and convincing."

In the tragedy of Hamlet, where the Prince is questioning Horatio and Marcellus about the ghost, and they tell him it was armed from head to foot, he says:

"Then saw you not his face?"

To which Horatio replies:

"O, yes, my lord;—he wore his beaver up."

Here wearing the "beaver up" plainly signifies its being so placed as not to hide the face. There is, however, reason to believe that wearing the "beaver up" is the proper expressing for its covering the face, for in a note on Mr. Macaulay's "History of England," Vol. III., p. 437, chap. 5, 4to, where some authority is quoted, giving an account of Lord Brooke being killed, it is mentioned as extraordinary, because his "beaver was up and he was armed to the knee." Dr. Franklin, in his tragedy of Matilda, has followed the historian:

"He wore his beaver up, nor could I see
His face."

Messrs Adeler, Sutton, and Allandale's Pierrots occupy the Town Hall, Rhyl, a good company being engaged. Frank Dunlop and Harriett Fawn are both favourites with Rhyl audiences; Daisy Wyndham's soprano is heard to advantage in several well-chosen songs; and Joyce Flawn, Dave Jenkins, and Steve Buckington also submit good items.

THEATRICAL ACCOUNTS FOR BUSINESS MANAGERS.
How the Affairs of a Theatre can be most Efficiently Controlled by the Adoption of Systems of Internal Check.
By CUTHBERT E. SMEDLEY, Chartered Accountant.
Price, 3/6. Post free, 3/9.
All concerned with the business side of a theatre will find much useful information and many valuable hints in "Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Mr. Cuthbert E. Smedley, published at The Era office.—Referee, Jan. 31, 1909.
"Theatrical Accounts," by Cuthbert E. Smedley (The Era, Ltd., 3s. 6d.), shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given. Receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts, audit—each is allotted a separate chapter. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Morning Post, Jan. 27, 1909.
"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (3s. 6d., The Era, Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.). The work of accountants has now been brought to a fine art, and in almost every branch of business a different system has been elaborated. The present work deals in a small compass fully and clearly with all the special features of theatrical management on the business side.—Financial Times, Feb. 1, 1909.
"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (The Era, Ltd., London, 3s. 6d.), is a most concise and comprehensive little work, calculated to prove of assistance to the theatre-manager. It shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given, and the chapters treating of receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts and audit will be found to contain much useful information. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury, Feb. 3, 1909.

EXCERPTS FROM EXAMINERS' REPORTS.
I congratulate you heartily on the work you are doing and the success that is attending it.
The pleasure that all your pupils take in their lessons is evident, and it seemed that, with scarcely an exception, their clearness of enunciation and knowledge of giving every word its proper value were remarkable.
To watch each pupil use his or her own individuality, and not all attack the same subject from the same point of view, was very interesting, and, I think, so important; whether they adopt the stage as a profession or not, they are, at any rate, learning how to speak so as to be heard and understood.
(Signed) CONSTANCE COLLIER.
GERALD DU MAURIER.

We were thoroughly satisfied with the excellent quality of the work and the admirable results achieved in the training of the students. We were particularly impressed by the clearness of the elocution shown by the great majority of those we heard. Altogether, the work which we saw did very great credit to the teaching of the school, which seems to be thoroughly practical and useful for anyone seeking to follow the musical or dramatic profession.
(Signed) H. B. IRVING.
ROBERT SYDNEY BROUGH.

We cannot let to-day's examination pass without a word of heartiest congratulation. The general efficiency amongst your pupils was so exceptionally high that it was indeed a most difficult matter for us to adjudicate the prizes. The intelligence shown by one and all was simply remarkable, and when added to that quality we had the thoroughness of your training, the whole effect was indeed splendid. Our sincere wish is that you should go on and prosper, for, to our minds, you have got hold of the right end of the stick—of training the young idea.
(Signed) ACTON BOND.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, APRIL 2, 1910.

THE NATIONAL THEATRE.

Some time since we advocated the publication, from time to time, of lists of the subscriptions which were coming in in aid of the National Theatre scheme; and we are pleased to find support in our demand from no less an authority than Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree. Sir Herbert has warmly espoused the cause of the National Theatre; and, in an eloquent speech at a meeting at Kent House, Knightsbridge, on the 18th ult., he said: "I am glad to be able to tell you, on the authority of the organising secretary, Mr. Perris, that this movement is developing not only in the metropolis, but also in many of the great provincial cities. He has been during the last few days in such towns as Worcester, Canterbury, and elsewhere, and is able to report not only of London, but also of these towns as to the general desire thus to honour Shakespeare. This is as it should be. The movement is not a London movement—it is an English movement. Shakespeare is one of the joint glories of all the English-speaking people, and it is an inspiring thought that three hundred years after his death there should be opened in London a great theatre in which his works may be presented in the finest possible manner. It may serve as a national recognition of the value of the theatre and of the drama in the development of the modern stage. But I say again, we must have the confidence of the public, and that confidence must find expression in pounds, shillings, and pence."

This is exactly the difficulty which we have foreseen from the time when the National Theatre idea originated. People will attend meetings, listen to orations, and move in any direction, as long as they are not asked to move towards the drawer where they keep their cheque-books. The inhabitants of Worcester and Canterbury desire to honour Shakespeare by establishing a National Theatre; but we shall be very much surprised, though exceedingly glad, to hear that Mr. Perris returned from his provincial expedition with a large amount of subscribed capital. It is dangerous to draw any inference in writing of the National Theatre Committee, who are as ready with their solicitors as the Irishman of the old school was with his pistols; so we will, in default of any definite information, form the most hopeful imaginations possible.

Sir Herbert Tree's explanation of his reasons for supporting the National Theatre scheme were both interesting and pertinent. Sir Herbert lays stress on the probability, almost amounting to certainty, that a National Theatre would not pay. This was, indeed, the view taken by Messrs. William Archer and H. Granville Barker in the book on "A National Theatre" which they published in 1907. Taking an imaginary building holding 300, and supposing that the house was usually only half full, they imagined, for the sake of argument, that there would be a deficit of about £15,000 at the conclusion of the season. They therefore suggested that the guarantee fund should be £150,000, which they expected at the end of the third season would be reduced to £60,000. "It might be quite clear," wrote Messrs. Archer and Barker, "that, in spite of the large deficits, the theatre was taking root, acquiring prestige, and giving a valuable stimulus to theatrical life in general. In that case, the trustees would doubtless continue the director in office, and ask him to go on as he had begun. It might be that he would gradually reduce the deficit to £5,000, £3,000, £2,000, £500; so that, at the end of the seventh season, the actual loss would have been £100,500. The eighth season might show a clear balance-sheet, and from the ninth onward profits might begin to be made."

We take quite a much more hopeful view of the situation than the authors of "A National Theatre." We believe that a National Theatre on the plan of the Comédie Française might, if properly managed, soon pay its way; but only on condition that it was ruled by practical and broad-minded managers. An English Comédie Française need not, by any means, be a home of pedantry or ponderous art. Sir Herbert Tree said that all those who have given their lives to the presentation of the works of Shakespeare have remained poor in pocket. But the ruling passions are not avarice and sensuality, but pride and vanity. We see soldiers and sailors of all ranks risking their lives at wages which are ridiculous from a commercial point of view for a medal, a cross, or a K.C.B. We see wealthy tradesmen pouring thousands into party coffers in exchange for a title, and expending other thousands in the endeavour to "get into society"; and most painters would gladly sacrifice half of their annual earnings to be able to write the letters R.A. after their names.

On the foundations of emulation, enthusiasm, and pride, and on these alone, is a National Theatre possible. A subvention is required in order to relieve the institution from sordid anxieties; but the important thing is that the National Theatre shall be distinguished, and that connection with it shall confer distinction. There are two attractions which the Comédie Française has for actors and actresses. In the first place, it is an honour to belong to it; in the second, it assures that in his old age the artist shall be placed beyond the reach of want. In England, with our system of long runs, there would be a third attraction—that of variety. The English stage at present does not offer sufficient attraction to the purely artistic temperament. A National Theatre would, at any rate, be interesting to belong to. If properly managed, it need neither be a Temple of Tragedy nor a Temple of Dullness, but a Temple of Eclectic Art. When the Comédie Française had reached its lowest ebb in 1848, Prince Napoleon, afterwards Napoleon III., sent M. Arsène Houssaye, a young man, to clear out the Augean stable and save the institution from bankruptcy. He overcame the opposition of the hide-bound conventionalists, and, calling to his aid all the available dramatic authorship of France, soon had full houses and rising receipts. We believe that a purely eclectic Art Theatre, well managed, would have little need for endowment, except to provide against a run of ill-luck. It is a strange thing that the necessary capital seems so hard to come by. Only the other day we learned that several of our dramatists were so well off that defalcations of many thousands in the fees which should have been paid them by an agent were not even missed. Every week we read of great sums of money being invested in rubber companies and oil companies, and bequeathed to dubious charities and missions to the heathen. If there is a national demand for a National Theatre, it would appear that it only requires that the scheme shall inspire confidence, that the list of directors shall be sufficiently famous, and that the objects and intentions of the promoters shall be clearly and exactly defined for the necessary sum to be soon secured. And then the only difficulty will be to eliminate the unpractical persons and the "idealogues," whose influence, if predominant, would be fatal.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

An interesting programme was forthcoming at the students' concert on Wednesday evening, March 23. Miss Katie Deslandes and Mrs. Pearce played a pianoforte duet, "Impromptu—Rococco" (Schütt); and Miss Beryl Cremer (pupil of Mme. Waldahoff) was very successful in her mandoline solo, Adagio and Rondo, from De Beriot's Ninth Concerto. In three songs of Dvorák, "Hear my prayer, O Lord, my God!" "God is my shepherd," and "I will sing new songs of gladness," Miss Muriel Clark did the composer most justice in the last-named. A Russian student of the school, Master Louis Godowski, only eight years old, gave a really wonderful performance of the First Movement from Viotti's Violin Concerto in A minor. Not an easy task to play from memory such a long movement, with its unaccompanied cadenza; but, apart from this, the little fellow's tone and execution were remarkable, and the audience gave the extremely youthful performer three enthusiastic recalls. Mr. Gerald French sang ably "Where'er you walk," from Handel's "Semele"; while Miss Helen S. Gall, L.G.S.M., proved herself a clever pianist in Chopin's Berceuse and Staccato study (Rubenstein), Miss Gall being particularly happy in her rendering of the study. To do justice to the dramatic air, "Revenge! Timotheus cries," from "Alexander's Feast" (Handel) requires a Santley, but Mr. Reginald Barnes displayed much intelligence. Miss Gladys McAuslane's violin solo, Adagio from Concerto in G minor (Max Bruch), was a pleasing item in the programme; and Miss Connie Cowderoy and Miss Elsie Darby were associated with good results in a duet for two pianofortes, Andante and Scherzettino (Chaminade). Miss Mabel Turk was set down for Spohr's song, "Rose softly blooming," once such a favourite air of Miss Mary Davies; and the concert finished with a scene from Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet, Miss Muriel Deighton appearing as Romeo and Miss Dorothy G. B. Walker as Juliet. Miss Jenny Hyman accompanied.

A well-arranged dinner and smoker was held in the Horse and Jockey Hotel, Mansfield, in connection with the staffs of the Mansfield and District Theatres, Ltd. This was the first of what is hoped will be a long series of successful staff dinners. The principal guests present included, amongst others, Mr. Harry Josephs and Mr. Dickie Clare. Dr. Wordsworth was in the chair, supported by Mr. Mark Lorne (manager Sutton King's Theatre) and Mr. Fred Clayton (assistant-manager at the Grand). A wire was received from Captain Clayton at Pau—where the Captain is rapidly becoming an expert flyer under the tuition of M. Blériot—expressing regret at his inability to be present. Songs were rendered by Mr. Horace Wilton (Conservative agent) and Mr. Dickie Clare, and a monologue from The Merchant of Venice by Mr. Harry Josephs was very well received. Mr. Alec Toole received some applause for a spirited little recitation. Everyone present was pleased, and a hearty vote of thanks was given to the proprietor, Mr. Jas. Alston, and his wife, for their kind attention and hospitality.

In a paragraph which we printed last week we stated that Where is William? would be played for the first time in London at the Fulham Theatre on Monday last. It should have read "Monday, April 11."

Mrs. Cassidy has given to the stage a number of plays which have enjoyed a large measure of success, and there is every reason to believe that her latest, under the above title, will be added to the list of those which have caught public favour. The story is a deeply-interesting one, there is an abundance of good comedy, and the manner of staging is well up to Mr. J. Rice Cassidy's high standard.

The play opens in the grounds of Duke Sergius, heir to the throne of Slavonia, where we find Captain Allen Armstrong, who has arrived in his yacht, demanding to know the whereabouts of his daughter, who has been betrayed by the Duke. The latter denies all knowledge of her, whereupon the Captain seizes the nobleman's little girl, whom he hands to members of his crew to carry to the yacht. Several soldiers arrest Armstrong, who is branded and sent to prison. The scene then changes to the rockbound coast of Northumberland, and here the Hon. Algernon Fitzhugh, an English soldier, is found bemoaning his bad luck and contemplating suicide. He is prevented from doing so by a retired mariner named Abraham Bolton, who, living near the spot, is always ready to assist vessels in distress or shipwrecked crews. Shortly afterwards a ship is lost on the coast, and a little girl is washed ashore, she being afterwards identified as the Duke's stolen child, who had been brought to England in Armstrong's unfortunate yacht. The old mariner named her Seaweed, and placed her in a foundling institution.

In the next act we find Armstrong, having served a number of years' imprisonment by order of the Duke, has reached London, where he opens an inquiry office with the object of finding his daughter, Fitzhugh being his assistant. The Duchess Olga, now divorced from the Duke, is one of the applicants, she being in search of her stolen child, who is heir to the throne of Slavonia. Seaweed is eventually traced, and on being questioned declares her remembrance of playing in a pretty garden and being taken on board a ship by several sailors, at the same time recognising Armstrong as the man who seized her. The Duchess thereupon accepts the maiden, and determines to take her back home, but she resolves to only return with Fitzhugh, Bolton, and Armstrong. Meanwhile the Duke attempts to bring about a marriage with Bolton's daughter, in order to have an heir to the throne, and, after some hesitation, she accompanies him to Slavonia, where we find King Olgar much disturbed through the nobles quarrelling over the disappearance of the Duke, Duchess, and the missing heir. Sergius, with a view to appease the King, asks for a loving cup, and into it drops poison. The King, taking the first taste, speedily succumbs, but when dying declares Seaweed the rightful heir, requesting that she shall marry Fitzhugh. After a civil war between two sections of the nobles the Duke is killed, and the Princess proclaimed Queen.

Mr. J. Rice Cassidy held the part of the gallant Fitzhugh to the general satisfaction, some of his witticisms being richly enjoyed; Mr. Tom Royden was a sufficiently villainous Duke; Mr. Villiers Stanley stood out with much prominence as the distressed Armstrong, and played with a deal of dramatic strength; Bolton was in the good hands of Mr. David Douglas, who did every justice to it; Miss M. Cameron looked well and acted with care as Maggie Bolton; Mr. Edward Lowrie lent great support as Michael Ichon; Miss Ada Roscoe made a capital Duchess; and Mrs. J. Rice Cassidy, who had many opportunities for showing her well-known talents, took every advantage of them, and delighted her audience, and she was undoubtedly a great favourite. The rest of the cast gave worthy help, and the crowded house on Monday night entered into the spirit of the new play with much enthusiasm.

During the special performance at the benefit of Mr. Lester Collingwood, the proprietor of the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, the members of the company presented to Mr. W. T. Guest, the acting-manager, a handsome gold watch, Mr. Cull Pitt, on behalf of his confrères, speaking in warm terms about the genial "Billy."

At the time of writing Mr. Lester Collingwood's Aladdin pantomime is still running merrily, and there will be general regret in Birmingham to-night (Saturday) when the curtain will ring down for the last time upon the production. Aladdin has broken all records, despite keen competition and the General Election.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine" was performed at Wallack's Theatre on the 18th ult., by a company of children whose ages ranged from seven to fifteen years. All the scenes and properties of the regular production were used, and the youngsters were perfect in their parts. Not one of them had stage fright, but all had mastered their cues and "business" thoroughly. There were roars of laughter and frequent bursts of applause, as well as curtain calls innumerable. A charitable institution was benefited by the performance to the extent of 3,300 dollars.

The Ben Greet Players recently appeared at the Garden Theatre, New York, in Everyman, She Stoops to Conquer, and The Rivals, the first-mentioned play being performed for the 1,000th time in America. Praise is due to Miss Beatrice Irwin for her excellent enunciation and highly intelligent rendering of the exacting title-rôle of this remarkable play. On the 18th ult. Dr. Faustus, by Christopher Marlowe, was preformed for the first time. Marlowe's play was written during the sixteenth century, and it was produced at the Garden Theatre in the Elizabethan style. Only one scene was shown. The play was carefully acted, with Mr. Sayer Crawley in the title-rôle and Mr. Robert Whitworth as Mephistopheles.

Miss Grace George appeared at the Grand Opera House, Chicago, on the 14th ult., in a new comedy called Mrs. Partner, by Thompson Buchanan. As Cicely Hamilton Miss George impersonated a "distinctly modern young woman" with plenty of brains, but without the opportunity of using them. She loves her husband, but he fails to understand her. He is young and equally in love with her, but utterly absorbed in business. How his wife tries to help him, nearly ruins him, and finally saves him, is told in three acts. Miss George's company includes Messrs. Aubrey Smith, Jack Standing, Frederick Esmelton, Charles Stanley, Reginald Carrington, Henry Miller, junior, Mrs. Clay Clement, Miss Carolyn Kenyon, Miss Ruth Benson, and Miss Louise Rial.

"THE RAVEN'S CRY."

Romantic Drama, in Three Acts, by D. Janitech, Produced at the Strand Theatre on Tuesday, March 29.

Ali Pasha ..... Mr. E. H. Brooke
Mustafa Pasha ..... Mr. A. Llewellyn
Ibraim Pasha ..... Mr. Fred Sampson
Milan of Toplitza ..... Mr. Philip Cuningham
Raiko ..... Mr. Harry Paulton
Bilkill Pasha ..... Mr. Charles Weir
Zulieka ..... Miss Marie Polini
Selim Bey ..... Mr. Langhorne Burton
Alija Bey ..... Mr. Jerrold Robertshaw
A Messenger ..... Mr. Albert Wainwright
Fatima ..... Miss Pollie Marshall
Milosh ..... Mr. George De Lara
A Musician ..... Mr. J. M. Watson
Vlatko ..... Mr. E. H. Brooke
Zorka ..... Miss Ivy Williams
A Monk ..... Mr. Charles Goodhart
A Peasant ..... Mr. Jocelyn Hope

The Raven's Cry, performances of which have been given this week at the Strand Theatre in aid of the Hairdresser Victims of the Parisian floods, is a simple, straightforward melodrama, with a plain and continuous plot, and distinct and well-defined characters. Though not without occasional absurdities, it held the interest of the audience from commencement to conclusion, having the advantage of being excellently acted.

The hero—and he is a hero in every sense of the word—is Milan of Toplitza, a tall warrior, and a "man of his hands." Milan is a Serb, and while on a mission to the Sultan Murat at Adrianople, he is asked by that magnate to become a Turk and the Soldier of the Crescent. Milan indignantly refuses, and the Turkish soldiers bar every outlet from the apartment. Then a comic servant of Milan's, named Raiko, suddenly enters the room by means of a secret panel, and leads his master to comparative safety. Milan, without revealing his identity to a certain Bilkill Pasha, his host, has won the affections of the Pasha's daughter Zulieka. Toplitza appears to be received by Bilkill as a Turk; and, in company with the villain of the play, Alija Bey, and the Pasha's son Selim, the hero starts in pretended pursuit of Milan, on whose head a heavy price has been placed. When the trio come to a convenient spot, Milan declares his identity, and easily overcomes Alija, who attacks him. The hero then turns to deal with Selim, and Alija tries to stab him in the back, but fails, and Milan easily escapes.

In the next act, Milan arranges with Zulieka that they shall elope at midnight, the signal for their departure being an imitation of the cry of a raven. But their plans are discovered, and Milan is arrested and thrown into a dungeon with his faithful follower. Toplitza, who is very strong, breaks his chains and those of Raiko; and Selim, who has conceived a regard for Milan, finding remonstrance with his father useless, comes to the dungeon, sets the captives free, and enables them and Zulieka to escape.

The last act takes place in Servia on the Turkish border. Selim arrives and entreats the Servians to go to the rescue of Milan, who is hotly pursued by the Turks; Bilkill Pasha, who appears on the scene of action, is recognised by his brother, a Servian monk, as a renegade from Christianity, who became a Mohammedan for love of a woman; Alija Bey, who also ventures on to Servian soil, is promptly slain by Raiko; and there remains no obstacle to the lovers' happiness. A spirited embellishment of this last act was a song, words by D. Janitsch, music by J. Michael Watson, entitled "The Blind Musician's Song." It ran:—

"Farewell to the chivalrous days of the past,
Farewell to the glory of many a fight,
Farewell to the banners that waved in the blast,
A sadder farewell to my precious lost sight!
Hurrah! for the glory of the war,
Which lights up the soul as a star,
The glorious frays
Of those grand old days
—are now afar.

The victor's rich palm, oh, how glorious to wear,
With laurels outlasting the spite of old time!
The clash of the sword and the trumpet's wild flare
Are emblems so noble to youth in its prime.
Hurrah, &c.

The sword and the triumphs of war are now flown,
And I in old age have a battle with years,
But memory's seeds in my heart deep are sown,
And they will be water'd by my constant tears!"

Hurrah, &c.

The air was very spirited and martial, and the effect of the chorus was exhilarating.

Mr. Philip Cuningham's commanding and athletic figure well fitted him to represent the bold fighter, Milan of Toplitza, and he played the part in just the right vein of flamboyant freedom and exuberant energy. Miss Marie Polini was a pretty and expressive Zulieka, and acted with feeling and intelligence. The rich, ripe drollery of Mr. Harry Paulton gave a racy flavour to his quaint representation of Raiko; and Mr. Jerrold Robertshaw as Alija Bey was as crafty and treacherous a rascal as could be imagined. Mr. Langhorne Burton acted with straightforward earnestness as Selim Bey; and Mr. George de Lara was firm and direct as the stout soldier, Milosh, Mr. Charles Goodhart making a stalwart and serious Monk. Mr. Fred Wilson gave a clever representation of the Sultan Murat; Mr. E. H. Brooke doubled the parts of Ali Pasha and Vlatko effectively; and Mr. A. Llewellyn and Mr. Fred Sampson were efficient as Mustafa and Ibraim. Mr. Charles Weir gave a thoughtful and pathetic performance of Bilkill Pasha; and Miss Pollie Marshall played Zulieka's attendant creditably. The minor characters and the crowd were worthy of commendation. The piece was well dressed and satisfactorily mounted.

MORE COINCIDENCES.

Sir,—Referring to Mr. Freeman's letter in your last issue, nearly thirty years ago Mr. Alfred Stanton produced a piece called Fifty Fatty at the Theatre Royal, North Shields. The play was founded on local facts, and the same subject as Mr. J. Pitt Hardacre's The Prodigal's Welcome. I have heard the story of Fifty Fatty several times when visiting North Shields.—Yours faithfully, T. LIONEL ELLIS.

"Beethoven," by René Fauchois, with Mr. Donald Robertson in the title-rôle, will be produced at the New Theatre, New York, on April 11. The play will not be acted by the regular company, as the latter is going on tour. Mr. Robertson is a Scotsman who has been appearing for several seasons in classical and other dramas at the Art Institute in Chicago.

Extravagant praise of actors is by no means of modern date. Betterton was compared to a "stately spreading oak which stands fixed, environed round with brave young growing flourishing plants;" and Dryden, alluding to him, when old, in a prologue, says:

"He, like the setting sun, still shoots a glimm'ring ray,
Like ancient Rome, majestic in decay."

The acting of children in adult characters is of very ancient date. Salathiel Savy, a boy who died in his thirteenth year, was so amiable an actor of old men that Ben Jonson in his elegant epitaph on him, says the Fates thought him one, and therefore cut his thread of life.

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

"ROBINS ENDE."

Comic Opera, in Two Acts, by E. Künnecke, Produced at the Komische Oper on March 23.

Charles II. ..... Herr Holsapfel
Robinson ..... Herr Hofbauer
Katharine ..... Fraulein David
Glutton ..... Herr Mantler
Randolf ..... Herr Arnster
Edelmann ..... Herr Ryan
Williams ..... Herr Kreuder
Bauer ..... Herr Distrjon
Offizier ..... Herr Thomasberg

(from our own correspondent.)

BERLIN, Thursday, March 30.—The composer of this merry little work is a beginner, but with such obvious talent that there is little doubt as to his future. Robins Ende is a charmingly bright and taking composition, in the style of the ever-popular Merry Wives of Windsor, which Herr Künnecke probably took as his model. The book is excellent; it is by Herr Maximilian Morris, and the action passes in Merry England in the days of gay King Charles. Robinson—a farmer in Cornwall—known by all his friends as "Robin," is in possession of an extremely pretty wife, Katharine, whom he dearly loves, but of whom he is passionately jealous. Katharine, before her marriage, was an assistant in a fashionable London shop, and there was once seen by the King, who immediately lost his heart to her. Katharine resists her Sovereign's wiles; but now the King comes to Cornwall to hunt, and finds her as Robin's wife—a circumstance which in no way hinders his making love again. Seeing, however, that she is devoted to her husband and he has no chance, King Charles generously decides to give up the quest. He has been on a secret visit to Katharine, but is about to say farewell, when Robin is heard returning home. To save her own and her Sovereign's honour, Katharine conceals her visitor in a cupboard. This happens to be the cupboard in which Robin had concealed Glutton, his steward, with instructions to observe Katharine's doings. The steward has slipped out, but Robin opens the cupboard and discovers the King, whom he does not at first recognise. Terribly enraged, Robin is about to kill the incautious monarch, but says he will let him off if the King will promise to make him Duke of Cornwall. King Charles gives the promise in writing, and makes his escape. Robin brags about his newly-acquired rank to the villagers, who think him mad, and is in the same moment led away to death by the King's guards. Poor Robin feels his end is come. Blindfolded, he is taken to what he believes is the gallows, but in reality the King takes a generous revenge. Robin is conducted instead to his own house again, and when the bandage is removed he sees his Sovereign awaiting him to greet the "Duke of Cornwall." Pretty Katharine is now a Duchess, and all ends happily. The music suits the text exactly; it is vivacious and full of pleasing melody. The interpretation was capital, and the reception most cordial. Herr Morris, the head stage-manager, who is also responsible for the book, mounted the work with his usual good taste.

The Lustspielhaus produced a couple of novelties last week—Die goldene Freiheit, by Cosmo Gordon Lennox, very well translated by Dr. Lothar, and Des Versöhnungsfest, a one-act comedy, by Rudolf Presber, the latter piece serving as a curtain-raiser to the longer work. Both met with a cordial reception, and are still running.

Frau Agnes Sorma, who is prolonging her season at the New Schauspielhaus, appeared in a novelty for Berlin on Easter Sunday. It was a serious play by Dr. Henri de Rothchild, entitled Die Rampe. The tragic story of Madelaine Grandier, who becomes an actress because she loves an actor, and who, after bitter disappointments and disillusions, takes poison, is certainly known to your readers, the piece having been given for some time in Paris. Frau Sorma acted the rôle with her usual discretion and charm, and was excellently supported by Herr Christians in the part of Claude Bourgneil.

At the Hebbel Theatre Hermann Reichenbach's drama Ketten was revived during the holidays after a long interval. It made its customary deep impression, and the acting was convincing in the extreme. The tragic play forms a marked contrast to the sporting comedy Kavalliere, which is still drawing well, and filling the bill most nights of the week.

On Easter Monday Nicolai's Merry Wives of Windsor was given at the Royal Opera with a first-rate cast. The house was sold out long before the opening, and the audience included their Imperial Majesties, with four of their sons, and Princess Victoria Luise, who enjoyed the performance as much as anyone present.

The production of Mr. Arthur Nevin's Indian opera Poia at the Royal Opera is now definitely fixed for April 15.

The Council meeting of the Actors' Association was held on Tuesday, at 32, Regent-street. There were present Mr. Cyril Cattley (in the chair), Messrs. F. H. de Quincey, Robson Paige, Edward Morgan, H. Le Grand, Murri Moncrieff, Langford Reed, Leonard Shepherd, Lewis Casson, Miss Joan Pereira, and Mr. Young, secretary. The secretary read letters from Portland Ackerman, Philip Carr, Sylvia Grey, Alfred Farquhar, F. Pride, C. Hayden Coffin, and W. H. Mote. Mr. Cattley drew attention to the circulars notifying members that subscriptions were overdue. The secretary reported that over 200 circulars had already been sent out, and received instructions that the remainder should be sent during the present week. The secretary was directed to have a copy of the standard contract sent to each member of the Council, asking for suggestions or alterations in time for the matter to be fully discussed at the Council meeting of April 12. This was proposed on the motion of Mr. Casson, seconded by Mr. De Quincey, and carried unanimously. The secretary reported re telephone contract, which was renewed as before on the existing terms.

The Finance Committee's report was read by Mr. Cattley, and adopted. The following members of the Association were proposed, seconded, and elected:—Gladys Everard, proposed by Irene Monchieff, seconded by K. Maynard; Kate Lang, proposed by Orlando Barnett, seconded by Walter Russell; Elizabeth Lang, proposed by Walter Russell, seconded by Orlando Barnett; Aubrey Percival, proposed by F. Pennington Gush, seconded by Mabel Durant; Robert Laurence, proposed by Charles Boult, seconded by Franc Stoney; Nellie Morris, proposed by Ada Hatchwell, seconded by Sylvia Morris; A. E. Holland, proposed by H. Louis Wilson, seconded by Paul Beckett; and H. C. Barnard Stacey, proposed by Charles Boult, and seconded by F. McLellan. Miss Mary Dibley was nominated (proposer Mr. Cyril Cattley, seconder Mr. Orlando Bennett). The secretary was instructed to notify the members of the Finance and House Committees as to the next meetings of those committees, and ask that their report should be submitted at the next meeting of the Council.

We regret to have to announce the death, which took place on the 22nd ult. at Salford, of Mr. Joseph Green, aged forty-seven, who was stage-manager at the Regent Theatre, Salford, during the whole time the theatre has been open—i.e., from September, 1892, and consequently widely known to the profession. The fact that matters were managed behind the curtain so smoothly during the whole time—sometimes variety and at others legitimate—speaks volumes for the businesslike manner of his work, and many artists will miss him.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Mr. Walter Gibbons, speaking to the Referee interviewer regarding the recently formed amalgamation, ridicules the idea of a war between managers. The "merging" mood, according to him, has infected the directors of the Syndicate halls, with a possible extension of the interests of the "combination of peace" to the houses governed by the Variety Theatres Consolidated and to other outlying suburban halls.

The decision to avoid cut-throat competition is not new, and it needs no great prevision to discern the folly of overcrowding the suburbs with variety theatres. Therefore, one need not insist on the wisdom of the pact that has been agreed upon between the different circuits not to build against each other within three miles in the metropolitan area and five miles in the provinces. Like Mr. Alfred Butt, Mr. Gibbons is of opinion that so long as an artist is a draw, the highest salaried is the cheapest. The new combine will be distinguished by "Butts, and Becks, and Wreathed Smiles."

To inquire whether music-hall trusts will be easily acclimatised in this country is to inquire too curiously. The possibilities of what might be termed an Imperial scheme covering the hemispheres are not so remote as one might suppose when one thinks of the growing popularity of variety in the South African Confederation, the Republic of Australia, and the Dominions of Canada and New Zealand.

Miss Ada Reeve, now appearing at the London Hippodrome, is a very much-sought-after young lady at the moment of writing. Theatre proprietors in America, Australia, and South Africa are each vigorously endeavouring to be the first to get her to sign contracts to appear with them at the conclusion of a Moss-Stoll tour in August next.

Cables have been very busy during the past few days, and the latest offer is from the Pat Casey office of New York offering Miss Reeve no less a sum than $2,500 per week for the twenty weeks' inclusive engagement. Naturally Mr. Louis de Reeder, of 24, Buckingham-street, Strand, Miss Reeve's sole representative, is encouraging these agents in far-off climes to outbid one another.

Mr. Seymour Hicks and Ellaline Terriss, who return to the Coliseum on Monday in a new sketch, interpolated with songs, entitled Cook's Man, have parts peculiarly suited to their personalities. Mr. Stanley Brett supports his brother and sister-in-law in the sketch To add still more variety there are the Marco Twins, comedians, the Elite Harmony Boys, the Brothers Bright, athletes, Norman Telma, in billiards extraordinary, Tiller's Eight Chicquettes, dainty dancers, Chas. Lewis, ventriloquist, Lina Verdi, in song and mimicry, and the Miles-Stavordale Quintette, with their banjoes.

Mme. Réjane, who arrived here on Friday, is no stranger to London. She played at the now defunct Imperial Theatre in May, 1902, and in later years at Terry's; but her most important engagement was when she opened the New Royalty as the Théâtre Français in London, for M. Gaston Mayer, with a performance of Edmond Pailleron's La Souris. She has had the honour of giving special performances before our Royal family, and on one occasion the very piece to be played at the Hippodrome was selected. Wherever the charming actress has appeared she has triumphed, and to-day she is gratefully remembered in France, Russia, Germany, Portugal, Spain, Greece, Italy, Ireland, and North and South America, while Kings and Queens have showered honours upon her.

The Czar invited her to take her company to the Imperial Theatre, St. Petersburg, and at the close of the performance presented her with a magnificent ruby. The German Emperor and Empress at Berlin received the fascinating artist in their royal box; and at Lisbon the late King of Portugal was so enchanted with her acting that he presented her with a pair of superb carriage mules, and it is hoped that she will bring these valuable animals to London. The Queen of Portugal, to mark her appreciation of Réjane's art, painted a water-colour picture for madame, and on the frame are the coat of arms of Portugal and of the Duchess of Dantzig, a great compliment to her acting of the title-rôle in Sardou's famous comedy Madame Sans-Gêne, who rose from the wash-tub to be the wife of a Marshal of France and a duchess. From the Queen of Portugal she also has a sapphire brooch.

Though the distinguished actress has been on the most friendly terms with so many rulers, she openly defied the Sultan of Turkey. Some time prior to his downfall Abdul commanded Réjane and her company of players to appear before him at the Yildiz Kiosk; but, in accordance with an Oriental custom, he offered a fee for madame only. She flatly refused to allow her colleagues to work for nothing, and, despite the remonstrance of the French Ambassador at Constantinople, she sailed away just at the moment when she should have been preparing to play for the head of Mohammedanism.

The invasion of the music halls by two at least of the most celebrated French actresses, Réjane and Bernhardt, clearly shows—says the Daily Telegraph—that across the Channel there is no prejudice even in the highest quarters against variety theatres. In this country, on the other hand, although a large number of leading artists have yielded to the fascinations of managers like Mr. Oswald Stoll and Mr. Alfred Butt, there are some who still turn a deaf ear to their proposals.

A prominent figure in the list is Miss Ellen Terry, who only the other day declared in the most emphatic terms, "Nothing would ever induce me to appear on the music-hall stage. It has, I know, been publicly stated more than once that I was thinking of doing so. But I give you my word that I never shall, never, never)" Miss Terry has a very settled conviction that actors do not show to advantage in a variety theatre. To be sandwiched in between past-masters of the art of music-hall entertaining really shows off an actor to ill-advantage

Miss Terry's opinion that music-hall artists are as out of place in a theatre as actors are in a music hall is open to question. Indeed, several of the most brilliant comedians came from the theatres—Albert Chevalier, James Fawn, Ada Reeve, and Louie Freear, to wit. Miss Terry's views are, to some extent, confirmed by a criticism just to hand relating to Mrs. Patrick Campbell, now appearing in vaudeville in the States. The paragraph runs as follows: "Mrs. Patrick Campbell met with a chilly reception at Philadelphia at Keith's Theatre. But some performing collie dogs were received with the most demonstrative enthusiasm. Such," philosophically comments the writer of the notice, "is life in vaudeville."

On Epsom Downs last Sunday a party, including Mr. Leo Fritz and Willie Edelsten, were having some really excellent racing on thoroughbreds when they had the pleasant experience of being approached by the Earl of Rosebery, an interested spectator of the capital finish of a five-furlong sprint, in which Leo Fritz was first, Sid Wood second, and Fred Lamport third. An objection was lodged for bumping and boring, and Leo Fritz was disqualified. His lordship offered to act as judge for the remainder of the racing.

The Hippodrome Palace of Varieties, Hastings, is announced for sale. The property will be offered at the Mart, Tokenhouse-yard, on Friday, May 27.

The tenure is freehold, and the house occupies a fine position on the main esplanade, facing the sea. The holding capacity is for 1,500, and the auditorium is equipped on the most up-to-date lines, with spacious promenades, foyer, saloons, and large open-air loggia overlooking the sea. The house is fully licensed and open to the public, but with vacant possession on completion of the purchase.

The Palace Theatre, Maidstone, Company give notice that all artists holding dates at that house after May 30, 1910, must send in their contracts for confirmation, as all contracts are cancelled on and after that date, the theatre having been leased to Mr. Ewart C. Potter, to whom communications with reference to future engagements must be addressed.

Mona and Douglas Connor, those clever little equestrians, have just completed a most successful engagement at the Tower Circus, Blackpool. They are engaged to appear there again at Whitsun.

The Elliott-Savonas are still on the Stoll tour, and meeting with great success all along the line in The Palace of Orpheus, a gorgeous spectacle, with stage effects costing £2,000. These artists are well known on practically every music-hall stage, and their reception wherever they go is always of the most cordial description. They go on Monday next to the Empire, Leeds.

As a slight misunderstanding has arisen in regard to a paragraph in this column chronicling the appointment of an under-manager at the Pavilion, Glasgow, we may explain that this was an addition to the staff there, and not a change. Mr. Ernest R. Foster, who is well known in the profession, is still, of course, the able and energetic assistant-manager at the Pavilion, and has been since Mr. Evan Good was appointed general-manager there.

Mr. Will White, the popular manager of the New Alhambra Theatre, Belfast, on Tuesday evening was the recipient of some valuable gifts From the directors of Alhambra and Entertainments, Ltd., he received a cheque for £50; from the Alliance Theatrical and Variety Agency, Ltd., Liverpool, a cheque for £25; and as a mark of esteem from friends and patrons of the theatre including 300 of the Royal Irish Constabulary, a magnificent single stone diamond scarf pin.

The presentation was made before a crowded house by Mr. Edwin Smith, general-manager of the Alliance Agency, Liverpool (formerly of the Parthenon and Haymarket, Liverpool), who travelled specially from the Mersey City for the purpose. Mr. White, in a neat speech, thanked his many patrons for their kindness, and at the same time expressed gratitude on behalf of Mrs White for the beautiful marble clock and ornaments which had been presented to that lady by the staff of the theatre.

One of the most attractive events of Eastertide was the concert held in the Empire, Nottingham, to augment the funds of the Nottingham Poor Boys' Camp Society, and on Good Friday, as usual there was a large attendance. The society has been in existence now for nineteen years, and from a small inception has grown considerably In its first year eight boys were sent to the seaside for a week, and now fifty are sent weekly, the total for last year being 650. During its existence the society has enabled 7,000 young people to enjoy a holiday at the seaside.

The concert on Good Friday night was held by permission of Mr. Oswald Stoll, and an excellent programme had been arranged Opening with an overture by the Empire orchestra, specially augmented for the occasion, it contained vocal and instrumental selections which were in every case heartily appreciated. During an interval thanks were given, on the initiative of Mr. G. H. Pochin to all who had contributed to the success of the concert. He specially mentioned the enthusiastic work of Mr. Albert C. Duncan, the acting manager of the Empire.

Miss Daisy Wood, the favourite comedienne, has made a tremendous success with her "Chantecler" song in the provinces. She wears a handsome costume, which has been designed by Mr. Will Goldston and made by A. W. Gamage, Ltd., of Holborn. The song has been written and composed by A. J. Mills and Bennett Scott, and is about to be published by the Star Music Publishing Co., Ltd., Cecil-court, Charing Cross-road W.C. Miss Daisy Wood opens at the Oxford at an early date.

A complimentary benefit to Mr. Geo. Dickinson, acting-manager of the Gaiety, Glasgow, was given at that house on Tuesday evening, when many friends rallied round him. The entertainment had a special character. Among the artists were the Marco Bros., who delighted with instrumental excerpts from popular operas; the Three Martynes in a fine dancing display; Benson and Brady, character comedians and dancers; the Royal Troupe of International Dancers; T. Dunlop, a favourite local comedian; Dolly Price; J. H. Maddock, an orchestra in himself; and other good turns. It was quite a gala night.

The new lessee of the Empire, Southend, is Mr B. Pareezer, a gentleman of considerable enterprise, whose career as an amusement caterer shows foresight and a seizing of golden opportunity. Mr. Pareezer, who has attained the half century, though his looks belie his age, was born in Poland, and spent the days of his youth in that most distressful country of Continental Europe.

Coming to England thirty-seven years ago Mr Pareezer has been connected with theatrical adventures for a quarter of a century. He has distinguished himself both on and off the stage; he has lectured on the various countries through which he has travelled. Like most educated natives of Poland he is an accomplished linguist. For some time past he has had the management of the New Royal Theatre, King's Lynn, where his work has been much appreciated by such local magnates as Sir William Ffolkes and Mr. Carlyon Bellairs. He has lately acquired the Marine Theatre, Lowestoft, and the Southend Empire is his latest acquisition. At his present rate of progress he should soon become the head of a Pareezer circuit.

Mlle. Gaby Deslys has confirmed the opinion formed of her when last at the Alhambra, and has scored an immediate success in Les Caprices de Suzette, in which she is ably supported by her companions MM. Carvey and Edgar Chatel. Next week at this house the programme will be considerably added to, among the new-comers being Coram, the ventriloquist, an old favourite here; the Balzars, who do "comedy conjuring"; and Matini and Bobby, with a canine assistant. Leipzig, an incomparable conjuror, and the Russian dancers, the Sisters Lewandowski, remain, and to give late diners a chance of seeing Mlle. Britta, in Our Flag, Mr. Alfred Moul has arranged that the patriotic ballet shall temporarily change places with The Polar Star.

Mr. Hymack, having concluded his third successful American season, has just returned to town to enjoy a short rest.

Mr. Morris Abrahams, general-manager of the Queen's, Poplar, is back again at his duties, after being absent owing to indisposition nearly three months

Miss Alexandra Dagmar, in new songs, new dresses, and bright and witty stories, has been scoring a great success on the Stoll tour. This week she opens at Sheffield for a twelve weeks' tour of the provinces.

Mr. Russell Wallett, his many friends will be glad to hear, is improving daily. The doctors look upon his case as almost a miracle. He feels well enough to start again, but will not be allowed to do so for a few weeks.

Miss Sable Fern, in her pretty scout scena, "Boys in Camp," has eclipsed her former triumphs. The novelty is written, composed, and produced by Frank Leo, who has always his finger on the public pulse. A notice of Boys in Camp appears in another column.

Victor Niblo and his wonderful talking and singing bird have proved such a success on the Continent that they have been re-engaged at almost every place they have appeared. They have proved quite a surprise to the Continental variety stage, and are now appearing at Mellini's Theatre, Hanover.

Princess D'Aryabi, in her original fantastic dancing scena, in which she wears some beautiful dresses, will commence a short provincial tour on Monday at the Hippodrome, Huddersfield. Owing to her enormous success she has been re-engaged for Syndicate halls through Mr. Tom Paccy's agency.

Mr. Ernest Shand can always oblige with a good yarn or two. He tells of a man who went into a bar, ordered a drink, and gulped it down with feverish haste. When asked by his friend what his hurry was, he said, "Oh, I've had 'em knocked over before."

Another country hotel incident. A loud-voiced individual, bragging of his experiences to a company of villagers in very pompous maner. To him at last a quiet individual in the corner, who had not hitherto spoken, addressed a question: "Has ta ivver had D.T.'s, mester?" to which the talkative and self-important one rejoined with a great show of indignation that he had not. "Ah, well," resumed the quiet man, "then thou's seen nowt."

The tragedy at the Camberwell Empire on Monday evening, when John Healy, a stage hand, was stabbed, by Thomas William Jesshope, through the heart with a shoemaker's knife, recalls a similar occurrence at the Canterbury, in June, 1889, when George Letine, the principal of a troupe of lady bicyclists, was mortally stabbed at the stage door of the Canterbury by a man named Nathaniel Currah

At his trial Currah was sentenced as a criminal lunatic, to be confined during Her Majesty's pleasure. The assassin attempted suicide. Currah's daughter, Beatrice, was a member of the Letine troupe, but died of consumption. It was her death that unhinged the father's mind.

Miss Gwennie Hasto, with her husband, Mr. Walter Emerson, returns to-day from Australia, after a long, most comfortable, and successful engagement with Mr. Harry Rickards. The popular couple start on Monday on the Bostock tour. Mr. Ernest de Vere has booked Miss Hasto up to 1914.

The Music Hall Ladies' Guild has lost an enthusiastic friend and worker by the death of Miss Belle Elmore (Mrs. H. H. Crippen) in California, on March 23. She held the position of honorary treasurer to the Guild for a number of years, but resigned from that position about two months ago in order to visit a friend in California.

The following gentleman have been drawn to play in the third round of the Vaudeville Club billiard handicap: Burt Shepard v. Carl Barello; Frank Glenister v. Hal Forde; S. Reed v. J. Stewart or W. Hanvarr; J. B. Holm v. D. Poole; Dave Carter or Leo Gordon v. Harry Weldon or Fred Russell.

Mr. Mark Sheridan, who was to have appeared at the Empire, Sunderland, last week, was unable to do so in consequence of medical advice. He is trying the rest cure, and this has prevented his appearance as one of the Easter company both at the Oxford and the Tivoli. "One of the boys" hopes to answer to his number next Monday.

There were 170 entries last week for the amateur carnival at the Bedford, and 130 of the competitors actually appeared. The winner was a Mr. Gimmel, a Scotch comedian, who has appeared at local smoking concerts as an amateur. Part of his reward is a six weeks' engagement on the Lucas tour. The winner of the first carnival, six years ago, is now well known as the artist, Tod Lowan.

Mr. Tom Wootwell is having a week's run round the South Coast, and now boasts of a complexion like a 'bus-driver, the weather being beautiful. He stopped on Wednesday at an hotel, miles from anywhere, and to his great surprise found Little Tich and Geo. Newburn there. They were having a run out and back from Portsmouth. Tom is playing the Canterbury on Monday, being the third week this year, and more to go.

The Lady of Colour (new style) will be introduced to English audiences at the Standard, Pimlico, on Monday by Miss Sadie Foote. As Antonia Cleopatra Higginbotham in the sketch of Muddled Model, specially written for her by Frank Price, this artist will appear as a real, high-toned lady of colour, and as she has a way of making the most of opportunities provided so plentifully by the author, there will be some original fun.

A record in return engagements may be claimed by Joe Wesley, who is playing his thirty-third engagement at the Britannia Theatre, Glasgow, the engagement running into fifty-one different weeks throughout twenty-one years, and under six different managers — namely, Rossborough, McGown, Kean, Hubner, Anderson, and Pickard. The Wesley Minstrels also hold the record of drawing the greatest houses at this hall. This was in Hubner's time.

According to American Exchanges, Mr. Martin Beck, who has just returned to New York after concluding his successful arrangements with Mr. Alfred Butt for a joint Anglo-American circuit, announces "a unique contest," by which he expects to procure "the best one-act play ever written for the variety stage." Of the number of pieces submitted, six, pronounced by the judges to be the best, are to be produced at the Actors' Fund Fair.

The visitors will then be invited to decide which of the half-dozen is entitled to the prize of £50 offered by Mr. Beck as the reward of the successful author. "In entering for the contest no writer," adds Mr. Beck, "loses his title to royalties. I will put the prize-winner on our circuit and pay him the usual weekly percentage. Never have the conditions for new authors been so auspicious The plays will be acted at the fair by the best actors and actresses in America from both the vaudeville and regular theatre."

Mr. T. Cavill, of Cavill's Agency, has taken over the Spread Eagle Hotel in Lambeth-road. He will be pleased to see all friends at any time.

John Clempert, who on Feb. 1, 1910, opened at the Palacio Novedades, Buenos Aires, South America, has become a hero in that town—not an easy matter for a British artist. At the beginning of his engagement he had a hard struggle, but as time passed people discovered his real ability.

Up to the present he has thwarted every effort made to bring about his defeat. He was challenged by a local boilermaker to escape from a specially-made tank, in which he was placed, with the lid riveted on. After a hard struggle he managed to make an escape in about twenty minutes, and was afterwards "shouldered" round the hall amidst great applause.

The most important point with regard to this escape was that Clempert (to prove that he was not assisted) made his escape suspended in the air in a small balloon in the centre of the building. After this triumph we are not surprised to learn that a syndicate are taking out Clempert on a six months' tour through Brazil and Rosario and other towns of note.

The orchestra at the Edmonton Empire, which is under the direction of Mr. Angelo Asher, was paid in full for Good Friday by Mr. Harry Bawn, whose kindly consideration has been highly appreciated in a year when in most halls salaries of staffs and orchestras have been deducted for the compulsory day off.

The Five Hunters have made a hit at the Camberwell Empire and the Granville in their refined drawing-room act, which has been well booked by their agents, Messrs. Somers and Warner, who are safe in recommending an act, both interesting and amusing, with real good singing, dancing, and music, and without the slightest taint of vulgarity.

Mr. Arthur Astill, the whistling ploughboy, who produced a new scena at the London Pavilion on Monday last, met with a flattering reception. He has had a special scene painted, depicting a typical farm and poultry yard, and cleverly imitates all kinds of birds, cattle, &c. His quick change from a ploughboy into immaculate evening dress is very smart.

Mr. S. W. Wyndham was obliged to cancel Devonport last week owing to throat trouble, but is now better, and delighting his audiences at Boscombe with his funny voice. S. W. Wyndham will be remembered as the pupil in The Professor and His Pupil, which he ran successfully for four and a half years. When he returns to town in August he will be seen at the Oxford.

Mr. Ben Woodger, Secretary of the Music Hall Home, desires to thank Mr. Percival Craig (Empire Theatre, Bradford) for Music Hall Home box collection of £3 1s.; Mr. Percy Ford (Empire Camberwell), 7s.; and Mr. Hughes ("Artichoke," Peckham-road), 5s. 3d. An important committee meeting will be held on Thursday next, April 7, at the Empire, Camberwell, at 12 noon.

Mr. Herbert Mack, the popular assistant acting manager of the Shepherd's Bush Empire, had a very welcome birthday present on Good Friday in the shape of a son and heir. It was certainly something of a coincidence that young Master Mack should arrive on the anniversary of his father's birthday, and it is good to be able to record that both mother and son are doing splendidly.

Mr. Neil Kenyon, the famous Scottish character actor, in an interview last week while at the Hippodrome, Greenock, stated that this is the first week he has ever played in theatre or music hall in his native town. He was delighted with his enthusiastic reception, the house being packed at every performance. At the conclusion of every performance he had to make a speech.

Talking of the great success of the Grand Theatre, Glasgow, pantomime, this year, Mr. Kenyon states that he never missed an entrance, and has never disappointed a Glasgow audience, whether in theatre or music hall. In the course of six years he has been engaged to play at over 1,000 performances, and never failed to appear. Only on three occasions was he unable to appear for charities, and then not through his fault. He is very proud of this record.

On the conclusion of his engagement at Greenock Mr. Kenyon left for London to rehearse at the Apollo for the new musical comedy, The Islander, to be produced about the middle of April, in which he takes the principal comedy part.

Mr. Bert Swan and Miss Marie Vesta, the original Bill Smith and 'Liza, will shortly produce a new and original coster episode entitled 'Liza's Wedding Day, in which they will introduce the donkey "Baby Answers," presented to them at the Hippodrome, Camden Town, on March 18 by the proprietors of the well-known weekly Answers.

La Belle Alva, who is appearing at the London Pavilion this week, has made quite a sensation with the pretty lightning effects in her dance scena, the most noticeable being the sunrise at the commencement of her English gipsy dance. During the past week she has given five different gipsy dances nightly, concluding with a speciality sand dance with bare feet. The act is very refined, and should go well ahead. La Belle Alva is booked for a term of years at the West-End halls.

We regret to announce the sudden death from heart disease of Edwin Faust, who passed away on March 8 at 242, West Forty-third-street, New York, at the age of 69. The deceased gentleman was born in London, and started in the profession at the early age of seven. He was the father of the original Faust Family of acrobats, and leaves a widow and large family. He was for many years in Australia.

The 652nd meeting of the executive committee of the M.H.A.R.A. was held on Wednesday at the offices, the following being present: Messrs. Harry Blake (in the chair), Jeff Vendome, John Alexander, J. H. Milburn, T. C. Callaghan, Harold Finden, and Jack Crawley. The weekly statement showed forty-three new members and a cash total of £54 4s. The Rochdale agent having resigned his position, Mr. Geo. Trichley, of the Old Clock Face Hotel, was appointed to the office. Mr. G. G. Hannan, of the River Inn, Dumfries, was also appointed an agent.

On behalf of the committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., Miss Melinda May, secretary, begs most gratefully to thank the following: Miss Maude Mortimer, collecting from Miss Harriet Vernon and Miss Kate Butler; Mr. Arthur Prince, Mr. Harry Ford, Mr. Reg. Bolton, Mr. Arthur Croxon, Mr. Leslie Race, and the Bros. O'Gorman, 16s.; Miss Louie Davis (Ward and Davis), 2s. 6d.; Mrs. C. C. Bartram, 5s. from Mr. Richard Pitrot, New York; and Mr. Oscholinski (of the Artists' Club), 5s.; Miss Jessie Star, collecting £1 2s. 2d.; Miss Edna Branston (Webb and Branston), result of Hoop-la, 9s.; Miss Lottie Albert, clothing; Miss Evelyn Mildred (Mortimer, Berks), useful clothing; Mr. Alec Barish, Liverpool, new suit and new boots; Sisters Macarte, baby's new clothing.

An American contemporary observes that with the ever-spreading craze for barefoot dancing there is a possibility of a slump in corn plasters.

A correspondent wants to obtain a humorous recitation—"At the Telephone" or a similar title—by Jerome K. Jerome, who himself forgets even the name of the publisher. Our readers may be able to inform us.

Mr. Fred Barnes is creating one of the greatest successes ever known at the Empire, Leeds, this week, with B. Feldman and Co.'s successful comedy song, "I'd rather be by the fireside," written and composed by the author-composer of their popular number, "Beside the seaside," J. Glover-Kind, and it may safely be predicted that the new song will be quite as successful, if it does not eclipse in popularity, its celebrated predecessor.

"The Gambler's Wife," a thrilling little sketch, produced at the Bedford with enormous success, is this week topping the bill at the Imperial Palace, Canning Town, where it is going bigger than ever Mr. Jack Fortescue, an actor well remembered for his portrayal of the Pope in The Eternal City, gives a clever performance as the villain, and is supported by Miss May Fortescue, Mr. H Scaddon, and Mr. R. Ainsworth.

By the death of Mrs. Elvira Mather, who passed away at her London residence on Good Friday, another link is lost from the fast-dwindling human chain which feebly connects the musical world of to-day with that of the Victorian era. As Miss Elvira Behrens, Mrs. Mather, when a young woman, enjoyed a most brilliant career as a contralto, singing with Sims Reeves, Charles Santley, and other vocal celebrities of her time. She is the mother of Miss Anna Mather, who has been recently supporting Mrs. Lewis Waller in sketches.

"The Rose of Sicily," a comic opera, of which the book, lyrics, and music are by George Sheldon, will be produced on Monday at the Empire, Camberwell. The fine cast will include Mr. Fred Eastman, Mr. Freddie French, Mr. Clifford Morgan, Mr. Algernon Newark, Mr. Milroy Cooper, and Miss Kathleen Starling. There will be a full operatic chorus and the Mayfair Girls, speciality dancers, will animate the scenes. The uniforms and dresses are designed and made by the well-known firm of John Hyman and Co., of Leicester-square.

The Rats' annual banquet at the Vaudeville Club on Good Friday was a joyous affair, as one who knows that hilarious crowd can easily believe. In the unavoidable absence of King Rat Mr. Charles Warren, the chair was taken at 7.30 p.m. by Prince Rat Harry Tate, who was supported by Messrs. W. H. Clemart, Arthur Reece, Fred Russell, Papa Brown, Dave O'Toole, Burt Shepard, William Lee, Felice Napoli, Bob Leonard, Cliff Ryland, Charles Mildare, George D'Albert, and Arthur Carlton. Toast, song, and jest sped the happy hours till morning. The Water Rats in Manchester gave a banquet and social evening on Good Friday.

Mr. Ernest Shand, who returned to the Tivoli on Monday, was in Manchester recently, and there achieved the remarkable feat of appearing at twenty-eight performances and singing no fewer than seventy-one songs in one week. It happened thusly:—Mr. Shand was in the company at the Manchester Hippodrome giving two shows a night and three matinées. It so happened that the headliner at the Ardwick Empire was ill, and couldn't work, so Shand was called upon to deputise twice nightly there. The odd performance was made up by a single benefit appearance at the Palace Theatre.

The favourite artist is an enthusiastic fisherman, and his fondness for the "gentle art" nearly cost him his life only a few weeks ago. It happened on the Tay at Dunkeld, just below Birnam Woods, mentioned in Macbeth. Mr. Shand was angling for salmon from a boat, with an old boatman for sole companion. Absorbed in his occupation, the comedian took little notice when a big lump of ice came swirling down the river, and struck the boat with a bump.

The boatman even took no notice for some time, but on looking lazily round, his tranquil expression gave place to a look of terror and amazement, "Look, look!" he almost screamed. Turning, Mr. Shand beheld an amazing and an awe-inspiring spectacle. The river had been frozen up-stream during the severe weather, and a sudden thaw had loosened the ice. The effect was just as though a huge wall of ice was relentlessly advancing upon the boat. The boatman pulled for dear life towards the shore, and land was reached just as the great floe passed the spot where the boat had been moored. A very narrow squeak! They had a 15lb. salmon in the boat.

Mr. Louis S. Sterling was initiated into the mysteries of the Terriers' Order on Sunday last. The cermony was performed by Terrier George Cooper, W.T., assisted by Terrier Harry Bent, P.W.T. Terrier Arthur Were officiated as organist. Messrs. Sydney Tolfree and Billy Day have successfully passed the ballot as candidates for membership of the Terriers' Association.

The election of Vice-Presidents and committee of the Terriers' Association has resulted as follows:—Active members; Vice-Presidents.—Terriers Ben Obo, Jim Obo, John Alexander, T. C Callaghan, Tom Packer, W. L. Murray, W. H. Atlas, Harry Conlin, and Harry Bent. Committee.—Terriers Ben Woodger, Ted E. Box, Andie Caine, Signor Borelli, George Cooper, Ernest D'Almaine, Ben Whiteley, A De Brean, Albert Voyce, Tom Maxwell, W. Wisper, Robert Abel, William Welsh, Horace Wheatley, Walter Norman, Ted Karno, Fred Neiman, Harry Gribben, W. Kloof, F. W. Millis, Jas. E. Dunedin, George Smythson, Arthur Gallimore, Fred Larola, T. Burnetti, Bert Olrac, H. Cee Mee, W. E. Gillin, Jock Miller, and Frank Gee. Honorary members: Vice-Presidents.—Terriers G. P. R. Burgess, Harry Gage, and S. N. Salter. Committee.—Terriers Douglas White, Jesse Sparrow, C F. Gage, Major H. Gastrell, M.P., H. Cory Woodrow, Fred A. Hooper, Percy Ford, E. B. M. Frost, Barney Hyams, and A. N. Hennessy Terrier Harry Barnard has been elected Honorary Treasurer of the Association.

The officers for the month of April are as follows:—Terriers Harry Gribben, W.T., H. Cee Mee, V.T., T. C. Callaghan, W.D., Fred A. Hooper, Y.B, C. C. Cornish, W.I., Arthur Were, Organist.

A ladies' concert will be held at the Three Stags Hotel, Kennington, on Sunday next, at 8.30 p.m. Terrier Ernest Hall has been appointed musical director.

Terrier Griff offers a gold medal for the best suggestion as to increasing the attendances at the Sunday meetings. Terriers are invited to forward suggestions in writing to the Secretary as soon as possible. All letters should be marked "Competition."

Arrangements are being made to hold a banquet at the Hotel Boulogne, Gerrard-street, W., to celebrate the return home of the President, Terrier Griff. Terriers and their friends may attend this function. Sunday, May 29, will probably be the date. Seats may now be booked of the Secretary, Arthur Were. Full particulars will be forwarded to all Terriers in due course. Terrier Griff suggests that all Terriers who advertise in the variety papers should put "I'm a Terrier" at the top of their advertisement.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

Mr. Harry Lauder, both at the Tivoli and at the Euston Palace, has been demonstrating nightly the wonderful grip he has on the affections of his audiences, and they speedily made themselves possessors of his first chorus number, "Queen among the heather," which has already been published by Messrs. Francis and Day. The aforementioned audiences, not content with appropriating the singer's second item, "Breakfast in your bed on Sunday morning," likewise took away with them the rousing refrain of "Every laddie loves a lassie," a song in which the chuckling Scot relates with great gusto certain happenings at a picnic where a score of Caledonia's fair daughters graced the scene.

A great comedian and a great humorous idea embodied in a comic song deserves being published by a great publishing house, and the three things synchronised on Wednesday, when Mr. Wilkie Bard's new song, "You are my girlski (Vodka Pop-off)" was secured for publication by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter. It is by George Arthurs and Worton Daniel. Mr. Bard also again scores greatly in the same writers' "I'm waiting here for Kate," and likewise "When the bugle calls," which bears the hall-mark of Frank Leo. Of course, it is well-known that these two triumphs of the art of song-writing are also issued by Messrs. Francis and Day.

Mr. George Lashwood is delighted with his new song, "All along the line," a ditty not altogether unconnected, we understand, with the railway. The song, which is by Fred W. Leigh and George Arthurs, is in the press, having been accepted by Messrs. Francis and Day.

Fred Elton returns to town on Monday to show once again that as author-composer, as executant, and as vocalist he can more than hold his own in any company. He will be heard in those favourite songs, "The butterfly and the rose," "If you want a ray of sunshine in your home," and "Kate; or, one little name that's impressed on my memory." All three songs are published by Messrs. Francis and Day.

Mr. Fred Barnes and his "Scapegrace of the family" have loomed large in the public eye during the week now ending at the Empire, Leeds, and the song, which he himself wrote and composed, and which is published by Messrs. Francis and Day, is commanding a ready sale and deservedly. Mr. Barnes is said to be negotiating for the sole rights of a chorus song which will be bad to beat, and which is from the pen of H. F. Greenfield.

Miss Flora Cromer, whose name on a bill is a sure cure for worry and care, has just published with Messrs. Francis and Day a song, entitled "Lilac, laburnum, and may," which is from the joint pens of Paul Pelham and J. P. Long.

At the Playhouse, where Tantalising Tommy is drawing large houses, Mr. John Ansell's fine orchestra has been heard nightly to greatest advantage in Messrs. Francis and Day's charming Cinderella intermezzo.

Miss Madge Temple, at the Chelsea Palace, has been again justifying her reputation as a consummate artist to her finger-tips, and has nightly been rewarded by the applause which is rightly her due. "I'm looking for Mr. Wright" is one of the Francis and Day's items which exercises a peculiar fascination over the patrons of this fine hall, judging by the manner in which they assist the fair singer during the course of the refrain. But many people when they hear a great chorus melody cannot help joining in.

Many new songs have been secured by Messrs. Francis and Day during the past few days, among them being "What you can do—do," by Arthur du Soir and John Neat; "Let's have a day with the ladies," by Terry Sullivan and Harry Carlton; "Barrers in the Walworth-road" (sung by Mr. Alec Hurley), by Fred Murray and Charles Hilbury; "I'm giving my hand to another," by Percy Edgar and Henry E. Pether; "My little maid of Genoa," by R. P. Weston, Fred J. Barnes, and Maurice Scott; and "Only one girl at a time" (Mr. George D'Albert), by Herbert Rule and James McGee.

A new singer will appear at the Empire, Camberwell, on Monday, whose name is Mr. John Trevallion, and who is stated to possess a tenor voice of wonderful sweetness. He will be heard in the song from the pen of Henry E. Pether, which has been published some time under the title of "The playground in the sky." It has enjoyed a great sale as a "sixpenny pop," being issued by Messrs. Francis and Day in that form some time ago.

It is to be doubted whether Frank Leo has ever done anything finer than Boys in Camp, the song scena with which his talented wife Miss Sable Fern has riveted attention at every house at which she has been lately appearing, and which concludes at the Hippodrome, Rotherhithe, this (Saturday) evening. The songs, entitled "Teach the rising generation," "Smile and keep a-whistling (that's the motto of the good boy scout)," "When the camp fire's burning brightly," "Always be prepared," and "It's the boy of to-day that the Empire must depend on" have all the true ring, and the whole deserves the popularity it is winning and cannot fail to win. Miss Fern has numerous and good support.

Miss Hilda Elen, the niece of the eminent coster comedian of that name, has been secured by Messrs. Adeler and Sutton for twenty weeks during the season forthcoming. This bright soubrette has made a great impression the last two summers at Ramsgate and Tankerton-on-Sea.

"LES CAPRICES DE SUZETTE."

Sketch, in Three Scenes, Produced at the Alhambra Theatre on Monday, March 28.

Mlle. Gaby Deslys appeared at the Alhambra on Monday in what was practically a miniature musical play, the action occasionally ceasing to allow of the introduction of some agreeable songs. The idea of Les Caprices des Suzette is the nostalgie de la boue. Suzette, a street flower-seller, meets a gentleman named Henri, who—strange to say, for we are in Paris—courts her "for the good motive," which is also that which influences Suzette's cousin, François, a newspaper vendor. In the second scene, we find Suzette married to Henri, and living in luxury; but she cannot resist the temptation of returning to a low cabaret, and joining in the revels of her former friends. Henri disguises himself as a man of the people to watch her movements; and at last, enraged by the freedom of her dancing and her flirtation with François, throws off his disguise and confronts her indignantly. The quarrel is continued into the last scene, in which, while Henri is singing a solo, we are allowed to witness some intimate details of Suzette's toilette in a room at the back. François enters, makes hot and earnest love to Suzette, and threatens to commit suicide if she is deaf to his entreaties. He retires, and an explosion is heard, which turns out to be only the pop of a champagne-cork, François entering smiling, and ready to drown his passion and jealousy in wine. Mlle. Gaby Deslys gave a very piquant and vivacious performance as Suzette, singing French songs with great spirit and expression, and doing some eccentric and daring dances with great activity; and M. Edgar Chatteli and M. Carvey rendered valuable support as the rivals, both singing and acting effectively.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE TIVOLI.

The high reputation which the cosy little house in the Strand has rightly attained among the lovers of light entertainment at the halls is being fully maintained by the popular Mr. Joe Wilson, who is presenting a well-varied Easter bill. The return of Harry Lauder was celebrated in a very special manner on Monday evening by a huge holiday audience, in the best of humours. They speedily took up the chorus of "Queen among the heather" and revelled in the drollery of "Breakfast in your bed on Sunday morning," and the rousing refrain of "Every laddie loves a lassie," a new number concerning the happenings at a picnic, where a score of Scotch lassies graced the scene, appealed strongly both in melody and words. Mr. Wilkie Bard's return after his great success at Drury Lane was a subject of great rejoicing on Monday evening with both "gods" and pit. His drollery finds a capital vehicle in an amusing description of a Russian girl with "a name like a sneeze." The heroine of this little love story is Vodka Popoff—a "girlski," who sets a proper value upon herself. "The bugle call" and "Kate" are familiar successes with the famous comedian, whose turn has a cachet of its own, and might be indefinitely prolonged.

The chief novelty of the Easter bill is She Pays the Penalty, a Russian wordless play, with music by Raoul Moreau, presented by Mr. Lee Ephraim, and played by Margaretta Carolee, Antoine Pascual, and Ernest Goslar. The story is of the "eternal triangle"—the husband, the wife, and the lover. Alexandre Dumas the younger's dictum concerning the guilty wife was "Tue-la," but in this production no such violent measure is necessary. She is lavish of her caresses for the lieutenant, and fascinates him with her dancing. During her temporary absence her husband, the General, who knows "all," arrives, and a duel is arranged in the Polish fashion. One revolver only is loaded with a bullet; the lieutenant chooses, and the General is killed. The lieutenant in his excitement hides the body under the couch. The wife, not knowing what has happened, dances gaily into the room and discovers the body. Outside a heavy storm is now raging: the lightning flashing and the thunder roaring. The shock of her discovery sends her mad. Like a tigress she drives her lover from her presence, and falls prostrate upon the body of her husband. The dramatic effect of the lurid little story is well brought out, especially by the lady.

Mr. Ernest Shand on Monday revived with enormous success his curate song, "Oh, what would the congregation say?" His second number is an amusing recitation of adventures experienced with the great Nelson—something in the style of "The Longshoreman," who, it will be remembered, held friendly discourse with that famous seaman. Mr. Shand was in his happiest vein on Monday. Miss Lottie Bellman, assisted by Mr. Bay Russell, presents a smart entertainment entitled "Bits of Vaudeville," which is very lively, and ends in the jolliest and maddest dance imaginable. Mr. Phil Ray abbreviates as usual; we have the best of music from the Zigeuner Quartet, whose doings rouse the house to enthusiasm, especially after the lady's singing of Gounod's "Ave Maria"; the Poluski Brothers and Miss José Collins renew their popularity here; and the O'Gorman Brothers dance well. La Belle Nello, in a pretty scene of a land-locked bay, basks as a naiad in a bathing costume. Shapely of limb, she presents a series of pretty

Miss Anita Ediss, a charming comedienne, makes a big success, despite the fact that she is first turn; the audience quickly settle down as soon as she steps on the stage. A youthful mimic is Jenny Alexander, but what she lacks in years she makes up in observation, for her impersonations are wonderfully lifelike, notably those of Victoria Monks and Harry Lauder, and she scores very heavily. A violinist of great merit is Alfredo Nardi, who is blind. He handles the instrument in masterly fashion, and plays with much taste. His playing of Braga's Serenata is most pleasing, while a composition of his own which he gave is likewise enjoyed.

Those well-known acrobats, the Bob Pender Troupe, are giving their amusing tumbling act, and also introduce their giants which made such a success at Drury Lane in pantomime a short while ago. Ever amusing is Fred Earle, who goes with tremendous success, and he certainly is as diverting as ever, and is well supplied with a couple of mirth-provoking ditties. The Brothers Ashley in their comic boxing sketch, Next, Please, conclude the programme, and this item is distinctly amusing, and keeps the audience well amused.

EALING HIPPODROME.

An Easter holiday crowd filled the Hippodrome twice over on Monday, and the overflow appears likely to fill the house for the rest of the week. The boys "upstairs" were as happy as could be, and caught the choruses with a swing that made all the artists happy. Only get the "gods" to chortle the chorus, and "All the world is mine" has said many a star, great and small. Looking smart and debonnaire in her uniform of His Majesty's 9th, Miss Ella Shields sings of the girls in black, red, white, and blue, and how their colours disclose their characteristics. Miss Ella has another pretty chanson to her credit; this time it is Neptune and not Mars who figures in her melody—"Far away, he was a sailor on a whaler," "If you see Harry tell him I'll be waiting upon the quay." The popular comedienne has two swinging tunes for both her numbers, and scores all along the line.

Roze and Calvert possess a pleasant mélange of fooling and song in their duologue, Captain Kettle and His Charming Mate, the mate in this case being a lady, and unmistakably charming. The "business" is an excellent medium for tickling the risible nerves of an audience, whose laughter is loud and long. The conversation of Nash and Noel loses nothing of its vim by longevity; in fact, with maturity, it has become more than ever a vehicle to amuse. These funny cross-talk comedians and dancers may say the same things a thousand times over, but their charm of making every one happy never deserts them. The Sisters Herbert, a couple of dainty juvenile duettists and dancers, should be heard of in the future; they are clever synchronous dancers—light, graceful, and expressive. They have a particularly pleasing number in their "Jack and Jill," founded on the old nursery ideal. The youngsters work their toes and tongues to good purpose, and are not the least among the novelties of Mr. J. A. Molloy's programme. Mr. Harry Cooke's song, "I don't know what to sing," is a pot-pourri of "head-lines," cleverly dovetailed, and makes for roars of laughter, especially from the ladies, who, somehow (bless their dear hearts) always see farther than the gentlemen in these matters. Mr. Frank Fort, the Johannesburg jester, presents his "Book of Life, from Adam to the Duke of Wellington." He has some patter that sparkles with fun, as also does his disquisition on love and marriage. Mr. Monte Walker, in his contribution, "Ladies, ladies," sings of the rival attractions of trousers versus petticoats, and becomes quite learned in the philosophy of "panta."

Neville Graham and company present Pride of Regiment. This "beautiful, homely incident," first played at the Haymarket, has taken a firm hold of variety audiences, and its honest fidelity and truth never fail to "hold" the house. The Father is safe in the hands of Mr. George Howard; the Boy is adequately rendered by Mr. Neville Graham; but it is undoubtedly the Mother of Miss Eugenie Vernie which stamps the seal of success upon the production. To hear and see her when she at last—after thirty years of "standing it," turns and rends the smug conceit of the old sergeant, is an object-lesson not easily to be forgotten, and the house roars its approval, as one after another she smashes the old veteran's fortifications, and fairly screams its pleasure as she finishes up her tirade by "damning his regiment." As usual, the Bioscope showed some amusing films; while the overture, "Ireland for Ever," was excellently rendered by Mr. A. M. Parks's band.

QUEEN'S, POPLAR.

This cosy little hall was well filled on the night of our visit, when a most interesting programme was presented. The top of the bill is occupied by Walter Bird's company in the comedy sketch Her Husband, which continues to prove as amusing as when first produced. Norman Scott as an illusionist was good, and seemingly produced hundreds of flags of all nationalities from nowhere. That fine artist Rosie Lloyd was in excellent form. Charmingly gowned, as always, she gave two songs, "Rosie" and "Who's going to take me for a walk?" in taking fashion, the latter being especially to the liking of the house.

Jack Smiles laughingly told an amusing story, finishing his turn with a clever illustration of Lancashire clog-dancing. Bennett and Martell, billed as "the shipwrecked mariners," were decidedly humorous. In very extravagant nautical costumes, they commenced their turn with a song about nothing in particular, and finished with some good acrobatic dancing. Their fooling throughout was capital and evoked much laughter. The Sisters Emson, looking well in pretty green costumes, gave the "Big brass band" and "There never was a girl like you." Archie Royer worked hard and gained the success he deserved. Whether relating some of his many droll stories, high kicking, tumbling, or throwing difficult somersaults, he always proved entertaining. One of the best turns of the evening was that of Barnes and Ascott. The halls at present are going through a surfeit of "buck" and simultaneous dancing, which perhaps is apt to prove monotonous. Here, however, we have a couple of artists who manage to work into their performance many entirely new steps, and although dancing at top speed throughout, yet, nevertheless, keep perfect time. The symmetry of their performance is one of the outstanding features.

Also on the bill were Mamie Morris, comedienne; and the Queen's Bioscope, with its usually clear and interesting pictures. The orchestra continues to do good work under the leadership of Mr. W. Hinkinson, and the front of the house is well looked after by the cheery manager, Mr. Ben Abrahams, by whom visitors are assured of a hearty welcome.

EAST HAM PALACE.

The Easter programme here has been one of exceptional merit, and good business has been done throughout the week. T. E. Dunville "tops the bill," and hearty laughter resounds throughout the house at his many quips and wittiesms, his songs, "Rub it in" and the old favourite "They haven't made me sergeant yet," coming in for rounds of applause. A juvenile comedian and dancer of rare ability is seen in Cliff Diamond, who is extremely clever and amusing with a capital song, "Lena Schmidt." James Fawn, a comedian of the old school, but quite equal to any modern "star," came in for a hearty reception, his two numbers, "The Booking Clerk" and "The Hen-pecked Club," keeping the audience in uproarious laughter. His imitation of a drunken man is very clever indeed, and his jokes were quite to the popular taste. The novelty act The Rag Doll, by the Martineks, was another excellent item; and the comedy sketch, entitled The Interviewer, by Phœbe Mercer and company, was cleverly played, and each situation so well handled by the cast was warmly appreciated.

Miss Madoline Rees, vocal comedienne, was in capital voice, and sang "Pretty little Geisha lady" and "I do not sigh for gold"; and another dainty comedienne's (Miss Lily Eyton) numbers, "You want a sweetheart to cuddle" and "If I could lock you in my heart," found especial favour with the audience. Tubby Edlin and his strong company of musical comedy artists were eminently successful in the sketch The Cowboy Millionaire, which abounds with amusing incidents and is very prettily staged. Frank and Free, comedy artists, also made a telling hit, introducing many smart gags and puns; and Fred Keeton also appeared. Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope terminates an excellent performance, a special feature of the pictures being the recent boat-race.

"BOYS IN CAMP."

Musical Interlude, by Frank Leo, Produced on Monday, March 28, at the Rotherhithe Hippodrome.

Scoutmaster ..... Miss Sable Fern
A Chelsea Pensioner ..... Mr. C. J. Russell
Adjutant ..... Mr. Archie Watts
Patrol Leader ..... Master Howes
Signallers .... Masters C. S. Hunt & K. Honey

Miss Sable Fern, the dainty little comedienne, who a short time ago scored a great success in a cow-boy song, is still following the characters of open-air life, and making a hit in a novel musical interlude, written by Mr. Frank Leo, entitled Boys in Camp. She has produced it with the object of raising enthusiasm in the Boy Scout movement, and with the aid of a company of Scouts and cleverly painted scenery and stage effects, she submits a thrilling camp scene, which received tremendous applause from a crowded house here on Monday. When the scene opens a few Boy Scouts are discovered busying themselves in various occupations—some cooking a meal, and others mending their garments, &c. A bugle is heard in the distance, and the Scouts in camp are at once drawn to attention by their patrol leader to meet the remainder of the troop who are just returning after the morning's work with their scoutmaster (Miss Sable Fern) at the head. Miss Fern then proceeds to enlighten them as to the duties of a true Boy Scout. He must be true to God and the King, obedient to his parents, be kind to dumb animals, and go about with a smile and a whistle under all circumstances. He is always to remember that our great men were boys once, and the training they received when young was greatly to their advantage as men.

These wholesome counsels are rendered in the form of a number of songs, sung by Miss Fern and Mr. C. J. Russell, the titles being "Teach the rising generation," "Keep whistling," "Be prepared," and "Only a boy." In the last-named song Miss Fern sings of some of our great men, including Lord Nelson and Lord Kitchener, and as each one is mentioned the portrait is given on a screen. The scene is exquisitely staged, and the music is bright and catchy. Miss Fern, attired in khaki breeches, puttees, and tunic, makes an excellent Scoutmaster, and her singing is the life of the scena. Mr. C. J. Russell as a Chelsea Pensioner contributes a fine rendering of "When the camp fire's brightly burning," and smaller parts are capably acted by Mr. Archie Watts and Master Howes. Some smart signalling is executed by Signallers C. S. Hunt and K. Honey.

Messrs. B. Feldman and Co. have recently acquired some excellent new songs from the pens of leading English authors and composers, in addition to the cream of the American song market, as published by such famous firms as Jerome H. Remick and Co., Chas. K. Harris, and F. A. Mills, and professional correspondents and callers may rest assured of being equipped with the finest material for a variety campaign on application to the Arthur-street firm.

Al-fresco artists all over the country are making daily application to Feldman and Co. for their highly successful budget of seaside specialities this year. Such numbers as "Pretty little girl from nowhere," "Molly O'Morgan," "It's the Alpine dress you're wearing," "Sweet garden queen," "Won't there ever be any wedding-bells for me?" "Just as the brook flows," "Can't you hear the bagpipes calling?" &c., are in great request.

Two of the most popular Feldman ballads are "The garden of roses" and "I'm longing for one sight of you," both of which have already been exploited by Mr Arthur Aldridge. In addition, are that exquisite number, "I wonder if it's true?" which Miss José Collins is singing; three delightful new Chas. K. Harris numbers, "After while," "'Scuse me," and "I'm trying so hard to forget you"; and last, but not least, a song, now in the press, which is by the composer of "The garden of roses," and which is the present ballad-rage of America, entitled "The moonlight, the rose, and you."

Seaside comedians of the al-fresco and pierrot variety are having their needs well catered for this year by the house of Feldman, whose handy book of comedy numbers, just issued specially for seaside requirements, includes such tried and proven "winners" as "I do like to be beside the seaside," "Oh, I must go home to-night," "Rain, rain, go away," "I can't keep my eyes off the girls," "Do you know Charley Digby?" "Fish sauce," and George Lashwood's new comedy number, "It's a pity to waste the cake."

During the current week, at Woolwich, a perfect furore has been created by Miss Helene Mohr, with her delightful rendering of the big number, "Molly O'Morgan." This song is already the property of the "man in the street" in Woolwich, as elsewhere, and Messrs. Feldman and Co.'s excellent publication has undoubtedly got many months of vigorous life before it.

Miss Lola Patey, at the Canterbury, has scored one of the hits of the programme with her rendering of Feldman's new winner, "I wonder who's kissing her now?" The irresistible chorus was instantaneously taken up by the denizens of "high Olympus," and ecstatically rendered, and the applause with which they attested their appreciation of Miss Patey's (and their own) efforts at the conclusion of the song were simply deafening.

A distinctly outstanding feature of Mr. Harry Claff and Miss Alice Tremayne's scena, The Demon and the Fairy, is Miss Tremayne's rendering of the number, written and composed by Miss Clare Kummer, "I wonder if it's true," which promises to be one of the Feldman successes.

Mr. Dave Carter has been causing a furore at Glasgow and elsewhere with the new song entitled "Won't you give me a sprig of shamrock?" which Messrs. Reeder and Walsh have published, and which was written and composed by John F. Lambe. It occurred to the author whilst wondering whether his friend, fellow-countryman, and brother song-writer, Josef Collins (of Dundalk), would send his annual present of shamrock as in former years. Mr. Dave Carter, who has given Mr. Horace Wheatley permission to sing the number on the Stoll tour, writes: "At Glasgow the song was 'a riot,' as they say in America. I also sang it at an Irish concert on St. Patrick's night, and I can hear them shouting yet."

"Shan't Tickle Her; or, Can't Cock-a-Doodle" is the ditty with which Mr. Ernie Mayne is just now scoring a great hit. It is from the pen of Alf. Ellerton, the author of the now famous song "Have a Banana."

Von Tilzer's al-fresco book for comedians is in great demand. No artist who is in search of a large répertoire for the summer season can afford to be without a copy of this book, which includes fifty of the best and most successful comic songs featured by Sam Mayo, Fragson, Harry Ford, Fred Earle, Harry Champion, Whit Cunliffe, Arthur Reece, and others. The publishers undertake to forward a copy by return of post on receipt of one shilling.

Miss Gertie Gitana, who shortly returns to town, is featuring with great success a new song, entitled "When the summer days are o'er, Anna Gray," a charming little number. Miss Gitana had a tremendous ovation at Liverpool last week, and the audience would not allow her to depart until, after repeated calls, she rendered her two old favourites, "Dear Louise" and "Sweet Eileen," both of which are published by Von Tilzers.

Von Tilzers have just issued Sam Mayo's two new numbers, "Prisoner at the bar" (reminiscences of the "Old Bailey") and "I don't care what becomes of me." Both songs are proving big hits with the immobile one.

Fragson is nightly featuring the now popular "John Bull's Budget." The Von Tilzer Music Co. have published this in their Sixpenny "Pops," together with "Gifts of Nature," "Come to lunch," and "Ladies, we love you all," all of which will doubtless be firm favourites during the summer season.

The Ted Snyder Company, of Albion House, 59-61, New Oxford-street, have evidently come to London to stay. Their big number, "Roses and Memories," promises to be one of the hits of the season, and, after all, what else could be expected of a number that is in the care of such an artist as Auguste van Biene, who is nightly literally "pulling the house down" with his rendering of this piece? It is published as a song, as a solo for violin, 'cello, and piano solos, and also for orchestra.

Another publication of this firm's is "My wife's gone to the country, hooray," which is receiving rounds of applause this week at the Shepherd's Bush Empire. In this Phil Parsons has found a number which fits him like "ze paper on ze wall," and he makes the most of his opportunities. Lowenwirth and Cohan are working "Sadie Salome," another composition of the versatile Ted Snyder. Those wanting new stuff should give the Snyder firm a visit.

Mme. Réjane, after her visit to Venice and her interesting letter concerning the Countess Terlowska, has been busy in making preparations for her appearance at the Hippodrome on Monday, when, as already announced, she will present Meilhac and Halevy's Lolotte. The famous French comedienne is looking forward with peculiar interest to her visit to the Hippodrome. Apropos of the report that Mme. Réjane intends to establish a French theatre in London, it is interesting to remember that, with M. Gaston Mayer, she opened the New Royalty, Dean-street, as a French repertory theatre in January, 1906.

"ROB ROY" AT THE SURREY.

Specially-arranged Version of the Famous Scottish Drama, Produced on Easter Monday, March 28.

Rob Roy Macgregor .....Mr. Roy Cochrane
Helen Macgregor .....Miss Edith Lewis
Major Galbraith .....Mr. Harry Seymour
Bailie Nicol Jarvie .....Mr. H. C. Morton
Rashleigh Osbaldistone
Mr. J. Riddell Robinson
Dougal "Cratur" .....Mr. J. McMahon

The tartan plaid of the Clan Macgregor is in evidence this week at the Surrey, the pillars of the historic house being arrayed in that picturesque pattern, and gigantic posters in the neighbourhood being similarly treated. Attention is by this means directed to the fact that Mr. Roy Cochrane, the energetic manager of the hall, is realising a long-cherished desire to introduce Scotland's national drama to Surreyites, mounting it on a scale of completeness rarely attempted at the halls. The famous old drama is, of course, cut to the limits of half an hour, but its most dramatic situations are preserved, and the story is presented in a way that can be thoroughly understood. One sees the bold outlaw trapped by his dastardly kinsman Osbaldistone, and marched off, after a hard struggle with the soldiery. Rob Roy speedily escapes from durance vile, and the services of the "Dougal Cratur" are enlisted to lead the pursuers to his Highland home, where they receive a warm welcome from Helen, Rob's intrepid wife. After a sharp encounter the English force is driven off, and the Macgregor's supporters are singing the "Lament" when Rob's voice is heard o'er the hills, followed by the appearance of the outlaw himself safe and sound. All is not yet over, for the English soldiers return, and a gory engagement follows, in the course of which Rob Roy kills his enemy Olbaldistone after a terrific duel with the claymore.

The sketch is mounted and dressed with remarkable liberality, every detail being studied to a degree. The Clachan of Aberfoil is a pretty pastoral set, and the Pass of Loch Ard is a realistic bit of upland scenery, with a torrent of real water rushing continuously down the mountain side. The colours here are admirably mingled, and the scene reflects great credit on Mr. Job Cook, by whom it is painted from sketches taken on the spot. Mr. Roy Cochrane himself appears as Rob Roy, a part he has played all over the country nearly 600 times, and is consequently quite at home in the rôle. Mr. Cochrane has not acted for over seven years, but his energy is by no means impaired. He makes a striking figure of the redoubtable Rob, acting with rugged force, and declaiming his lines with vigour, though a slight hoarseness, due to the severity of the weather, somewhat marred his distinctness. The duel scene with Osbaldistone is also realistically carried out. That personage is invested with sinister and sardonic expression by Mr. J. Riddell Robinson, who dresses the part effectively and plays dramatically. Miss Edith Lewis makes a warlike heroine of Helen Macgregor, acting with due ferocity and thrilling the audience with her stirring utterances. Bailie Nicol Jarvie has a humorous exponent in Mr. H. C. Morton, the "Dougal Cratur" is a piece of acting upon which Mr. J. MacMahon is highly to be praised, and similar commendation is due to the Major Galbraith of Mr. Harry Seymour, the conflict between the two being a most exciting bit of sword-play. The production, which has had the advantage of the personal supervision of Mr. Fred Baugh, is supported by numerous auxiliaries, a brave show being made by the English troops, quite a number strong, who cross the border to capture the redoubtable Rob. Various concerted choruses are effectively rendered, and the music, skilfully selected and arranged by Mr. Carl Hamlin, is admirably rendered by the orchestra under his direction.

Mr. Cochrane was warmly called on the night of our visit, and thanked the audience for his reception. The size of the Surrey stage, he added, lent itself to the mounting of big productions, and he had determined to avail himself of the opportunity thus afforded to present spectacular pieces in a way that would do them justice provided his patrons would give sufficient support to justify the venture. His next production would be a naval play. Mr. Cochrane was loudly cheered. During the popular manager's stage work the duties at the front of the house are ably discharged by Mr. Frederick Monti.

"HER HUSBAND."

A Comedy Sketch, Produced at the Shoreditch Empire on Monday, March 28.

Henry Moore .....Mr. E. Martin
Jessy Moore .....Mrs. H. Heath
Louie Hook .....Mr. J. Engelen
William Huntley .....Mr. A. Dane
Jemmy Josser .....Mr. Ernest Long

This bright little trifle might almost be called "A Burlesque Burglary," for surely no burglar on serious business intent would enter into partnership with a Bill Sykes who insisted during office hours in being a kind of a knockabout comedian and acrobat combined. Yet we find that such a partnership exists between William Huntley, an escaped lunatic, and Jemmy Josser, when the pair invade the domicile of Dr. Henry Moore, who had a short time before, whilst celebrating the anniversary of his fifth wedding day at home with his wife Jessy, been urgently summoned to the asylum where he is in charge. Mr. Ernest Long as Jemmy Josser gets into the good graces of the audience on his first entrance. He contrives to make as much noise as possible, to clumsily smash things whilst putting them into sacks for removal purposes, and, seeing the supper table is laden with good things, despite his partner's protests, proceeds to look after "the inner man." Whilst they are eating, drinking, and arguing Mrs. Moore, thinking she has heard a noise, comes into the room, and confronts the men. She recognises in the escaped lunatic Huntley her first husband, whom she had believed to be dead. He demands money, and in the argument that ensues, of which Mr. Josser takes full advantage to indulge in quite original pranks, the lunatic gets shot. Mr. Long's fooling is at all times acceptable, and is altogether a very clever and difficult piece of work. The other members of the company work very well to make Her Husband the success it undoubtedly is.

"PHYLLIS."

Original Comedy Sketch, Produced by Mr. Sid Cotterell at the Rotherhithe Hippodrome, for the First Time, on Monday, March 28.

Jack Chudleigh .....Mr. Sid Cotterell
Eva Chudleigh .....Miss B. Holland
Phyllis Tremayne .....Miss J. Elvin
Capt. Meresford .....Mr. H. Belmont
Ben Bolt .....Mr. H. Lewis

This is an amusing episode enacted on board a P. and O. steamer. Jack Chudleigh, on a pleasure voyage on the ss. Antelope, falls violently in love with Phyllis Tremayne, a fellow-passenger, but, being shy, is rather nervous of declaring his love, principally on account of his four false teeth, which have replaced those unfortunately knocked out during a football match. To his sister Eva he talks of his dilemma, and invokes her aid. Will she mention his love to Phyllis? Eva, entering into the spirit of the joke, declines to be of assistance to him, and while he is trying to persuade her to alter her mind by promised bribes of chocolates, &c., Phyllis comes on deck.

Jack, failing to get his sister's assistance, in a fit of desperation determines to propose himself, but is rewarded with scant success, for in trying to acquaint Phyllis of his four false teeth a great misunderstanding arises between them, she thinking that he means he has already four wives. Jack, in despair, determines to do away with the cause of all the trouble, viz., false teeth, and, taking them out of his mouth to throw them overboard, he drops them on the deck. Eva then reappears on the scene, and Jack, on speaking to her, finds that the loss of his false teeth causes such an impediment in his speech that she cannot understand him. He searches everywhere for the missing molars, but is unable to find them. He then asks the captain to put the ship about, without giving any satisfactory reason, and the captain tells him to mind his own business.

In the meantime, Ben Bolt, who is cleaning the deck, discovers the false teeth, and gives them to the captain, who calls all the passengers on deck to acquaint them of the find in the hope of finding the owner. Nobody seems to own them, for the simple reason that Jack does not like to claim them in front of all the passengers, so the captain decides to hold an auction and sell them to the highest bidder. Some very amusing bids follow, and finally Jack becomes the owner of his set of teeth at a fabulous price. Phyllis, who is on deck during the sale, sees Jack buy them, and suddenly discovering her mistake, tells Jack, and the curtain descends on a very happy couple.

The acting throughout is very good and brisk, and the sketch is well received. The attempts of Mr. Sid Cotterell to pronounce Phyllis's name (after Jack's loss of his false teeth) evokes roars of applause, and the production—bright, clever, and well mounted—should have a very successful tour.

Harry Elliston's company in the ever-successful comedy act Aunt Matilda is evoking roars of laughter at every performance, and going as strong as ever.

WHY MISS HETTY KING WILL NOT VISIT AUSTRALIA.

Just now Miss Hetty King is one of the headliners, as our Yankee billing friends would put it, at the London Hippodrome, and it is quite a difficult matter to get a quiet talk with the famous male impersonator. But it is only because her dressing-room is absolutely barricaded with cabin trunks and dress baskets, and every inch of wall space is taken up with dandy frock-coats, waistcoats of extraordinary cut and design, and unmentionables that we are assured, and believe, possess the brand, hall mark, trade mark, and blessing of the best Bond-street tailors. Indeed, when one is ushered into Miss King's dressing-room it is hard to believe that one is in a lady's sanctum at all. There is none of the usual feminine frippery about, and all the garments usually worn by man get pride of place. There is, however, in an obscure corner a lady's hat of modest dimensions and a dress, and Miss King is discovered at last in the shadow of a mammoth iron-bound box.

The lady who loves to be a man, and who is now telling delighted Hippodrome audiences about her "Sunday morning walks," "The Time, the Place, and the Girl," and that "I'm going away," was a month ago doing a forty minutes' show and singing five songs twice daily in American cities. Actually Miss King had booked her passage on the Mauretania, due to sail from New York on March 2, but such was her success at Bennett's in Montreal that she was compelled to stay one more week, and so it came about that the big Cunarder steamed away without her, and the Lusitania, sailing a week later, brought her back to Liverpool.

As everyone knows, during Miss Hetty King's absence from England, the song "Ship Ahoy," which was launched by her last year, has been sung in nearly every first-class pantomime in the country with the greatest success. The cable had recorded this fact in both Canada and the United States.

"The consequence was," Miss King told the writer, "I was inundated with requests to sing this song, and I did so many times. At Bennett's Theatre I was compelled to make a speech after every performance as well. It was delightful—but very tiring work.

"But I must be honest, and confess that at one theatre in America I did not go well. No; I won't tell you where it was. But I hope that every artist suffering from swelled head will be sent there some time or other. The management has discovered a certain cure for the complaint, and never fail to administer the specific whether one wants it or not."

But all in all, we should judge that Miss King is a universal favourite on the other side of the Atlantic, for there has been a keen tussle by at least three American booking offices to get this young lady to sign to appear in New York next August. Her allegiance to Mr. Stoll, however, puts this entirely out of the question, and we have pleasure in stating that Great Britain has exclusive claim on her services until March next. After that the Orpheum Circuit gets the right to bill her.

Australian managers, too, have had their eyes on Miss King, and Mr. Williamson wanted her for his principal boy for his next Christmas pantomime, Aladdin.

"But there was more than one reason," says Mr. Ernest Luck ("Miss King's other half," as that gentleman fondly tells people) "why she didn't accept. And I'm going to tell a little tale out of school about her.

"When my wife first got the offer from Mr. Williamson for Australia she clapped her hands with glee, and said: 'Oh, Ernest, how lovely! We'll go. I'm dying to see Australia!' Then she inundated everyone she knew who'd been to Australia with questions concerning the place. In fact, it was Australia, Australia morning, noon, and eventide, and nothing but Australia. And once I said—well, perhaps you wouldn't print what I said. However, shortly afterwards we sailed for America.

"Now, just before going on board a mutual friend had said: 'Why don't you take some bottles of Somebody or Other's Seasick Cure?' He used such eloquence that I bought three bottles. Before the boat had left Liverpool we had taken a dose apiece. Then we went down to dinner, ate a very hearty meal, felt as right as could be, took another dose of the 'cure,' and went to bed. Woke up next morning, feeling delightfully free from sickness and even giddiness. Both of us were delighted with the cure, and at breakfast strongly recommended it to our nearest neighbours. Later we went up on deck to find that the ship was practically in the Mersey still, held up in a very bad fog. So our 'cure' did not count for much. Indeed, when we did get into the Atlantic, it was quite useless, and we were both fearfully ill for quite four days.

"During that time Hetty once said to me: 'Ernest, dear, how far is it to New York?' 'About 3,000 miles,' I groaned. Then she sobbed: 'And how far is it to Australia?' 'About 12,000 miles,' I shuddered. Then a very plantive voice said: 'Ernest, I don't think I want to go to Australia, do you?'"

Mr. Luck is in treaty for a musical comedy sketch, which, he says, "Will fit Miss King like a glove." We are not permitted to say more than that an idea of the plot may be obtained by imagining Miss King as a youth who is at that stage of his career when he would give everything to have attained man's estate. Next autumn will see this staged at—well, a West End theatre.

Miss King, too, has in active rehearsal a new song with the title of "The Shopwalker," and another concerning "Mixed Bathing."

Some years ago Mr. Luck and the writer made a compact that whenever they next met in the provinces they would have a big supper and jollification together. Many months elapsed, and business kept artist and journalist apart. One day, however, the call of duty made the writer journey to Cardiff. The first thing that caught his eye on leaving the station was a sixteen-sheet poster of the local Empire, with "Hetty King" starred at the top. "By Jove!" he exclaimed. "At last. What a time to-night!" At seven o'clock that evening, his business transacted, the writer presented himself at the Empire, and got a royal welcome. "Don't forget our supper after the show," he reminded Mr. and Mrs. Luck. "But we can't," they exclaimed, as in one breath, "The Black Fast started at six to-night, and we may not have anything to eat until the same time to-morrow night!"

Lonely and sad, the writer supped alone that night.

Harry Roxbury, the hustling manager-producer-comedian, is delighted with the success of his new musical sketch On the Track at the Birmingham Grand this week. The piece is finely staged, the music is bright and catchy, the plot very clear, and the fun fast and furious. Roxbury is, of course, the irrepressible Sergeant Longfellow.

At the Royalty Theatre, Chester, of which the proprietors are Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton and the Resident-Manager Mr. C. B. Fountaine, Harry Tate's company, in Motoring, tops the Easter bill. Will E. Dare, comedian; the Northcotes, operatic duettists; and Newman and Knight, as the country milkman and the cottage girl, hugely entertain; Victor Courtney is clever and amusing as Boots at the Piano; J. H. McCann introduces novel business as a roller skate dancer; J. H. Wakefield shines in the coon line, and Corman's Juveniles present their pretty vocal scene, The Waits.

RINKING GOSSIP AND NOTICES.

Mile Race for Lady Amateurs.

The following entries were received for the mile race for lady amateurs at Earl's Court, which took place last Thursday:—Miss Lilian Hills (Clapham), Mrs. A. G. Downs (Wood Green), Miss Holdsworth (Leicester), Mrs. L. McDonnell (Goy's Ladies' H.C.), Miss C. Knight (Lava S.C.), Miss L. Meredith (Goy's Ladies' H.C.), Miss W. Freeman (Leytonstone), Miss T. Slater (Wood Green), Mrs. Widgery (Unity Ladies' R.H.C.), Mrs. Hawthorne (Unity Ladies' R.H.C.), Miss Hilda Harbord (Great Yarmouth), Miss F. Frear (Lava S.C.), Miss M. Shepherd, Miss B. Cooper, and Miss T. Stevens. The Peerless Roller Skate Co., Ltd., gave a silver cup value fifteen guineas. Competitors trained at Earl's Court last Wednesday from 6.15 to 7 p.m., by permission of Mr. Willard.

Leicester Lady Wins Peerless Cup.

The mile race for ladies resulted in a series of contests that will assuredly draw attention to the possibilities of racing on rollers for the gentle sex. The fine cup which the Peerless Roller Skate Company, Ltd., presented for the contest induced all the fastest lady skaters in the United Kingdom, including the champions of the Midlands (Miss Holdsworth) and Eastern Counties (Miss Harbord) to enter. The last heat was the finest one of the series. Two lady champions in Miss Harbord, of Great Yarmouth, and Miss Holdsworth, of Leicester, were opposed by, among others, Miss L. Meredith, sister of the well-known cyclist. The provincial pair were better than Miss Meredith on the bends, and a splendid finish resulted in a win for the Leicester young lady in the fast time of 3min. 58 1-5sec. Miss Holdsworth is only seventeen years of age.

Next Friday at Earl's Court.

Just a final word on the subject of Mr. Herbert Izod's benefit next Friday at the Empress Hall, Earl's Court. Everyone who is anyone in the skating world will be there, for Mr. Willard's young manager is extremely popular with all. There have been many big nights at the great West Brompton rink this year, but this function promises to make a record of its own. The fun starts at 7.30 p.m., and the wee sma' hours will have arrived before "The King" is played.

F. G. Stumcke's Benefit.

The mammoth skating rink at the Crystal Palace will close for the season on Saturday next, April 9. On April 6 Mr. F. G. Stumcke, the manager of this rink, will be accorded a complimentary benefit. The great gala programme includes Mr. Walter Stanton, amateur figure skating champion of Great Britain, and winner of the Richardson Challenge Cup at Maida Vale Rink on March 16 last; Mr. C. W. Phillips, the champion free skater of England; Mr. Syd Martin, the well-known amateur, who will present his unique and grotesque skating act; Mr. S. F. Casey will perform a cake-walk on skates; Mr. H. F. O'Hagan, winner of the British Amateur and Southern Counties Championships; Mr. C. J. Wilson, professional champion speed skater of Great Britain; and the Great Martine, "the filleted marvel." The members of the Crystal Palace Figure Skating Club will also give exhibitions of graceful waltzing and two-step dancing; there will be a burlesque hockey match (ladies v. gentlemen), push ball, and speed contest.

Meredith Wins Five-Mile Championship.

Under the auspices of the National Skating Association, the Five-Mile Amateur Roller Skating Championship was decided last Wednesday night at the Maida Vale Rink. There were two preliminary heats, and in the final Leon Meredith, the champion cyclist, proved successful. The chief officials were:—Judges: Messrs. W. Hayes Fisher, Col. G. T. B. Cobbett, H. Taylor, H. Torrome, A. March, and H. D. Faith; timekeepers: Messrs. H. T. Barclay, D. K. Hall, and H. J. Rothery; standard timekeeper, Mr. H. G. Brockman; starter, Mr. Walter Stanton; chief steward, Mr. C. More; chief lap scorer, Mr. H. Y. Evans; hon. secretary, Mr. Walter Stanton. In the final heat Meredith, Hitch, Swain, Stent, May, Casey, Dunn, Barker, and Bussey started. Casey and Hitch cut out the pace at the start, but at the end of the first mile Barker and Bussey were leading. Then Meredith jumped away for the second mile, but subsequently surrendered the position to Casey. At the fourth mile the order was Casey, Meredith, and Barker, and, after some manœuvring, Meredith was in front at the bell lap, with Casey in close attendance. Meredith put on all speed, and in a fine finish won by about four yards. Hitch finished sixth, Stent seventh, and May eighth. Meredith's time was 17min. 41 2-5sec.; Casey's, 17min. 41 4-5sec.; Dunn's, 17min. 42 1-5sec.; Barker's, 17min. 42 2-5sec.; and Bussey's, 17min. 42 4-5sec. The prizes consisted of gold, silver, and bronze medals.

Easter Monday Rinking.

The crowds at the numerous rinks which are now dotted about and around London were undoubtedly the feature that chiefly distinguished last Monday from the Easter Bank Holidays of recent years. From early morning till late at night these skating palaces did a roaring business, and must have accounted for a considerable proportion of London's young people.

Notable People at Maida Vale.

Among the skaters at the Maida Vale Skating Rink on Thursday were Prince Leopold of Battenberg and the Hon. Mrs. Bruce. Among the spectators were the Marchioness of Lorne and Mr. Plowden, the Marylebone magistrate.

Queen Victoria's Skates.

A writer in Modern Society tells how he came across an engraving of a wonderful pair of skates that had been made, by Royal command, for her late Majesty Queen Victoria. It seems that a noted Sheffield firm had been honoured by receiving an order for the skates during a spell of unusually severe weather. Four pairs of skates for the use of the Royal children were also sent at the same time. The Queen's skates were elaborate and ornamental almost to the point of freakishness. The clog was of satinwood, with toe-leathers formed in the shape of a shoe, so that when fitted to the foot and laced, it was very firm. At the opposite end was a plate cup to fit the foot, elaborately chased with a design of rose, shamrock, and thistle intertwined. The strap round the heel was of black patent leather stitched to correspond with the heel-cup. The clog and front leather had a lining of the softest skin, to secure warmth to the foot.

Earle Reynolds Gets an Earthquake Shock.

A fortnight ago Earle Reynolds and his pretty wife had just returned from the Orpheum Theatre, San Francisco, and were preparing to go to bed, when the windows began to rattle and the building to sway. The rumblings of the earth grimly acquainted husband and wife that a real earthquake shock has passed. While the shock was not strong or long enough to do any actual damage, it all but created a stampede in the theatres. Earle and Mrs. Reynolds confessed to being very frightened, and were very glad to get to the City of Beauty, Los Angeles, Cal., where the local papers say his latest act is making something of a sensation.

Little Yorks Going to South America.

A very large crowd of skaters occupied the floor at the Hall-by-the-Sea, Margate, on Easter Monday, and wheeling went on merrily until midnight. For the remainder of the week, each afternoon and evening, the Two Little Yorks have been giving their exhibition of graceful and fancy skating. This is stated to be the last appearance of these clever juvenile skaters before their departure for South America.

Jessie Darling to Kiss the Blarney Stone.

Miss Jessie Darling has gone to Ireland with the deliberate intention of kissing the blarney stone. In the meantime we are delighted to hear that the Cork people have taken to her skating, and in consequence Miss Darling will remain in Ireland for another week. Last week this young lady had a fine success at Sutton. The German critics, during her recent exhibition in the Fatherland, in mentioning her performance, spoke of it as of the "greatest possible elegance."

Skating in Birmingham.

The "rinking" craze shows no signs of abating, and all the rinks in Birmingham are doing capital business. Since the floor at Monument-road was re-surfaced, attendances there have gone up remarkably. The City Rink has increased its popularity as the result of recent carnivals, and each session there the fine floor is crowded by devotees of the sport.

Beauty Contests at Birmingham.

Beauty contests at the present time are a popular feature promoted by the managements of the Erdington and Lozells Rinks, Birmingham. A ladies' beauty competition is being held at the former rink this (Saturday) evening, and a similar event is announced for Lozells Rink on Saturday, April 9.

Monohan at Bournemouth.

The Westover-road Rink, Bournemouth, has a skating surface of 240ft. by 80ft., and is surrounded by a promenade 10ft. wide. A carnival took place there on Tuesday night, when there were about 250 competitors, and the spectators numbered 1,500. The great Monohan is giving his unique show twice daily, and his feats on the barrel and his candle act are being very well received.

Jockeys on Skates.

There was a capital attendance at Bury St. Edmunds' Skating Rink last Friday afternoon to witness a rink hockey match between Mr. C. S. Gough's team and a team from Newmarket. Several well-known jockeys were included in the visting team. The spectators were not slow to show their appreciation of good play, and frequent applause greeted the praiseworthy efforts of individual players of either team. The game was fast and exciting, and within five minutes of the start Butters scored for Newmarket. Mr. Gough's team scored 13 goals as against Newmarket's 6. Mr. Gough's team was made up of W. Gough, C. M. Oliver, R. Salmon, R. Gough, H. R. Clarke, C. S. Gough, and H. O. Ashton; and in the Newmarket team there were B. Jarvis, A. Buck, C. Archer, jun., W. Griggs, O. Butters, W. Saxby, and D. Maher.

Presentation at a Cardiff Rink.

A pleasing little ceremony took place last week at the American Roller Rink, Westgate-street, Cardiff, when Miss Agnes Tonge, the popular lady instructor, was the recipient of well-merited recognition. On finding that Miss Tonge was about to leave for her home at Blackpool, a few friends decided upon a presentation. Mr. W. J. Powell took the initiative, with the cordial co-operation of Mrs. Telford (wife of the manager), Miss Powell, Mrs. Withers, Miss Gwennie Morgan, Mr. Rank, and others. The upshot of it all was the presentation to Miss Tonge of a handsome gold bracelet watch, suitably inscribed, with cash, and in several speeches hopes were expressed for the lady's future welfare

Queer Quakers at Clacton.

In the presence of enormous crowds of spectators a skating gymkhana was held at the Clacton rink on Saturday night. A fancy dress carnival took place on Easter Monday. The gymkhana events were keenly contested, and evoked considerable interest, whilst at the carnival the floor was crowded with skaters in costumes of every description. The Queer Quakers rendered items from their répertoire at intervals during the skating sessions.

Derby's Mayoress Rinks.

The charming Mayoress of Derby, Mrs. Arnold Bemrose, is frequently seen on the Alexandra Rink, either as a prize distributor or awheel.

John Davidson by the Sea.

The Floral Hall, Eastbourne, Skating Rink is going very strong. Carnivals on Saturday and Monday evening drew big crowds of visitors, while the entries and dresses were highly satisfactory. Exciting relay races between Brixton and Eastbourne teams (four in each team) resulted in the Brixton men winning on Saturday evening and drawing on Monday. John Davidson is delighting the spectators with his splendid exhibition of fancy skating.

The entry for the Figure Skating Challenge Bowl, which is to be competed for to-day (Saturday) at Devonshire Park, Eastbourne, is a very representative one. The holder, Mr. W. Stanton (hon. secretary of the N.S.A. Roller Department), having won the N.S.A. championship on March 16 at Maida Vale, is standing down, and this gives the contest a very open aspect. The skating is sure to be of the highest character, as the entry includes D. Resta, Miss Robertson, M. Garcia, P. Ward, and H. B. Weller, who were respectively second, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth in the National Championship a fortnight ago.

Round the Glasgow Rinks.

Considering the fine weather of the past week, the attendances at the Govan rink have been most gratifying. This afternoon a children's sports gala is to be held, and numerous prizes will be awarded. The age limit is twelve years. An advertising costume carnival has been arranged for Monday, April 11. There seems to be no falling off in the attendance at the American Roller Rink, and there is a large following in the East End, as is obvious from the crowded floor at the three sessions daily in the James-street establishment. Since Mr. Mungo Anderson's term of office the attendances continue to increase, and a large number of the old Zoo Rink enthusiasts are to be seen indulging in the pastime here. Rinkers find that the West-End Rink strikes the last word in the pursuit of the art of the rollers, and the following which the establishment always command is excellent proof of the facilities afforded. Residenters in the southern section of the city are amply provided for in skating recreation in the handsome Ibrox establishment. Still entertaining patrons with all the latest ideas in wheelers, Manager James Slater has installed the Dennistoun Rink as one of the most attractive rinks in and around the city area.

Percy Reiss to Leave Gloucester.

The manager of the Gloucester Olympia Skating Rink, Mr. Percy Reiss, resigned his position on Saturday last. A carnival took place on Easter Monday.

Municipal Roller Races.

One of the chief attractions of the Easter holidays at Great Yarmouth was a series of roller skating races, promoted by the Corporation in their beautiful grounds at the Wellington Pier. Two of the races were for boys and girls. The first was won by Master A. Harbord, and the latter by his sister. The chief event was the three miles race, for which there was an entry of twenty-one. In the final the holder, David Moss, defeated F. Royal by four yards after a great struggle in 11min. 46 3-5sec.

At Holmside.

Roller-skating is going on as merrily as ever at the Holmeside Rink, Sunderland, this week. On Easter Monday the evening session was extended until 11 o'clock, and during the last portion of the evening a "confetti battle" was "fought." These innovations, the idea of Mr. Walton, at once "caught on," the "battle" being great fun, both for those participating in it and those looking on.

Easter at Ipswich Rink.

The fact that rinking has not lost its popularity was well demonstrated at the Empress Rink at Ipswich on Good Friday, when the management opened all day. The floor was in splendid condition, and close on a thousand persons visited the rink.

Bertha Doud Mack at Newport.

The management of the Stow Hill Rink has once more shown its enterprise in inducing Miss Bertha Doud Mack to visit Newport for a week. Of Miss Mack's performances there this week it is scarcely possible to convey an adequate description. When insurance companies refuse to renew policies unless certain tricks are omitted, it is apparent that the artist must be quite outside the ordinary. Miss Mack gave her performance every evening this week at 9 p.m.

Amateur Championship at Nottingham.

Owing to the success of the last few partners' races, the management of the Empress Roller Skating Rink, Nottingham, decided to run a series of them this week. The heats of the forthcoming amateur championship (gentlemen) commenced this week. The final will take place on April 14—the night of the last carnival.

New Ogmore Vale Rink.

Mr. Chas. Rattray, of the Palace Rink, Ogmore Vale, has secured Mr. F. Studd, jun., late of Olympia Skating Rink, Pentre, as manager.

Lady Floor-Manager at Pentre.

Under the management of Mr. Pattison, the Pentre Olympia Skating Rink continues to prove a popular place of amusement. Last Monday the floor was thronged at all three "sessions." Miss Daisy Turner is a very popular floor manageress.

Coming Carnival at Porth Rink.

Rinking at Rhyl.

Throughout the winter months skating has been a most popular pastime at the Queen's Skating Rink, Rhyl. Last Monday a very fine carnival was held.

Good Business in South Wales.

At Swansea and Mumbles all the rinks (Olympic, Swansea; Kursaal, Mumbles; and the Pier Rink, Mumbles) have been well patronised this week. The impending strike in South Wales is sadly interfering with the business in the Llanddas

New Sparkhill Skatery Opened.

The new roller-skating rink opened at Sparkhill, Birmingham, on Good Friday afternoon has immediately sprung into the forefront of popularity, and during Eastertide the huge floor has been thronged with devotees of the little wheel. There is a vast population in the surrounding neighbourhood, and facilities for roller-skating have been yearned for by residents for a considerable time past. At the opening ceremony several influential citizens were among the hundreds who participated in the pastime, and many speeches of an optimistic nature were delivered.

Carnival at Truro Rink.

At the up-to-date County Rink at Truro crowded floors are the rule. Mr. Alex. Corrison, late of the Penzance Rink, is assistant-manager, and the Truro Territorial Band is engaged. On Monday a fancy-dress carnival was held, the dresses being extremely good. There was a record attendance. Exhibitions of fancy skating were given by the instructor (Mr. E. Willis) and instructress (Miss Fido).

"THE MODERN BIOSCOPE OPERATOR"

It has been apparent for a long time past to those engaged in the moving picture industry that a handbook of reference and advice on details was needed. Such a work a little time ago made its appearance with the title of "The Modern Bioscope Operator." It is a compact, well-printed volume issued by Messrs. Ganes, Ltd., of 31, Litchfield-street, W.C., and should be in the hands of the multitudes of operators and managers both in this country and abroad. It is written by men who have been in the business since its infancy, and between its green covers will be found a mass of facts and information worth a hundred times more than the price charged for the book. The contents include chapters on the film, the optical system of the bioscope, limelight, electric light, types of projectors, manipulation, operating, faults to be avoided, Cinematograph Act (1909), Home Office Regulations for bioscope shows, local authorities' regulations, the Act of 1751, the Children Act, 1908, and tables for bioscope operators.

One interesting fact we learn from this volume is that when moving pictures first became recognised as a form of entertainment a deal of mystery surrounded the machinery with which they were produced. Projectors were carefully guarded from view so that no layman should know the means employed, and the operators of the diverse styles of apparatus were careful that no competitor should find out the special form of appliance in use. Projectors were carefully packed and locked up, or even taken home after each performance. They were kept clean and guarded from injury, and the secrets, or supposed secrets, of their mechanisms and the names of their makers carefully preserved. Later the number of operators and of the machines became so great that the mysterious side of the question gradually faded away. Another remarkable statement to be read in "The Modern Bioscope Operator" is that the idea of moving pictures can be traced back through the Kinetoscope by way of the old-fashioned Zoetrope, or Wheel of Life, to the Thaumatrope, which in itself was exceedingly simple; but even then we are not at the root of the matter, or at least it seems not, for recently the idea has been propounded that on a Greek tablet has been found a record which leads one to suppose the existence of moving pictures before the year 100 B.C. But it was reserved for a Frenchman, M. Lumière, in 1896 to get "living pictures" put on at the variety theatres as a star turn. We have merely touched on the fringe of the exceedingly interesting contents of this volume. It is interesting from every point of view. The young operator will find it exceedingly instructive. The proprietor will find it of such use that he will never allow it to be removed from his desk.

The first out-of-door fête and gala of 1910 at the Sydney Gardens, Bath, took place on Monday, when the well-known local entrepeneur, Mr. Carl Fredericks, submitted a galaxy of attractions.

"At the Carnival" is the name of a new entertainment with which the Cameron Quartet are winning favour at the Empire, Camberwell, this week. The title is justified by a garden set embellished with Chinese lanterns and other signs of jubilation, amid which three revellers habited respectively as Scotsman, toreador, and cavalier, sing tenor and bass songs and comic lays. An eccentric page-boy adds to the comedy element, and joins the Highlander in a cleverly-executed simultaneous dance. The vocal quality of the quartet is manifested in a series of quaint concerted melodies, and a stirring rendering of "The March of the Cameron Men" at the close gains them a hearty recall.

Cinematograph Act, 1909, which came into force Jan. 1, 1910, also the Cinematograph Regulations made by the Secretary of State, which came into operation Jan. 1, 1910, with an appendix concerning Limelight and What the Cinematograph Showman must do. Explanations of the Act and the Regulations. The Act—the Regulations—the Explanations—sent post free, four stamps. Address: The Publisher, "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

SHOW LIFE IN AUSTRALIA.

Show life in the Colonies, like every other place, of course, draws a line of demarkation here and there, whether merited or otherwise. The crème de la crème of vaudeville shine from Harry Rickards' bills, and if an artist really wants to know what fame in miniature means, let her go out to Australia from London, under engagement to this genial and successful manager. Long before she reaches the Commonwealth States her name is a matter creative of as much comment there as the Shah of Persia's would be here. Pars appear in the dailies—and long pars, too—announcing that Mr. Rickards has engaged at enormous expense the inimitable artist ——. Everyone talks about it. "By Jove, have you heard? Harry is bringing out —— from London on a £200 a week wicket. There's never been anything like her here. Pots of money in London; but she wants to see Australia. We'll give her a good time, boys!"

When the marvellous one arrives the leading dailies announce it as if an Emperor, a Queen, or a messenger from Mars had come along. Crowds go down to meet the boat, and deep interest prevails as the star performer performs the simple act of walking down the gangway. Everyone is prepared to like her even before she has made an initial bow, and as London artists are invariably good this premeditated affection is justified from the moment she radiates a starry smile across the crowd of enraptured Australian boys. After that her path is one of glory—should the lady so desire. Motor-cars, motor launches, diamonds, and social lionising. If she be a single star she can always marry well, and there are several instances of English artists forsaking the footlights for love and the solid comforts of an Australian husband's substantial income. Olive Morrell married "Willie" Kelly, a wealthy and attractive young member of Parliament. Maud Jeffries, a dramatic star, married a millionaire squatter named Osborn; while dainty Dorothy Vane has for some years been Mrs. Norman Menzies, and a leader of fashion in Melbourne.

Rickards' importations usually open at Sydney or Melbourne, and top the bill for a month in each—then on to Adelaide, West Australia, and sometimes New Zealand, or Brisbane.

Mr. Rickards has no theatre of his own in this latter place, but sometimes arranges with Holland, of the Royal in Brisbane, for a star to appear there. Cull Pitt was showing there last winter. Generally New Zealand is toured with his English draw and a Colonial support. This is a lovely trip, and wherever they go an enthusiastic reception is ready.

The masculine star has as much glory perhaps as the feminine luminary. I remember some years ago in Sydney it was said that Ugo Biondi could not open all his love letters. He was astounding Sydney with his lightning changes, and the girls fell victims all round. There were rumours, too, about Little Tich's irresistible attractions; and as for Chung Ling Soo—in spite of Mrs. Chung Ling—nobody talked of anything else for a month in Melbourne last year.

In short, if you want to be "great," even if the scene of your lustre be set in the distant Pacific and the flash of your illumination "cometise"—go to Australia under engagement to Harry Rickards.

I am speaking only, you understand, of vaudeville artists; but there is hardly sufficient scope for members of any other branch out there.

William Anderson, of King's Theatre, Melbourne, is a successful dramatic manager, but there is little opening for newcomers, as he has a stock company, some of its members having been with him for years.

Bland Holt also has had his company together for a long time. Meynell and Gunn—a comparatively new firm—go in more for importing artists, but once you finish an engagement with them it is best to get back here, as Australia is no permanent field for dramatic stars.

Williamson, "&c.," is, of course, a very solid concern, and the oldest in Australia; but he has, of late years, gone in for developing local talent, of which there is a very passable quantity.

Vaudeville, if you want to embrace the Southern climate, is the best investment for your time and talents. Any fine variety artist capable of thinking out new acts can command good salaries, although there are only a few firms running—Rickards, Bremnons, Fix, Fuller (of New Zealand), Holland (of Queensland), and Lucas (of Tasmania). Bremnon owns two houses, one in Sydney and one in Melbourne. He is a very wealthy man, and a fine fellow, but so patriotic that he will not import artists from abroad while there are plenty of Australians looking for a shop. His company is known as the National Entertainers, and constitute a very fine show. Every act new and smart, dresses beautiful; stage scenery, management, &c., beyond criticism, but there is no chance of working a turn till it's threadbare. Every week an entire change of programme is billed, and must be given. Although Mr. Bremnon does not engage artists from abroad, this does not bar any English or foreign performer getting a hearing from the genial Jimmy Bain, his Sydney manager, or jovial Harry Bremnon, his Melbourne controller, and anyone with a good act may be pretty sure of dates, as these enterprising managers are always looking out for novelties.

There are practically no agents in Australia. If you have a turn, whether known or unknown, you just write in to the management. Invariably you receive a polite reply, Mr. J. C. Leete, of Sydney Tivoli Theatre, being especially noted for this, either making appointment or declining the idea; but once you get on a good programme you can always make a first-class salary, even if £200 a week does not loom in the near distance.

The A.V.A. Club, formed a few years ago, fixed the mimimum salary at 10s. 6d. single performance, or £3 a week, doubles proportionately; but of course any attractive act draws much more than this; but £8 for a double and £5 for single artist is an average rate of payment for average performers at the houses I have mentioned.

Then comes the suburban manager. He pays these rates, too, but only runs a one-night stand in each place, and seldom books an artist for more than four dates, with a gap of one or two nights between. These, of course, the artist can fill up in other suburban circuits, of which there are several, all in the hands of reliable men whose money is sure.

Touring in Australia is very pleasant and profitable if with a good company, but, like the city, has its degrees; but even the last degree seldom reaches the tragedy of financial "bed-rock," as living, hotels, &c., is much cheaper than in the provinces, and the price of halls and country theatres there range from 10s. to £5 per night, it may be seen that it takes very little to make good. There are several little bands of artists, some on the Commonwealth system, who started out with little more than fares to the first town, making good salaries all the year and having a pleasant time; but in Australia you must treat your country customer well. Give him what you promise on the bill, and be sure that it's something which will make him laugh, and you may always be sure of a good house on your next trip.

The most unique form of touring is that undertaken by courageous spirits, who start to what is called the "Never, Never Country"—the great inland area of plainland, heat, mosquitoes, and snakes. There are no railways or hotels, and no theatres or halls. Just the big "squatter runs;" and little wayside shanties dotted at intervals of a few hundred miles. Companies who start on such a trip have to travel in hooded buggies, and carry all the paraphernalia of a camp—beds, bedding, tents, big canvas water-bag, mosquito net, and provisions. It is adventurous, perhaps, but means a lot of hard work.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD

The Tower, New Brighton.
Two record successes marked the opening of the holiday season at this popular resort. 16,000 persons passed through the turnstiles on Good Friday, and on Easter Monday over 50,000. The Easter Monday crowd was 11,000 in excess of previous records, and the Good Friday visitors exceeded by 3,000, the best record for that day. All the shows and concerns on the ground did good business.

Sedgwick's Menagerie.
This popular menagerie visited Darwen on Thursday, March 24, when it was thronged by a large and appreciative audience. The wild beasts encaged there remind one of boyhood days, when this popular institution visited Darwen more frequently. There are several cages of forest-bred lions, one cage containing six of these beasts, which are considered to be the finest specimens of their kind in the country. Several lionesses are to be seen in cub, as is also a leopardess. There is an excellent specimen of the Russian bear, whilst there is also a fine emu. Some half-dozen camels and performing elephants are also to be seen. A baby lion cub is an interesting object, whilst the wolves, looking fierce and in the prime of condition, recall their savagery in their native wilds. The tamer enters one cage with several boarhounds, and they perform with a group of lions. In another cage the daring of the tamer is put to the severest test as he subdues the ferociousness of the lions and puts them through some remarkable manœuvres. Probably Sedgwick's wild beast show is the finest beast show in the country, notwithstanding the glamour that surrounds the name of other popular shows, and certainly the cage performances are far superior to any other wild beast performances in the United Kingdom. Mr. Sedgwick is to be congratulated on the high state of excellence of his show.—From the Darwen Gazette, March 26.

Roundabout Accident.
An accident, which resulted in a man named George Cousins, aged about thirty, of Earle-street, Plumstead, sustaining injury to the head and concussion of the brain, occurred at Blackheath on Easter Monday. A number of holiday makers on the heath suddenly made a rush to a steam roundabout in order to secure positions, and the force of their weight caused a portion of the structure to collapse. A number of people, in consequence, were thrown to the ground, among them being Cousins, who was struck on the head by a falling beam. Several other persons were injured, but none of them seriously.

Later details of this sad affair inform us that the unfortunate man succumbed to his injuries. At the inquest the proprietor of the machine, Mr. Wm. Wilson, was exonerated from all blame, and a verdict of Accidental death was returned. The roundabout was in perfect condition. It was the tremendous rush of the people to board the machine that overstrained the strength of the supporting overhead rafters (technically known as swifts) that caused the calamity.

James Jennings's electric gallopers and attendant side-shows have been forming a big draw on the Broadquay, Bath, during the Easter holidays.

The show ground of the Alexandra Park was liberally patronised on Bank Holiday; many old faces and new ones were to be seen. The American Cake Walk was coining money from morn till night; the Industrial Hall of the Palace had all the "Fun of the Fair," that good old showman Freeman, with his nearly fifty years' experience, and his ever-young niece as busy as ever—the Fishing Pond, the Slipping the Slip, and the Haunted Swing, with other stalls too numerous to mention. Professor Charles, the veteran, and his Punch and Judy show performed at intervals during the day; and Golding, the evergreen ventriloquist and entertainer, in the South Corridor Hall reaped a well-earned harvest. In the Conservatory, thanks to Captain Henry, a handsome new Amazon parrot was presented by Mr. F. Robertsort, of Finsbury Park; whilst another new arrival, a Jew monkey, named "Dook," was the gift of Mr. R. S. Wade, of Morden House, Stamford Hill. The trustees' luck was well in the ascendant, for a presentation to Captain Henry's care was a magnificent new aviary by Mr. Cook, of Crouch End. The skating rink was patronised in sessions, of which there were four, and the show world was never busier than it has been this last holiday; and Ward's new bowling game, "Tempinette," was the latest craze that has taken on at the A.P., and found employment for many.

The White City, Manchester.
J. Calvin Brown also advertise for the famous Manchester White City several good sites.

Notes from Wales.
Neath Easter Fair was held under favourable conditions. The chief attraction was Wadbrooke's premier picture and variety palace, where some of the latest were shown to delighted audiences. Messrs. Henry Studt and Son has his magnificent motors and racers; Prince Samuda had his beautifully-constructed hoop-la. Our old friend Mr. J. North was in his old place with hoop-las, shooters, cokers, &c.

Miss Ada Alexander's Circus is on the South Wales Circuit, meeting with deserved success. Full particulars of the show will follow when in Neath.

Messrs. Crecraft are on a visit at Ammanford with a very attractive programme.

Well-known Showman Shot.
The Burton-on-Trent papers record the sad death of a much-esteemed Derbyshire amusement caterer under the following circumstances:—"A tragic discovery took place in the Smithfield Fairground, Burton, on Tuesday evening. George Neal, the proprietor of a shooting gallery, had been attending to his booth during the evening, and about seven o'clock he took up one of the rifles used at the booth, and, it is said, placed it to his forehead and discharged it. He fell to the ground, with a large bullet wound in the forehead. The report of the shot attracted the attention of other people on the ground, and rushing to where Neal lay they were confronted with a shocking sight. The man was alive, but it was apparent that his injury was very severe, part of his brain protruding. Dr. R. Coats was summoned, and Neal was quickly conveyed to the Burton Infirmary. His condition was obviously critical, but it was thought that, by an operation, he might recover. This was satisfactorily performed, but Neal died about half-past nine o'clock. About fifty-two years of age, he was well known in the locality as a showman, having frequently pitched on the Smithfield, and he was generally respected by fellow-showmen. Neal was married, and leaves a widow and one child." We feel sure that the bereaved family will receive the fullest sympathy from their wide circle of friends in Showland.

Trade Exhibition at Birmingham.
Bingley Hall.—General-Manager, Mr. George Stanley.—During the past week crowds of pleasure-seekers have visited the National Trades' Exhibition, at which are featured ladies' dress displays by living models, artisans' and women's work; a Boy Scouts' Camp and competitions, illuminated fairy fountain, and many other attractions. The Black Dike Band and H.M. Scots Guards' pipers and dancers have also been a great draw.

GUILD ELECTION CAMPAIGN AT MITCHAM.

As previously chronicled in our pages, the Showmen's Guild is carrying forward a vigorous election campaign at Mitcham. In pursuance of this object meetings have been held every day during the week, and every elector has received the Guild circular, setting forth the people's fair rights.

Following upon the open-air demonstration on the Fair Green, fully reported in The Era in our last issue, a public meeting was held in the Vestry Hall, Mitcham, on Easter Tuesday night. The attendance was good, and great unanimity prevailed. The vote in favour of preserving the people's fair rights was carried with but one dissentient.

In the unavoidable absence of Councillor C. H. Dant, the well-known champion of the people's fair rights, Councillor Bland was voted to the chair, and with him on the platform were another old stalwart supporter of the people's fair, in the person of Mr. Grange, ex-councillor and candidate for the coming election, and the Rev. T. Horne. In the body of the hall were Councillors Dendy and Dale, and several candidates for the municipal honours.

The following telegrams were read: "To Pedgrift, Vestry Hall, Mitcham,—Regret inability to come. Wish you good luck. I am canvassing for you.—Dant." "Unable to get to England till late this evening. Make appointments for Wednesday.—Pedgrift." "Success to your meeting. Sorry I cannot be present with you; pressure of business prevents.—Alf Ball."

The Chairman's Address.
Mr. Bland, who was warmly received, regretted the unfortunate absence of Mr. Dant. It was extremely difficult for him to take the place of so able a public man, and although he had been unexpectedly called upon to preside at that meeting he would do his best to bring their proceedings to a proper issue. He relied upon the forbearance of the meeting to atone for any faults of the chair.

There were, in his judgment, three matters of right and justice involved in this struggle to maintain the people's fair rights. To begin with, there were the "rights of the people." The Law Courts would take care of the beneficial rights of the owners of the fair franchise to draw the tolls. What he was mainly concerned with was the people's right to continue the fair under the old charter. That was a popular right, secured to them not only by charter, but by long use and custom. It was a right that if once surrendered would be lost to the people of Mitcham for ever.

Ever since he had been upon the Parish Council he had advocated the people's right to hold the fair. With Mr. Dant, Mr. Baker, and other champions of popular rights, he had struggled to maintain the people's claim for Mitcham Fair, and if he was honoured with a continuance of the people's vote and support, he pledged himself to continue in the same course.

The second right that he defended was the right of the ratepayers. They all knew about the £400 that had been voted by the Council towards the purchase of the franchise of the fair. That transaction he and others on the Council had stigmatised in unmistakable terms. The material point to the ratepayers now was that, having put £400 into the purchase of the fair rights, the parish was entitled to receive some benefit from the investment. He and others—ratepayers of the parish—were entitled to ask the gentlemen who had used their money to purchase that property to pass over the documents that secured the fair rights to the parish, for the benefit of the people.

It was wrong to suppose that the people of Mitcham (who had shown their strong opposition to any scheme to abolish the fair) would have given knowingly £400 towards the purchase of the fair rights in order to extinguish them, and to stop the fair. That was the ratepayer's right and he hoped that at the coming election they would vote only for councillors who would endeavour to secure to the ratepayers the full benefit of the £400 of public money.

Ever since the fair franchise had been held by its present possessors no tolls had been drawn from the showmen frequenting the fair. He understood that at the very least there had been a loss of £50 in rent each year, since the franchise owners had taken their futile action to stop the fair. Here the ratepayers' money was being put to a use contrary to the known wishes of the parish.

The third right was that of the Parish Council. He contended that it was the duty of every Parish Councillor to maintain the rights of the Council to exercise proper control over the people's money, and to conserve to the full the people's rights. The Parish Council was the guardian of the public purse. It was amazing and distressing to him to find that only a small number of the members of the late Parish Council had protested against the spending of public monies for the purpose of extinguishing the people's fair. He held very strongly that such a policy was a waste of the people's money that the Parish Council ought to have been the very first to have prevented.

With regard to the Showmen's Guild and its action at the present time (as well as in the past) he had no hesitation in regarding it as a proper and straightforward course of action. The showmen were entitled to defend their business interests, and in agitating as they had done they were not only defending their own interests, but keeping well before the electors the people's fair rights as well as their own.

In conclusion he briefly referred to one or two matters of general interest to the electors present but of no material moment to our showmen readers, and called upon the Guild chaplain to address the meeting.

The Guild Chaplain's Speech.
At the outset of his remarks the chaplain cleared the ground of any possible misapprehension as to the right of the Showmen's Guild to intervene at election time. It was in no partisan or political spirit, nor with any desire to meddle in local affairs, that the Showmen's Guild had taken action. He reminded the meeting of the two great objects that the organised showmen of Great Britain contended for. First, the vindication of the showmen's right to pursue his lawful avocation in life, and, second, to uplift and improve the popular amusements provided for the people at our fairs, feasts, and wakes.

It was not until the fair at Mitcham was attacked that the Showmen's Guild appeared upon the scene. The organised showmen, whose representative and advocate (as well as chaplain) he was proud to be, never interfered in local or imperial concerns, for the Guild was a strictly non-partisan and non-political body. Their great objective was the protection of the showman's trade and enterprise. Wherever that was attacked, there the showmen entered the lists to maintain their right to carry on their business without let or hindrance from unjust attack or legislation.

He briefly reviewed the history of the attack on the people's fair rights at Mitcham. He showed how some four years ago a group of gentlemen interested in Mitcham set out to obtain the abolition of its ancient fair. Continuing, the chaplain explained to the meeting that no fair could be abolished except under the statute provided for that purpose. The law of the realm provided that before a fair could be abolished the people of the district, as well as the traders and showmen using the fair, must have full opportunity of presenting their claims by petition to the Home Secretary, whose word in the matter was final either for or against the fair. The complaint of the showmen was that the Home Secretary had been appealed to, and that the existing deadlock and the recurring trouble year by year at Mitcham Fair was entirely owing to the fact that a small group of gentlemen, amongst whom were the present possessors of the fair franchise, had ignored the decision of the Home Secretary, the Executive Officer of the Crown in this matter, and had attempted, without the warrant of the Abolition of Fairs Act, to prevent the holding of the fair.

What the Guild asked the Electors to do.
To take care that no known enemy of the people's fair rights was sent to the Council. He warned the electors that their only opportunity of maintaining their fair rights, and impressing their views upon the custodians of those rights, was at the ballot box when they cast their votes on the following Monday. The Showmen's Guild had entered the field to keep this matter clearly before the electors. He trusted that the people of Mitcham would take full advantage of the opportunity, and take care that only the friends and advocates of the people's right to maintain their fair were returned to the Parish Council.

He made a strong appeal to the Parish Councillors and to the candidates present to take a broad-minded and liberal view of the question before them. He admitted to the full that there were certain people for whom the fair had no interest, and to whom it afforded no pleasure. That sort of person was usually in a position to afford other kinds of pleasure and amusement. He drew a humorous picture of the better and wealthier classes attending theatres, variety palaces, and the grand opera. Of their ability to speed away by motor or express train from the deadly dullness of village life to sunny climes and pleasure resorts. It was to him a sheer injustice for people so well circumstanced, with so many opportunities of enjoyment, to grudge the working man and his child the innocent amusement of the fair.

It was not for the wealthier classes to deprive their poorer neighbours of the three days' fun and jollity of the fair on the Fair Green of Mitcham.

True, he admitted, the fun might at times be a bit noisy. It was the comradeship of life in the open, and perfectly safe fellowship of enjoyment at the fair. He was proud of the consistent record of the Showmen's Guild on this matter of the people's amusement. The Guild stood for the betterment of popular amusement. He claimed that the organised showmen had moved with the times, and had improved their entertainments more than any class in the community. He asked the Parish Councillors and candidates to take a wise and statesmanlike view of the question; to co-operate with the showmen in the necessary removal, and the improvement of the fair. The Guild had from the first recognised the value of the Home Secretary's suggestion to try and move the fair from its present congested site to a more commodious one, on the people's common, where the fair would have room to grow, and to serve modern requirements.

He warned the electors against removal unless it was so done as to carry with it the charter right. He assured them that no scheme would satisfy the showmen that did not provide for the transfer of all the rights and privileges of the old fair to the new site. He made no concealment of the showmen's intention to frequent, and to maintain the old fair on its ancient site—the Fair Green—until the fair was either properly transferred or legally abolished. He paid a grateful tribute of praise to gentlemen like Mr. Dant, their chairman, Mr. Baker, and others who had fought for the people's rights.

The Guild Chaplain concluded his vigorous speech by moving the following resolution:—"That this public meeting asks the Mitcham Parish Council to co-operate with all well-considered proposals to maintain the people's Fair for the people. Further, and in order to perpetuate the Fair, to take all necessary steps to remove it from its present congested site to a more commodious one on the people's common land."

The motion was seconded by Mr. Grange (a candidate for the Council Chamber), and passed with acclamation, only one hand being held up against it.

On the motion of Messrs. Horne and King a hearty vote of thanks was given to the chairman, and the meeting came to an end.

Other Meetings and Speeches.
On Wednesday, at 5.30 p.m., the Rev. T. Horne and Councillor Bland addressed the workers as they left the Mitcham Gasworks. Short, telling speeches were given by both gentlemen, and the leaflets of the Guild on the people's Fair Rights were freely distributed.

The following night (Thursday) a meeting of the electors in the Singlegate district of Mitcham was held in the schoolroom. Mr. Bland was again chairman, and with him were the Organising Chaplain, Councillor Baker, Mr. W. E. Roche, and other local gentlemen. The showmen present were Alf Ball, Wm. Wilson, John Searle, and F. Wilson. Telegrams of apology for absence from Messrs. Wm. Taylor, Geo. Beach, and F. Gray were received at the Guild Committee Rooms, Buck's Head-parade, Mitcham, before the meeting. Vigorous addresses on the Fair Rights question and other threatened rights of the people were given by the chairman, the Chaplain, and Mr. Baker. A resolution similar in terms to the one passed at the Vestry Hall was passed unanimously, and the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

The following handbill will show what a busy propaganda the Guild has carried through:—

FILM GOSSIP.

"Taming a Husband."
Man's indifference cured by woman's wit is the theme of the latest film to be released by Messrs. Markt and Co. next week. The heroine of the story is Lady Margaret, whose husband is so engrossed with social and business matters that he is often guilty of seeming indifference. She believes that his love has grown cold, and in desperation confides her fears to her best friend, Lady Clarissa, inviting her to visit and advise her. Lady Clarissa arrives, and at once hits upon a plan. She dresses herself in male attire, and assumes the rôle of a lover. Clarissa as a young gallant makes quite an impression upon the male companions of the husband, and finds her position at times rather embarrassing, especially when invited to join them in drinking and smoking. She blatantly flirts with Lady Margaret, and several times they are surprised together by the husband. He finally catches the young unknown on his knees before his wife. This is too much, and a challenge is the outcome. Seconds are selected and the time is set. The seconds for Clarissa try to dissuade their "man" from meeting his adversary, stating that the other man has such an advantage over him, he being such a big fellow. This has no effect, and the seconds leave despairing for their friend, as it seems suicidal. They return again with another plea, and find their "man" in the arms of the wife. This enrages them, and having witnessed his perfidy, they refuse to act, reasoning that the field of honour is too good; he should be slain on the spot. They convey to the husband their impression and the cause of it, which throws him into a frenzy of fury. Into the house they go with sword in hand, bent on instantly despatching the vile wretch. Lady Clarissa sees them coming and locks the door, which she realises will prove but a slight obstruction to the raging husband, so she, frightened, dons her conventional habiliments, and when the door yields to their battering, in rushes the husband to learn the truth of the situation and appreciate the guilt of his own negligence.

Tyler's Latest.
At the Rehearsal Theatre, in Maiden-lane, Strand, a series of demonstrations have been given by Walter Tyler, Ltd., of 48-50, Waterloo-road, S.E., of the innovations and inventions which the firm has introduced into the cinematograph business. Amongst them may be mentioned the Tyler Patent Safety Auto Cut Out and Motor Stop, a "fool-proof" attachment, described as a "paid-up policy for insurance against loss by fire"; the Tyler Patent Daylight Sheet, which is said to mark a new era for showmen, causing summer business to boom; the Ganzine Patent Screen for partially-lighted halls, for which it is claimed that it improves the picture, brightening old films and enabling shows to be given in a well-lighted auditorium; and the 1910 Tyler-Ernemann All-Steel Imperator Projector, "the refinement of perfection and absolute precision."

Our Navy and Army.
Mr. Alfred West's cinematograph pictures of life in the Navy and Army occupy a unique place in the picture world. For more than a dozen years Mr. West has been making people familiar with the daily work of our soldiers and sailors, and has succeeded beyond all others, not only in entertaining the public, but in stimulating patriotism in a marked degree. The programme which he presents at the Regent-street Polytechnic has thus the double merit of being one of the best of its kind, and at the same time doing more than a little to help recruiting for the services. Some time ago Mr. West gave an entertainment at Ilford, when one of the audience, a chief petty officer of the Royal Navy, came up and shook hands with him, and said he wished to thank him for being the means of his joining the Navy. It turned out that the petty officer had attended a previous entertainment Mr. West had given in Ilford, and as the result he had gone away and enlisted in the Navy, "and," added the grateful bluejacket, "the time I saw your pictures was the most fruitful two hours I ever spent."

The pictures, together with the admirable descriptions given by Lieutenant Sutherland, R.N.R., never fail to excite interest and enthusiasm. The present season of our Navy and Army terminates next Saturday. This early termination is due to the circumstance that the Regent-street Polytechnic is about to be rebuilt. Mr. West will make a tour of the principal towns round the South Coast during the rebuilding. The pictures presented to the audience are all quite up to date, and include some which admirably illustrate the physical benefit and mental alertness conferred upon young men who join either the Navy, the Army, or the Territorial Service. The latter force has a series devoted to itself. Humorous pictures are included in the programme.

Strand Theatre de Luxe.
The principal pictures being shown this week at the Theatre de Luxe, Strand, are: The Cloister's Touch, Electric Train from Fayet to Chomonix, Taking a Day Off, What's Bred in the Bone, The Orderly, Villainy Defeated, Apple Industry in Canada, and Up-to-Date Imps.

Local Pictures at Enfield.
The generous action of the London Bioscope Company, Ltd., in allocating the proceeds of a performance held last week at the Enfield Empire to Our Hospital Fund was supported by a large number of local residents. At both the evening shows in particular the attendances were very gratifying. Pictures of peculiar interest, locally, included one of Colonel Sir A. Somerset's horses and coach, and another gave a view of the hospital.

New Hall at Greenwich.
Yet another place of amusement was opened in Greenwich on Saturday last. The hall, which is situated opposite the Greenwich Market, holds about 400 people. Seven exits have been provided, which will render the hall one of the safest in London. A speciality is submitted in the shape of singing pictures, a feature entirely new in this part of London. The Mercury convertor installed shows a perfectly steady picture. The decoration of the hall is in the Japanese style, and generally the new resort is designed on lines which should ensure its popularity.

Belfast has another picture palace. On Easter Monday the Princess Picture Palace opened in Ballymacarrett, under the management of Captain T. A. Blake. As there is a very large population, composed mainly of shipyard workers, residing in this district, the new place of amusement should do well. The pictures exhibited at the opening comprised Gambling with Death, The Devil Woman, Little Willie, The Tragic Hour, &c. Variety is supplied by Mr. Sydney Grant in his speciality act, and Will and Maud, a comedy couple.

From Chapel to Theatre.
The New Gosport Electric Theatre opened its doors on Easter Monday, on the bi-nightly system, when the house was packed at both performances. The building, which has been converted from chapel to a theatre, was, before 1810, devoted to the use of the drama, and now reverts to its original purpose as a playhouse, although principally of the vaudeville character. A fine gallery has been built, with tip-up seats, upholstered in crimson plush. The pit seats are also tip-up, and the house not being a large one, presents a very cosy and comfortable appearance. Ruffell's Bioscopic films, which on Monday included an old theatre bill dated 1797, are an important feature of the entertainment. Parks and Price, in their musical novelties, were well received, and Lil Elfrida was rapturously encored for her songs and mimicry of vaudeville stars.

Nottingham's New House of Amusement.
The last word in moving pictures is "Kinemacolor," which is, briefly, as its name implies, living pictures in their natural colours. Throughout the country there have arisen recently palaces of entertainment, conspicuous by their brilliantly lit entrances, overarched by domes of dazzling white. Such a palace has been erected in Nottingham, and here, in Milton-street local people will have one of the first opportunities given in the provinces of seeing this development of the cinematograph. The theatre which has been erected in Milton-street will seat 450 people comfortably. There is no doubt about the comfort, for a glimpse of the interior reveals a room beautifully decorated in blue and white, with blue carpet and blue-cushioned seats in every part of the house. It is the intention of the proprietors to run a continuous show from afternoon till night.

The Bioscope in Siam.
Cinematograph pictures have been introduced into Bangkok, and have become the most sought for amusement of all classes in Siam, says a Consular report.

A Gaumont Winner.
The Ugliest Queen on Earth is the title of a Gaumont film that has been shown at the Kensington Picture Palace this week. It tells the tale of a very ugly queen, who was so ugly, in fact, that her courtiers had to devise expedients to keep her in ignorance of the fact. One day, however—on her twentieth birthday—she insists on going out, and the Prime Minister issues an order that all mirrors in the kingdom are to be broken, streams are to be disturbed, the polish to be taken off all armour-plate, and saucepans are to be kept dirty. The execution of this order creates great amusement. The queen duly comes out. A young lover who says to his sweetheart that she is more beautiful than the queen is arrested and taken to be executed for high treason. Here, however, the queen sees a reflection of her face in the executioner's axe, and—well, that's anticipating events.

Eastertide in Shipley Glen.
The merrie-men and fun-makers in the Glen were Samuels, with picture and variety company; T. Harness, with galloping horses; D. Johnson, with bikes; Brook Bros., Thompson, Redfern, and Burgess, with shooters, houp-las, and throwing games.

Guild Subscriptions, 1910.
Per Mr. Shuttleworth: Mr. H. Butterworth, 10s. 6d.; Mr. J. Cottam, 5s.; Mr. J. J. Butterworth, jun., 5s. Per Guild secretary: Mr. G. T. Tuby, £2.

Holywell Easter Fair.
This ancient fair was maintained in excellent form by P. Collins' Cinema Palais de Luxe; Miss M. Collins' electric jumping horses, park swings, houp-la circles, and Gem roundabouts; Fossett's shooting ranges; Turner's Winchester shooting gallery; Hart's throwing games; and stalls, bazaars, &c., by local caterers.

Easter Holidays at Blackheath.
Here were Wilson's Teddy Bears and racing birds; R. Clasper's aggregation of amusements; Mrs. Knighton's fine art gallery, swings, and games; Madame Bowman, the tattooed lady; the Indian juggling show; Andrews' shooters and games; Bishop and Gilbey's swings and coker sheets; a great variety of stalls and minor amusements by a crowd of caterers.

Tooting Common Fair.
Mr. John Searle, with roundabouts, shooters, houp-la circles, swings, and stalls, was the chief provider of amusement here for the holiday. With him were Messrs. F. Wilson, with diving pictures; Bailey, with shooting range and games; Mrs. Rawling, H. Searle, and other caterers.

Huddersfield Easter Fair.
The big concerns at this important Easter centre were Ashington's Cinema Pavilion and Marionette Theatre; Farrar and Tyler's Picture Palace; W. H. Marshall and Son, similar concern; Farrar and Tyler, great machine novelty, the scenic railway; J. W. Waddington's motor cars, steam yachts, and racing birds; W. H. Marshall's motors and galloping horses; Gavin's scenic slide; Mosley's steam swings, hand swings (big and little); and high-fliers by Messrs. Proctor, Riley, Blake, Barker, Gavin, Hughes, and Morley; Gem horses (four sets) by Messrs. Marshall, Kershaw, and Seed. Amongst the minor amusements were shooting ranges by Messrs. Jameson, Radcliffe, Seed, and Holdsworth; houp-la circles and stalls by Messrs. Bessett, Ackroyd, Blackburn, Jameson, Clark, Proctor, Peters, Hughes, Chapman, Lees, Hyde, Riley, and Manders; cokernut sheets by Messrs. Guthrie, Jameson, Ackroyd, and Riley; throwing games and variety stalls by Messrs. Steward, Bassett, Redfern, Daly, Waugh, Castle, Blake, Holdsworth, Jameson, and Chapman; bazaar and toystalls by Messrs. Seed, Kitson, and Hughes; pea saloon by Mr. Hutchinson; pannum and confectionery stalls by Messrs. Holdsworth (2), J. Wright (2), Hudson (3), Bassett, Wood, Berry, and Paggato.

Wanstead Flats Fair.
The shows here were Taylor's Cinema Theatre de Luxe, Ball and Son's New Lyceum. The big machine sets were those of H. Thurston and Sons (four sets), Forrest Bros., with Japanese airship, and Symonds, with switchback. Hand swings, gem roundabout, houp-la circles, and throwing games in abundance.

THE LATE ROBERT BUCHANAN.

"The period of my more intimate acquaintance with Buchanan," says Mr. Henry Murray, in "A Stepson of Fortune," published recently in excellent style by Chapman and Hall, "came about in a fashion characteristic of the somewhat 'casual' natures of both of us. I had been for some time a frequent visitor at his house and guest at his table when, originally with the purpose of doing with him some piece of work which somehow never got done, I became an inmate under his roof. I went there for a day or two, like Ned Strong to Clavering Park, in 'Pendennis,' and stayed there nearly two years. When from time to time I mooted the subject of my departure Buchanan would not hear of it, and I am glad to believe that his constant asseveration that I was of great use to him was more or less really true, though a third person might often have been excused for wondering in what the use consisted. The only joint work bearing our joint names we ever issued were the novelised version of his Haymarket play, The Charlatan, and the comedy, A Society Butterfly, produced at the Opéra Comique, and of which the history shall presently be given. My real utility was an intellectual strop and chopping-block. Buchanan was in certain respects, and apart from his warm domestic affections, a lonely man. He had never been, nor cared to be, popular with the bulk of men of anything like his own intellectual rank. I have seen but few people under his roof whose names were known outside the circle of their personal acquaintance. Herbert Spencer, of whom I have already spoken, I saw there only once. Hall Caine, then a young man just beginning to rise above the literary horizon, came occasionally. That old-time actor, the late John Coleman, who in his ingrained stagginess of voice and manner suggested Mr. Crummles, and in his lightning alternations between the depths of despair and the summits of irrational optimism recalled Mr. Micawber, was a more frequent figure. During his term of collaboration on Adelphi melodrama with Mr. George R. Sims, he naturally saw a good deal of that genial jester, who could keep him in roars of laughter for hours at a time. The good things Sims said at Buchanan's supper-table were infinite in number, and among the best was one at my expense. I had been holding forth with most convincing eloquence regarding the condition of English fiction, and proclaiming the absolute necessity, if the art was not to sink wholly beneath contempt, of a fuller and more fearless treatment of sexual problems, when Sims shot my rhetoric dead by interjecting the heartless remark—'Murray's Guide to the in-Continent.'

"For years Buchanan had never possessed a male friend with whom he could be at his intellectual ease, who was interested in the problems of life and thought which most deeply interested him, and the fact that on every conceivable issue our views were diametrically opposed, and that we were both tough and enduring disputants, made me, I fully believe, a rather valuable companion to him. Scores of times the morning light surprised us in the midst of some interminable argument, and if, as was certainly the case, I was greatly the gainer by our interchange of thought, I gave back the best I had. During those two years of intimacy I came to know him more completely than I had ever known any other human creature with the exception of my brother Christie, and I am absolutely sincere in saying that he was, quite beyond comparison, the best man I have ever known—the bravest, the most honest, the most cordial, the most kindly, the wisest in counsel, the readiest in help. There was not in his heart one hint of malice, nor in his blood one black drop against any creature in the whole round world. The only approach to a disagreement we ever had together was when he remonstrated with me à propos of an assault I had made on a writer who had some little time previously assaulted Buchanan himself on no provocation whatsoever and with unmeasured virulence. 'For God's sake,' he wrote, 'leave —— alone. People who know of our friendship will think you are abusing him to please me. And you are unjust—more unjust than I was when I answered him. The man has done good stuff, and you only stultify yourself when you deny his merit.' A life of incessant conflict can be good for no man, but no man born to such a life was ever less injured by it than Buchanan. I have read somewhere a story of some hard-fisted old Baresarker who, having knocked his enemy into a turbulent river, jumped in and fished him out at the imminent peril of his own life. That was the sort of double feat of which Buchanan was eminently capable.

"It was a common sentiment regarding him, and one which finds utterance in Miss Jay's 'Biography,' that Buchanan's connection with the theatre was, from the view-point of his higher moral and mental interests, a mistake. I cannot think so. As is often, though by no means invariably, the case with men of his type, he added to his intellectual Ishmaelism the sunnier temperament of the born Bohemian. He loved life: his nature demanded warm human contact, and he found both abundantly in the theatre, which, 'respectable' as it has become of late years, is yet, and by its very constitution must for ever remain, the one impregnable citadel of social freedom. And he needed money. Personally a Spartan, with absolutely no expensive desires until, rather late in life, he tasted the pleasures of the Turf, he wanted money wherewith—literally—to live, to express the bubbling generosity of his temperament. He had spent the years most men spend in the pursuit of pleasure 'sitting,' as he himself expressed it, 'empty-stomached on Parnassus,' and when at last he descended from that dignified but rather comfortless altitude into the city streets he found the life there, in spite of its many horrors and squalors, good, sweet, fit on the whole for a man to live among and enjoy. That his stage work was coarse and poor contrasted with his verse is true enough. But it should, in plain justice, be recognised that here, as elsewhere, the duality of his nature asserted itself, and that the cheap sentiment of the Adelphi and the frivolity of the Vaudeville never either contaminated his more serious effort nor choked the spring of loftier thought. Read consecutively, Buchanan's output gives us the clearest mental image of a strenuous mounting of the slippery crags of artistic achievement. The City of Dream, Mary the Mother, The Devil's Case, The Outcast, were all written during the period of his dramatic activity, and their artistic value is high, and their inspiration sprang, crystal pure, from the deepest wells of the poet's moral being. He touched pitch—if the writing of popular drama be to touch pitch, which I for one most resolutely deny—and was not defiled. He mingled with the sharpers of theatrical finance and with the moral riff-raff of the Turf, and neither could leave a fleck upon his honesty nor on his enduring conviction of the inherent rightness of human nature. He was indeed himself the Archetypal Poet of whom he wrote:—

"'Who, 'spite the bitter fight for bread,
'Spite Samson's mill-work blindly done,
'Spite piteous tears in secret shed,
'Still kept his forehead to the sun.'

"Mr. Israel Zangwill shed a welcome ray of light on Buchanan's personality when he wrote: 'The mistake people make about Buchanan is that they think that there is only one of him. There are at least a score of Buchanans, and most of them have not even a nodding acquaintance with the others.'

SPECIAL NOTE.—NO DEPUTIES WILL BE ACCEPTED AT REHEARSALS.

NOTICE.—OPTION CLAUSE.

COUNSEL WAS REQUESTED TO ADVISE

Whether, having regard to the terms of Clause 16 in the model contract attached to the Arbitrator's Award, the Management are entitled to insist upon the exercise of their option.

(a) In the event of the Artiste having filled by engagements made either wholly or partly after the date of the contract, all vacant dates within 18 months after the date of the notice of intention to exercise the option, and

(b) In the event of the Artiste having, in similar manner, partly filled his time so that the number of vacant dates within that period is insufficient to comply with the option.

COUNSEL'S OPINION.

In my opinion the clause requires the Artiste so to arrange his or her engagements, made after the date of the contract with the Management as to render it possible for the artiste to fulfil a re-engagement with the Management, should the latter exercise the option conferred upon them by the contract; and that it is no answer for the Artiste to say that he or she cannot fulfil such re-engagement because of engagements made by him or by her after the date of the contract.

(a) In my opinion the Management are entitled to insist upon the exercise of their option, although the Artiste may have filled up all vacant dates within 18 months after the date of the notice of intention to exercise the option, provided such engagements were made wholly after the date of the contract. So far as these engagements were made before the date of the contract, the Artiste is entitled to fulfil them, and the Management cannot insist upon such engagements being a breach of the artist's contract with them

(b) In my opinion the Artiste is bound to reserve sufficient dates to enable him to fulfil a re-engagement by the Management. If, therefore, he accepts engagements after the date of the contract which prevent him fulfilling his re-engagement in its entirety, he commits a breach of his re-engagement.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.—All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier. Artists employing agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents. New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, and DISTRICT.—MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, and DISTRICT.—MR. T. GERALD MORTON, Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HORACE COLE, The Empire, Liverpool.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.—MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LONDON DISTRICT.—MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

TOURS COMMITTEE.—LLEWELLYN JOHNS and DISTRICT MANAGERS.

EMPIRE THEATRE, SOUTH SHIELDS.—Artists and Agents wishing to submit TRIALS for their Acts in the North, should apply to the Manager, as Matinées are held every Wednesday for that purpose. N.B.—MR. OSWALD STOLL or MR. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously. Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.—Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled. It is important that separate bill-matter, blocks, pictorials, &c., for Dublin, Belfast, and South Shields, be sent direct to Mr. Frank Allen at the Co-operative Offices. IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities. ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS

ABERAMAN.—PICTURE PALACE, GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. John R. Poole; Manager, Mr. R. Tebbitt.—The above Picture Palace and Theatre opened on Monday night, under new management. Top of the bill is Mlle. Hengleur and her famous troupe of Russian poodles, who obtain a hearty reception; Godfrey Price, baritone, also makes a good impression. The Bioscopic pictures are new and interesting.

ABERDARE.—NEW EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Victor Rowe; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. H. Reid.—Bains and Co., comedy acrobats, in Humps and Pumps, submit a very clever turn; the Sisters Hollie, comediennes and dancers, are highly appreciated; the Two Mays, in their comedy duologue, The Maniac Child, cause roars of laughter; Andy Burns is a smart eccentric comedian and expert dancer; and the programme ends with some striking Bioscopic pictures.

ABERDEEN.—HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Robert Arthur Theatres Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—Amsterdam, produced by a strong company, under the superintendence of Mr. John Tiller, is a gorgeous piece of stagecraft, embellished with elaborate scenic effects, and boasting one of the finest ballet troupes ever seen in Aberdeen. Amongst the clever group of players are Mr. Arthur Stigant, Mr. T. W. Volt, Mr. Charles V. Sandford, Miss Lulu Valli, Miss Dorothy Firmin, and Miss Nancy Hearne.

PALACE THEATRE. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Percy H. Gallagher. —The Slave Dealers, an Asiatic novelty, presented by Mirza Golem and his talented troupe, heads the bill. Other turns are contributed by Miss Lillie Soutter, a comedienne endowed with abundant vivacity; Leslie, Lyn, and Willie, amusing eccentrics; Robb Wilton, in his mirth-provoking "Fire Brigade" song; Dolly Golden, speciality dancer; the Sages, clever vaudeville entertainers; and the Wittington Trio, acrobatic comedians.

ACCRINGTON. — PRINCE'S THEATRE. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—Mr. Frank Bertram's company is presenting here, with gratifying success, The Breed of the Treshams. In the exacting rôle of Lieut. Reresby, Mr. Sidney Bland is seen to distinct advantage; Mr. Alfred Holles renders effective service as Viscount Dorsington; Mr. George Butler is a creditable Colonel Clement Hungerford; and Mr. George Traill fulfils all the demands of Sir Henry Curwen. The Cornet, Francis Tresham, has a manly exponent in Mr. Walter Graham; Mr. George Jackson is seen to advantage as Lieut. Willoughby; Mr. Sydney Courtenay is successful in depicting Captain Stanhope; and Mr. Leslie Lingham gives a good rendering of Colonel Bagshaw. Miss Mildred Hodson proves herself an able and accomplished actress as the Hon. Margaret Hungerford; Miss Grace Harlington is an exceedingly clever Batty; Miss Dorothy De Lille a charming Helena Pierpoint; and Miss Madge Cottier a most pleasing Mrs. Bagshaw.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Accrington Hippodrome Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—The Six Bros. Luck, in the mirth-provoking sketch, The Demon of the Cellar, form the principal item here, and are affording the utmost pleasure to many old admirers; Ross and Lewis, a capital comedy couple, are winning golden opinions; and Randolf King proves himself a smart ventriloquial protean artist. Bert Woodward meets with a cordial reception in a daring cycling act; Little Pam is an exceptionally clever comedian and dancer; the Bros. Lawrence are accorded a hearty, well-deserved encore for their vocal and dancing turn; the Lecardos display much ability as comedy acrobats; T. E. Johnson is entertaining as a topical character vocalist; and A Pleasant Walk, depicted by the Bioscope, is very amusing.

ALDERSHOT.—ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jack Gladwin.—For the opening of the dramatic and musical comedy season, no better attraction could have been introduced than The Arcadians. Miss Marion Edwardes portrays the rôle of Sombra with charming simplicity; Miss Mysie Devine (who was here in A Merry Widow) adds to her reputation, and is a fascinating Eileen. Miss Madge Haines gives a fine enactment of the self-made woman, Mrs. Smith, and some excellent comedy is brought about by that lady and Mr. Frank Collins (Peter); Miss Katie Yates as Chrysea is also very successful; Mr. Gus. Oxley (who was previously here in Three Little Maids) is responsible for a continual vein of fun as James Smith and Simplicitas; Mr. Frank Collins introduces comedy as a fine art, and does not miss one point in making Peter Dooley, the unfortunate jockey, an object of pity, make-up and facial expression adding to the excellence of his impersonation. Mr. Roy Sidney as Jack Meadows is very successful; Mr. Roy Lorraine as Bobby is capital; Mr. Frank Henry (Astophel) sings and acts well.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—Messrs. Hall Caine and Louis Parker's version of "The Manxman," dramatised under the title of Pete, is here for the week. Mr. Frederick Victor sustains the character of Pete, the Manxman, with great emotional feeling; Miss Constance Bachner realises very vividly the Kate of the novel; Mr. Alfred Lugg suggests a suave, easy tempter in his Philip Christian; Mr. Ellis J. Preston brings much histrionic ability to bear in his portrait of Cæsar Creegen, and Mr. Maurice Yorke touches the right note as the caddish Ross Christian; as Black Tom Mr. J. Lingard makes the most of his opportunities.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Jesse Burslem.—Mr. Geo. A. De Gray's drama The Angel of His Dreams is ably interpreted here by the author and company. As the Rev. Christian Esdaile Mr. De Gray is convincing; as the unfortunate Roy Ferrars Mr. Robert Hall wins applause; Miss Edna Earl plays with agreeable refinement as the much-harrassed Milly St. Austell; and Miss Effie Bartlett as Hilda Revelle acts with intensity and power; Major Dudley Ferrars is strongly depicted by Mr. Wallace Campbell; as Sir Francis Tregarthen Mr. Chas. Arnold is impressive; and the comedy element is effectively sustained by Miss Etta Turner and Mr. Mayo Stanley.

AYR.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry W. Day.—The Merry Widow has made a welcome reappearance here. The company is presented by Mr. George Edwardes. Miss Phyllys le Grand in the title-rôle is a distinct success; and Mr. Fred Leslie makes an ideal Prince Danilo; Baron Popoff is humorously portrayed by Mr. Edward D'Arcy; Mr. Ripley Evans renders the songs relegated to the part of Vicomte Camille de Jolidon in a pleasing manner; an excellent impersonation of Natalie is given by Miss Ada Thomas; Nisch is well represented by Mr. Fred Fowler; and the Apache dance by Miss Katie May and Mr. Fowler is effective.

PICTURE PALACE.—The pictures are of the usual attractive and interesting nature, pathos and humour being well blended.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.—ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Messrs. Smith and Carpenter's company is here with Pete. Mr. Austen Milroy gives an excellent study of Pete. Mr. Alfred Grey as Philip gives a meritorious performance. Miss V. Malcolm Barnett is a powerful yet sympathetic Kate Cregeen; Mr. Frank Stone as Cæsar Cregeen; Mr. Edward Fletcher as Ross Christian and Miss Lucy Murray leave nothing to be desired.

HIS MAJESTY'S.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—The Passing of the Third Floor Back is presented here by Mr. Ian Robertson and company. Mr. Robertson is admirable as the Stranger, making the character stand out in bold belief; and Miss Helena Parsons is particularly good as the Slavey. Miss Jeannie Thomas makes a typical landlady; Mr. Santez Brown as Samuel, Mr. H. Garthorne as the entertainer, Mr. Billington as the Bookmaker, Mr. G. Twyman as the Major, Miss Lena Delphine, his wife, and Mrs. Barbara Everest as Vivien are very capable in their respective rôles.

TIVOLI.—Lessee, Signor R. Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Wood.—Mr. Walter Ellis and company are the top of the bill here, with a sketch, entitled The Sleepwalker, which was well received; Bert Harrow makes a hit with his songs; the Adams accomplish clever cycle tricks; the Westbrooks are pleasing in a scena of songs and dances; Minnie Mace is favourably received; Charles Rowen is a quaint comedian; and Vernon's Bioscope contributes interesting pictures.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Lessees, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—The Fred Newman British Empire Picture Company continues popular. A special variety attraction is provided by Jackson and May with exceedingly clever cycling tricks.

BATH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—After several years' absence Mr. Horace Lingard is renewing his acquaintance with Bath audiences at the head of Mr. Arthur Shelton's company in the comedy Fanny and the Servant Problem, in which his well-known talents as a sound comedian are again displayed as the butler, Martin Bennet. Miss Beatrice Moreau appears to considerable advantage as Fanny; and the elderly Misses May and Emily Wetherell are cleverly enacted by Miss Rita Sponti and Miss Miriam Holt. Mr. Russell Davis plays well as Lord Bantock; Dr. Freemantle is undertaken by Mr. Roland Hope; and other members of the Bennet family are smartly sketched by Mr. A. Lightowler (Ernest), Miss Gwenlyan Cattell (Susannah), and Miss Adelaide Norton (Jane). Mr. Wilfred Compton as George Newte enters fully into his part; and Fanny's professional companions are played by Miss Rose Norton, Miss Ida Blakely, and Miss Ruby Rosale. On Thursday night Divorçons was staged with Mr. Lingard as M. Des Prunelles and Miss Beatrice Moreau as Cyprienne. The one-act comedy The Admiral is also being given, with Mr. Lingard as Admiral Drake.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—Winifred Ward, direct from her London engagements, heads the present company, and once again comes in for a great reception. Quaint and clever aptly describes the acrobatic antics, dances, and gags of Burley and Burley; John Donald is again to the fore in his original song-scena "A Scottish Exile's Dream," his powerful baritone voice being heard to the greatest advantage in his well-arranged ballad répertoire; Joe Cookson strikes a novel line in his ventriloquial and cartoon act; the Three Phydoras are smart and amusing in their eccentric musical act and dancing; Gena Manon gives examples of various styles of singing; and Miss Muffett, the precocious Canadian mite, is on a return visit. The pictures wind up.

BEDFORD.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R Wilson.—The Arcadians, which is paying its first visit to Bedford, is admitted to be one of the best musical comedies ever seen in the town. Mr. C. A. Stephenson as James Smith gives an extremely clever performance; Mr. Alfred Beers as Peter Doody is also most amusing; Miss Molly McIntyre is a charming Eileen Cavanagh, and possesses a fine voice. The piece is splendidly staged, and the dresses are irreproachable. Miss Sybil Tancredi, who has a most pleasing voice, played the part of Sombra to perfection.

BELFAST.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—The Abbey Theatre (Dublin) company provide the attraction here, and on Monday appeared in a triple bill. The chief item was the three-act comedy The Eloquent Dempsey. Mr. Arthur Sinclair was inimitable as Jeremiah Dempsey, and Miss Sara Allgood gained great success as Mrs. Catherine Dempsey; Mr. Fred O'Donovan's Brian O'Neill left nothing to be desired; and the rôle of Mary Kate was done full justice to by Miss Eileen O'Doherty; Mr. J. M. Kerrigan must be congratulated on his clever assumption of Dr. Bunbury, J.P.; and other rôles were efficiently sustained by Messrs. Sydney Morgan and J. A. O'Rourke. Riders to the Sea and The Glittering Gate were also performed by this capable company. During the week The Jackdaw, The Well of the Saints, the Rising of the Moon, Deirdre, The Workhouse Ward, and The Showing Up of Blanco Posnet have also been produced.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Salmond.—The Easter pantomime, Dick Whittington, has drawn crowded houses. Chief honours have been deservedly secured by Mr. Sam Thompson, who as Idle Jack is inimitable. The other artists work hard in their various rôles.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Willmott; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—The star here is Wee Georgie Wood, and this clever juvenile scored a great success on Monday. The Ten Loonies return with their excruciatingly funny sketch Dotty, which has kept the audience in roars of laughter. The acrobatic act of the Alaskas is undoubtedly smart; and Naughton and Gold are good cross-talk comedians and smart dancers; Susie and Prottie gain much approval for their smart dancing act; and Miss Maud Ford is a charming comedienne with good songs. Also here are Donal McDougall, Scotch comedian; Wyllie, tramp musician; Cosgrove and Burns, comedy duettists; and the Hippiscope.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. C. Laidler.—The leading attraction here is provided by Harry Roxbury and his capital company, who present with unbounded success their musical absurdity On the Track; Ted E. Box is a capital eccentric comedian and sifleur, and his encores are quite deserved; as a card manipulator Marlin's performance is decidedly interesting, and Mike Nono's capably rendered songs gain him the utmost approval; Miss Nellie Dallwood is a charming comedienne and fine dancer; and also here are Miss Vera Rochdale, soubrette; Mr. Chas. Penrose, comedian; and the Bioscope.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr. Will White.—Excellent pictures exhibited here include Faithful unto Death, The Brothers, and The Aeroplanist's Secret. Vaudeville is supplied by Salida and Vone, capital Creole singers and rag-time dancers; and Fame and Fortune, speciality comedians.

ST. GEORGE'S HALL.—General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Rogers.—Interesting films shown here include Cosette and The Engineer's Romance. Miss May Young, a gifted contralto vocalist, appears with gratifying success.

PRINCESS PICTURE PALACE.—General-Manager, Captain T. A. Blake.—Among the pictures exhibited here may be mentioned The Brutal Master, The Mad Woman of the Ruined Castle, and The Poacher's Revenge. Variety is supplied by Matthew's Minstrel Boys and Mr. Chas. Lee, eccentric comedian.

BILSTON.—ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Edwin G. Jazon; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. J. Tunstall.—A capital variety entertainment is submitted here on the "twice nightly" system. The Brothers Laurie form the chief attraction with a neat and clever gymnastic performance; Muller and Coyne also present a laughable comedy act. Others appearing are Dolly Richardson, comedienne; and Mappin and Webb, vocalists. The pictures include A Legend of the Stars, The Shipowner's Daughter, and Nero, or the Fall of Rome.

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Herbert M. King.—Mr. Frank Curzon's company, with the musical comedy The King of Cadonia, is enjoying much popularity here. Mr. J. Warren Foster as Alexis, King of Cadonia, renders the part in irreproachable style; Mr. Johnnie Osborne is a capital Duke of Alasia, and Princess Marie is admirably represented by Miss Alice Moffat; the Duchess of Alasia is well played by Miss Florence Lelgarde; Mr. Jack Martin is a good General Bonski, and Mr. Cameron Carr is a capable Captain Laski. The play is liberally staged.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Keating.—Miss Hetty King, fresh from her American triumphs, heads the capital company, and has a great reception nightly; Lowenthal and Cohan are excellent Hebrew comedians, and Verno and Voyce, in their vocal scenas, are on a welcome return visit; Jack Lorimer, Scotch comedian, again meets with a cordial reception; Miss Stella Stahl, comedienne, is a general favourite; Miss Esta Stella, the military maid, gives a delightful entertainment, and Mr. Russell Brandow, a really clever dancer, the Miltons, skating comedians, Miss Olive Dene, an accomplished comedienne, and Brown's Royal Bioscope complete the programme.

HIPPODROME.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Weston.—Mr. Raynor and his répertoire company are appearing twice nightly with gratifying success. On Monday Moths was played, and the week's productions have included Still Waters Run Deep and David Garrick. Leading rôles are done full justice to by Mr. Raynor, Mr. Clinton Baddeley, Mr. Conrad Heywood, Miss Dora Dence, and Miss Cecilie Dare, and the plays are carefully staged.

BIRMINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davis; General-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—Elaborately mounted and excellently played by Sir Herbert Tree's company, Pinkie and the Fairies is attracting crowded audiences. The juvenile performers are very natural; they dance cleverly and gracefully and act well. The familiar "grown-up" types are admirably represented by Mr. Ambrose Manning as Uncle Gregory, Mr. Walter R. Creighton as Mr. Irons, Miss Kate Fowler as Aunt Imogen, Miss Augusta Haviland as Aunt Caroline, and Miss Hilda Antony as Molly. Miss Iris Hawkins as Pinkie and Master Philip Tonge are leaders of the children, and they take their respective parts admirably. Warm praise is due to Miss Florrie Lewis, the Queen of the Fairies, who dances delightfully. Another clever little performer is Master Burford Hampden as the Fairy Queen's herald.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Johnstone.—The first visit of The Merry Peasant to Birmingham is proving highly successful. It is a beautiful piece, the music being delightfully bright and sparkling and the dresses and scenery magnificent. Mr. Courtice Pounds is an exceptionally clever and sympathetic actor, and his song "A man is just as good as he feels" is one of the tit-bits of the evening. Miss Madge Vincent is an accomplished singer, and she makes a charming Freda; Miss Mary Glynn sings and dances charmingly, and warm praise is due to this dainty child actress. Mr. Ernest J. Langford extracts adequate fun out of the part of a comic gendarme, Mr. Percy Carr is admirable as the peasant's son, and Mr. William Hudson and Mr. Frank Wilson work hard and effectively in their respective parts.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. T. Guest. Drama supplants pantomime here this week, and enthusiastic audiences enjoy the performance of a stirring play, entitled The Power of a Wicked Woman. Miss Irene Munroe is the evil genius of the story, and she portrays the character of Helen Terraire very forcibly; Mr. Montague Beaulyn as the easily-led Philip Carey plays with due sincerity and sympathetic effect; and other prominent characters are ably represented by Mr. C. D. Pitt as Lord Arthur Dumley and Mr. Arthur Cresswell as Guy Oliphant.

BORDESLEY PALACE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—Mr. G. Carlton Wallace and company are presenting A Thief in the Night, which secures a firm grip over audiences. The piece ranks high amongst melodramatic productions, and the cast is capably filled. Mr. Leyton Cancellor gives a convincing portrayal as Michael Pagani, and Mr. Stanley Bedwell as Alan Escombe also plays a prominent part. Miss Margery Fane (John Escombe) and Miss Beatrice Horner (Sonia Cleeve) are greatly to the fore, and Miss Jennie Hallworth (Happy Christmas), and Mr. Bert Atherton (Toby) are applauded for their share in the comedy situations.

METROPOLE.—Proprietor, Mr. Andrew Melville; Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—A Woman Worth Winning is proving attractive. Mr. Percy Norman's No. 1 company is responsible for the production, the author, Mr. A. D. Mackay, taking the principal heavy part, that of General Borinski, with great distinction. Miss Margaret Noble gives a careful study as Roma Pauloff; Mr. Carl Kirzo as Fergus Lovinsky performs creditably in many difficult situations; the comedy is presented in refreshing style by Mr. Louis Newman, Mr. C. W. Black, and Miss Ida Mackay. A performance of Trilby was announced by Mr. Norman's company for Friday night.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Chas. Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Manager, Mr. F. Martin Morris.—The Ticket of Leave Man is scoring a great success presented by Messrs. Travis Green and Arthur Hinton's company. Miss Lelia Zillwood is responsible for a fine interpretation of May Edwards, and Mr. Arthur Hinton gives a good account of himself as Hawkshaw. As "the Tiger." Mr. Fred G. Kay submits a notable performance, and Mr. Walter Clarke is popular in the character of Robert Brierley. Others conspicuous in the cast are Miss M. Canfield, Miss Effie Dane, Mr. Charles Clifford, and Mr. Travis Green.

CARLTON THEATRE.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—Only a Little Boy is presented by Messrs. F. Marriott-Watson and James Ussher's company. The characters are well drawn, especially that of Jim Bragstone, portrayed in masterly style by Mr. F. Marriott Douglas. Juvenile parts are ably sustained by Dot Forde (Billy Bragstone) and Miss Hettie Senior ("Tag Rag"). Mr. Oswald Douglas gives a good account of himself as the hero, Steve Kingdom, and Miss Florence E. Florence is responsible for some realistic acting as June. Miss Mary Ainslie is clever as Lady Meynell, and abundant humour is provided by Miss Amy Rudd, Mr. Cecil Raymond, and Mr. J. Abbott.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Williams.—An excellent programme attracts big audiences. Tom Foy, the inimitable Yorkshire comedian, creates roars of laughter in his new sketch, First of April. He is ably supported by his company and his well-trained donkey. The Kellinos are skilful risley performers; Braatz's dogs, wonderfully trained, are responsible for an exceptionally bright and novel entertainment; Little Maudie Olmar dances charmingly and sings in pleasing style; there is much good comedy in the skit How to Treat a Burglar, by the Maples; Miss Ray Ford, fresh from her pantomime success at the Alexandra Theatre, is a pretty and vivacious young lady; Stanley and Greenop are clever banjoists; Johnny Fuller represents a playful cat admirably, and his act is greatly appreciated. Arthur Albert, actor-vocalist, completes the bill.

GRAND.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Foster; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. Lucas.—In a programme quite up to the customary standard of excellence, Miss Margaret Cooper occupies the first place. She has a number of new songs, and enjoys much popularity. A beautiful act is presented by La Pia, whose fantastic and artistic dances are environed by charming scenic effects; Arthur Ferris is a clever character comedian; and another successful comedian of a different type is Phil Parsons. An effective knockabout turn is given by Great and Good; John Henry, R.A.M., proves himself an accomplished vocalist in selections from Faust and Il Trovatore, &c.; Cupid's Arms is the title of a highly-amusing sketch, in which Frank Danby and J. C. Piddock shine; and good items are given by Winnie Haytor and Katie Moss.

GAIETY.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—Callahan and St. George, in their delightful Irish character study, The Old Neighbourhood, provide the leading feature in an attractive bill. Miss St. George gives some fine selections on the harp, and also sings pleasing songs. Large audiences accord a hearty reception to Molly Wynne, whose songs and dances are particularly bright and acceptable. The Czar's Royal Troupe, a talented combination of whirlwind dancers; the Four Jumels are popular in a novelty musical act; Driscoll and Felino present an up-to-date sketch, Paddock Life; George Antill is a talented comedian; Folay and Francis have some excellent patter; and Ethel Dunford is a charming vocalist.

HIPPODROME.—Managers, Messrs. Barrasford; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne.—Crowded houses are the order here. The Six Brothers Luck, Ltd., in a screaming farce, H.M.S. Perhaps, keep the patrons of the hall in merry mood. Another funny act is that of Sandy McNab, who is ably supported by his company in The Egyptian Mummy. McNab is a very big favourite here. Walton and Lester are quaint comedians whose burlesque of an illusionist's turn is a scream; Professor Welsen gives a remarkable exhibition of skill on the Swedish bar; up-to-date comedy artists are Avon and Crect; the Three Prestons display originality and versatility in a novel act; Phil Bransby is a taking coster comedian; the Five Juanitos perform clever and attractive acrobatic feats; and the Navarros are expert jugglers and plate spinners.

Aston Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Aston Hippodrome, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. T. H. Middleton.—Variety is the keynote of this week's entertainment, which affords thorough enjoyment to good houses. Max Waldon is a leading feature with female impersonations, his singing and artistic talents being of a high order; Bellew and Stocks' company are well received in a refined musical scena, entitled The Romps, vocal selections being pleasingly rendered; Juno Salmo performs remarkable contortionist feats; Ted Curtis and company feature several humorous songs and dances in a bright entertainment; Tony Freedman is a popular comedian; Will Nosam sings amusing songs; Kenneth and Kane are a smart comedy combination in "Oh, oh, oh!" and the Moxon Trio are clever acrobatic eccentrics.

Curzon Hall.—Lessee, Mr. Waller Jeffs.—An excellent picture illustrates a journey from London to Paris by motor-car, the car being transported from Folkestone to Boulogne by steamboat. The Kidnapper is the title of an exciting picture of great human interest, and amongst other good subjects are A Chase for a Reward, The New Servant, A Dwarf Detective, The Haunted Man, The Fisherman's Bride, &c. Miss Dora Kingsley delights with her vocal efforts.

King's Hall.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. J. P. Moore and B. Kennedy.—"Pictureland" fully maintains its high place in public favour. The star picture is entitled Maud Muller, and it is a clever subject of dramatic interest. Fenton of the 42nd is the title of another good subject, and there is a plethora of first-class comic films. Elliott and Warne, in a comedy sketch, and Tom Dalton, patter comedian, are also favourite contributors.

Queen's Hall.—Proprietors, Messrs. B. Kennedy and J. P. Moore.—Excellent dramatic and humorous pictures keep crowded houses thoroughly entertained. The "go-as-you-please" competitions are also a great source of attraction. On Friday evening several exciting glove contests aroused keen interest amongst an enthusiastic crowd.

BISHOP AUCKLAND.—Eden Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. R. Addison, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. Huntley.—Mr. C. Watson Mills' company in The Love of the Princess is on a return visit. Mr. Frank Harvey gives a thrilling presentation of Prince Conrad, and Mr. Richard Vane is a good Count Damillo. Mr. John Burton (Josey, King of Hamia), Mr. Francis Serle (Duke Scarfe), and Mr. Edgar Morgan (Boris) are very clever artists. Mr. Beckett Bould is a hardworking Lieutenant Orlans, and similar credit is due to Mr. John Worth as Lieutenant Zaroff. Miss Dorothy Haigh again wins many admirers in the rôle of Princess Idalia, and Misses Josephine Lee (Constantia) and Maud Steeple (Lady Irene) are good. The scenic effects are charming.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Hippodrome (Bishop Auckland) Ltd.; Managing-Director, Signor Pepi.—A good bill of fare is provided here, at the top of which appears Consul, described as the Almost Man; Mr. Phil Herman is a capable comedian; Ray and Lingard are smart; Mr. Fred Neiman is a clever ventriloquist; and Burnetti gives a wonderful display in his musical scena. The Almas in their balancing feats are marvellous; Mme. Adah Payne renders her songs in a convincing manner; and Miss Gladys Revell does well in her numbers. The Hipposcope is interesting.

BLACKBURN. — Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Proprietors, The Royal and Hippodrome Co.; Governing Director, Mr. Harry Yorke; Manager, Mr. Reginald Yorke.—Mr. J. W. Turner and his opera company bring a good répertoire here this week. On Monday night, when Satanella was given, Mr. Turner as Count Rupert was most ably assisted by Miss Sarah Williams in the name-part, and by the minor parts, all ably filled.

Palace Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Will Murray.—Burt Shepard heads the bill here this week. He and his piano have made quite a hit. Harry Atkinson gives instrumental imitations; the Four Vagabonds are high-class musical entertainers; La Belle Sylvia gives a dancing and acrobatic turn, and Canard proves an amazing contortionist; Pert Maddison, comedian, has some good songs, and Tennis and Laune, duettists and dancers, are pleasing. Palace pictures complete.

BLACKPOOL.—Her Majesty's Opera House.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr. George Munro and company are paying a welcome return visit, and appearing with great success in a round of legitimate plays. Mr. Munro is an actor of unquestionable ability, and fully merits the warm encomiums bestowed upon him. He is well supported by Miss Doris Horrocks, who also possesses the attributes essential for the making of a very capable actress. During the week both Mr. Munro and Miss Horrocks have assumed the leading rôles in David Garrick, Hamlet, Othello, Twelfth Night, Merchant of Venice, and She Stoops to Conquer.

Grand Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Percy Harrop.—The Chorus Lady, played by Mr. William Mollison's very capable company, is the attraction here. Although the character of Dan Mallory is quite out of Mr. Mollison's usual line of business, he plays it as to the manner born. Miss Annie Hughes in the title-rôle is a huge success, and carries all before her. Mr. Henry Deas as Dick Crawford, Mr. Fred A. Marston as Patrick O'Brien, and Miss Josephine Woodward as Mrs. O'Brien also merit much praise for the excellence of their work. The Touch of the Child is a new curtain-raiser, and a report of the initial production, which took place on Monday night, will be found in another column.

Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—Tom Costello tops the bill here, and meets with a warm welcome. Mons. Foot Gers also does well with his imitations; Babs Lloyd, comedienne, Drew and Alders, in a sketch, Madge Brownie, comedienne, Jack Warman, comedian, the Brennans, in a dancing act, and Bi-Bo-Bi, eccentric musician, are also well received.

BOLTON. — Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Moncur.—The members of the Bolton Garrick Club are giving six performances here in aid of local charities, the pieces selected being Under the Red Robe and Peter's Mother.

Grand Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—An attractive variety company here comprises the popular Two Anartos, comedians; Walter Buxton, baritone vocalist; F. C. Fields and Florence Lewis, burlesque duettists; Johnnie Walker, comedian; the Two Brilliants, lady xylophonists; Miss Hilda Jacobsen, burlesque actress; Ruhart, comedy parodist; Lily Eyton, vocal comedienne; the Marco Duo, in their comedy triple-bar act; the Eight 'Varsity Girls, in A Musical Evening; and the Premier Imperial Pictures.

Empire Hippodrome, Ltd.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. Will Sley; Manager, Mr. A. R. Harrison.—A good all-round company here is headed by the Harrison Brothers, comedians and patterers, in their laughable absurdity, The Golfing Johnnies; other turns being supplied by Miss Florrie Gallimore, comedienne; Bert Crosbie, comedian; Reno, in his daring comedy cycle act; Dene and Dixon, in The New Page Boy; Eugene, the girl with the male voice; Staffo, comedian; Frank Lister, in the dramatic sketch, No. 99, presented by Fred Kitchen and Frank Lister's company, and the Hippodrome pictures.

BOOTLE. — Muncaster Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Penningtons; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Young.—At the Muncaster this week is Mr. Ernest R. Abbott's company in Sapho. The title-rôle is played with charming animation and spirit by Miss Ada Abbott.

Winter Gardens.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler Sutton and Allandale; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. Lionel Cole.—At the Winter Gardens this week Messrs. Adeler Sutton and Allandale present Mr. Frank Dunlop's company. Mr. Frank Dunlop, in new songs and interludes, keeps the audience in a continual roar of laughter, being well supported by Mr. Steve Buckingham, an amusing light comedian; Mr. Dave Jenkins, the Welsh basso, is well applauded, and other items are successfully contributed by Miss Edith Fawn, an accomplished comedienne, and Miss Harrie Fawn, a charming soubrette. Miss Joyce Fawn, a clever pianist, accompanies throughout.

BOSCOMBE.—Hippodromes, Ltd.—Joint Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. H. Burdett.—The Zigeuner Quartette appear in a musical act of a high order; Krags Trio give an extremely neat and clever gymnastic entertainment; Ida Barr, actress-vocalist, renders her songs in fine style; Fred Barnes, comedian, is most successful as "The black sheep of the family"; Fred Russell, with his famous automaton "Coster Joe," is well received; Maud and Sidney Wood give a dainty scena and are heartily applauded; Fred Evans is successful in a novel absurdity, "Dreaming." The usual up-to-date Hippo pictures conclude.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Sole Proprietors, David Allen and Sons; Sole Lessee, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Hubert Dunbar.—Mr. James Welch's company opened on Monday with When Knights were Bold, which kept the large house in roars of laughter, owing especially to the effective way in which Mr. Langdon Bruce interpreted the part of Sir Guy de Vere. Mr. Bruce has a fine sense of humour, and he extracted every ounce of fun out of the part. He was ably supported by other members of the company, notably Miss Ernita Lascelles as Lady Rowena, Mr. Chas. Lloyd as Isaac Isaacson, Mr. H. Winton as Hon. Chas. Widdicombe, Miss Isla Glyane as the Jewess, Mr. Colin Johnston as the Rev. Pottlebury, Mr. R. E. Besant as Whittle, Mr. E. R. Holloway as Barker, and Mr. Gerald Venning as Sir Brian Ballymote.

BRADFORD.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Richardson.—The Geisha, presented by Mr. Mouillot's No. 1 company, is here this week. On the opening night illness prevented Miss Aimée Grey's appearance as O Mimosa San. Miss Beatrice West, however, at scant notice undertook the part, and under trying circumstances acquitted herself well; Molly Seymour was charmingly played by Miss Adela Crispin, and the singing of Miss Renee Reel in the part of O Juliette Diamante and Mr. W. J. Douglas as Reginald Fairfax met with warm approval; Mr. E. Carlton was a diverting Wun Hi, and as the Marquis Imari Mr. Lionel Braham did excellent work, and Mr. F. Chevalier le Grand has the fine chorus and augmented orchestra well in hand. The Greek Slave is billed for Friday night.

Prince's Theatre.—Lessee, Councillor F. Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. M. Hamilton.—For the second week of his engagement here Mr. Frank Lindo has presented with much success his romantic drama Love the Conqueror, in which, as Brian Norval, the dashing highwayman, he scores an unqualified success. With distinctive charm Miss Marion Wakeford supports him as Beatrice; Sir John is well sustained by Mr. Sidney Dench; Mr. L. Laurence does well as the cynical, scheming Count Lascelles; Captain Armadale, the boaster, is well handled by Mr. Norton Shields; there is much quaintness in Mr. Bert Dench's acting as Peter; Miss Helene Thomson is good as Susan Shortly; and the genial landlord of the Blue Posts is well played by Mr. Harry Bedford. The play is very finely staged, and the romantic interest is well sustained to the finish.

The Empire.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—Tom Davies' trio of motor cyclists whirling round a tea-cup track suspende in mid-air furnish a daring and thrilling turn here, and a genuine success is scored by the Will o' the Wisps, vaudeville entertainers, in their dainty and novel musical mélange; the famous Craggs, in their acrobatic performance "Territorials," do some clever work, and Billy, the recruit, elicits roars of laughter; with breezy stories and good comedy and vocalism Alexandra Dagmar wins her audience; Dion Wade's droll songs and irresistible humour arouse very hearty laughter; Farr and Farland introduce some funny patter in a humorous turn; Chas. Santon's double-voiced vocalism is remarkable; as a character comedienne Dot Hardy is bright and humorous; the Sisters Caselli, duettists, dance well, and do some high kicking; and amusing Bioscope pictures complete a fine programme.

The Palace.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. E. Harrison.—The Lyons Trio, in a dining-room absurdity, dance well and provide plenty of fun here this week; George Lawrence is a smart type of the light comedian, and Lizzie Daniels is a capital comedienne; in a dramatic sketch, The Silver Medal, capitally played by Martin Henry and Miss Irene Rose, there is an acceptable element of comedy introduced; George Brooks sings some capital comic songs; the gun spinning and hand balancing by the Amio Trio constitute a clever turn; comedy and skill are combined in the cycling performance by the Narow Brothers, and the Palace Perfection Pictures are a feature.

BRIDLINGTON.—The Spa and Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—Will Catlin's popular troupe of Royal Pierrots opened here on Monday night, and quickly established themselves in favour. Mr. Sid Frere is a comedian of the first order; Mr. Jackson Browne's humour is very catching; and Mr. Tom Catlin evokes rounds of applause by his comicalities. Mr. George Houghton's tenor songs never fail to give delight; and Mr. Golly Glynn is a capital lady impersonator and light comedian; Mr. Albert Lyon's coon songs go with a swing; and Mr. R. Edmonson's ventriloquial sketches are cleverly given. The accompanist, Mr. Fred Dennett, is admirable.

BRIGHTON. — Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Gates; General-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company is here with Two Little Drummer Boys. Mr. J. L. Leigh submits a clever impersonation of Captain Frank Carsdale; Miss Violet Langley makes a charming Alma Kingsley; Mr. Polson Turner as the villainous Captain George Darrell displays excellent acting; Miss Violet Ingram's Margaret Rivers is a capital portrayal; Mr. Edward Bikker is admirably suited as General Kingsley, V.C.; Miss Maggie English and Miss Maude B. Douglas are popular as the Drummer Boys; and much amusement is afforded by Mr. Will Percy as Quincy O'Quirke, Mr. Dick Seddon as Timothy Trimmer, and Miss Connaughton as Molly Meadows.

Alhambra.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Alfred Smith; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Smith.—Peggy Pryde is enthusiastically applauded for her diverting songs and patter; Courtney and Wilton are highly successful in the musical comedy duologue A Marble Flirtation; the Smarté Brothers are clever acrobatic eccentrics; Vowles and Bryan contribute a refined musical scena; Con Colyer, comedian, juggler, and dancer, is well received; the Two Lourays are graceful acrobats; La Falles contributes song and dance in good style; Peto, the man-monkey, is clever; Sid Penna gives an original musical turn; and the Alhambra Picturegraph is interesting and amusing.

Barrasford's Hippodrome. — Resident-Manager, Mr. Bertram J. Brown.—Reginald Eyre and company are highly successful in the thrilling episode Gentlemen, the King; Scener and Fridkin's Imperial Russian Troupe of Singers and Dancers are well received; the Serenaders display excellent vocalisation in the scene Old Venice; Pitts and Gould are entertaining in a song and dance scene, Bachelor's Memories; Sam Elton, eccentric comedian, evokes the heartiest laughter; R. A. Speedwell's wizard pictures are amusing; Dower and Denville are smart step-dancers; Tom B. Finglass sings in good style; Harry Bickley's "lecture on wild animals" is diverting; the Carlens Trio are clever gymnasts; and Connie Mascot, comedienne and dancer, wins cordial applause.

West Pier.—Secretary, Mr. A. W. Scholey.—Mr. George Waters' company is here with Paid in Full. Miss Jessica Waters merits unstinted praise for her excellent portrayal of Emma Brooks; Mr. Aiden Lovett acquits himself admirably as the scoundrel, Joseph Brooks; Mr. Arthur Poole achieves great success as James Smith; Mr. Bert Morley is well placed as Captain Williams; Mr. Cyril Percy makes the most of his opportunities as Sato; and Miss D. Brinsley Hill is a pleasing Beth Harris.

Palace Theatre.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Jay and Mann; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wilfred H. Kent.—Messrs. Daniel and Frank's company appears here in Little Mrs. Cummin. Miss Dorrie Roberts as the domineering mother-in-law, Mrs. Cummin, submits a clever enactment; the young wife and husband are admirably impersonated by Miss Kitty Crichton and Mr. Dudley Stewart; Mr. Theodore Kelly is effective as Captain Sands; Miss Victoria Wray presents a good character study as Susy Plain; and Mr. Arthur Gibbons is distinctly successful as the deaf wealthy uncle. The play is preceded by the comedietta The Tooth of Necessity.

Court Theatre.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. Maud Barrasford; Manager, Mr. F. J. Thompson.—The exhibitions of animated pictures here maintain their attractiveness. The Engineer's Romance conveys a story which abounds in stirring incidents. The Judgment is an exciting picture; A Story of Circus Life is a fine drama; The Cherries is an excellent film; and those of an amusing character include The Tough Beefsteak, The Secondhand Stove, and Cocoanuts are Cheap. Mr. Osland Denner contributes baritone songs in artistic style; and Mr. Arthur W. Briggs' pianoforte accompaniments merit praise.

Theatre de Luxe.—Proprietors, Electric Theatres Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. H. Cousens.—A capital series of pictures is exhibited here. The films of a dramatic character are A Woman's Strategy and A Woman's Luck; a series descriptive of The Sugar Cane Industry proves instructive; Brooklyn Railway Yard, and a Trip Round Brighton on a Motor Car are interesting; and much fun is afforded by Foolshead, Am I mad? and Invigorating Electricity.

BRISTOL. — Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Macready Chute.—The Little Damozel is being capitally played here by Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company the comedy being admirably staged. Miss Molesworth is pleasingly effective in the title-rôle, and when required displays considerable power; Mr Frank Lacy does excellently as Recklaw Poole; Mr. Guy Newall gives a good portrayal of the Hon. Fitzroy Lock; Mr. George A. Brandram is highly satisfactory as Captain Neil Partington; and Mr. Townsend Whitling is well placed as Walter Angel. Batholdy, Pepo, and Abraham are made striking character parts by Messrs. Julian Cross, William J. Stack, and Reginald Hargreaves. Miss Eva Stuart is pleasing as Sybil Cravèn; and Mr. Arthur Redmond satisfactorily completes the cast as a servant. The comedy is preceded with Curing a Selfish Husband, in which Miss Violet Baynton, Mr. Townsend Whitling, and Mr. Guy Newall distinguish themselves.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mrs. Emma Carpenter; Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—Mr. Morton Powell's company is here with the interesting drama A Girl's Temptation, the play being well staged. Miss Gertrude Gilbert acts very effectively as Kate Stirling; Mr. Frank V. Fenn displays dramatic ability as Guy Warren; Mr. Clifton Earle is effective in the heavy rôle of Mark Klaw; Mr. Tom Handley makes a good light comedy part of the Hon. Charles Clade; Mr. Charles Hubert and Mr. Gerald Nolan are well placed as Basil Warren and Geoffrey Stirling; Miss Winnie Donovan is admirable in the unpopular part of Lady Constance Heathfield; and Miss Blanche Lee acts with fine dramatic power as Annie Brown. The comic parts of Jemima Jossap and Sammy Sniggles are capitally undertaken by Miss Amy Corallie and Mr. Freddie Bentley.

Palace.—Local Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Assistant-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Will Lytton and company are successfully presenting Harry Roxbury's latest production Sergeant Longfellow, the sketch being well played and much applauded. Francini Olloms and Page entertain with their act, which includes juggling acrobatic and comedy tumbling; Arthur Sutcliffe, comedian, is successful; Ruby and Laws do well with their vocal scena, the latter being very effective in "Asleep in the Deep"; Nellie Wigley is a pleasing and artistic singer of chorus songs; the Five M.P.'s are clever instrumentalists; the Three Cunards present a smart simultaneous and sand-dancing act; and animated pictures conclude.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry.—Kitty Traney heads the bill with her admirable juggling and sporting act, her trained dogs and pony doing some really clever tricks. Dorothy Grahame pleases with her interesting production, Ma Fille, in which some clever dancing is introduced, Miss Grahame being well supported by her company. The Saletos do a good head and hand-balancing act; George Don, comedian, is successful; Scholey and Scholey amuse with their comedy act, Winning a Wager; Harry Elliston and company please with their sketch Aunt Matilda; the Four Hawkers do a smart harmony and comedy act; the Sisters Lynd please as duettists and dancers; Ellis and Campbell, comedians, are applauded, as also is Jay Barrie, comedian. Animated pictures conclude.

Colston Hall.—Ralph Pringle's animated pictures continue to attract. The films include a special one of Mount Etna in Eruption. The variety entertainment is also first class, including, amongst others, Florence and Rose Showells, operatic artists; Clarke and Dewar, comedians and dancers; and Caselli, banjo expert.

BROUGHTON.—Victoria Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. James Cramer; Manager, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—Fred Granville's Productions, Ltd., No. 1 Company in An Old Man's Darling got much appreciation by a good house on Monday. Mr. Sanley Radcliffe, the general-manager, gives a good study of the Squire, George Ricroft; Mr. Stanley S. Gordon presents the hero in capital style; the villain, Blackstand, is in the capable hands of Mr. Ernest Wingfield; comedy is sustained by Mr. Millar Wilson as Billy Barlicorn, and Miss Florri Hall as Molly; Miss Nina Vaughton is a charming heroine as Bessie Earnshaw; Miss Emilie Entwistle does well as Minnie, and her singing is appreciated; Mary Winters is cleverly played by Miss Ada Hender; Miss Ellen Wingfield (Dick), Miss Lily Ashby (Martha Earnshaw), and the other members give good studies of their several parts.

BURNLEY.—Victoria Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—The Silver King holds the boards here, and was given before a large audience on Monday, when Messrs. G. M. Polini and Austin Melford's company scored a big success, and the capable artists were accorded a flattering reception. Mr. Fred. D. Daviss brings his skill to bear on the interpretation of Wilfred Denver; whilst as his wife, Nellie Denver, Miss Mildred Surrey is highly successful. Mr. Edward George, in his old rôle of Daniel Jaikes, has lost none of its power; and Mr. Sidney Lynn gives a vivid picture of the Spider. Other characters are in capable hands, and the production throughout is excellent.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—The chief item here is the sensational cycling turn of the Staigs troupe, who accomplish a feat called "The Devil's Ride." Drury and Lane are untiring step-dancers; and Kerr and Koe, in addition to being funny, are tricky simultaneous dancers. Lily Turner, comedienne, pleases the audience; and the Corcoran Brothers are very good with wind instruments. Nicklin Williams, baritone vocalist, sings in good style; and the Hartingtons are interesting jugglers. The Stowe Brothers give a clever series of hand-balancing feats; and colour photography by the Empire Theatrescope illustrates wild bird life.

Palace Theatre and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. R. Badcoe.—Eugene Stratton is at the head of the bill, and his singing and dancing evokes rounds of applause. Rors and Grayson keep the audience in roars of laughter with their musical mélange; and Cavalli is a smart ventriloquist. Little Spencer has some neat steps in clog-dancing; and the Firmans are funny in The Fire Station. Other turns are Waller, a clever juggler; Edwardes and Edwardes, musical specialists; and the Brothers Ford, in concurrent singing and dancing. A marvellous Indian film is shown by the Palace Pictures.

BURTON-ON-TRENT. — Opera House.—Proprietors, Messrs. Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. de Hague Body.—Local charities will reap substantial benefit from the performance of Merrie England by the Burton New Operatic Society.

CANTERBURY. — Theatre Royal.—Manager and Lessee, Mr. E. G. Falcon.—The Canterbury Amateur Operatic Society occupy the boards this week with representations of The Gondoliers. The performances are in aid of the local hospital.

CARDIFF.—New Theatre.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Robert Redford.—The boards are occupied this week by the Cardiff Amateur Operatic Society, in Merrie England.

The Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manger, Mr. Herbert J. Taylor.—A capital all round programme fills the Empire to overflowing this week. The chief attraction is the clever performance of Chas. T. Aldrich, a most versatile artist; the Empire Comedy Four are appreciated in their delightful harmony; intelligence and adroitness are displayed by Loyal's Dogs; George Newburn gains exceptionally hearty applause by his clever mimicry; the remarkably clever acrobatic turn of the Three Van Dammes is accorded hearty applause; the speciality instrumental act of Roma and Romani is most artistic; the Lyric Quartette present a couple of beautifully-coloured picture ballads; Elsa Brull and Arthur Hemsley have a smart and entertaining act, Fun in a Music Shop; and Miss Jewel St. Ledger, daintily gowned, proves a delightful soprano. The Bioscope completes.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, Cambrian Theatres, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. E. Clay.—The Better Land is presented to Cardiff audiences for the first time by Fred Granville's company. A great impression is made by the clever portrayal of Doris by Miss Marguerite Trevosper; Mr. Douglas Watson capably enacts the rôle of Philip Radcliffe; Mr. Leonard Booker as Hubert displays histrionic ability; Miss Madge Trevelyan as Mercedes is successful; to Aunt Jemima full justice is done by Miss Bella Moody; and the juvenile performances of Tessa by Miss Elsie Jones and Harry by Miss Gertie Moody are delightfully fresh. Comedy is safely entrusted to Mr. Fred Richards as Tom Tadpole, Mr. J. F. Hughes as Bill Bones, and Miss Kitty Terris as Polly Perkins.

Palace and Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. W. A. Jackson.—Mr. George Sheldon and Mr. F. Rawson's company is presenting here a particularly interesting sketch, Before the Dawn; Syd Walker, described as a comedian, proves himself to be a born humorist and clever fun-maker. His special setting is novel and extremely funny. Another item of considerable merit is that of the Unites, in their new and original comedy act; the Fitzroys (Fred and Lily), original society gymnasts, are undeniably clever; Lennard and Vereker, in a pictorial song, are pleasing; Gwen. Francis is a dainty comedienne; and Johnny Cecil, light comedian, Geo. Belrose, and Maud De Velin, talented duettists and soloists, Mamie Morris, a capable dancer, and the usual pictures all add to the pleasure derived from the evening's entertainment.

CARLISLE. — H.M. Theatre. — Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mrs. R. Stewart M'Kim; Manager, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—For the first time in Carlisle, Ibsen plays are being produced here. Mr. Leigh Lovel and Miss Octavia Kenmore are responsible for the performances, and their clever company gave a most impressive interpretation of A Doll's House on the opening night. As Torvald Helmer Mr. Lovel acted throughout with artistic naturalness; Miss Kenmore's Dora created a deep impression; Mr. Kenneth Black contributed a praiseworthy sketch of the Doctor; Mr. Arthur Rodney was always well in the picture as Krogstadt; and Miss Katherine Maynard's Widow was a finished performance. When We Dead Awaken and Hedda Gabler are billed for the remaining nights.

The Palace.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. D. Askew.—The Waldrons head the bill here in an entirely new sketch, which is no less amusing and cleverly worked than their well-known Silly Burglar. The Cairo Trio introduce many instruments—both wind and string—in their musical entertainment; the Rosses are quite excellent dancers; and Silly Billy Elliott is as amusing as ever. As a hoop manipulator Stylo is always interesting; and George Acre a burlesque and character vocalist, and Ray Royal, with illustrated songs, are successful. The pictures are this week unusually good.

CASTLEFORD.—Royal.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr. Chas. Gadsby; Business-Manager, Councillor Henry Masterman, J.P.—A capital show is The Nihilist, as represented by Messrs. D. Silverstone and H. Wright's company. Mr. George Mitchell deserves high praise for his excellent handling of the part of Ivan the Blacksmith; Miss Edna Clare plays Alexina Orloff with much distinction; Princess Olga is acted with admirable effect by Miss Mary Dawson; Mr. O. Silverstone is seen in the villainous character of Prince Alexander; and as Piertree Mr. C. Newton Buckland supplies a capital study. Mr. Henry Wright keeps the house highly amused as Bobbie Smart; and Mrs. O. Silverstone proves herself a good-looking and lively Katrina Zindoff. The child part of Alexina is carefully played by Little Minnie Halstan; Mr. Cowell Clark shows to advantage as Karl Orloff; whilst Mr. J. Brunelle Harvey does good service as Father Gourko; and Mr. Morgan makes a capital Sergeant Markoff.

Queen's Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, The Castleford Queen's Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Messrs. Chas. H. Beanland and Will H. Emerson.—The principal item on the programme this week is Mr. Edward Platt's Child Trio of juvenile musicians, whose various selections are exquisitely rendered; Mahatma, assisted by Prof. C. N. Steen, mystifies audiences as much as ever; Ally Benson is an exceedingly funny comedian, Great Scott, balanced on the top of a ladder, performs some clever juggling feats; Arthur Kenny goes through a dangerous and difficult performance as a trick cyclist; Alf Holt is accorded a warm reception for some clever mimicry, whistling, and comedy business; Gertie Grace is a vocalist of considerable ability; George Castrey creates a favourable impression as a descriptive vocalist; and good pictures by the Loyal Dominion Co. are thoroughly enjoyed.

CHATHAM — Theatre Royal. — Proprietors, Messrs. C. and L. B. Barnard; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lional Barnard.—This week the American romance A White Man is on a return visit, the company being toured by Mr. Herbert Sleath. Mr. Eric Hudson is repeating his clever impersonation of Tab-y-wena; Mr. Wilfrid Forster is a manly and popular Jim Carson; Mr. Frank Mayo a powerful Cash Hawkins; and Mr. R. A. Brandon an excellent Big Bill. Miss Kathleen Maude gives great satisfaction as the Countess of Kerhill; Miss Hilda Barits gains the entire sympathy of the audience as Nat-u-ritch; and other parts are in good hands.

Gaiety Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Capt. H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr. Geo. Humphries.—Here we have the Sisters Jerome in lively song and dance; the Armiens in a well-liked musical act; Terry and Bentley, who score in no uncertain manner as the up-to-date cadets; and Georgina Leno, who sings and dances herself into everyone's favour. George Elliston and company cause great amusement with That Brute Simmons, Mr. Elliston being particularly good as Bob Ford; and leading attractions are Frank Seeley, the well-known comedian; and the Wulfrunas, in their speciality, Fun in a Café.

CHESTER. — Royalty Theatre. — Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. B. Fountaine.—The F. R. Benson (North) Shakespearean company occupies the boards this week, Monday's production being The Taming of the Shrew. Mr. Henry Herbert, as was to be expected from so capable an actor, ably interpreted the racy rôle of Petruchio. In Miss Gladys Vanderzee the company possess a leading lady of great and versatile talent, her Katherina being characteristically and charmingly portrayed for the first two acts under most trying circumstances, a severe cold, complicated by a nasty cough, compelling her to relinquish the part for the last two acts to an understudy. Baptista was capably acted by Mr. John Cairns; and also that of Vincentio by Mr. John Hood. Mr. Charles Sparrow was good as Lucentio and Mr. Robert Atkins made an excellent Gremio. The Hortensio of Mr. Cyril Sworder was a most praiseworthy performance; and the Grumio of Mr. Andrew Leigh all that mirth and nimble wit could make it. Tranio and Biondello were amusingly rendered by Messrs. Pat Lewis and H. S. Cohen. Miss Kate Turner made an enchanting Bianca; and Miss Dorothy Radford a bewitching Widow. Hamlet, The Merry Wives, King Lear, The Tempest, Macbeth, and Twelfth Night are billed for the rest of the week.

CLYDEBANK.—New Gaiety Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickhard.—The attractions at this establishment are Vere and Nelldon, in song, dance, and story; Golden and Chance, eccentric and acrobatic specialists; Chandos Brothers, patter and topical comedians; Geo. Mackay, assisted by Mlle. Leonetta in his Arabian song-scena; Max Merlin, the "human crocodile"; Marie Beresford, comedienne; and the Bioscope.

COLCHESTER.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Chas. Macdona; Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. Graham Macdona; Stage-Director, Mr. Leo King (Co-operative Varieties, Ltd.).—Albert Voyce and Robt. Perris' company of comedians, in Peck of Peckham are here this week. Signor and Madame Borelli appear to advantage in a series of humorous episodes; Cyclumina, with his electrically-illuminated cycles, wins high praise; the Three Krakes, in the "tramcar" interlude compel laughter; Tom Garland goes nicely as a ventriloquist; Bert Weston patters with considerable humour; and Fancourt and Ruby appear with success in their comedy act.

Hippodrome.—Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—The Proud Prince, at this house for six nights, opened well on Monday. Mr. E. Vassall-Vaughan displayed histrionic ability as King Robert; Miss Eileen Kerin as Perpetua was an undoubted success; Miss Vashti Wynne was a powerful Lysabetta; Mr. Cowley Wright as the Archangel is a fine elocutionist; and as the executioner Mr. Terence O'Brien did well.

CONSETT.—New Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance.—Rowlands and Ford top the bill here this week in song and patter; Dave Elliott, blind vocalist, is well received; and the animated pictures are interesting.

CORK.—Opera House.—Manager, Mr. R. J. Bell.—A three weeks' Hippodrome season has been inaugurated here this week. Mr. Arthur Prince, ventriloquist, in his amusing dialogue between the naval officer (himself) and the new recruit, draws forth unceasing laughter; Mr. Barnold's dogs are the best trained and cleverest ever seen here; the Two Marriotts give a wonderful performance of telepathy; the Newmanns are a clever pair of trick cyclists; Blake and Amber contributed much fun in their eccentric acrobatic feats; the Four Sydney Girls afford a good vocal and dancing turn; and the Operascope shows capital pictures.

Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Thomas F. O'Brien.—The entertainment provided here is up to its usual standard. Jock Whiteford, Scotch comedian, keeps the audience in roars of laughter; Howard and Wallace, in The Taming of a Wife, prove most amusing; Ivy Proudfoot renders good songs; Luna Love pleases in her songs; Welda and Wynne, jugglers and dancers, contribute an entertaining turn; the Three Sisters Urma perform difficult feats on the trapeze; Cecile Clare, illusionist, mystifies her audience with a blackboard; Barnes and West are a clever pair of dancers; and the Palascope pictures are up to date.

COVENTRY.—Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—The dramatic students of Coventry are performing this week Marjory Strode, by A. E. W. Mason; Caste, by T. W. Robertson; and

There is no simpler, safer, or more agreeable preparation than

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. S. T. Newsome; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. E. Wright.—Harry Ford heads the bill, and amuses the audience; a sketch, The Adder's Tooth, is given in dramatic manner by Mr. Louis Taylor's talented company; a funny farcical sketch, entitled Dolly's Deception, is performed by Mr. John Scott's company; Leo and Roland, novelty equilibrists, do some exceedingly clever and daring feats; Hillman and Russell, in their vocal comedy duologue, are good; Lily Hill is an entertaining vocalist and dancer; the Soho Trio gave delightful songs and extraordinary dances. Capital pictures are shown on the Bioscope.

CROYDON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Alexander Watson; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest Archer.—Mr. F. W. Bolam's company, in The Sins of Society, is paying a return visit. Miss Cissie Carlton acts cleverly as Lady Goldbury; Miss Grace E. Leslie is all that could be wished as Lady Marion Beaumont; Miss Elsie Gardiner is good as the Hon. Mrs. Murgatroyd; Miss Rossmond Bunton is well placed as Lady Gwendolen Ashley; and Miss Janet Hodson as the Duchess of Danbury deserves praise. Mr. Maitland Marler causes plenty of amusement as James Hogg; Mr. C. F. Collings is commendable as Noel Ferrers; Mr. H. Bonhote Wilson is satisfactory as Sir Dorian March; Mr. Sidney C. Sinclair is first-rate as Mr. Morriss; and the minor rôles are carefully enacted. The company carries excellent scenery.

EMPIRE PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter Gibbons; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—Venie Clements, child mimic and comedienne, is making a big success here; Haines and Borthwick are very droll in the sketch, Half-a-Dollar; Miss Dora Lind is well received in a vocal scena with admirable effects; Frank Sylvo, juggler, is as quaint as ever; Charles Norton is capital in a mimetic monologue, Pros. at the Races; Carlisle and Walker are an entertaining comedy duo; Edward Lauri and May Beattie are great in the musical comedy protean mélange, In Her Boudoir; Maggie Carr sings, dances, and plays on the banjo nicely; and the programme also includes Lee and Kingston, Ernie Mayne, Jack and Evelyn, and Bioscope pictures.

ELECTRIC THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. H. Richards.—The pictures shown at this favourite house just hit the popular taste. The films are new and steady, and pathos and comedy are blended with admirable regard for pleasing effect.

DARLASTON.—QUEEN'S HALL.—Lessees, Manchester Royal Animated Picture Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. Beesley.—An excellent display of pictures includes Left Out, A Rude Hostess, Muggins, V.C., The Medicine Bottle, and A Trip to the White Sea Fisheries. Among a number of comic films a very funny one is entitled Mr. Poorluck Gets Married. Variety is given by Wal Townsend, Harry Cline (comedian), and Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Hayes in their comedy sketch The Other Mrs. Brown. Large audiences continue to patronise the hall.

DARLINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Bell.—Mr. Haldane Crichton presents The Cingalee here with a first-class company. Miss Iza Bowman as Nanoya sings and acts her part to perfection; Miss Florrie Greensmith as Peggy Sabine is charming in her comedy songs with Mr. Hylton Wade, who is extremely funny as Chambhuddy Ram; Mr. Frank Barclay has a fine voice, and his performance is well received; Mr. Frank Leanard is good as Boobhamba; Mr. Grafton Williams scores as Sir Peter Loftus; Mr. Herbert Franklin puts plenty of life into the part of Bobby Warren; Miss Ray Anderson as Lady Patricia Vane shows well. There are an excellent chorus and pretty scenery.

HIPPODROME.—Theatres, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert E. Nicholls.—Principal this week is Dan Whiteley, who is scoring a big success with his songs; Harry Taft, comedian, delights the audience; the Real Mackneys are clever juvenile singers and dancers; Captain Ellis and son are expert musicians; Royston and Royce are comedy artists; Yetta is clever on the wire. The bill also includes Little Zola, comedian, Crown Trio, vocalists, and the Hipposcope.

DERBY.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Denley.—Messrs. Kimberley Green and Hinton's company occupy the boards here this week, and are producing a melodrama entitled Was She to Blame? Mrs. F. G. Kimberley is successful throughout as Kate Rosselle, and her acting is all that can be desired, while her husband, Mr. F. G. Kimberley, appears to advantage as William Clarke, the brokendown actor. Frank Rosselle has a capable exponent in Mr. Clavering Craig; Mr. Henry Rutland cleverly enacts the Vicar; Mr. John George Keene is admirable as Capt. Geo. Courtney; Dr. Forbes is capably accounted for by Mr. Fred Astley; Lillian is very well portrayed by Miss Nancy York; and as Mary Norman, Lillian's mother, Miss Ellen Beverley gives a pleasing presentment. The humour of the piece is ably upheld by Mr. K. Black, jun., as Timothy Swales and Miss N. Owen as Sarah Swales; while the remaining characters all receive full justice.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. W. Moyes.—Park's Eton Boys and Girton Girls provide the top-line turn here with a most entertaining song scena. Ralph and Nellie Howard in a musical mélange, Military Mad, are highly successful instrumentalists and comedians; Gilbert Girard as an animal and instrumental mimic submits a first-class act; Gicardo is a remarkably neat juggler; Hearne and Palmer are clever and amusing knockabout acrobats; James Bassett, with tuneful chorus songs, makes himself deservedly popular; the Sisters Carlton sing and dance in a manner which is much appreciated; and Will Farrell is an amusing comedian. The Bioscope film Through the Breakers is one of an excellent series.

DEVONPORT. — HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Herbert Taylor.—Sensational trick cycling by Sebastian Merrill and company deservedly occupies chief position on the bill, and thoroughly deserves the appreciation it receives; Mr. Claude Anderson and Miss Ethel Pender-Cudlip are heard to great advantage in extracts from Il Trovatore, both vocalists being possessors of voices of great range and power; the Creedons entertain with a very interesting exhibition of club-juggling, ball-punching, and scientific boxing; the Wagners, in a comedy tabloid, entitled The Boy, the Maid, and the Misfit, are responsible for a quarter of an hour's unrestrained merriment; the Phœnix Trio are excellent vocalists and dancers; and Ted Cowan, comedian, and Lily Black, comedienne, also materially contribute to a fine bill.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—Geoffrey Langdon's Wife is deservedly doing first-rate business. As Jack Sterling Mr. J. S. Milward is responsible for some really clever acting; Mr. Wilson Coleman as Felix Beverley is unquestionably an actor of skill and ability; and Mr. H. Creagh Hunt gives a talented exposition of the rôle of Geoffrey Langdon. Miss Kathleen Magee scores heavily with her presentation of the Hon. Mrs. Sands; and Miss Minnie Gorrel capably interprets Sweet Nancy. The comedy business is in the capable hands of Messrs. Percy Brown and Victor Raymond.

DEWSBURY. — EMPIRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. G. W. and G. E. Smith; Manager, Mr. Claude Shayler; Musical-Director, Mr. E. G. Summerfield.—Here this week is Ethel Arden and Geo. Abel's sketch Three of a Kind, which keeps the house in continuous laughter. The characters are portrayed by Mr. Robert Ayrton (General Flarup), Miss Adria Hill (Mrs. Whimpers), Mr. Frank Hill (Tom Flarup), and Miss Elsie Venner (Daisy Armitage) in a most praiseworthy manner, and excellent support is rendered by Mr. Wm. Midgley, Mr. Thos. Brooklyn, and Miss Jessie Percival. A particularly pleasing turn is done by Renee, a lady instrumentalist of exceptional merit, who fully deserves the splendid reception which is accorded her; Horace White, ventriloquist and solo pianist, submits a novel item which is greatly appreciated, his manipulation of the figures being very quaint. The Days, exponents of second sight, mystify the audience and make themselves popular favourites; the Alberto Troupe of equilibrists are very clever, and win much applause; Baby Myrtle Grove is an exceedingly smart little artist, and meets with a cordial reception; and others who contribute to the programme are J. H. Carney, a capital stilt dancer; and Bessie Knight, coon and buck dancer. There is also the customary display of films.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Asquith.—Mr. Frank Thorne's drama Little Phil's Mother is the attraction here this week. Miss Maud Russell is entitled to high praise for her clever portrayal of Ruth Towers; Frank Towers has an able exponent in Mr. Percy Ballard, who is responsible for some clever acting; little Gertie Renaud submits a fine study of Little Phil, the naturalness of her acting appealing to everyone; Mr. Henry Earlesmere plays Oscar Titherton in excellent style; Miss Violet Cranford deservedly scores as Elspeth; as Sam Perkells and Julia Woorrilove Mr. Frank M. Thorne and Miss Leslie Warner evoke much laughter; Mr. John E. Tomlinson as Bill Brisket acquits himself with credit; Mr. Gifforde Reynolds meets with much favour as Geoffrey Dyne; Mr. J. P. Marsden as Donald Taggarty is responsible for some very smart comedy; and the remaining characters are in capable hands.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. George Weldon; Stage-Manager, Mr. Jack Harris; Musical-Director, Mr. R. H. Riley.—Heading the bill here this week are Clara Coverdale's Nine Dainty Dots in a splendidly-dressed scena, Gipsy Revels. Their singing and dancing are very clever and interesting. A turn which proves great patience and skill in animal training is Lieut. Chard's performng dogs, which do some wonderful feats; the Venola Brothers, comedy gymnasts, cause much laughter by their funniosities; a very bright and interesting performance is submitted by Arthur Bright, Swiss mountaineer; Cliffe and Vanstan, musical artists, score a success; the Selwyns, in a very clever vocal and dancing act, go well; and the ever-popular Harriscope showing some interesting films, including The Last Deal, The Orderly, and The Coquette.

DONCASTER.—NEW GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. J. W. Chapman.—This week Mr. Allan Wilkie and company are contributing a series of Shakespearean and standard plays. The Taming of the Shrew was presented on Monday. Mr. Allan Wilkie, in his delineation of Petruchio, preserved the best traditions of the character; Mr. Houston Meharry availed himself of his ample opportunities as Grumio; Miss Carrie Baillie, well dowered with personal charms, created much interest in Katharina; and Messrs. Alexander Marsh (Lucentio), G. Edward Dunstan (Tranio), and F. J. Fay (Gremio) gave of their best. The production was beautifully staged. On Tuesday evening The Merchant of Venice was presented, and on Wednesday As You Like It.

DOVER.—ROYAL HIPPODROME.—An excellent programme is attracting crowded houses. De Biere's performance includes a marvellous sequence of illusions which are extremely interesting and very mystifying. The English protean artist Marie Jones, in company with Ernest Munro, perform a lightning-change playlet which is very warmly received. The phenomenal tiny performer Baby Wolff gives an extremely clever song and dance; and Della Ray scores a big success with her chorus songs. Colley and Scott are entertaining, their songs being of an amusing description; and Arthur Rigby, the popular comedian, Tom Dunmore, and the Hippodrome Pictures complete.

DUBLIN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frederick Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Terry.—Large and appreciative audiences were present on Monday night, when Mr. George Edwardes's company opened with Our Miss Gibbs. Miss Alcie Pollard, a most attractive Mary Gibbs, sings nicely and dances and acts with great energy; Mr. George Gregory causes no end of amusement in his impersonation of Timothy Gibbs; Mr. Lionel Mackinder acts the part of the Hon. Hughie Pierrepoint in humorous style; Mr. Robert Nainby is very good as the cook, Stithers; and Mr. Ernest Mahar clever in the part of Mr. Toplady. Mr. H. V. Cropton acts the lover, Lord Eynsford, exceedingly well; Miss Marie Wilson is a most effective Lady Elizabeth; Miss Grace Wixon a stately and dignified Duchess of Minster; Miss May Marton an excellent Mrs. Farquhar; Miss Dora Sevening a clever Mme. Jeanne; and as Mr. Beavis, the family solicitor, Mr. Campbell Bishop fills the rôle with success, Mr. Myles Clifton doing very well as the Earl of St. Ives. Miss Florence Phillips contributes a solo dance.

GAIETY THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. Frederick Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Hyland.—On Monday night a warm and hearty welcome was accorded the D'Oyly Carte Company, who are appearing this week in the popular and delightful operas of Gilbert and Sullivan. The Mikado was played the first night before a very crowded house. Mr. Leicester Tunks sang his music capitally as the Mikado; Mr. Fred Billington acquitted himself with his accustomed success as Pooh Bah; and Mr. Henry A. Lytton distinguished himself in the character of Ko-Ko. Mr. Sydney Granville made an excellent Pish Tush; and the performance of Mr. Henry Herbert as Nanki Poo was highly creditable. Mrs. Arthur Rousbey gave a very finished and artistic portrayal of Yum-Yum; and the Misses Beatrice Boarer and Ethel George were both admirable in the respective rôles of Petti-Sing and Peep-Bo. Miss Louie Rene submitted an excellent rendition of Katisha. On Tuesday The Yeoman of the Guard was played, and The Gondoliers and Patience were also presented during the week.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Marriott Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. F. Wright.—Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Levy and I. E. Cardwell's juvenile company, in the pantomime of Hop-o'-My-Thumb, continues here another week.

EMPIRE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Marsh.—This week we have Chung Ling Soo, the Chinese mystifier, whose exceptionally clever performance proves highly attractive; Charlie Robinson is warmly applauded for his songs; Rossi Ashton, war artist, in song-sketching, is an interesting turn; the Sisters St. Julian are appreciated in song and dance; Tom Lloyd is most amusing with his eccentric songs; and Lily Ray, comedienne and dancer, Majorie Lawrence, soubrette, and Lidden and Hayward also appear with success.

TIVOLI. — General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—Topping the bill here we have Ian Rudenyi, who delights everyone with his artistic violin selections; Frank Elliston and company, in the sketch, My Lady Betty, are most amusing; Hammon and Wyatt appear in a novel singing act; Anna Hope's contralto songs are excellently rendered; Rosie Lee is particularly good as a mimic; and Cestria presents a clever acrobatic act. Frank Boyce sings admirably; Michael Madden gives satisfaction as a comedian; and Jack Holland and the Tivoli pictures are other attractions.

WORLD'S FAIR.—Proprietor, Mr. Charles A. James.—The following artists are appearing here this week: Naye and Bray, sketch artists; Harry Vernon, comedian and dancer; Miss Nina May, soprano; and Tom Wheatley, ventriloquist.

DUDLEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. Maurice Clement; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. Tilley.—Mr. and Mrs. Eustace Day's company in For Love of a Woman is the attraction here. Mr. Edmund Grogan acts the hero, Ned Merrick, in true and manly style, and Miss Dorothy Oswald is sweet and sympathetic as Nell Pagett. Mr. Ernest Regent plays the villain, Guy Manor, in forcible style; Mr. Eustace Day as the blind grandfather, Allen Pagett, is quite natural; Mr. Charles Niman is highly successful as the irrascible Major Holmes; Mr. Harry Angers causes endless amusement as the dude, Albert Everamond, and is good in song and dance; Mr. Joe Redfern is a robust Police-constable Holland, and gives some original patter; Miss G. de Clifford is gay, giddy, and gushing as Marjory Holmes; Miss Eva St. Vincent realistically represents the character part of Jane Manor; and Miss May Day is successful in the juvenile part of Nance Manor.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, the Midland Entertainment Corporation, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. J. Bleasdale.—At the head of affairs this week are George Payne's Wanderers, who prove most enjoyable in a caravan scena, introducing whistling, singing, and dancing. Urita and Paul, sensational and comedy gymnasts, are conspicuous with a capital performance; also popular are Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wilde, talking and singing shadowists, who provide an exceedingly clever and novel turn; the Sisters Lewis, duettists and dancers; the Raynors, speciality dancers; and the Two Manites, comedy club jugglers. Will Willis, a comedian with good, original songs and jokes; Winnie Clarke, comedienne; and Lily May, male and coon impersonator, also give pleasing turns. The Empire Pictures are always enjoyed.

DUNDEE.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—Mr. Vedrenne's company is creating an excellent impression here in The Fires of Fate. The Nile Steamer, The Abousir Rock, and The Oasis of Abonteb are stage pictures of exceeding beauty. Colonel Cyril Egerton is a rôle eminently suited to an actor of Mr. Stephen T. Ewart's quality, and he succeeds in securing the wrapt attention of the audience from first to last. Mr. Herbert Vyvyan presents a first-class character sketch of the Rev. Samuel Roden; Mr. Charles Francis is an excellent exponent of Dr. Roden; Mr. Edward A. Coventry does well as Thomas Belmont; Mr. Stanley Logan as Cecil Brown plays with marked ability; the part of the theological student, Brodie, is done ample justice to by Mr. Herbert Maule; Mr. Gerald Merriclees is diverting as Mons. Octave Fardet; Mr. Arthur Ansell makes an excellent Rudkin; Captain Jack Archer is played in capable manner by Mr. Frederick Worlock; Abdulla is efficiently rendered by Mr. Alfred C. Sandoe; and the Dervish spy Sidi Mohamed is realistically impersonated by Mr. G. T. Lambert. Sadie Adams is charmingly enacted by Miss Ruth Bower; Miss Gwendolen Floyd creditably undertakes the part of Miss Adams; and Miss Alison Trent as Mrs. Belmont acts with bright vivacity.

KING'S THEATRE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—Through the unfortunate indisposition of the lady partner, the Bensons were unable to appear on Monday, the vacancy being filled by a trio of clever juvenile dancers. The Harvey Boys score an immense success with their comedy and boxing act That was Me; Florence Yayman calls forth loud applause for her coon impersonations; France and Stewart contribute a racy comedy, The 100 to 1 Chance; Ess and Hoey give a remarkable dancing exhibition on Canadian skis and steel skates; W. G. Wesley keeps his audience in a merry mood; and Jack Hylton also proves highly entertaining. Helen Martin wins honours with her accomplished singing; Boden and Bell captivate the house with their neatly-worked turn; and the Kingscope pictures are excellent.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—Mr. Charles Majilton's company is presenting The Plumber and Round the Clock to large and appreciative audiences. The former piece was staged on Monday, when Mr. Majilton as the Mad Doctor aroused genuine laughter; the eccentricities of Mr. Tom Bond as the Plumber were mirth-provoking; Uncle Able was a matured impersonation in the hands of Mr. George Hunter; Miss Maddie Majilton as the servant gave a clever and vivacious character sketch; Miss Nelly Clifford looked and acted prettily as the Widow; and Kate Fadshaw and Lydia Brock had attractive exponents in Miss Lena Valli and Miss Lizzie Boyle.

PALACE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. Tom Lunn.—The picture programme meets with the warm approval of large houses. A capital film is The Aviator's Romance, in which an aeroplane is shown in flight. The Englishman and the Girl is a very amusing film, and other pictures include Villainy Defeated, The Cabby's Dodge, The Golden Beetle, &c.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. W. Austin.—Bumper houses rule here, an attractive programme of pictures being presented.

DURHAM.—THE PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. T. C. Rawes.—Ada Fawn heads an interesting programme this week; Harvey's American Boys and Girls, including Daisie Dennis and her Teddy bear, score heavily with song and dance; and in a comedy juggling act Caron and Herbert create roars of laughter. Percy Curry, the original candy man, with Tyneside songs and patter, is a great favourite; Ada Jenner and company in the sketch The Lady Barber are highly amusing; from a violin Carlos Menard extracts marvellous imitations, musical and otherwise; May St. Hilda gains a good share of applause with her scena The Studio; and the Cathedoscope concludes.

ECCLES.—CROWN THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert Rogers.—Mr. J. A. Campbell's company, in the well-known play Old Folks at Home, is here. Mr. Frank Liston as Lord Howard Kenilworth is seen to advantage; Mr. George Steel gives a capital representation of Andrew Ross; Mr. Ian Fleming proves himself a very capable exponent of Hugh Lovel; Mr. Henry Sainbury as Christopher Robin is all that could be desired; Miss Maud Warburton as Dorothy Robin acts throughout in artistic manner; Miss Dora Mason as Bonita Durham plays naturally. The play is well mounted.

EDINBURGH. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. W. Wyndham and George T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. William Whitehead.—A return visit is paid Diana of Dobson's, of which Miss Lena Ashwell's company gives a good rendering. Miss Molly Tremaine as Diana, with her Dobson associates (amusingly characterised by Miss Nannie Hume, Miss Eva Leonard Boyne, Miss Cicely Oats, and Miss Winifred Trevor Lowe), are all at their best in the famous dormitory scene with which the piece opens. Miss Marie Ault makes a sufficiently formidable Miss Pringle, a part which she successfully doubles with that of the old woman in the melodramatic last act; Miss Hilda Franks is exceedingly good as Mrs. Cantelupe; Miss Mary Crewe does well in the part of Mrs. White Fraser; Mr. A. A. Harris emphasises the self-importance of the parvenu Sir Jabez Grimlay humorously enough; Mr. Leslie Rea is unaffected in his study of Captain Bretherton; and the policeman of Mr. Leslie Crowther lacks nothing of natural effect. A curtain-raiser, entitled Out West, gave Miss Boyne an opportunity of playing with much acceptance the part of Salomy Clay.

ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE. — Managing-Directors, Mr. F. W. Wyndham and Mr. George T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. William M. Downie.—The Southern Light Opera Company submits an attractive programme here in the two popular operas Merrie England and Veronique. The chief honours in the former piece fell to Mr. Kellas Brewster for a really quaint performance of Walter Wilkins, and to Miss Madge Henderson for a very charming impersonation, dramatically and vocally, of Jill-all-Alone. Miss Kathleen Henderson was a stately Queen Elizabeth, and she displayed a beautiful contralto voice to advantage in the music of the part; Miss Molly Johnston was an engaging May Queen; Miss Maggie Sutherland as Marjory danced a Morris dance in a dainty fashion; Mr. A. W. Cullen, an admirable actor and singer, evoked an encore for a spirited rendering of "The Yeomen of England" in the character of the Earl of Essex; and Mr. Fred Hamilton and Mr. R. Swan Dickson were notably good as Sir Walter Raleigh and Silas Simkins respectively. Veronique was in the hands of a capable cast. Mr. J. S. Brewster's performance of Coquenard was marked by much intelligence and humour, and Miss Nana Linton as Madame Coquenard, Miss Belle Latto a graceful Denise, and Miss Jeanie Gulland, a commanding Countess, contributed to an enjoyable rendering of the piece. The fresh and tuneful voices of a large chorus gave effect to the concerted numbers, and Mr. Geo. W. Lingard, Mus.B., conducted with conspicuous ability.

KING'S THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Armand Mascard.—A brisk and entertaining programme here this week includes the two very amusing farces Fishing, by Mr. Harry Tate's company, and A Married Microbe, by Mr. Carl Lyle and company. The comedians in the latter piece, Mr. Carl Lyle and Mr. Allyn White, play with spirit and humour, Mr. Lyle being extremely droll in his acting as the broken-down mummer. Mr. J. P. Ling, an admirable mimic, is loudly applauded for several neat imitations; Mr. Arthur J. Hill displays vocal and dramatic gifts in his excellent lilliputian act, and manipulated the figures with much dexterity; La Berat, a graceful dancer, charms her audiences by the beauty of her movements, and the varied electrical and scenic effects impart a pleasing background to the delightful evolutions of the artist; Radford and Valentine, two undeniably humorous performers, give a very funny and clever juggling act; Miss Cabani is an expressive singer and capital dancer; Mr. Guy Rider is a siffleur of undoubted ability; and Mr. Larola, comedian, and Mr. Jack Macormack, Scotch comedian, also appear.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—Madame Albani, with her répertoire of operatic excerpts and popular ballads, has drawn crowded audiences to every performance. M. Jan Zakovsky, violin virtuoso, forms another strong item on the programme; the Courtiers, under the direction of Mr. Paul Mill, contribute a pleasing musical comedy mélange; and a performance of a kindred nature is supplied by Tom and Marie Motrano. Holden's Mannikins secured cordial recognition for their presentations of vaudeville singers and dancers; Beatty and Blanche were heard and seen approvingly as duettists and dancers; the Brothers Redmond are clever acrobatic comedians; Alf. Gibson is very diverting; the Delevines provided much amusement with their "Scarecrow" act; and the American Bioscope produces good pictures of the Oxford and Cambridge Boat Race.

OPERETTA HOUSE.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. J. H. Sanders.—For the Honour of the Family is a fine American Civil War drama; The Luck of Roaring Camp pictures Bret Harte's pathetic story of that name; while The Song of the Shirt is a moving tale of grinding labour. Perhaps the best humorous films are Foolshead at the Ball and The Thief's Revenge. Mr. A. J. Gamble is a good Scotch comedian.

PRINGLE'S PICTURE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. Edmunds.—The dramatic films in this week's programme include two capital pictures—The Confession and His Only Child. The Woman from Mellon's is a very humorous subject, original and clever; and Chasing the Lucky Charm keeps the audience in fits of laughter. Sandy and Carl and Alec Ashford, comedian, contribute excellent variety turns.

ELLESMERE PORT.—HIPPODROME AND PICTURE PALACE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Corelli and Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Corelli.—A variation in the programme is made by the appearance of a company in a condensed version of The Bohemian Girl and The Daughter of the Regiment. The leading characters are very ably portrayed by Mme. Adele Prescott and Mr. T. H. Wood, and able support is given by Miss Nellie Moore, Messrs. Norman H. Purnell, Ernest C. Gittens, and J. de Gabriele. An excellent entertainment is concluded by animated pictures, including the 1910 Grand National.

EXETER. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Chairman and Managing-Director, Mr. Edward J. Domville, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy M. Dunsford.—The attraction here this week is Mr. J. W. Cordiner's company, in Dare-Devil Dorothy. Mr. Geo. A. Fox is an admirable Captain Fielding; Mr. Robert Gilbert an excellent Captain Dudley; Mr. Deane Cliffe does well as Featherstone Haugh; while Mr. James Salter proves an exceedingly humorous Silas Crump. Mr. William H. Troutbeck does good work as Smith; Miss Kathleen Stewart is a charming Ruth Montrose; Miss Gertrude de Lacy a winning Dorothy; Miss Lillie Elvido and Miss Iris Elvido as Rosy and Polly are highly successful; Miss Madge Delta an agreeable Maude; and Judith is satisfactorily taken by Miss Nellie Harcourt.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Karno; Resident and Acting-Manager, Mr Frederick Sandy.—An attractive programme is headed by May Mars, who is winning much favour here. Ben Albert, in a quaintly humorous fashion, keeps his audience convulsed with laughter; Harry Leybourne, comedian and mimic, is possessed of considerable originality; Zaleski, the golden spider, performs some extraordinary contortionist feats; Harris Coonie scores a distinct success in a smart dancing act; the Maltans are a clever comedy couple; and the Four Pawels contribute an entertaining comedy tumbling act, entitled After the Matinée.

FALKIRK.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace W. Ebbutt.—Can a Woman Be Good? is capitally presented by Mr. Tom H. Taylor's company, the chief parts being taken by Miss Blanch St. Albans (Esther Howarth) and Mr. J. Miflane (Manuel Errington); Mr. Harry C. Robinson's Herod Steinburg is a pronounced villain; Miss Florence Hunt as Naomi Merrick, the temptress, plays well; the merriment is ably sustained by Miss Winifred Barton and Mr. J. Tyrrel. The play is exceedingly well staged and dressed.

FLEETWOOD. — EMPIRE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. J. Snelson.—Mr. Horace Stanley's company opened to a packed house on Monday with the popular favourite, The 10.30 Down Express. Jack O'Malley has a powerful exponent in Mr. T. Arthur Plummer; Mr. George Gaisford enacts the rôle of James Inderwick in a duly sinister fashion; Mr. Edwin Clarke is a first-class Detective as Huntley Mason; and a realistic country gentleman is presented by Mr. T. B. Brabazon. Mr. Horace Stanley as Sam Wagstaffe has the audience in roars of laughter while he occupies the boards; Miss Cora Linda as the heroine quickly constitutes herself a favourite; Miss Ida Fane is excellent as the eccentric Letitia Leigh; and Miss Kate Kilpack ably seconds Mr. Stanley's efforts in the comedy line. Miss Leila Drummond gives a clever rendering of Olive Coombes.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—The attraction for the week is Miss Emma Hutchison and company in Don, which opened on Monday night to a large and appreciative audience. As the kind-hearted Canon Bonington Mr. Arthur Willoughby portrayed the character to the life, and the part of the Rector's wife was in the safe hands of Miss Emma Hutchison, who acted with her usual ability; Mr. Gordon Bailey gave a capital study of the idealist and poet Stephen Bonington; Mr. Charles Harley showed dramatic force as Albert Thompsett, and a clever performance was given by Miss Violet Harley as the runaway wife; the fire-eating General Sinclair was ably enacted by Mr. Charles Tyrel; Miss Celia Gordon was vivacious and amusing as the General's wife; and last, but not least, was the delightfully natural acting of Miss Viola Garland as Ann Sinclair, fiancée of the impossible Stephen. Each evening the play has been preceded by a smart little curtain-raiser, Her Dearest Friend.

THE LEAS PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. D'Arcy Clayton.—An attractive and amusing entertainment is given by Lès Militaires. The party include Miss Dorothy Southgate, Miss Phillis Austin, Miss Vera Barton, Mr. Jack Hornby, Mr. Charles Ashley, Mr. Laurie Ray, and Mr. Charlie Ross. The last-named creates roars of laughter with his humorous sayings and antics.

TOWN HALL.—A fine programme of animated pictures is presented here this week by the St. Louis Company. Among the many excellent films shown, which include dramatic, instructive, and comic, we have Mountaineer's Honour, an exciting and interesting picture of great length, Wearing of the Green, Terror and the Terrier, &c., which are greatly appreciated by the large audiences.

GAINSBOROUGH.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Lewers and Bennett; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—This week we have a variety company consisting of Blanche and Zeyna, who give a sensational cycle whizz; May Knight, comedienne; Snowball and Mac, comedy duo; Fred Henry, comic singer; and Elsie Graham.

GATESHEAD. — KING'S THEATRE. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Local-Manager and Licensee, Councillor Harold Arnold.—Starring here this week are the Seven Bramusas, presented by Mr. John R. Poole, in a nautical brass band extravaganza named Music Afloat, which is mightily pleasing; Rowland Hill cracks many good jokes; the Forrestiers are seen to great advantage in a dramatic episode entitled A Society Woman; Ciss and Will form a clever juvenile duo in song and dance; Harriett Rose sings two "swinging" songs with good effect; Reski and Reski are amusing and accomplished gymnasts;

Allen and Austin are entertaining comedians; Harry Cotton raises numerous laughs; and the Kingscope is productive of merriment.

Metropole Theatre.—Sole Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Dixon.—The popular drama Two Little Vagabonds, which is being presented here this week by the Lyceum Tours, under the direction of Mr. Henry B. Smith, has met with unqualified success. Mr. Frank Beresford is a stately Thornton; as Captain Darville Mr. Renaud Lockwood is seen to advantage; Mr. Ed. Beecher ably portrays John Scarth; Mr. Chas. L. Ludlow embodies Bill Mullins with infinite care; the character of Cough Drop is in the most excellent hands of Mr. Frederick Archer; Miss Dorothy Milne makes a hit as Marian Thornton; Miss Mabel Cooke does well as Barbara Scarth; and the Vagabonds, in the persons of Misses Helen Grenville and Ivy Millais, are all that could be desired.

GLASGOW.—King's, Ltd.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. W. Wyndham and Geo. T. Minshull; Business-Manager, Mr. Hugh Macfarlane.—Although so well and favourably known in the Metropolis, Alice in Wonderland is visiting Glasgow for the first time this week. The company is headed by Miss Ivy Sawyer, whose bright and intelligent portrayal of Alice wins all hearts; the Mad Hatter of Mr. Franklyn Vernon is a quaint and original figure; as Tweedledee and Tweedledum Messrs. Roland Henry and Tom Graves are responsible for a deal of healthy fun; smart work is done by Mr. Dan Leno, jun., in the rôle of Red King; the other royalties being represented with complete success by Mr. Edmund Goulding, Miss Iris Damon, and Mr. Roy Jeffries; clever juveniles are seen in the parts of March Hare (Miss Doris Walker) and White Rabbit (Miss Bertha Schwartz); as the Cheshire Cat Miss Girlie le Claire plays her part well; Miss Amy Fanchette is admirably suited as the Duchess; the parts of the Cook and the Executioner being well filled by Miss Yvonne Schofield and Mr. B. Hatton Sinclair.

Royalty.—Sub-Lessees, The Scotttish Playgoers, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Wareing.—The repertory company here has once more placed playgoers under an obligation by producing Mr St. John Hankin's comedy, The Cassilis Engagement, for the first time in the provinces. This cleverly-constructed play evokes very hearty enthusiasm and receives excellent treatment from the members of the company. As Mrs. Cassilis, whose diplomatic treatment of her son's fiancée is the means of averting an undesirable marriage, Miss Irene Rooke gives a particularly strong performance; the lady of the son's choice, Ethel Borridge, is another notable characterisation as played by Miss Muriel Pope; and her vulgar mother is acted on broadly humorous lines by Miss Alice Mansfield. Mr. P. Percival Clark makes a manly young Geoffrey Cassilis; and Miss Ethel Evans is a charming Lady Mabel. Mr. M. R. Morant contributed another clever study in the part of Major Warrington; Mr. Laurence Hanray as the Rector, and Misses Elspeth Dudgeon, Lola Duncan, and Norah Delancy as society ladies, give able support; Mr. George Tawde, Mr. Cyril Griffiths, and Miss Irene Clarke as servants complete an excellent cast. The play is mounted in excellent style, each of the sets being much admired. Miss Madge M'Intosh, who is in Glasgow for the production of Masefield's Nan at this theatre, is responsible for the producing of the present play.

Grand.—District-Manager, Mr. B. G. Maclachlan; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Christie Grant; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Chas. L. Sealy.—From Tuesday of this week the Lyric Club are in possession of the Grand, and are producing Audran's tuneful opera, La Cigale, which has not been played in Glasgow for a number of years.

Royal Princess's.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdoch.—In the Shadow of Night, a spectacular and sensational drama, by James Willard, is introduced here this week by Arthur Lee Mitchell's company. Mr. Forbes Carrington as the Squire of Hazelmere gives a faithful study of the disappointed father; Mr. Leonard Williams as Gordon Allington carries himself manfully through all the villainous schemes of Clifford Yorke, effectually portrayed by Mr. Paul Beckett; the stage turpitude of Mr. William Hayward as Jake Grudgewell, a poacher, evokes the hostility of the gods; Mr. Ern. Carlton as Tom Nainby, a gentleman in khaki, in conjunction with Miss Kitty Roze as Mollie Woodstock, gives a spice of humour to the piece; Miss Irene Arundel as Violet Kingston fits her part admirably; and Miss Kitty Johnstone as Bob, a little tramp, acts in a careful manner. Mr. Fenton Wingate, in the dual rôle of Joe Jackson, a postman, and the Rev. Nathaniel Hope, gives a good account of himself; and as Farmer Woodstock Mr. Harry Emmerson is a distinct success.

Metropole, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—We have here this week Mr. T. Arthur Jones and his company, in Life's Sweetest Sins. Mr. T. Arthur Jones plays Captain Harold Marston with firmness and intensity; Miss F. Melrose-Millett is responsible for a skilful study of Doreen Rivers; the villainous propensities of Dr. Colebrooke are ably emphasised by Mr. Juan D'Alberti; Miss Marie Daventry does excellent work as Fay Colebrooke; and Mr. John Davidson gives an acceptable reading of Ernie Woodstone. Mr. Arthur Prescot as the Rev. Edward Grey and Mr. Albert H. Clark as Kimberley Coutts both do well. Some extremely humorous business is forthcoming from Mr. Charles Preece as Bob Tanner and Miss May Neilson as Bess Grayson.

Lyceum.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—Every Inch a Man is the title of the drama appearing at the Lyceum this week. Mr. H. Graham Arthur's Daniel Barnet is very successful; Mr. Joe Barker as the Old Man is all that can be desired; Mr. Forrest Niven is also good as Dick Barnet; Miss Mabel Liston as Vera Maxwell shows ability; as also does clever Mr. Wylie Dick as the wicked little boy. Miss Levenston as Mrs. Edwards and Martha (Miss Evelyn Hamilton) also deserve praise.

Empire.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Reynolds.—Alice Raymond and her Players, in a musical production, A Night in Egypt, are excellently received here; Fred Karno's creation, The Yap Yaps, is responsible for merriment; Carrie Laurie and her juveniles, in A Model School, are thoroughly appreciated; a novel entertainment is presented by Brinn, entitled Pastimes on a Battleship; in a pleasing and unique musical speciality Mabel Mavis is popular; her work is smart, and she is indeed a talented musician. Little Maudie Francis, a favourite in pantomime here a few years ago, pays a return visit; Tom Stuart provides a capital turn; Ethel Beech gets through her work with much grace; and the Bioscope films conclude.

Pavilion, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Evan Good; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest R. Foster.—Carl Hertz, the wonderful illusionist, again gives a bewildering display of tricks, in which he is assisted by Miss Emelie D'Alton; M'Lallen and Carson, a couple of daring and graceful roller-skaters, show the perfection that can be attained in this art; Will H. Fox, clever as of old, and with a lot of new patter, keeps the audience amused all the time he is on; Irve Hayman and company contribute a well-devised little "burglar play," entitled 'Xmas Eve; Victor Newman's impersonations of famous actors and Dickens studies are life-like and much enjoyed; Monty Walker is a Lancashire comedian with several taking songs; Les Auberts give a display of eccentric and acrobatic Continental dancing; Selby and Myers are clever in their comedy business; and Monie Mine contributes some smart character songs and is a neat dancer.

Palace.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry M'Kelvie.—Sanford and Lyons, simultaneous dancers, had a hearty reception here on their opening night, when their songs and patter were thoroughly enjoyed; Palles and Cressick, comedians and knockabouts, are as amusing as ever; Irene Rose, comedienne and vocalist, makes a successful appearance; and Barney Armstrong, in conjunction with Kelly, submit a most amusing turn. Other artists include Jessie Wilter, comedienne and vocalist; Fred S. Howard, artist entertainer; Drum and Major, comedy specialists; Geo. Prince, comedian; Harry Arnold, Scotch comedian; and the Carina Sisters.

Coliseum.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.—George Lashwood, fresh from his American successes, is drawing good houses here, and, in addition to several clever songs in his best style, has a novel scena, with cinematograph effects; Bros. Egbert, the happy dustmen, are as happy as ever in exciting the risibility of the audience at their amusing business; Bros. Griffiths are another strong turn on the bill, and their duelling and wrestling set the crowds in a roar; Vanando is a ventriloquist of considerable ability; Pete and Minnie Lee take well in their musical scena, A Scotchman's Visit to London; Edith Fink sings her songs in dainty and attractive style; Gladys Mavius delights with her neat step-dancing; Carl Howard as a comic conjurer is very funny; and acrobatic dancing is wonderfully done by Lydia and Amelys.

Gaiety, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Dickinson.—Donaldson and Emslie, comedy sketch artists, are responsible for an amusing turn; Annie Stewart renders her vocal turns with good taste. She has a pleasing voice, and takes well. The Bioscope films form the bulk of the programme.

Panopticon.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—George Arnott, comedian, tops the bill here with songs and patter; Hurl and Ford are a clever pair of dancers; Jimmy Lowery, the Tyneside singing furnaceman, has a good voice; Cissy Chevening is a smart comedienne; and the Stewarts submit an amusing comedy act. The Bioscope pictures are interesting.

Hengler's Circus.—Proprietor, Mr. Albert Hengler; Manager, Mr. Harry Milne.—The picture season is now on here, and doing wonderful business. There is a fine collection of films; the selections on the auxeto-gramophone are much enjoyed; and, in addition, clever variety items are contributed by Edna Cragge, vocalist; Will Hawthorne, comedienne; and Retta Halket, comedienne and dancer.

GLOSSOP.—Theatre Royal and Picturedrome.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sydney Spenser.—Good houses are still patronising this theatre nightly, and the pictures seem to have "caught on." Capital films include A Wife's Jealousy, The Rival Cyclists, Oxford and Cambridge Boat Race, 1910, The Brigadier's Stripes, Army Service Dogs, The Commander's Amours, Cyrano de Bercerac, Two Develish Imps. The variety part of the entertainment is good. Mr. Toddie Ford is a clever and versatile humorist; Miss Doris Yorke a sweet and charming vocalist; Forder's Living Mannikins give a clever interpretation of the monoplay, Swivler the Smuggler.

GLOUCESTER.—Palace Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. W. Smithson; Manager, Mr. R. T. Rea.—Mr. Robt. Macdonald's company is presenting The Gay Gordons this week. Miss May Yates is a vivacious and clever Peggy Quainton; Angus Graeme is excellently sustained by Mr. Stafford Dickens; Nervy Nat is comically portrayed by Mr. Sidney Burt; and Miss Denny Fitzherbert is an amusing Charlotte Siddons; Mr. C. P. Wentworth is a good Andrew Quainton; Janet McLeod is interesting in the hands of Miss Beatrice Grosvenor; and Victoria Siddons is capitally enacted by Miss Ruby Louis. Mr. Stanley Maude is entertaining as Corpl. John Smith; and Mr. Ernest Pierce is noticeable as Edmund Siddons.

GOOLE.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. R. Hainsworth.—An admirable programme is headed by the Kellys, comedy duettists and patterers, who keep the house in roars of laughter; the Four Van Earles score a big success with their clever singing and dancing; Geo. Kelley, comedian, is loudly applauded; the Two Turners, in comedy duo, prove highly amusing; Fred Davies is an expert clog dancer. The up-to-date pictures by the Monarchscope conclude.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—Royal Aquarium.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Nightingale.—The new farcical comedy Where is William? is proving a big attraction here. Mr. Charles Windermere scores a great success as Sir William Gregory; Mr. Rule Pyott is very amusing as William Jolly; Mr. C. K. Francis plays well as Harry; Mr. Leslie Norman gives a humorous portrayal of General Rubbub; Miss Belle Donaldson is an able exponent of Lady Gregory; Miss Clare Marefield charmingly plays Phyllis; and Miss May Posine is good as Emily. Miss Zoe Davis makes a lot of fun as Eliza.

GREENOCK.—King's Theatre.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. A. B. and J. J. Wright.—Mr. W. Graham Arthur's company is here with The Mockery of Marriage. Mr. William S. Palmer is conspicuous with a forcible rendering of Sir Montague Jephson; Mr. Frank Masters as Joseph Verham acts in a praiseworthy manner; Mr. Fitzroy Wharton is well appreciated as Jack Stanley; Mr. M. L. Mackenzie is particularly good as Seth Pearse; and Mr. David Philips is highly amusing as Toby Wright. Miss Mabel Liston sustains the character of Alva Kenyon with vigour and impressiveness; Miss C. Middleton is an attractive Rose Verham; and Miss Priscilla Barnard and Miss Kate Hughes are good in their respective parts of Nellie Kenyon and Mary Ann Barnicoat.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. L. Skivington.—Searo, the well-known illusionist, is the principal attraction here, and succeeds in bewildering with a series of marvellous tricks, all neatly done; the Royal Tokio Troupe of Japanese equilibrists submit a meritorious performance; plenty of laughter and applause greet the antics of Stanley and Vandyke, and other good turns are introduced by Flora MacDonald, comedienne and dancer, Hilton, ventriloquist, and Vena Valma, a pleasing comedienne.

Empire.—Lessee, Mr. J. J. Bennell; General-Manager, Mr. J. B. Lawton; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Clayton.—A very interesting and amusing series of pictures are being shown here this week. The two outstanding films are Won by a Hold-Up and In the Nick of Time, which are followed by The Capture of a Vagrant, The Monkey's Courtship, Terrier and Rats, The Bagpipe Player, A Runaway Table, That Skating Carnival, Stop Your Tickling, and The Miniature "Tec."

GRIMSBY.—Prince of Wales Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North.—The second venture of the Grimsby and Cleethorpes Amateur Operatic Society is being presented here this week The selected work is Gilbert and Sullivan's Iolanthe. The most notable feature is the fine work of the chorus. Of the principals Miss Annie Gibson as Phyllis takes chief honours among the ladies, singing nicely and displaying a pleasant style; among the gentlemen Mr. Tom Willey as Lord Tolloller, Mr. Wm. J. Rice as Lord Mountararat, and Mr. Herbert Dickinson as Private Willis are all responsible for good singing, whilst Mr. Ernest Harrison's characterisation of the Lord Chancellor is cleverly done. Other parts are taken by Miss Gwladys Coulson as the Fairy Queen, Miss Dorothy Letten as Iolanthe and Mr. Carl Smethurst as Strephon.

The Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. F. Vernen Walford.—The lively pantomimic farce The Dandy Thieves, presented by Mr. Fred Karno's company, is full of laughable business, which is led with distinction by Mr. George Hestor as Sergeant Lightning; Carti and Law, who are deputising for Miss Daisy Wood, owing to the illness of that lady, give a refined comedy and musical act; the De Breans appear in a novel Japanese speciality, which includes smart juggling and illusions; Ian Colquhoun, a favourite baritone here, sings a stirring patriotic song in vigorous style; the Donatos are a couple of one-legged acrobats of remarkable agility; Lola Patey is a pleasing Dutch comedienne with good business; Perrier has a capital ventriloquial act, and Harry Tomlin is an excellent vocalist.

The Picturedrome.—Lessee, Mr. Matt Raymond; Resident-Manager, Mr. Maxwell Edwardes.—The Last Deal, illustrative of a gambling incident, is an intensely dramatic picture; The Bonesetter's Daughter is a strong domestic story; there is a capital view of the Lincolnshire Handicap, and a variety of comic films. Mr. Maxwell Edwardes contributes an illustrated song.

GUERNSEY.—Theatre St. Julian's.—Joint-Lessees, Messrs. Ed. Marris and Albany Ward; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. A. Deighton.—Albany Ward's Imperial Electric Pictures are still running at this popular place, which is filled nightly. Chief among the films shown this week are The Grand National, Oxford and Cambridge Boat Race, Forbidden Fruit (a beautiful coloured picture), and the art dramas Adrienne de Bertreaux and The Rocky Road. No Followers Allowed, A Menagerie Let Loose, and Poorluck Gets Married cause much merriment. Variety turns are given by Mr. A. Clarke, comedian, and Miss Ella Wilmere, soubrette and dancer. Roars of laughter greet the Edward Marris Trio in an amusing sketch from The Dandy Doctor.

HALIFAX.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—The Midnight Mail (Dottridge and Longden's company) is here this week. Mr. H. W. Hatchman gives a natural, easy, and finished rendering of the part of Leonard Royle; Mr. J. F. Traynor is good as Harry Steyne; Mr. F. G. Evison's Billy Brewer is a masterly interpretation; Mr. F. S. Strickland does well as Hassan Padisha; Miss Jeannie Weston acts nicely as Lady Phyllis; Miss Trissie Humphrey's Mary Steyne is excellent; and Miss Mildred Carr makes an acceptable Nancy Brewer.

Palace and Hippodrome, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—Julian Mack is a clever raconteur; Les Piccolinos are versatile and clever acrobats, trick cyclists, wire-walkers, and sharpshooters; Lily Vine and her piccaninnies provide a smart and clever dancing turn; Walter Barrett, baritone, is an accomplished singer; Albert Letine, female impersonator, is a popular turn; the Darntons (Cicely and Gladys) are capable duettists; Lisbon and Barker, comedians, provide a humorous turn; and two excellent pictures complete a good bill.

Grand Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Winks.—Fred Karno's company are starring here this week with Perkins, M.P., a continuous roar. Albert Bruno, in the title-rôle, is inimitable. The G.P.O. is another admirable effort, and here again Mr. Bruno keeps the fun going merrily. The Brothers Burge cause considerable amusement in a comedy boxing and wrestling act; Dorothy Watson is a charming and refined entertainer; the Three Sisters Warner contribute a series of acrobatic dances; Purvis and Partner are good in The Postman's Knock; Fred Kendall is a humorous comedian; and pictures complete.

HAMILTON, N.B.—Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; General-Manager, Mr. René Clayton; Musical-Director, Mr. J. Millar.—Lady Mansell's Juveniles are an excellent draw here in a comedy speciality entitled A Concert Rehearsal; Wilton Heriot and company in a clever sketch entitled Father's Footsteps are decidedly above the average; Lily Burnand sings a couple of songs with go and style; Les Zebovas, acrobatic speciality artists, are clever and refined; the Haverleys, American song illustrators, are a popular turn; Chorley and Conner, patter comedians and dancers, go well; and Ella Blair and her Bowery Boys (two), together with the Bioscope, conclude.

HANLEY.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, Hanley Theatres and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone.—Havana is attracting capital houses. Mr. Alexander Leighton's admirable company includes Mr. William Pringle, who is a tremendous hit as Nix; Mr. Reginald Edwards, who plays Reg Brown finely; Mr. C. K. Percival as Don Adolfo; Mr. Saville Foster (Jack Villiers), Mr. J. B. Ridout (Frank Charteris); Miss Hebe Bliss, who as Consuelo is most delightful; Miss Dorothy Temple, and Miss ANce Elphick. The scenery is beautiful and the dresses and effects are splendid. Mr. J. H. Yorke conducts the large orchestra skilfully.

Grand.—Proprietors, Hanley Theatres and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand.—A great attraction is provided in G. H. Elliott, whose coon creations are universally admired. He is a great favourite, and unbounded applause accompanies each of his selections. Alf Chester sings a funny football ditty; Fred Walmsley is an original comedian of great promise; Millie Howell, character vocalist, is vastly popular; the Six Cowboy Girls, in singing and dancing, are good; the Olympian Team of Cyclists cause quite a furore; the Jees, in a novel wire act, make a hit; and Fioretti and Elly, in a barrel and spade act, are loudly recalled; and a comic roller-skating film is cleverly shown.

King's.—Lessee, Mr. J. P. Moore; Managers, Captain F. Shaw and Mr. C. Hazlewood.—The chief films are Niagara, The Cowboy's Romance, Never Eat Sour Apples, Redwing's Gratitude, Why We Called the Plumber In, The Pirate's Fiancée, The Poacher's Wife, and Bleary Ho. Perce Vale, swell comedian, makes a hit.

HARROGATE.—Grand Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eric Fielding Smith.—This week's attraction is Mr. W. A. Seymour's company in The Gay Gordons. Mr. Frank Lincoln as Angus Graeme is a host in himself; Miss Clarice Lockstone as Peggy was good; Miss Florrie Groves as Charlotte Siddons made the most of her opportunities; and Mr. W. H. Desmond as Edmund Siddons cut a quaint figure. Mr. Hayes effectively doubled the parts of stage-manager and Andrew Quainton; and Mr. Leonard Leslie was an able conductor.

The Kursaal.—Manager, Mr. J. E. Wilshere; Musical-Director, Mr. Julian Clifford.—Mr. Randell Jackson was the vocalist for three nights and also Miss Lucy Nuttall. Mr. Leslie Harris was making a welcome reappearance in his well-known and popular musical sketches. On Wednesday a symphony concert was announced, with Mr. Percy Frostick as solo violin.

HARTLEPOOL.—Empress.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Albert Maxsted.—Owing to the great success achieved by Esta Desmond last week, her engagement here has been extended for another six nights, when her new taking songs and smart dancing form a pleasant break in a programme otherwise composed of excellent pictures by Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope Co., the principal film being that illustrating The Life of Moses.

HASTINGS.—Gaiety Theatre.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. E. Scutt.—Messrs. Paumier and Howard's company is attracting large audiences in A Midnight Wedding. Mr. Alfred Paumier, in the character of Paul Valmar, is very convincing; a dignified impersonation of the Crown Prince Leopold is given by Mr. John Nesbitt; and Lieut. Von Strelsburg is effectively embodied by Mr. Charles Whitlock. Abundant humour is provided by the three rivals in love, embodied by Messrs. James Page, St George Frere, and Algie Spalding. Margaret Brodie, in the dual character of Princess Von Strelsburg and Lieut. Karl Helsberg gives refined characterisations; a lively and spirited interpreter of Kathie of the Golden Dragon is seen in Miss Jessica Black. The scenery is realistic.

Pier Pavilion.—General Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—Fun on the Bristol proves very entertaining. Mr. J. D. Hunter excels himself in the part of Widow O'Brien, acting very humorously; Mr. Fred Beck takes the character of Count Menargio with his customary ability; as the sturdy Captain Cranbery Mr. J E. Cowell is excellent; and Mr. Charles Hawker gives a finished study of Tommy Cranbery. Mr. Matt. Melrose, in the character of Jerry, the black steward, gives a clever display of dancing; as Dora McAllister and Nora O'Brien Miss Lallah Melrose and Miss Vera Dudley are charmingly natural; and Bella, the black servant, is adequately portrayed by Miss Renée Ashley.

HORWICH.—Prince's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Chas. Durie.—Mr. Robert Hewland's company in The Shadow of a Crime provides the attraction, and wins hearty appreciation. Mr. Whitmore Ledger's portrayal of Jim Murdock is most impressive; Mr. Victor Gordon paints Ralph Esmond, forger, bigamist, and murderer, in suitable lurid colours; Mr. Paul Neville's Captain Harry Bullington, R.N., is a fine specimen of a naval hero; Mr. Harry Creamer keeps the audience convulsed by his interpretation of Samuel Brown; Mrs. Brown is played by Miss Violette Vivienne; Mr. Tom Maynard as James Todd assists materially in the fun-making; Miss Madge Severne gives an artistic and pathetic rendering of Loyale Norman; Miss Emmie Barton's rendering of Dora Bullington is a very fine performance; Miss A. Arthur's Winnie Murdock gains the sympathy of the audience; Miss Hetty Jeffries as Sarah Murdock gives a capital conception of the character.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING.—Gaiety.—Proprietors, Messrs. Ainsley and Hall.—This week a visit from Edmund Tearle, Kate Clinton, and a specially selected company is affording an exceptional treat to playgoers. On Monday night, in The Merchant of Venice. Mr. Edmund Tearle sustained his high reputation by his interpretation of Shylock. His efforts were ably supported by Miss Kate Clinton, whose histrionic gifts were cleverly exhibited in the rôle of Portia. Mr. Stuart Black as Antonio, Mr. Horace Price as Lorenzo, and Mr. P. Millar as Gratiano, each showed marked ability. The rôle of Nerissa was in the capable hands of Miss Mary Campbell.

HOYLAND.—Hippodrome.—Owner, Mr. Scott Alexander; Resident-Manager, Mr. Fred Terry.—Mr. Lewis Gilbert and company opened here on Monday with A Daughter of the Sea. Mr. Roy Denman is a manly Ken Moreland; and as Capt. Ben Morrison Mr. Cole Aspinall is all that can be desired. Mr. Lewis Gilbert is a sinister and plausible Mark Glensdale; and Dan Glensdale is cleverly undertaken by Mr. Ashmore Vincent. Messrs. Carl Caigna and Cyril Craven, as Sir Maxwell Brentwood and Jack Strong respectively, are very good. The humorous element is well sustained by Mr. J. O. Monkhouse as Billy, and he is ably assisted by Miss Alice Wyllyams as Mollie. Miss Florrie Green is a sweet and winsome Sunshine, and displays marked histrionic ability. The play is well mounted.

HUDDERSFIELD.—Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. William Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—Standing out beyond all the rest of the company here is the Princess D'Aryaba in her wonderful dances, which are carried through with brilliant verve and prodigal energy. Her clever male assistant and special scenery heighten the effect. The Brothers Brookes are a pair of bright comedians; Miss Hanid Alexander plays the piano and sings with much cleverness; Herbert Shelley presents his well-arranged protean play in effective manner; the Sisters Brand sing and dance; the Cheers show what can be done in the way of training intelligent cats; Elton and Elma are funny and skilful gymnasts; the Melody Makers contribute energetic work on four pianos, and sing most harmoniously; and the pictures are interesting.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Herbert Garside.—The Tan-Kwai Troupe of Chinese do some clever and sensational feats. Also in the bill are Fred Lincoln, a quaint character comedian; the Woodwards, in smart balancing feats; Miss Norah Desmond, with her beautifully-illustrated songs well sung; Max Laube, a skilled whistler; Rose and Jeanette, singers and dancers; Miss Rosie Jaxon, singing and dancing nimbly to her own piano accompaniment; and the Eight Lancashire Lads, in their well-known singing and dancing turn.

HULL.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Morton's, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—The Arcadians pay a return visit, and, if anything, the company is even better than on the last occasion. Now we welcome Mr. Walter Passmore in the rôle of Smith, which he takes in a most humorous fashion. Peter Doody could not be played better than by Mr. Clive J. Round, who wins plaudits by his capital work; Miss Ethel Erskine and Miss Mabel Munro are the principal Arcadian beauties, and are charming exponents of these rôles. Miss Billie Sinclair is a delightful Eileen Cavanagh; Miss Veronica Brady achieves likewise no small success. The performance is one of all-round merit, and makes us long to welcome the production again.

Alexandra Theatre.—Morton's, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—Mrs. Morton-Powell, the authoress of the play Brought to Ruin, which figures on the programme at this popular house, has done her work very well indeed, and herself depicts with fine histrionic skill the rôle of Winnie Waters. Miss Isla Garnett-Vayne, cast for the rôle of Jessie Burton, furnishes an excellent performance; Mr. Harry Scott does effective work as Harry Halbry; the heavy part falls on the shoulders of Mr. Edward H. Hearley, who meets the call upon him most effectively.

HYDE.—Empire and Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Central Theatres and Franco-British Picture Co.; Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ernest Percival.—The top of the bill is occupied by Rose Elliott, with smartly rendered chorus songs. Harry Levaine tells funny stories with appreciative humour; the Zenary Brothers receive a warm welcome; clever eccentric dancers are Retter and Foster; Percy Maye gracefully impersonates female characters; Ted Gill's two songs are pleasingly rendered; and Rose Gower proves a popular vocalist. The pictures are very interesting.

ILKESTON.—Theatre Royal.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—The following artists are billed for the last three evenings of the week, the theatre being closed the first half:—Albert Sember and company, in a sketch The Bellringer; Alf. Leaburn, comedian; the Three Behans, in song and dance; Le Mair and Harrington, in a comedy act, entitled The Proposal; and the Sisters Callino, duettists and dancers.

Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. B. Kennedy.—The pictures still attract good houses.

IPSWICH.—Hippodrome.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—The Seven Perezoffs have an excellently staged juggling act, and a host of original tricks is deftly performed; Baker and Balfe are perfect masters of the xylophone; Kitty Wager is an attractive comedienne; Fred Poplar gives representations in sing of well-known Parliamentarians; Fred Sinclair and Gracie Whiteford have an amusing duologue, called "Getting Even"; Gus Garrick creates roars of laughter with his "Music-hall Tit-bits"; the Faludy troupe of six Hungarian acrobats give a performance which is seldom equalled; and the Bioscope concludes.

JERSEY.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Edward Marris; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley Hope.—The Sarnthaler Troupe of Tyrolean Singers and Dancers are proving a big draw here this week. They appear twice during the evening, and on each occasion the curtain has to be raised several times at the end of their turn. Of Albany Ward's electric pictures, the Sam Langford-Hague fight is the particular draw, other good films being The Poacher's Wife's Revenge and Her Sister's Sin.

KEIGHLEY.—Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. Barrasford.—The Lukushimas, Japanese entertainers, head the bill, and give an exceedingly clever performance. The Crisps are here on return visit after an absence of one week only. They are great favourites, and are recalled again and again for their Apache dance. Alf. Lindsay whistles operatic selections that win loud applause; Harry Taylor, comedian, has some capital songs, and scores a big success; Sydney Brandon presents character studies from famous plays, and acts with power; Harley and Melton provide a popular turn; Mamie Gannon sings capital chorus songs; and the Dunvilles are well received.

KING'S LYNN.—New Royal Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. B. Pareezer; Resident-Manager, Mr. Reginald Pareezer.—For three nights Mr. H. Hamilton Stewart's company attracted large audiences with the clever play The Mummy and the Humming Bird. All the parts were well sustained. Mr. Hamilton Stewart presented a finished portrayal of Lord Lumley; to the rôle of Signor d'Orelli Mr. Lewin Mannering imparted a realism difficult to equal; and the Guiseppi of Mr. Lancelot Londer was greatly admired. As Lady Lumley Miss A. Bruce-Joy gave a perfect delineation of the character; and Miss Ethel Carlyle made a delightful Ruth Thornton.

Hippodrome.—New Royal Theatre.—Among excellent turns are Nat Travers, coster comedian; the Stewards; Carrie Ford; Gibbs and Page, dancers; Katie Weston, comedienne; Greco, juggler; Dandy Victor, ventriloquist; and Joe Shear, with his boxing competitions.

LANCASTER.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. C. Howitt.—Folly's Fortune, a mixture of variety and drama, is ably presented by Miss Maud Western's company. Miss Western appears commendably in the rôle of Folly Vaughan, and has able support from Mr. Joe Ellis as Billy Boyd, Mr. Walter Buckstone as Alfred Vaughan, Mr. John Levey as Ben Burritt, and Miss Ada Hender as the adventuress, Myra Burritt. There are several songs and dances, including a fine display by the Monte Carlo Girls.

LEAMINGTON.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Dottridge and Longden; Manager, Mr. Chas. H. Longden; Assistant-Manager, Mr. John Halifax.—During the earlier portion of the week Mr. Norman V. Norman and his repertory company paid a welcome return visit to Leamington. On Monday a capital performance of The Marriage of Kitty was given. Mr. Norman gave a very impulsive portrayal of the good-natured Sir Reginald Belsize; Miss Beatrice Wilson was a vivacious and resourceful Kitty; the fiery-tempered Mme. De Semiano found a capable representative in Miss Vera George; and Mr. F. Jock Whitaker played John Travers with distinct merit. Other parts were effectively portrayed by Mr. Norman Leslie and Miss Betty Stannard. Other plays performed on Tuesday and Wednesday were Caste and David Garrick. For the latter part of the week Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company was announced in The Belle of New York.

Electric Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Gillsmiths, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Harry Plant.—Pharos, the great Egyptian magician, is again the draw this week, and each night large crowds throng the hall to see his marvellous electric show, during which Pharos lights gas jets with his finger-tips; lamps are illuminated from every part of his body; and he concludes with the Circle of Hades, a very sensational act. Some excellent pictures are on show.

LEEDS.—Grand Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. Wynne Miller.—Les Cloches de Corneville is here. Mr. E. St. Alban plays the Miser with much dramatic effect; Mr Mark Lester ably enacts the Bailie; the singing of Mr. Stuart Alexander as the Marquis is much admired; Miss Gurney Delaporte makes a capital Serpolette, and Miss Vera Dorian ably sustains the rôle of Germaine.

Royal.—Proprietor Mr. Francis Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. Nathaniel Hepworth.—Alone in London is being presented here. Miss Nellie Clyde as Nan and Mr. Gerald Jordan as Dick Redcliffe give clever impersonations, and Mr. J. W. Wilkinson supplies a capital study of old Jenkinson.

Empire.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Alex. Galley.—The Elliott Savonas are appearing here in their talented and musical act; Florence Smithers is funny in a comedy sketch; Ray Wallace proves herself a leading light in mimicry; W. J. Churchill is a favourite, and Frank Cass is a good character comedian. Hall and Earle, Siems, Miss Juliette, Rhoda Paul, and Victor Travers do excellent turns.

Queen's.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Bush.—Miss Frances Letty provides a good singing and dancing act here; Arabella Allen gives a talented exposition of some leading characters of Dickens; Bert Marsden proves himself a versatile comedian; Madge Osmond is a popular male impersonator; a pretty dancing act is done by Haley's Garden of Girls; the Bristows excel in a cycling act, and Will Norrie and Bros. Ideno complete a good bill.

BARRASFORD'S HIPPODROME.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Dunford.—Mr. Percy Honri in his clever fantasia Concordia is drawing good houses here; Alice Rix, assisted by a troupe of lady dancers, makes a big hit; the Eight Elves, another troupe of lady dancers, excel conspicuously; Fred Land has a good reception; and other popular artists engaged include Iris Fox, Harry Vardon, Dorothy White, Marion Armitage, and George S. Melvin, a clever Scotch comedian.

VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Jones.—The Six Buster Browns in a singing and dancing act are the principal turn here; Jack Mackenzie presents a dramatic monologue; Lily Hayes is an entertaining artist; and the Netty Janowsky troupe, the Roxbys, and the Four Scoreys also score.

LEICESTER.—ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Business-Manager, Mr. Trueman Towers.—The local amateur music and dramatic society hold the boards this week, and are presenting the comic opera The Mountebanks, by kind permission of Mrs. H. D'Oyly Carte. The proceeds are on behalf of the town charities.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Acting-Manager, Mr. P. Allerton Turner.—The attraction is provided by Mr. Fred Granville's Productions, Ltd., in the drama Another Man's Wife, which is acted and staged in admirable style. Mr. Alfred D. Adams gives an excellent performance as Carlos De Vergas; and Miss Ruby Loncraine as Lucy De Vergas is also very good. Mr. Geoffrey Sutherland shines as Gilbert Eardley; Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan plays well as Paul Bernstoff; Miss Lilian Radbourne is capital as Inez de Castro; Mr. Ambrose Pinder deserves praise as Count Pelikoff; Mr. Edwin Davies as Colonel Matterson, Miss Lily Griffen as Maisie Matterson, and Mr. Leonard Marshall as Andy Bremmer are all good in their respective parts; and Mr. Willie Reid as Sam Smiles and Miss Marion Mayne as Tibby raise many hearty laughs.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. S. Buccleuch.—At the head a very good "show" is Dan Lipton's company in the delightful vocal scena Songland, which is remarkably pretty. Miss Eva Kelland is the principal vocalist, and she deservedly scores a well-merited success. At the other end is Sam Mayo, the eccentric and immobile comedian. Alexandre and Hughes, a clever pair, well maintain their popularity; Spry and Monti are very good in their merry comedy, The Song-Writer and the Soubrette; the Jackley Trio, in their smart comedy acrobatic act, make a hit; Ryan and Hall are clever acrobatic comedians and burlesque wrestlers; Baby Boden is a vivacious little comedienne and dancer; Gipsy Woolf, an attractive light comedy artist, introduces her pretty and dainty vocal scena, The Mermaid at Margate, in which she is assisted by the Six Sunbeams. Charles Vincent, the popular parody comedian, also entertains. The Bioscope is retained.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joseph Lawrence.—The principal attraction in this week's programme is the sensational dramatic picture, The Martyrdom of Adolf Beck. There are also other pictures, including the Oxford and Cambridge Boatrace. The variety portion includes Mlle. Dalmere's Table Circus, introducing dogs, rabbits, &c., which proves a popular feature; the Three Alskarnos, in a good tumbling and comedy act; Will Rhodes, an excellent parody comedian; Dennis and Moore, vocalists and smart dancers; Joan Deering, violinist and vocalist; and Colin Mail, light comedian.

EMPIRE.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. R. Craig.—Pictures here are of the usual high standard of excellence, and include The Girl Who Joined the Bushrangers, The Indian Trailer, Papa Buys the Fireworks, Mrs. Jones's Lovers, Saved by Carlo, Indiscreet Letters, Her Lover's Honour, and Uncle Learns to Hypnotise. Ernest Greville, descriptive and character vocalist, is on a successful return visit.

LEIGH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Toffree and Slingsby.—Miss Florence Baines and company are paying a welcome return visit here with Miss Lancashire, Limited. Miss Baines as the Lancashire lass is a pronounced success; John Higgins is capably delineated by Mr. H. B. Peppin; Mr. Sinclair Holden acquits himself well as Harry; Mr. Burt Burton makes an excellent character study of Moses Goldburg; Miss Issa Steel charmingly portrays the rôle of Eva Lancashire; and Mr. Payne Fletcher gives a well-studied impersonation of the farmer, John Henry Thompson.

GRAND THEATRE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Secretary and Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Woolstencroft.—The Bros. Lloyd provide a sensational act on the bounding cable; Miss Lucy Gillette is successful in an original and clever juggling turn; the Arthur Gallimore Trio in an amusing comedy sketch are well received; Little Tichbourne proves a popular and amusing turn; and other turns are Mr. and Mrs. George Leonard, Martel, Ena Corelli, Wells and Warlock, and the Hippodrome pictures.

LEITH.—NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Licensee and Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—Mr. John Leopold's entertaining company have been here again with their amusing production, entitled New Frivolity, in which new songs and other attractive features bring an old favourite right up to date. The variety hits introduced include a smart acrobatic exhibition by the Four Kellys and some half-dozen members of the Leopold family are prominent in the cast, comprising Mr. Jack Leopold as Daniel Teething, Mr. J. Leopold, jun., as Jules Vermiglio, Mr. Walter Leopold as Tickle, and Miss Jenny Leopold as Winnie Moore. Mr. Watson Hume and Mr. Harry Ugar keep the audience amused in their rôles of Oliver Buckwheat and Samuel; Miss Cathleen Cavanagh is imposing as Mme. Cobweb; Miss Amy Hall makes a winsome Lucy Buckwheat; and Mr. W. H. Melrose, Mr. W. H. Howarth, Mr. Harry Leo, and Mr. Levesque add to the breeziness of the piece in their respective parts; while Miss Gladys Somers and Miss Violet Keand, as a pair of schoolgirls, and Miss Vera Lake Grange as a French Waitress, lend grace and animation to the scenes in which they appear.

LICHFIELD.—ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Miss Maggie Morton's company appeared here on Tuesday in Walter Howard's spirited military drama, Two Little Drummer Boys, which was received with much favour. Miss Marion Carter was a pathetic Alma Kingsley, and Miss Frances May proved a powerful Margaret Rivers. The lead was Mr Charles Road-Night, who as Captain Frank Caredale enlisted the sympathies of the audience; while Mr. C. Coleman proved a sufficiently repellant Captain George Darrell. The two little drummer boys were excellently played by Miss Jose Melbourne and Miss Olive Lindsay. Mr. Arthur Beverley was the General Kingsley. The comedy element was supplied by Mr. Arthur Temple and Mr. F. M. Wright.

LIVERPOOL.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Lawrence.—Here this week we have had a first Liverpool visit of The Woman in the Case, presented by Mr. Herbert Sleath's capable company. The play appealed very strongly to Monday night's large and critical audience, who were very ready to recognise the talented efforts of Miss Violet Vanburgh, Miss Ellis Jeffreys, and others who assisted towards success. Both these ladies came in for a perfect ovation at the close of the third thrilling act, Miss Vanbrugh's work therein being acclaimed brilliant in the extreme. As Claire Forster her simulation of drunkenness, although an exceedingly difficult and somewhat unpleasant part, was carried through with dramatic intensity, and, as a piece of acting, proved a triumph. Miss Jeffreys's rôle was an agreeable contrast, her wifely devotion being characterised by tenderness and delicacy, the several little affecting interviews with her unfortunate husband making a marked impression upon the audience. Mr. Herbert Sleath gained honours with his particularly fine Julian Rolfe; Miss Mary Griffiths showed much humour in the minor rôle of Mrs. Hughes; especial thanks were due to Mr. William F. Grant for his natural lawyer, a character admirably handled; and valuable assistance also came from Mr. Fred Benton(Klaufferty), Mr. Wm. Kershaw (Jimmy Smith), Miss Gwendolin Wren (Elsie Brewster), Miss Cicely Grey (Dora Miller), and Miss Eileen Orry (Louise Mane). By Mutual Agreement was a curtain-raiser in which Miss Wren, Mr. Kershaw, and Mr. Grant participated.

SHAKESPEARE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wentworth Croke; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney.—A week of opera is being enjoyed here, the famous Moody-Manners combination having opened on Monday evening with Tannhäuser, in which Messrs. Joseph O'Mara (title-rôle), Charles McGrath (Hermann), Lewys James (Wolfram), Miss Kate Anderson (Venus), and Madame de Vere-Sapio (Elizabeth) appeared. For the first time in Liverpool, Saint-Saëns' Samson and Delilah was given on Tuesday, when Mr. Philip Brozel pleased immensely with his Samson, and Mlle. Zelie de Lussan distinguished herself as Delilah. Wednesday saw La Tosca (with Madame Fanny Moody as Torca), preceded, for the first time here, by Nicholas Gatty's Duke or Devil, in which Messrs. Charles Moorhouse (Duke of Bologna), and Miss Raymonde Amy (Bianca), took part. The week's list also contained Trovatore, Carmen, and Faust.

ROTUNDA THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—Here this week is Mr. T. Edward Ward's company with His Real Wife, which visits this city for the first time. Miss Ward is seen in the strong part of Rose Avondale, which she handles in capital style, and earns the fullest sympathy of her audience. Mr. J. W. Evelyn makes an admirable Martin Avondale, and carries off honours; Mr. Clifford Rean proves a capable exponent of the rôle of Herbert Barton; General Barton is carefully presented by Mr. C. W. Spencer; the villainous Colombe is powerfully played by Mr. Charles Yorke; Miss Gabrielle Romero satisfies as Lady Sybil; and a deal of comedy emanates from Simon Bletherell (Mr. T. Edward Ward), Betty (Miss Clarrie Yandell). The play is well staged.

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—The engagement here this week is that of Messrs. J. C. Lodge-Percy and James Martin's company with Camille for five nights. The play is put on in acceptable manner, and the company is an all round good one. Miss Henrietta Schrier acquitted herself in the trying rôle of Marguerite Gautier; as Gaston de Rieux Mr. Percy showed some fine acting; Mr. F. Douglas Howard proved a powerful Varville; Mr. Edward Ashworth earned applause for his Giray; and worthy support also came from Messrs. Ronald Bridge (Georges Duval), Andrew Money (Armand), and Miss Marie Ramuz (Nichette). On Friday Moths was staged, with Miss Schrier as Fuchsia Leach, and Mr. Percy in the character of Lord Jura.

KELLY'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant.—Mr. Tom Craven and company pay a visit with When a Lass Loves, which is affording great pleasure to large audiences. Mr. Louis Palgrave is particularly good as Slack, an office-boy (his original part); Mr. Reginald Stephens shows much ability as Dr. Allan Crass; Mr. Franc Stoney is prominent as Caleb Crass; Mr. P. Ramsey Foreman in the character of the rascally Bertram Bridge is seen to great advantage; Miss Josephine Middleton plays Constance Lane with a deal of reserve and tact; and Miss Rita Trekelle does justice to Cynthia Bridge. There is a deal of comedy in the play, which proves most enjoyable.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—Madame Ella Russell, of operatic fame, is delighting her audiences with favourite excerpts from her répertoire; the remarkable work of Chanti, the famous protean artist, gains for him rounds of applause; fun and harmony in galore come from the Comedy Meisters; the Bros. O'Brien go through a smart act on the horizontal bars; Wish Wynne shows herself to be a particularly clever and versatile comedienne, her character studies provoking loud applause; Humpsti Bumsti, presented by Pipifax and Panlo, cause endless laughter; Coverdale pleases immensely with his stories and burlesque mimicry; Edie Reynolds shows much talent as a violinist; and Mona Vivian is a sweet juvenile comedienne and dancer.

LYRIC.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Top of the bill here this week is Ted Waite, a merry comedian, whose songs and sayings are greatly enjoyed; Victor Kelly, assisted by Miss Agnas, has a refined vaudeville entertainment; the Four Burnells cause endless laughter with their work on the links; a smart comedy act, Two's Company, Three's None, is provided by the Floradoras; Walker and Lake have some funny patter; and also in the list are Lena Wylie, soprano; and Fred Spencer, comedian.

ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—In big type here this week are Peterman and Ricketts, with The Belle of the Orient, a musical comedy that is capitally presented by a company which includes Mr. George Ricketts (Ike Novinski), Mr. Walter Williams (Lord Exmore), and Mr. Charles Hylton (the Waiter); an amusing juggling turn comes from Emerson and Baldwin; the Bijou Juvenile Troupe please greatly with their refined musical scena, Pansy's Birthday; Lloyd Morgan has some popular songs; Willie Atom provokes much laughter with his absurdity, Wiggles; Abel and Welsh show themselves to be a funny pair of eccentrics; Albert Le Fre enjoys a good reception for his favourite songs; as xylophone players the Lewin Martel Duo afford every pleasure; and contributions are also provided by George Campbell, patter comedian; and Albert St. Clair, double-voiced vocalist.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—Owing to the success which has attended the pantomime of Cinderella, played here last week by the stock dramatic company, a further six nights are being put in.

OLYMPIA.—District-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—Whit Cunliffe is the bright, particular star here this week, delighting everybody with his latest songs; L'Incognita, a soprano with a surprising range, gives a most interesting display of her vocal powers; J. W. Rowley, the well-known comedian and dancer, enjoys a cordial greeting from old and new admirers; Albert and Edmunds' troupe of comedians cause immense fun with their Tower of London sketch; a neat vocal and dancing scena is provided by Victor's Juveniles; the Three Cape Girls are lively dusky comediennes and long boot dancers; A-Ba-Be's picture post-card album is a pretty turn, which earns rounds of applause; Addie Dorina exhibits great protean powers with her sketch, Dr. Spot's Patients, in which she is assisted by Mr. Frank Wheatcroft; and Silvo gives a clever entertainment with the musical glasses.

PAVILION. — Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. George F. Slatter.—Foremost here is John Tiller's In Japan, spectacular ballet, which is pleasing greatly, among the principals being Miss May Merry and Miss Cissy Iris; Charles Baron's burlesque menagerie, including the boxing cats, affords much delight; Atlas and Vulcana go through an able athletic turn; the Mystic Hussars have some exceedingly clever stage illusions; the Claymore Trio show a deal of proficiency in club juggling; Chiko is a remarkable equilibristic contortionist; a humorous burlesque entertainment emanates from Stevens and Brett; and also in the programme are the Zaid Trio, with their Oriental speciality; Lucy Coventry, comedienne and eccentric dancer; Beattie Foster, comedienne; and Wallace Whitney, comedian.

MACCLESFIELD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. K. Gatley.—Mr. Stanley Carlton's company is here with A Secret Wedding. Mr. John Croudace presents a fine, manly study of Edgar Hartington; Miss Rubie Maude acts with emotional power as Grace Edmondson; Mr. S. Carlton is a forcible Herbert Hartington; Mr. H. W. Vernon capably assumes the part of Billy Barton; Miss Ethel Lawson as the Avenging Angel is interesting; Miss Evelyn Walton is a convincing Elsie Machand; and Miss Rene Bell Douglas a spirited Polly.

MAESTEG.—PICTURE PALACE.—Lessees, Poole's Theatres Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. G. F. Knowles.—Big crowds visit this place of amusement. A capital series of films include Transporting Logs in Canada, His Wife's Visitor, A Blank Cheque, Furnished Rooms to Let, and A Child Teacher. The variety turns are supplied by the Rowntrees, comedy duo, who are accorded a flattering reception; and Dan Noble, eccentric comedian, who is also well received.

MANCHESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, The United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edmondstone Shirra.—The Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company is attracting large audiences, the répertoire being, as usual, popular in character as well as high-class, and the renderings of excellent quality. On Monday a fine performance of Carmen was given, with Miss Doris Woodall in the title-rôle, which she filled to perfection. A distinguished achievement was the José of Mr. E. C. Hedmondt, whose popularity is as great as ever. Mr. Alan Turner as Escamillo and Miss Beatrice Miranda as Micaela were also prominently good among the remainder of a capital cast. On Tuesday the combination of Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci attracted an appreciative house, and afforded opportunities to Mr. Edward Davies (Turridu), Mr. Hebden Foster (Alfio), and Miss Gertrude Vania (Santuzza) in the first-mentioned opera, and to Mr. Charles Victor (Tonio), as well as to the principal tenor and soprano in Carmen in the second; while on Wednesday Verdi's Destiny was repeated for the pleasure of those who did not see its revival on the last visit of the company. Faust, Fidelio, Tannhäuser, and Maritana complete the week.

PRINCE'S THEATRE. — Proprietors, The United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Lee.—Messrs. Platt and Tower's company is treating audiences here to an excellent interpretation of Bernard Shaw's You Never Can Tell. Miss Ida Southern gives a really clever rendering of Dolly Clandon, which is well matched by the Valentine of Mr. Graham Colmer; Miss Winifred Beach is admirable as Gloria; Mr. Claude Haviland is capital as the Waiter; and very good work is added by Miss Edith Hunter as Mrs. Clandon, Mr. Geoffrey Wilkinson as Philip, Mr. J. Edward Pearce as Fergus Crampton, and Mr. Allan Jeayes as Finch McComas.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietor, Miss A. E. F. Horniman; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edwin T. Heys.—Preceded by The Tallyman, a comedy in one act, Sheridan's The Critic was put on here on Monday, employing the full strength of Miss Horniman's talented company. A fine and diverting performance was given, the whole of the cast doing exceedingly well. Intelligence throughout was brought to bear upon the object of getting every ounce of humour out of the theme, and the burlesque reached its height when Don Ferola and Beefeater engaged in their duel, and the final tableau of the destruction of the Spanish Armada was shown. Nothing so humorous has been seen here for a long time, and all concerned in the production are to be highly complimented on a finely-judged and finely-achieved success.

ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's company is doing well here with Mother, an appealing drama, which is completing a round of the Broadhead houses.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Hearn.—Mr. Frank Adair and his company are here in Fred Maxwell's sensational drama The Heathen and the Christian. Two strong parts are those of Li, the Avenger, played powerfully by Mr. Frank Adair, and Mira Sampson, well expounded by Miss Louie Adair. Excellent impersonations are added by Mr. Herbert Sydney as Chang Lu, Mr. Harold Garth as Chang, and Mr. Fred Withers as Lung Hi; while among the English characters Mr. Gerald Shirley plays well as Lieut. Allendale, Miss Stanley Burt is pleasing as May Berresford, and much fun is provided by Miss Eva Reed as the love-sick Recky Fibbins.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr J. Brearley.—Max Goldberg's play Through the Divorce Court is the attraction here. It was seen a week or two ago by local audiences. Miss Hettie Chattell is still in the cast as Lady Dolores Penarth. The play is well staged, and goes with a swing.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—A good bill here is headed by Wash. W. Evans and company, in Paradise Alley, a Bowery sketch. Luis Hardt, the Sandow boy, bottoms the bill in an elaborate production; and Tom Hayton's Manchester Lads are also prominent in their vocal and dancing scena. Other good turns are Allen McAskell, the comedy conjurer; Harry Kirk, comedian; Bert Bowden, comedian; and Frank E. Ford, a smart wooden shoe dancer.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—An attractive programme here is headed by Nelson Jackson, the popular entertainer at the piano, who is very well received; and George French, a comedian with a decidedly comic manner; while in the other place of honour Horace Mills and company, in a farcical incident, are responsible for plenty of amusement. W. Selkirk's juvenile spectacle, The Boy Scouts, is a pleasing item; Cumminger and Colonna are a good dancing turn; J. H. Scotland, the basso, adds an enjoyable song or two; Conway and Leland, the merry monopedes, are well received as usual; and other smart items are Rauschle, the impersonator of history-makers; La Freya, in a beautiful illuminated picture act; and the Two St. Johns, musical comedians, campanologists, and dancers.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—George Ali and company are a big attraction here in Papa's Day Off. If possible, Mr. Ali is funnier than ever. Helen Trix, an American comedienne, makes a hit with her amusing song "Sam, Sam"; the Kratons are skilful hoop manipulators; Marie Kendall proves a popular turn; Mabel Sinclair is a smart ventriloquist; Witty Watty Walton gives his usual smart act; Wood, Wells, and Wilkins score a success in their excellent comedy vocal scena; and Steve McCarthy sings "There are no girls like our girls," and adds a smart dance. Interesting and instructive pictures of Canada complete.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—The big turn here is Harry Fragson, who gave close upon a dozen songs on his initial appearance; Lennie and Hast appear in a very pleasing idyll, The Maid of Polaria, which is admirably sung and acted; while some remarkably good dancing is done by Barnes and Ascott, who rouse considerable enthusiasm. Other clever turns are Carl Lynn, animal mimic; the Arleys Trio, in a smart potpourri; Oliver Conroy, eccentric comedian; Harry Russell and company, in a comedy sketch; Gladys Archbutt, comedienne; the Cromwells, in a novel juggling act; and Chris Baker, comedian.

TIVOLI.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Sylvia Cavalho and company, including Clifford Pembroke, are seen to advantage in a capital comedy sketch, The Husband of Peggy. Considerable amusement is caused by Herbert Darnley's company, with Chas. H. Bell, in The Brigands of Tarragona. Yvonne Lamor, a chic comedienne, is successful; Adam Tomlinson, the Tyneside comedian, makes a hit; Tommy Clifford is a youthful but very clever ventriloquist; the Sisters Allen are pleasing duettists and dancers; Miss Burley and the Funny Little Man give a clever and amusing item; and Alice Lingard dances neatly.

KING'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jas. R. Trippett.—Jennie Johns, a dainty comedienne, tops the bill here with her usual success; Ida Kessanly's Fox Terriers provide an exceedingly smart turn; Yost and York, the military boys, are decidedly entertaining; Burns and Bentley are splendid dancers; Penstone and San-go are capital in a neat potpourri; Lew Peterman is a good Hebrew comedian; Archie Glen is enjoyed as a story-teller and dancer; and a first-rate comedy acrobatic act is offered by the marvellous Toranes. Flash James and Stick Fast on the Bioscope are extra good.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Dry.—The Yellow Fang, a dramatic episode, well played by Miss Mary Mayfren's company, tops the bill. The Royal Banzai Family are wonderfully clever Japanese artists; and George Hyam, comedian, makes a hit with his song "Round the corner." Other good and well-received turns are offered by the Ellesmere Troupe of sensational trick cyclists; the Two Lillys, in equilibristic act; Six White Boys, dancers and singers; and Nellie Rose, serio. Cupid and the Motor-Boat is a good film.

RUSHOLME PAVILION. — Proprietor, Mr. Harry Leslie; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. Phillips.—Very great success attended the reopening of this popular al-fresco pavilion. The programme is one of all-round excellence, and includes the names of Bert Byrne, comedian; Harry Smith, tenor; Will Lindsay, Yorkshire comedian; Rose Alderman, soprano; George Curzon, baritone; Ernie Percival, light comedian; Mabel Leslie, comedienne; Jack Hodson, mimic; Sylvia Dove, vocalist; Gertie Millan, vocalist; Willie Bailey at the piano; and last, but not least, Harry Leslie himself, as entertaining as ever. The pantomime burlesque Little Red Riding Hood is exceedingly well done.

MARGATE. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. E. Michael; General-Manager, Mr. F. Weathersby.—A Sense of Humour, by Beryl and Cosmo Hamilton, has been remarkably well played here this week by Mr. Henry Armitage's well-selected company, and the play has been provocative of hilarity. The characters have been taken as follows:—Sir William Hutton, Bart., Mr. Frank Wolsey; Captain Archibald Hay, Mr Henry James; Meakin, Mr. George Austin; Mrs. Hay, Miss Eva Turnour; Stanner, Miss Violet Oakley; and Lady Hutton, Miss Helen Holmes. The respective parts have been successfully sustained all round. The comedy has been preceded each evening by the monologue Yes, Papa.

HIPPODROME. — Managing - Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Mayall.—Saved by Wireless, a dramatic sketch, played by Gilbert Heron and company, is enthusiastically received, and another much appreciated item is the thrilling episode The Key, an effective little piece presented by Jessie Danvers and her company. Little Sophie, a vivacious and clever juvenile comedienne, gives one of the most popular turns on the bill. Lilian Rose (vocalist and entertainer), Verne and Green (acrobats), the Brothers Lydamore (comedians and dancers), and Eric Vaughan (light comedian) also contribute to an enjoyable programme. The Valleys of Switzerland and When We Called the Plumber In are this week's pictures.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, The South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson.—Her Love Against the World is presented by Messrs. W. H. Hallatt and Walter Howard's company. Mr. Fred Emery plays with ability the rôle of Eric, Earl of Strathmere; Mr. Fred Rivers ably depicts the scheming Prince Ulric; Mr W. H. Hallatt is good as Prince Othmar; and Mr. Henry Hallatt is well suited as Prince Maurice. Miss Elsie Roberts gives a capable interpretation of Princess Iris, and Miss Rosie St. John is successful as Lionel.

MEXBOROUGH.—PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. H. Melton.—Miss Florence Baines is presenting Miss Madge Grey in Miss Lancashire, Ltd. Miss Grey is the life and soul of the piece in the title-rôle; Miss Marie Lorenzi plays capitally as Eva Lancashire; Miss Mabelle Clinton is a graceful Bertha; Mr. Sydney Dench, jun., skilfully enacts the rôle of Harry Higgins; and John Higgins is ably presented by Mr. Chas. Williams.

MIDDLESBROUGH.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. M. K. Chatto.—Mr. Eric H. Albury, supported by a competent company, presents Why Smith Left Home. The part of John Smith is admirably filled by Mr. Chas. Lane; and as Count Wilhelm Von Goggenheim Mr. Eric Albury meets with the heartiest approval. Miss Alice Lethbridge does full justice to the character of Mrs. Smith; and as Miss Amelia Smith Miss Adele Harvey is a distinct success.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. J. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. Imeson.—Mr. Will Casey's company appears with success in An Unwedded Wife. Miss Chrissie Dunbar portrays in capable fashion the trying rôle of Marion; Mr. Will Casey is very successful as Napoleon B. Boomer; the dignified Philip Blackstone is capably played by Mr. E. St. Clair Forbes; and the part of John Hawthorne is in the able hands of Mr. Gilbert Elviss.

EMPIRE. — General-Manager, Mr. Chas. G. Rembges.—The Daunton-Shaw troupe of Australian cyclists perform wonderful tricks on wheels; Dent and Harries, in their mystic musical comedietta, The Indian Bottle, are deservedly successful; Bennett and Martell create much laughter in their funny act, The Shipwrecked Mariners; the Markies give a capital entertainment; and August, September, and May, comedians; Miss Edith Haley, comedienne; Ambrose Thorn, comedian; and the Empire pictures are all well received.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Frank D. Todd.—An attractive programme of pictures meets with gratifying success.

MORLEY.—ALEXANDRA PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Tom Diacoff; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Izon.—Topping the bill here are the Bennetts, in an American versatile duologue. Vera Mayne, vocal comedian, and Molly Doon, comedienne and dancer, are the recipients of warm encomiums; Billy Lester, comedian, tackles the risible faculties of the audience. Among the capital pictures is the 1910 Grand National.

MOTHERWELL.—NEW CENTURY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr Chisholm Taylor.—Miss Marie Dagmar's company is this week appearing in The Tyrant. Mr. Roy Fortescue gives a strong, impressive rendering of the name part; the excellent stage presence and finished acting of Mr. Percy Folliss in the rôle of Homodei are of great advantage to the production; Mr. Ed. E. Louis is an excellent Rudolph; Miss Marie Robson's Tisbe is a highly artistic performance; Miss Jean Scott does well as Lady Katherine, Daphine being played by Miss Emmie Burns. In the comedy element Messrs. Wilson, Summers, and Fred Luard, together with Miss Kate Lever, shine. The play is admirably staged.

NEATH.—Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Leon Vint; Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Brogden; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Noice.—Pictures here include The Poet's Vision, an excellent subject; A Child's Faith, a very interesting film; The Juggler, or a Peep Behind the Scenes; Revenge of a Poacher's Wife, a very sensational film; and a pretty love story told in The Woman from Mellon's. An amusing series is found in An Attentive Listener, Heroism, She Would Sing, Beneath the Gas, &c. Excellent varieties include Williams' Welsh Party, which comprise four talented vocalists and harpists; and Clare and Pastor, comedy artists.

NEW BRIGHTON.—WINTER GARDENS.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Jones and Douglass.—The opening of this new and beautiful building is dealt with in another column.

PIER PAVILION.—Proprietors and Managers, the New Brighton Pier Co.—Variety still holds sway here, and on Monday last the Gay Gondoliers made their first appearance in this locality, and gave a good programme of varied items. The Albano Sisters are responsible for a refined turn, and Signor Torti proves himself a powerful tenor. The Royal Quintette are very excellent dancers.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Teale Lingham.—Mr. Edward Compton opened here on Monday in Davy Garrick, and in the title-rôle gave his usual brilliant and attractive portrayal. As Violet Miss Kathleen Leigh is responsible for a most attractive personation, her sympathetic and natural acting being greatly appreciated. A consistently clever character sketch is that of Alderman Gresham by Mr. Henry Crocker, and the Hon. Tom Tallyhaut of Mr. Frank Royde is another portrayal deserving of high commendation. The characters of Rumbelow, Sowerberry, Simkins, Mrs. Rumbelow, and Selina

MOTHER SEIGEL'S SYRUP

Unless your stomach and liver are in working order, able to thoroughly digest food, you cannot escape the torments of indigestion, with all the pains and misery of lost health and vigour. There are many forms of indigestion, but only one method of cure! You must restore your stomach, liver and bowels to working order. Mother Seigel's Syrup will do this for you more quickly and surely than anything else can. It has cured more cases of indigestion than all other remedies combined. Test it to-day—It will cure you! Mr. F. Rogers, Parsonage Cottages, Catherington, Nr. Horndean, Hants. states that Mother Seigel's Syrup cured him of indigestion three years ago. "From that day," he says, "I have been as well as a man need be."

are capably played by Messrs. Philip Gordon, J. W. Austin, C. Marquand, and Misses Marie Hassell and Loraine Stevens. Preceding the comedy is a capital comedietta, entitled Tom Noddy's Secret, in which Miss Nell Compton, Mr. Philip Gordon, Mr. J. W. Austin, and Mr. Frank Royde appear to advantage. During the week The School for Scandal, The Rivals, She Stoops to Conquer, The Road to Ruin, and Used Up will be given.

Tyne Theatre and Opera House.—Lessees, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham; Manager, Mr. Fred C. Sutcliffe.—Mrs. Brown-Potter and company are here in Madame X. Mrs. Brown-Potter gave a magnificent interpretation of the part of Jacqueline, her acting being powerful and effective. Mr. Leonard Pagden supplies an admirable portrayal of Louis Fleuriot, and the rôle of Raymond was ably filled by Mr. Douglas Allington. Mr. Frank Bradley gave a good rendering of Noel; the part of Dr. Chesnel was carefully sustained by Mr. Cyril Ashford; Mr. Charles B. Bedells submitted a good representation of Laroque; and much amusement was afforded by Mr. H Brocknor and Mr. Thomas Sidney as Merivel and Periss.

Palace Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. W. Rowe; Business-Manager, Mr. E. B. Clark.—Mr. James Bell's company in The Idol of Paris is here. The rôle of Flare-Flare is in the capable hands of Miss Annie Bell, who acts with admirable judgment. Mr. Cyril Austin-Lee is convincing as Philip d'Esterre; the part of Victor Cashelle is ably played by Mr. Henry Watson; Mr. Gordon Robey makes an excellent Prince Sergius; Mme. Sancterre is ably interpreted by Miss Frances Bruce; and the parts of Tatave and Anne have good representatives in Mr. H. Vivian Thomas and Miss Annie Megson.

Grand Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; Manager, Mr. Chas. E. Linney.—Amongst the variety turns here are those of Joe Humphreys, actor-vocalist; Harry Harvey, Tyneside comedian; and Watson and McQue, comedians. The animated pictures are excellent.

Empire Theatre.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Manager, Mr. W. P. Wells; Assistant-Manager, Mr. J. W. Kilgour.—The Roll Call, by Mr. George Leyton, with an assemblage of Crimean and Indian Mutiny veterans, is meeting with well-deserved success here. The Indian fakir, Gustave Fasola, thoroughly mystifies his audiences; Violet Lloyd and Horace Lane are once more delighting Tyneside people; another capital turn is that of the Abdullah Troupe of Arabs; Fatmah Diard, the famous American prima-donna, renders several songs in good style; and Little Ganty is always amusing, and the same may be said of the clever couple Conan and Doyle. An enjoyable turn of the opera-bouffe type is supplied by Les Silas, and another smart item is presented by Mr. Harry Herbert, eccentric comedian.

NORTHAMPTON.—Temperance Hall.—Secretary, Mr. G. Skempton; Resident-Manager for Andrews' Pictures, Mr. Frank Lyndon.—A fine set of films shown here includes The Spanish Girl, a romantic Mexican drama; Fenton of the 42nd, a tale of the American war; and the thrilling drama Three-fingered Jack. Amongst the comics, Foolshead as a Temperance Advocate takes the lead. The illustrated songs featured this week by Miss Margaret Payne are "When I fell in love with you" and "Angus Macdonald."

NORTH SHIELDS.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Lee.—Mr. George Edwardes' Merry Widow company is attracting large and delighted audiences. In the title-rôle Miss Mary Ridley is distinctly successful, and gains frequent applause; Miss Neste Lannel makes a hit as Frou-Frou; Miss Mabel Hope is well suited to the part of Natalie; and Miss Eileen Clanford as Olga and Miss Enid Ford as Prascovia are prominent in their respective characters. Mr. H. Sinclair Cotter proves a smart Baron Popoff, and causes much hearty laughter; Mr. Harry Emeric is a clever Nisch; Mr. Ronald Pomeroy makes the most of his opportunities as Jolidon; Mr. Cecil Warwick wins much favour as General Navakovitch; Mr. Tom H. Davis scores as the Marquis de Cascada; Mr. Spencer Lloyd displays ability as M. de St. Brioche; and Mr. C. L. Steward as M. Khadja deserves praise.

Central Palace.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. William Mould.—An excellent display of pictures is drawing large audiences. The principal films are Little Boheme, A Fellow Clerk's Envy, and An Enterprising Florist. Vaudeville turns are provided by Fanny Robina, the popular chorus singer, who has been accorded a hearty reception; Edwards and Ward, who present an enjoyable comedy act; Florence Cooper, a capital songstress; and Reed and Stevens, clever duologue artists.

NORWICH.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Morgan.—Messrs. Armitage and Leigh's company is here this week with Lucky Durham; Mr. Edmund Kennedy is a manly John Durham; Mr. Arthur Leigh a good Reginald Steighton; Mr. William Calvert deserves praise as Lord Mountfallon; Mr. Charles Wemyss does well as Mr. Vallerton; Miss Nellie Bonser impressively portrays Mrs. Durham; Miss Frances Wolviston acts with dignity as Lady Mountfallon; Miss Dorrie Turner deserves praise as the Hon. Margaret Steighton; and Miss Florence Tressilian deserves commendation as Helen Vallerton.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—The Norwich Amateur Opera Company is here this week in Les Cloches de Corneville. The proceeds will be devoted to the local charities.

NOTTINGHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Finney.—The Dollar Princess is attracting large audiences here. Miss Norah Barry plays Alice with delightful naïveté and charm; Mr. Leonard Mackay renders the music of Fairfax with his accustomed spirit; Mr. W. Louis Bradfield gives an acceptable representation of Conder; Mr. Eric Thorne's quaint mannerisms have full scope in the part of Mr. Bulger; and Mr. Percy Davison takes his every chance as Sir James McGregor. Miss Norma Whalley adds greatly to the success by her fine assumption of the imperious Olga; Miss Daisy Elliston finds a congenial rôle as the attractive Daisy, being well assisted by Mr. Paul Plunket as the Earl of Quorn.

Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Harry Upton.—Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch is proving a great attraction. Possessed in a sufficient degree of the talents necessary to reproduce Mrs. Wiggs, Miss Sophie Lingwood has her audience in the fullest sympathy; Miss Rita Carlyle appreciates to the utmost her opportunities as Miss Hazy; and Miss Beatrice A. Bell gives an admirable representation of Mrs. Eichorn. Miss Violet Vivian as Mrs. Schultz and Miss Ruhamah Catton as Lovey Mary each in her different style do good work; and the Miss Lucy of Miss Rhoda Beresford is a charming representation. Mr. Frederick Forrest demonstrates the possession of dramatic power as Stubbins, and Mr. Ernest Rushton works hard as Mr. Wiggs. Minor parts are well played.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—The breezy style of R. G. Knowles is always refreshing, and his return visit is very welcome. Spontaneous applause greets Cinquevalli, who comes with some new and interesting feats. The marvellous vocal effects produced by Amelie de l'Enclos arouse the greatest wonderment; a thoroughly amusing sketch is presented by Bert Coote and company entitled A Lamb on Wall Street; Tom Clare at the piano hits the popular taste; capital pictures are quickly drawn by Vandinoff, assisted by Mlle. Louise; J. A. Wilson and his dog Touzer are as funny as ever; and Leo Tell, mimic, Lillie Lassah, dancer, and the Bioscope also contribute.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller.—The versatility of the accomplishments shown by the Chung-Ling-See Troupe fully deserves the warm recognition accorded them. The patter of Ernest Rees is distinctly clever, and a dramatic sketch is well played by H. G. Brandon and company. Interesting and clever acrobatic feats are performed by Elsa and Max Arbra; Ted Karno and company earn hearty applause for an amusing pantomimic sketch; the Forsyths submit an attractive performance; Dainty Doretta dances smartly; and the Sauterons prove capable comedy artists.

OLDHAM.—Grand Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Smiley.—The first visit of The Dollar Princess has attracted much attention, and Mr. Geo. Edwardes' company has done full justice to the delightful musical comedy. Miss Effie Mann as Alice acts and sings in charming manner; and Miss Peggie Primrose makes a most vivacious Daisy. Miss Madeleine Seymour as Olga, the lion queen, proves a distinct success; Mr. Alec Worcester plays Freddy Fairfax capitally; Mr. Leslie Holland as Harry Q. Condor is very amusing; Mr. Hugh Henson is excellent as Dick; and Mr. Sydney Lyndon as John, Earl of Quorn, submits a clever study. Mr. Willie Warde, jun., is very good as Sir James Macgregor; Mr. J. Bates as the Duke of Stonehenge does well; as Bulger Mr. W. H. Rawlins causes much laughter. The chorus, under the bâton of Mr. Ernest Vousden, renders good service.

Colosseum Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—Mr. Chas. A. Lister and his company are here in A Life for a Life. Mr. Lister enacts Don Leon Fernandez powerfully; and Mr. Hugh Travers as Pedro Li Calci acts successfully. Miss Lallah Davis as Eulalie is very good, her singing being excellent; Wee Winnie Warden as Venetta, the baby detective, is a dainty artist, and scored a success; Miss Jennie Clare as Nancy sings well, and in the comedy portion of the play, with Mr. Horace Buckley as Tim McCarthy, causes hearty laughter; Miss Dorothy Riddell is excellent as Kate Evelyn; Mr. Geo. D. Daiper makes a capital Kit Oswald; and Mr. Wilfred Carr does well as John Evelyn. Mr. Harold B. Kinton as Bunker Ben is well placed.

Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Sharrocks.—A remarkable turn is provided by the Kremo troupe of acrobats; Miss Bertha Stewart has a hearty reception for her cultured singing; Miss Louie Tracy, male impersonator, is popular; the Sisters Henderson give a smart singing and instrumental act; Marie Reeve is a dainty comedienne; the Society Quartette sing and dance well; Tom and Eileen Melbourne are entertaining in The Sentry; and Billy French is a neat dancer. Interesting pictures are depicted on the Bioscope.

Empire.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—The Old Home is the attraction here. Mr. Evelyn A'Dell and company presented the drama in a capital manner; Miss Nina Blake in the leading rôle, that of Hazel Dean, acts charmingly; Mr. A'Dell plays the Rev. Eric Armstrong in manly fashion; and Daddy Dean has an able exponent in Mr. Chas. Franmore. Miss Harriette Loydall as Bridget Donoghan is excellent; Mr. Horatio Sinclair as the villainous Lord Avondale is a great success; and Mr. Fred Stone is a good Timothy Twaddle. Miss Ethel Ashleigh as Polly Pop and Mr. Fred L. Connynghame as Sam Adams invest their work with clever comedy.

Royal Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Kilrow.—The Life of Moses is again selected as the top-liner. It is the third part of the picture, and is much appreciated. The Skipper's Yarn is a fine dramatic film, and a very interesting picture is The Cyclist Carabiniers of the Belgian Army. Some very amusing films include Town Traveller's Revenge and A Valuable Hat. Mr. Don Cameron again contributes to the success of the programme.

Hippodrome.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. L. King.—Under the Stars and Stripes is a fine military picture. The Boy Hero is another capital subject; A Ride from Fayet to Col de Voga is very interesting; a Prince's Word of Honour is also good. Among the funny films are The Betraying Mirror, The Hammer Fell Down, and No Followers Allowed. Mr. King also sings "The Lost Chord" with success.

Osborne Hall.—Proprietor, Mr. W. Hughes.—An Outlaw's Sacrifice is a very exciting drama; Confession is an acceptable dramatic picture, as is The Prince's Word of Honour; a capital travel-picture is shown, The Valley of Lesia; The Rivalry of Two Guides is good. Comic films include Mary was a Housemaid, Poorluck's Honeymoon, and What's Become of the Keys. The Cousinn Quartette Party are heartily applauded for their rendering of "Comrades in Arms."

Brown's Assembly Rooms.—Proprietor, Mr. W. Brown.—A Friend in Need is a film of the pathetic kind; Love Ye One Another and Beautiful Poetry are amusing; The Englishman and the Girl is a good Indian melodrama; and The Cyclist Carabiniers are well received. The Rivalry of Two Guides, The Hammer Fell Down, and Foolshead Wishes to Marry the Governor's Daughter, complete a good programme.

OXFORD.—New Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. C. C. Dorrill; Assistant-Manager, Mr. G. T. Lucas.—Mr. Milton Bode's varieties programme is giving complete satisfaction to delighted houses. El Tampico's Mexican Troubadours worthily top the bill, their instrumental, singing, and dancing act creating a furore. Other attractive items in an entertaining programme are Vesta Nixon, comedienne and dancer; Richard Finberg, in his character studies from plays; Bonnetti and Corrie, in an eccentric juggling act; Will Euston, coster comedian; Violet Romaine, a refined chorus vocalist; Percy Farrimond, the Lancashire singing collier; and the Michel Brothers, in a wonderfully neat head-to-head and hand balancing and tumbling act. The programme concludes, as last week, with the Premier Imperial Pictures, including the Oxford and Cambridge Boat Race.

East Oxford Theatre.—Lessees, East Oxford Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Stuart.—For the second week of their stock season Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stuart's company are presenting My Sweetheart and The Scamps of London. In My Sweetheart Mr. Karl Edwards is seen to advantage as Tony Faust, a part he plays very effectively; Mr. Harry Leyton scores points as Joe Shotwell; Mr. E. Holland Day does well as Dr. Olive; Mr. Artie Francis is a success as Dudley Harcourt; and Mr. F. E. Chabot is sufficiently villainous as Harold Bartlet. Miss Elma C. Turner gives a powerful rendering of Mrs. Fleeter, and Miss Vida Rogerson works well as Tina.

PAISLEY.—Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jack Bostock.—The Tenka Troupe of Japanese Magicians, who have precedence in the bill this week, keep the audience in utter amazement; Hanvaar and Lee are clever comedy and equilibristic artists and juggling manipulators; Daisy Morell, a popular coon comedienne, scores heavily in her latest success; the novelty and fun of Allis and Cassati are greatly enjoyed; Gwennie Hasto is a dainty dancer, whose abilities are duly recognised and appreciated; Walter Emerson is mirth-provoking as a comedian and singer of funny songs; Dan Fraser, Scotch comedian, is quaint and effective; as a comedy musical entertainer and dancer Harmon is seen to advantage; and the Hippodrome Bioscope arouses enthusiasm.

PENTRE.—Tivoli.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Will Stone; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lacy Lyne.—The Welsh humorists, Ted and May Hopkins, are here scoring a big success in Wedding Bells; Walsh and Tanner cause hearty laughter with their drolleries, assisted by the only singing donkey; Lona is a juvenile artist with exceptional musical capabilities; Harding and Preston are appreciated for their expert dancing; Bert Williams wins favour as an elocutionist; and the films are a feature of the programme.

PETERBOROUGH.—Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Karno; Manager, Mr. Percy Hart.—Mephisto, illusionist, heads the bill. Alma Morris, in songs from her répertoire, is heartily applauded; the Sisters Oswald, duettists and dancers, gain applause; Ryder Slone, character comedian, finds much favour; Leigh and Laurie, comedy duo, are successful; Ben Lewin in character impersonations is favourably received; Fred Conquest and company in the farcical absurdity Something for Nothing create roars of laughter; and the Karnoscope concludes a good programme.

PLYMOUTH.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—The Flag Lieutenant pays a welcome return visit, and the large audience of Monday was a striking testimony to the attractiveness of the piece. As the irresponsible flag officer Mr. Edgar Kent gives an artistic representation; Mr. George Mallett continues his highly successful delineation of the stern yet kindly disciplinarian, Sir Berkeley Wynne; Mr. Montague Love again impersonates the unfortunate Major Thesiger, and is also responsible for the excellent stage-management; Messrs. H. Wakefield and Olaf Hytten as Horatio Hood and Edward Dormer Lee, the two prankish midshipmen, are genuinely funny; and Mr. John Wheatman is a first-rate Irishman. Miss Florence Jackson again makes a great success of the part of the fascinating and tactful Mrs. Cameron; Miss Dorothy Ripley is a graceful Lady Hermione Wynne; and Miss Stella Leigh is a realistic scandalmonger as Mrs. Gough-Bogle.

Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—Frank and Jen Latona earn fresh laurels for a brilliantly-executed musical act; the Velter Bros. are responsible for a first-rate gymnastic turn excellently mounted and staged; Scott and Whaley are coloured comedians and dancers of real ability; Ward and Knight entertain with an interesting display of hoop manipulation; Ruby Norton scores as a comedienne; and Harry Bent is a most realistic mimic. Bert Danson, comedian, supplies the remaining turn.

PONTEFRACT.—Alexandra Theatre.—Manager, Tom Didcoff.—Mr. Sid Cotterell and company heal the bill this week in a comedy success entitled The Substitute. The sketch is very funny. Mr. Cotterell takes the lead, and proves himself to be one of the best comedians that has appeared here. Miss Zeta Grey and company do well in another sketch, entitled The Lancashire Lass. Other turns include the Three Sisters Adare; Howard and Hicks, patterers and dancers; the Brothers Obo, in their laughing songs; the Lovelaces, in illustrated songs; May de Rowse, an excellent comedienne and dancer; and the Alexscope.

PONTYPRIDD.—Royal Clarence.—Sole Owners, Messrs. Trenchard and Jones; Manager, Mr. Charles Trenchard; Acting-Manager, Mr. Willie Trenchard.—For Lore of a King is staged here this week by Mr. C. Watson Mill and company. The uniforms and dresses are above the average, and good houses prevail. Mr. C. Watson Mill portrays Jarval the Britisher with striking energy, and Mr. Alfred Maurice is capital as Michael Obrenovic. Mr. Cyprian H. Matthews is a powerful Valdimir Obenovic; Mr. Stanley Weston is a good King Kara Dragomir; Mr. F. K. Wicksteed is a capable Prince Uros; Mr. Geoffrey Chate is splendid as Duke Fernand; and Mr. Oscar Power causes amusement as Carl Oppenheim. Mr. Geo. Jones makes a good Kosto Marko; Natila is charmingly played by Miss Joan Ellis; Miss Kittie Melville is active as Grazia; Miss Rosalind Tate effectively plays Edith Meredith; Miss Laura Munro is a good Princess Minalia; and Mr. Jack Litchfield as Vitomir Ladie, Mr. Alex. Bronte as Captain Krello, and Mr. D. Adams as Vadoc are also good.

PORTH.—Palace.—Proprietors, Messrs. Poole's, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. W. Bynorth.—The Three Laurels, in a clever speciality act, meet with general approval; Bruce Green is a popular talkative comedian; and Dolly Barry and Juan Wood are a capital comedy duo. Karr and Kooney keep the audience roaring with funny sayings; Minnie D'Aubyn, the favourite chorus vocalist, makes a return visit; Will Musgrove, comedian, obtains much applause; the Columbia Comedy Trio present an original operatic and humorous absurdity. The Palascope has a series of first-class pictures.

PORTSMOUTH.—Royal.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—The appearance of Mr. Weedon Grossmith as Mr. Preedy in Mr. Preedy and the Countess, supported by Miss Ruth Mackay as the Countess, is evoking considerable interest here. Mr. Grossmith excels as a laughter-maker, and Miss Mackay, the handsome, light-hearted Countess, fully enlists the sympathies of the audience. John Bounsall is capitally impersonated by Mr. Frank J. Arlton; Mr. Edward H. Wynne is a satisfactory Mr. Sidgrave; the Misses Lydia Rachel and Evelyn Kerry do well as Mrs. and Emma Sidgrave; and Harriett Budgen is capably presented by Miss Lynn Fontaine. Messrs. Ronald Squire, Edward Bonfield, and Oswald Marshall are the exponents of the Earl of Rushmere, the Hon. Robert Jennerway, and Lord Kinslow. A Ball or a Motor precedes.

Prince's.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Agate.—Hush Money, an exciting drama dealing with the mysterious disappearance of Sexton Blake, detective, occupies the boards here. Mr. Horace Denton gives a realistic rendering of the part of Sexton Blake; Mr. Harry Hartley impersonates the Tinker in a clever manner; the vigorous and forcible acting of Mr. James Headon as Bill Jukes is much appreciated; and in her presentation of Lady Muriel Montressor Miss Theresa Osborne displays histrionic talent.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Capt. E. H. Warren Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—The military episode entitled Drummed Out heads a well-varied and interesting programme. Joe Reichen's Dogs are cleverly-trained canine acrobats; the Orchids are a smart vocal comedy duo; Lottie Leighton, soubrette, gives a clever exposition of clog-dancing; Earle and Godfrey are seen to advantage in comedy, harmony, and dance; and other good turns are Daisy Hicks, comedienne; Frank Couch, comedian; Frank Weaver, sand dancer; and Payne's Bio-Photoscope.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—Miss Vesta Tilley, whose appearance was greeted with an enthusiastic ovation on Monday, is heading the bill here. The Brooklyn Comedy Quartette, Rutter's Dogs, Addie Adell, Benn's Dutch Boys and Girls, F. V. St. Clair, the Bros. Habs, and Harry Tomps are also in the bill.

King's.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Claude Marner.—The principal feature in this week's entertainment is that provided by Reano and his band. A novel sketch, The Dramatist at Home, is finely played by Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Faber; Renroff submits his dancing horse and a lady dancer; Madison and Webb are funny in their sketch My Husband; Hal Forde meets with a capital reception, his songs, "Girls" and "Henpeck's night out," both catching on; and Amy Russell and Beatrice Allen, Fred Lyndo, and Rolando Martin are enjoyable turns.

PRESTON.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, the Exors. of the late W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Alban Newton.—Mr. Henry Miller's Adelphi Theatre company in Charles R. Kennedy's play The Servant in the House is here. Mr. Ernest H. Patterson as the Rt. Rev. James Ponsonby Makeshyfte, D.D., gives an admirable portrayal; Mr. Walter Gay as the Rev. Wm. Smythe gives an interesting rendering of the Vicar, and receives excellent support from Miss Nellie Hodson in the part of Auntie; Miss Laurie Flockton as Mary is deserving of the highest praise; Mr. Matthew Boulton as Manson (the servant in the house) rivets the attention of his audience throughout, and displays power; Mr. Forrester Harvey is most entertaining as Rogers, the page; and Mr. Harry Parker does well as Robert Smith.

Royal Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—Miss Victoria Monks tops the bill. Leick and Keith (John S. and Mabel), America's premier cornetists, give an excellent turn; Milton and Horton are responsible for a clever display on the horizontal bar; Metz and Metz (Arthur and Jack) have a decidedly clever dance; J. W. Hall, an old Preston favourite, is most successful; the Juggling Geraldos perform some capital feats with clubs and hoops; the Five Bohemians provide a pleasing musical interlude; Arthur Aiston, comedian, has some capital songs; the Martons present a pleasing musical duologue, Sweethearts Still; and a capital film, the 1910 Grand National, concludes.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page; General-Manageress, Mrs. M. M. Clarkson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. E. Clarkson.—J. E. Barnes' company in The Drama of Life is meeting with a capital reception this week. Mr. Lingford Carson gives a fine portrayal of Harry Beech; Walter Beech is well portrayed by Mr. Archie Helsby; Mr. M. Meade is effective as Jack Lawton; Mr. S. C. Cranston is a capital Sir Dobson Wilde; Miss Gladys Chetwyn an excellent Master Robert Beech; and Miss Beatrice Hudson a really clever Betty Black. Miss Alice Oliver is decidedly good as Lady Jane Wilde, and Miss Pattie Hastings displays power as Sylvia Beech.

RADCLIFFE.—Grand Opera House.—Sole Owner, Mr. Geo. Testo Sante; Acting-Manager, Mr. James Boothman.—Under the Iron Heel is being played here. Mr. Carl Vallender deserves special mention as Schultz; Mr. R. Merring is all that can be desired as Colonel Muller; Mr. Dennis Clyde does good work as Major Schomberg; Mr. Wilson Howard is commendable as a Captain in the French Army; Mr. J. W. Richards acts the part of Otto Marx very creditably; Miss Marie Angus is a clever André; Miss J. Douglas-Hicks takes Maman Gouffe with good effect; and Miss Carlotta Anson is a pleasing Germaine Mirbeau.

RAMSGATE.—Royal Palace Theatre.—Under the sole direction of Mr. Chas. Evans; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Bowman.—Under the direction of Messrs. Elliman, the Provincial Play Productions Company have been presenting the romantic play A Heart's Desire to interested audiences. Miss Doris Brookes as Olya has been most successful, while in the principal male character, Jim Denman ("Beautiful Jim"), Mr. Richard Ferris has made a great hit. The other parts were handled with marked skill by the ladies and gentlemen to whom their interpretation was entrusted.

Marina Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. W. J. Attack.—The pictures are as varied and as interesting as ever, and quite as popular. The Cowboy's Romance is most dramatic, and A Journey to the Middle of the Earth is Vernesque in its effect. Mr. Alf. Brookes, the comedian, amuses the audiences immensely with his well-rendered songs.

RAWTENSTALL.—Grand Theatre.—Lessees, The Manchester Electric Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. E. Renshaw.—There is an exceptionally attractive programme this week. In Miss Gertrude Martini we have a thoroughly artistic and clever impersonator of well-known comedi-ennes, her last number, "£ s. d.," being received with great applause; Alpho, who is described as "The Ventriloquial College Boy," gives an amusing turn entitled "The Doll's Lament."

READING.—Royal County Theatre.—Proprietors and Managers, Mr. Milton Bode and Mr. Edward Compton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. A. Evans.—Miss Florence Glossop-Harris and a first-class company are appearing this week in a popular selection of Shakespearean plays. The répertoire for the week comprises The Taming of the Shrew on Monday, The Merchant of Venice on Tuesday, Romeo and Juliet on Wednesday, Twelfth Night on Thursday, The Merry Wives of Windsor on Friday, and Othello on Saturday. In all these plays Miss Glossop-Harris displays her great ability and versatility by a most excellent rendering of the principal characters. Miss Harris is very ably supported by Mr. Frank Cellier, who gives a scholarly interpretation of the leading male parts. Other prominent members of the company are Mr. H. P. Owen, Mr. J. H. Irvine, Mr. James Mason, Mr. Eugene Wellesley, Mr. Vernon O. Crabtree, Mr. Murray Kinnell, Mr. H. Vickers Smith, Mr. Frank Mayes, Mr. A. Seaton, Miss Mary Goulden, Miss Madge Spencer, and Miss Ine Cameron. Mr. Max Jerome is an efficient general-manager for Miss Glossop-Harris.

The Palace.—Managing Director, Mr. G. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco; Stage-Manager, Mr. A. Burridge.—Miss Julia Kent and her company present a very attractive comedy sketch entitled Pistols for Three. The scene is laid in the eighteenth century, and the picturesque costumes of the period greatly enhance the effect of the scene. Talbot and Pearce appear with great success in a pretty Japanese duologue entitled Yo San, in which some tuneful music is introduced. The Pichel Troupe give a clever Risley acrobatic performance; Miss Mary Moya, the "Comedy Queen," gives a dashing and very effective turn, in which acting, singing, and dancing are well combined; Miss Rosa Loader is an accomplished mimic; Little Cliff Diamond is a clever juvenile comedian and dancer; Harry Clifford and Joe Archer are acceptable comedians; and an amusing scene is depicted on the Bioscope.

Vaudeville Electric Theatre, Broad-street.—This place of entertainment has been so successful that an extensive enlargement has been rendered necessary. A splendid series of pictures are being shown continuously from two o'clock daily.

ROTHERHAM.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Macnaughten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Holbery Hardy.—Mrs. F. Wybert Clive and company are here, with The Outcast of the Family. Mr. Wybert Clive is an aristocratic Sir Henry Thorne; and Mr. J. D. Clyde is a manly Harry Thorne. Mr. Bert Oates scores as Richard Martin; and Mr. Herbert Bentone gives an excellent portrayal of Stephen Barry. Mr. Edward W. Cudd does well as Abram Wasper; and Mr. M. Platting is deserving of mention as Uncle Sam Miss Freda Beckett is very sprightly as Nancy Bray; and Miss Maud Leslie Cudd has a good part as Grace Redburn. Little Arthur speaks his lines with good effect as Little Robb; and Miss Gertrude Morella presents a finished performance of the part of Ruth. The mounting and scenery are excellent.

Hippodrome, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. E. Smith; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. R. Hollands.—Bellong Brothers present an extraordinary trick cycling and acrobatic act here; Elroy, armless wonder, surprises the house by his dexterity; the Great Northern Troupe of dancers do a smart speciality dance act; Madame De Rose and Hilda Claremont are old local favourites, and add to their number of friends; J. H. Hawtrey is well received; the Mars Trio are expert military gymnasts; Henry Hilton is a dexterous illusionist; Rose and Challoner are amusing as "The Porter and the Singer"; Marton and Rydon are deserving of mention as vocal comedy artists and dancers; the Hipposcope presents a very fine film, A Fishing Trip in Northern Ontario.

RYDE.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessees, The Cinematograph Corporation, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. George Aubrey.—Mr. Aubrey has arranged a very attractive programme at the theatre this week, and has been rewarded by capital audiences. The amusing films are varied by turns, the chief of which is by Miss Ethel James, a talented pianist and vocalist.

SALFORD.—Prince of Wales' Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Messrs. Clifford Hamilton and Charles Locke's company in A Woman's Past are giving good houses plenty of clever, sensational incidents. Miss Dora Pass ably sustains the heroine, Bessie; Mr. Leonard Clapham plays well his trying part of David Heath; Mr. Charles Locke as Frank Dellanoy and Miss Cherry Veheyne as Dorothy Heath contribute a lot of comedy business; Mr. H. Ryeland Leigh as Uriah Craven and Miss Phyllis Elton as Clara Darrell portray cleverly a couple of schemers; and Mr. A. Hamilton Warden gives a good study of Clement Harper.

Regent Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary Mr. R. H. Lee.—Dora Lyric heads the bill this week with some catchy chorus songs. Toch and Tard, comedy acrobats, cause much merriment; Paul Barnes raises many laughs with his droll patter; The Maid and the Artist is a clever sketch by Wadham and Sterling; Jack Barker's mimicry is well applauded; and other acceptable turns include Walter Stanley, comedian; Cyrus Dare, vocalist and child mimic; Madge Goodall, comedienne and dancer; Willis and Mackenzie, in musical scena, Christina of Sketra; and Charles Cardle, baritone.

Royal Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; General-Manager, Mr. H. Winstanley; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. J. Boyle.—Morton Powell's drama Driving a Girl to Destruction is presented by a good all-round company. Miss Kate Sydney makes an excellent Ruth Wright, and an equally good heroine in Ruby Wright is portrayed by Miss Maud M. Powell. Villainy is ably shown by Miss Ana Corri as Madame de Meral, Mr. F. Cyril Leighton as Lucas List, and Mr. Henry Scatchard as Octavius Screwe. The hero, Robert Ray, is well sustained by Mr. Leslie Austin; and comedy is contributed to by Miss Maggie Stewart (Bessie), Mr. Edward Swinton (Billy), Mr. Macintosh Clyde (Bobby), and Mr. H. Wallace Curnock (Freddy).

Opera House and Assembly Rooms, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Shepherd.—The films this week include A Pair of Slippers; artistic plates of Dutch views (Pathé); Port Arthur, the Great Grain Port of Canada; Scenes in the Life of Moses, showing the ten plagues in Egypt; The Squaw's Revenge; The Confession; The Birth and History of a Fountain Pen; and The Scientist's Nightmare. Mr. Tom Sherlock's song "Molly" is heartily joined in by the audience.

Central Hall (Blackfriars-road).—Proprietors, Messrs. Matt. Raymond; Manager, Mr. A. H. Gilbert.—The Raymond pictures include A True Indian's Heart, Punch—Benefactor, Life in the Next Century, Skating Mania, The Orderly, Foolshead—Shopwalker, Capture of a Vagrant, &c., interspersed with acceptable songs by Mr. A. H. Gilbert.

New Central Hall (Pendleton).—Proprietor, Mr. Thos. Whiteley; Manager, Mr. Gilbert Bruce.—Baby's Shoes, The Moneylender, Rival Beggars, Hoist by his own Petard, Falsely Accused, A Tragic Night, charged for Gallantry, The Brave Irish Lassie, and Foolshead—Chief of the Police are the films shown this week.

SEACOMBE.—King's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Kiernan.—Mr. E. Vivian Edmond's company is here this week with The King's Romance. In the leading rôle of Prince Andreo, afterwards King of Venantia, Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds gives an excellent performance, and Miss Mary Austin displays power as Vera Navairre.

SHEERNESS.—Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Adam Seebold; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ted Williams.—Mr. Keith G. Kenneth's company opened here on Monday with The Woman of Kronstadt. Miss Betty Fairfax as Marion Best, the heroine, shows ability; Miss Rosamund Thompson acts cleverly as Mme. de Bellegarde; Miss Isa Bellington and Miss Marjorie Armstrong impersonate successfully the daughters of the Governor; Miss Edith Vogue makes a deep impression as the spiteful Princess Marie; as Colonel Bonyo Mr. Keith Kenneth is admirable throughout; Mr. Bernard Copping is a capable Paul Zazzoulie; and Mr. Horace Sinclair plays effectively as General Steffanoff.

SHEFFIELD.—Lyceum Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont; Messrs. Silvanus Dauncey and H. Browning's company began a week's visit on Monday in the successful comedy The Walls of Jericho. Mr. Ethelbert Edwards ably depicted the manly characteristics of Jack Frobisher, and his well-delivered attack on the "smart" section of society was loudly applauded. The part of Althea was charmingly represented by Miss Gwendolyne Hay; Mr. Russell Barry's acting as Bannister was admirable; as the selfish old "prosser," the Marquis of Steventon, Mr. Rutland Barrington acted with characteristic humour and artistic finish, and good work was done by Miss Ethel Lloyd, Miss Hilda Sims, Mr. Harry Dallas, and Mr. H. Browning. The scenery and dresses were in perfect taste.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Henfrey-Aldred.—Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company appeared to a good audience on Monday in the stirring military drama A Soldier's Honour. Miss Edie Macklin distinguishes herself as Eliza, and all the other characters are played with commendable esprit de corps. The military costumes are brilliant and correct, and the scenery is very effective.

Alexandra Theat

SMETHWICK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. Barnard; Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson.—Her Secret Lover is being presented here by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's No. 1 company. Mr. Arthur St. John handles well the strong part of Gilbert Seymour; Captain Darrell Rose has an able exponent in Mr. Walter H. Wilson; Mr. Alfred Stretton succeeds in rousing the ire of the audience as John Strange; Mr. Robert Lord is an effective Mr. Muirfield; welcome comic relief is provided by Mr. Victor Vernon as Bill Burley and Miss Lynn Darlington as Jane Maria Wilkes, their efforts to amuse being ably seconded by Mr. J. Newton-Cowling as Jim Jones; Miss Flora Leslie as Alice Royale gives a well-studied portrayal; and Miss Laura Walker is to be highly complimented upon her clever treatment of the part of the heroine, Ivy Seymour.

SOUTHAMPTON. GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frederick Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Weston.—Mr. George Dance's company is presenting Miss Hook of Holland with complete success. As Sally Hook Miss Marie Studholme is delightfully vivacious and as fascinating as ever; Mr. Alfred Welesley gives a clever character study of Mr. Hook, which he plays on original lines; Miss Maud Denny is a bright and winning Nina, singing and dancing to perfection; Mr. Fred Lyne's broad humour is well suited to the part of Simon Slinks, and he keeps the house rocking with laughter; Mr. Frank Crimp repeats his previous great success as the Bandmaster, and Mr. Frederick Hobbs gives a capital precentation of Captain Paap. Praise is due to the chorus and orchestra for their admirable work under the direction of Mr. Clement Locknane.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietary, The Southend Hippodrome, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lewis de Burgh.—"The Kilties," Canada's greatest concert band, is attracting large audiences. Amongst other entertainers are J. W. Harris, light comedian; Briff, Braff, and Broff, in a fine comedy act; Ivy Aberdare, a pretty and winsome comedienne; and Carlisle and Wellman, clever instrumentalists.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. B. Pareezer; Resident-Manager, Mr. A Lingham Power.—Large audiences are being attracted by the fine performance of Mr. Fredk. Melville's company in The Bad Girl of the Family. Mr. W. H. Hargreaves as Lieut. Marsh, the hero, gives a realistic portrayal of a character which suits him admirably; Mr. G. R. Montford as Harry Gordon, the villain, is a clever actor; Miss Violet Crossbery as Bess Moore gives a convincing display; and Miss Daisy Cook as Gladys Erskine plays her part exceedingly well.

SOUTHPORT.—OPERA HOUSE, WINTER GARDENS.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Percy Hutchison; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Clarkson.—Mr. Hall Caine's powerful play The Bondman was presented for the first time here on Monday to a large and appreciative audience by Mr. Wentworth Croke's well-selected and capable company. Mr. Philip Darien achieves a notable success in the rôle of Jason, which he portrayed in a remarkably finished and convincing manner; Mr. Stanley Harrison played the difficult part of Michael Sunlocks with splendid effect, which left nothing to be desired; Mr. W. H. Rotheram submits capital character-sketches in the dual parts of Grandfather and Father Ferrati; Adam Fairbrother was exceedingly well depicted by Mr. Wilfrid Beckwith; Miss Violet Macaree gives a highly praiseworthy and effective delineation of Greeba; Mrs. Fairbrother was capitally impersonated by Miss Madge Lanerton; Governor Testa was well played by Mr. Alfred Fisher, and the same remark applies to Mr. Fred J. Waller as Doctor Boni, Mr. Cecil H. Ford as Marshal of Police, and Miss Emelie Mayhew as Christian Ann.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. John Coulson.—Messrs. Lyn Harding and Sidney Cooper's company was here on Monday in The Flag Lieutenant. Mr. Ralph Roberts made an excellent Dickie Lascelles; Mr. F. Leister was good as Major William Thesiger; the Vice-Admiral was ably enacted by Mr. Mark Paton; Miss Mabel Rees made a charming Mrs. Cameron. The ladies were all good in their respective parts, and the mounting was capital.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, the South Shields Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ernest Bridgen.—The chief turn here is that of Jack Pleasants, shy comedian, who has an excellent reception. Leroux's monkeys do some clever bicycle riding, and show careful training; the Three Delaires appear in a smart speciality gymnastic act; and Gladys Hooley is successful in an original scena, Fiddle and I. Remaining good items are supplied by Billy Hobbs (a nimble nigger), Katie Butler (character comedienne), Hilda Mascot (dainty comedienne and dancer), and the Bioscope.

SPENNYMOOR.—CAMBRIDGE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. David Collins.—A complete change of programme has taken place here by the introduction of variety entertainments on the two houses per night system. The top of the bill for the opening event was the smart Bouncing Peps, who execute clever tricks. The other turns of note are the Vedras Brothers, comedy acrobats; Linvana and Tom Wah No Tee; Lucretia and Josephine, duettists and dancers; Tom Black, the workman mimic; and Kell and Kelso, comedians.

PICTURE PALACE.—Manager Mr. Arthur Sleep.—The star turn is Captain A. Fox, the king of comedy ventriloquists. The special films include The Call, A Fair Exchange, In Little Italy, and Negro Burglar.

ST. HELENS.—THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. A. McLeod Loader; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Harry E. Johnson.—Her Path of Sorrow is being played here by Mr. and Mrs. Draycott and company. Mr. Charles Draycott plays the part of Richard Burfield with a keen appreciation of the character, and Mrs. Draycott is admirable as the noble Pauline Ferrars. The villain, Guy Lowther, is taken in a befitting manner by Mr. Frank Eaglesfield, and Lionel Heathcote is in the capable hands of Mr. Frank Etheridge. Some good fun is obtained at the hands of Mr. Will Hook (Tommy Onions) and Miss Daisy Carlton (Polly Green). Miss Nellie Freeland is good as Mlle. Lucille. A deeply-emotional rendering is given by Miss Fay Garnet-Vayne of the much ill-used Nellie Rayner.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. Leo Weisker.—The Achmid Ibrahim Troupe of Bedouin Arabs gives a marvellous exhibition of equilibrism; the Cavallottis' Ten Minutes with the Great Composers is enjoyed immensely; the Royal Temples are well received; Benson and Rose are very amusing in their sketch; and approbation is won by the Three Sisters Kilner, the Zampas, Horace Jones, and Geo. Leonard.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—AMERICAN PALACE PIER.—Resident-Manager, Mr. M. Leopold; Pier-Master, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—Mr. Montague Lane and company are appearing in the military farcical comedy My Soldier Boy. As Montague Mendle Mr. Montague Lane secures the heartiest approbation; Mr. Norman B. Cannon successfully impersonates Capt. Cullender; Capt. Allison and Colonel Roscoe have a decided military air given to them by Mr. Leo St. Clair and Mr. Scott Fraser; Mr. Philip Renouf submits a careful study of Michael O'Docherty; admirable treatment to the character of Jonas Toddenham is given by Mr. William Mallalieu; Miss Barbara Gott gives an intelligent performance as Mrs. Morrison; and her daughter Geraldine is well taken by Miss Gertrude Savage. Nothing could be more captivating than the rendering of the character of Lydia Mendle by Miss Ida Chapman.

STOCKPORT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—A hearty welcome from large audiences awaited Our Miss Gibbs, which has thoroughly delighted and entertained. As Timothy Gibbs Mr. Theodore Leonard is distinctly successful, keeping everyone in continuous merriment; Miss Kathleen Courtney is very charming as Mary Gibbs; Mr. Tom Shelford amusingly plays the part of the Hon. Hughie; very pleasing is Mr. Craufurd Kent as Lord Eynsford; and the Earl of St. Ives has a capital representative in Mr. Ernest Darrell. Among others who acquit themselves ably are Miss Jeannie Richards as Mrs. Farquhar, Miss Gladys Ivery as Lady Elizabeth Thanet, Miss Winifred Knightley as the Duchess of Minster, and Mr. J. E. Steveneon as Slithers. The play is excellently staged.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, the Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—Austin Rudd is the principal attraction in his comical character songs. Among others appearing are Brady and Johnson and company, in their laughable sketch, Little Bull Pup; Minto and Mart, clever paper manipulators; Wynnie Darrell, a pleasing comedienne and dancer; the Cecilias, capable lady instrumentalists; McEwan and Pollard, in an interesting sketch, Duval Outdone; Ike Bradley, a clever and amusing cyclist; J. Milton Hayes, an entertaining comedian; and Montes and Velma, who are successful in a comedy leaping act.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES. — CASTLE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Cecil Imeson.—Messrs. Fox and Leonards present their powerful company in the play entitled For Mother's Sake. Miss Mabel Phillips enacts the important rôle of Jacqueline with distinct success; Miss Nora Bedford makes a pleasing Mathilde; Miss Violet Leyton is good as Fifi Pasteur; Mr. B. M. Fox makes a grand old man in Old Goriot; Mr. Allan Gordon is an effective Henri Romaine; Mr. Carthage Caldclough plays with power the part of Luigi Ferroni; Mr. Alf. Waller is very funny as Bill Higgins; as Louis Myers Mr. Herbert Leonards is excellent; Mr. Alf Edwards appears successfully as Pomponnel; and Mr. B. Mervyn is a clever Mons. Careze. The scenery is elaborate.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Stainton.—The Georgians, twelve local children, give a highly entertaining vocal, instrumental, and dancing scena; the Four Royal Scots are clever vocal and musical entertainers; Phyllis Seymour is a dainty singer and dancer; the Kirbys have a clever and amusing burlesque; Tom Gott is very amusing with his Yorkshire dialect songs and stories; Margit and Lener are funny in their eccentric act, Wet Paint; Edie Haley is a charming versatile vocalist; Bert Ward is a comedy siffleur and raconteur; and the Bioscope concludes.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—The premier turn is that of Phil Rees' Stable Lads, with clever singing and dancing; Arthur Byron and Daisy Norman are popular in their comedy duologue, Billy's Dilemma; Gibbon and Bell are clever acrobats; the Sisters Lillian are charming duettists; Escourt is a remarkable mystifier; Bandoni is very good as the one-man band; Mrs. Paul Courtenay and company provide an excellent turn in Reconciled; and Tom E. Sloan is a pleasing comedian.

STOKE-ON-TRENT. — THE HIPPODROME. — Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Arthur Burton.—Gillin, the humorous ventriloquist, is most diverting; the Andos Troupe of Japs are seen in a clever acrobatic act; Blair and Allen are exceptionally smart patter dancers. Also here are Florrie Delamere, Will Harris, Charles Erard (a clever pianist and mimic), Dorothy Dare, and the Perfection Pictures, which are of a most amusing nature.

STOURBRIDGE. — ALHAMBRA THEATRE AND PALACE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Douglas C. Phelps.—The Gelders, magicians, &c., head the bill and give a smart turn; Ivy Dene dances her way to the affections of the audience; Will Zing is a clever comedian; Talbot and Clare give a capital comedy duo entitled My Wife Wouldn't Like It. Some good films are shown.

SUNDERLAND.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. S. F. Davidson; General-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Townrow.—Mr. Herbert Sleath's company is playing The Woman in the Case before well-filled houses. Mr. C. W. Standing depicts Julian Rolfe in a quiet and convincing manner; Mr. James Lindsay's portrayal of Thompson stamps him an actor of exceptional ability; Mr. Christopher Steele as Walters and Mr. Paul Wynter as Jimmy O'Neil fulfil their responsibilities with ease; Mr. Sydney Palfrey gives a meritorious character study as Klauffskey; Miss Kathleen Russell gives a finished portrayal of Margaret Rolfe; and Miss Winfred Pearson as Claire Foster plays throughout with considerable force. Miss Gertrude Gwynne does justice to the part of Mrs. Hughes. The mounting is of a high order.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General Manager, Mr. Harry Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. Dunn.—Mr. Andrew Emm's company is performing here in The Diver's Luck. Miss Chrissie Bickerstaff gives a good rendering of Helen Wyngate; and Miss Pearl Noyle as Peggy Mahoney and Miss Phyllis Spalding as Winnie Hall are both admirable. Mr. Wm. McReady submits a well-studied reading as Martin Faber; and Mr. Wm. Dexter does well as Tom Hall. Messrs. James Burt, N. T. Walton, Edmund O'Grady, and Lyons Johnson are all good. Mr. Harry Bristow is a capital Snowball.

AVENUE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—Layton and Douglas are foremost on a varied bill, and fully merit the applause they receive for their capital musical and quick-change act. Nannie Shaw is also well received for her dancing and Scotch songs; Tom Lennard is an amusing comedian; and The Brothers and an Outlaw's Sacrifice are two fine dramatic pictures.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—George Formby is starring here, and is a huge success; the Four Regals display strength and skill in The Armourers; James Eadie and Cissie Ramsden are warmly applauded for their clever and humorous dancing; Waul Langtry scores as a dialect comedian; Rich. Taylor is a novel ventriloquist; Kathleen Grey is a charming comedienne; Great Vincent does clever work in table acrobatics; and Frank N. Fox is an entertaining comedian.

SWINDON.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Wiltshire Entertainments Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Manners.—Mr. Fredk. Mouillot's company, in the fantastic play A Message from Mars, is attracting large houses. Mr. F. Vernon Travers' conception of Horace Parker could scarcely be improved upon; the Messenger is skilfully played by Mr. William H. Brougham; Mr. Norman is effective as the Tramp; Mr. Cecil Kerr furnishes a capital rendering of Arthur Dicey; Miss Aubrey Ashton makes a dignified Miss Parker; Miss Ray Denton does well as Bella; Miss Mary Buckstone is a successful Mrs. Clarence; and Minnie Templar finds a delightful exponent in Miss Rose Helene.

TODMORDEN. — HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Richard Dewhirst.—The New Barmaid was presented here on Monday by Miss Violet Osmund's company. In the title-rôle Miss Madge Prior is in every respect pleasing; Miss Beatrice Erle is a very attractive Dora Heather; Brenda Louth, the old Barmaid, is exceedingly well played by Miss Vera Grafton; Mr. Chas. Adeson as William White is the life of the piece; Mr. J. Burlington Rigg makes a good Captain Lovebury; Mr. Alexander Loftus is very funny as Bertie White; and Mr. E. Sykes is good as Colonel Claymore.

OLYMPIA PICTURE PALACE.—Proprietors, Messrs. A. and H. Andrews; Manager, Mr. Chas. Tyers.—Pictures continue to draw large audiences. The film which appeals to the public most this week is The Jockey, a fine story of the great French race the Grand Prix.

TON-Y-PANDY. — ROYAL. — General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth.—This week the Rhondda Amateur Operatic Society occupy the boards in Gilbert and Sullivan's comic opera The Mikado. The Society, numerically strong, has been well coached by Mr. A. M. Cullin, while the music is well looked after by the hon. conductor, Mr. David Lloyd.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. W. Stone; General-Manager, Mr. Edgar Harper.—This week an exceptionally strong programme is submitted here. A. Carlton, the wonderful conjurer, is worthily starred, and the Mysterious Cross also is a great attraction. The Three Hilberts score heavily, as do the Victas; and Alsopp and Beckwith, Ida Kathrena, and Percy Wright contribute praiseworthy items. Some good films are shown.

EMPIRE.—General-Manager, Mr. W. Wright.—Topping the bill presented here is Chas Whittle, who nightly gets four or five encores. Harry Tate's No. 1 company in Motoring are really entertaining; Gordon Stretton, the new coon, is well received; and Blanche and Powell, the Channings, Jack Sheridan, and Vera Rochdale are all well received. The Empiroscope concludes.

TORQUAY. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Alderman W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—Miss Nannie Goldman's company in Not Before the Missus is causing plenty of fun here this week. In the principal rôle of Jane Parker Miss Nannie Goldman makes a very amusing figure, and is ably assisted by Miss Ruth Wallace, who does well as Matilda Hanbury. Mr. William Holles appears successfully as Barnaby Bunstone; and Miss Pattie Walton and Miss Edith Bruce as his wife and daughter respectively are equally well placed. Mr. Leonard K. Mansford does well as Augustus Whistler, the character of the wife being in the capable hands of Miss Helene Dale. Mr. Fred Cooke as Dix and Mr. Francis James as Brown are well suited to their parts, and Mr. Toby Jones is decidedly humorous as the Guardsman. A capital study of Alphonse Duprez is presented by Mr. W. Patrick Boyle, whose antics keep the house very amused.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS. — OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. Welton Dale; Manager, Mr. Harry Ball.—The Prince and the Beggar Maid is being presented by Messrs. Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's company this week with great success. Miss Verity Page gives a charming impersonation of the Beggar Maid, and Mr. Ernest H. G. Cox a powerful study of Prince Olaf; Miss Stella Campbell portrays very cleverly the Princess of Illyria, and Mr. Alfred Goddard and Mr. Victor Rae are particularly good as the royal brothers of Prince Olaf. Miss Mona Hall makes the most of the part of Viola, and the various military and other rôles are capably sustained by Messrs. W. S. Hardy, Oswald Waller, Leslie Knight, Smytheson, Edward Bowen, Arthur Robinson, E. Crowhurst, S. Nicholls, S. Strange, S. Bayliss, H. Nelson, H. Burton, J. H. Vyvian, and A. E. Shuttleworth. Next week a re-visit of When Knights Were Bold is announced.

GREAT HALL.—Miss Margaret Cooper and concert party had a most successful flying matinée at the Great Hall on Saturday.

TYLDESLEY. THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. McNish.—The fine pictures shown here this week are drawing good houses. Professor Norton is a clever magician, and Harry Hall, instrumentalist, is a success.

MINERS' HALL.—Manager, Mr. C. Matthews.—The films exhibited are of a varied and interesting nature. Daisy Reed is a vivacious comedienne; May and Kennely, comedy duo, make a hit, and Dan Rigby, comedian, causes much laughter.

WAKEFIELD. — OPERA HOUSE. — Proprietors, Sherwood and Co.—A clever and spirited performance of the musical comedy Our Miss Gibbs is presented by Mr. George Dance's company this week. Miss Effie Vincent invests the title-rôle with great charm and sings sweetly; Mr. Vincent Erne acquite himself in excellent style as Teddy Gibbs; Mr. Eustace Burnaby makes a hit as the Hon. Hughie Pierrepoint; Mr. Arthur S. Radcliffe is an effective Lord Eynsford; Mr A. Gordon Bigg scores as the Earl of St. Ives; Mr. J. S. Durant is seen to advantage as Slithers; Mr. Frank Sealey is admirable as Mr. Toplady; and Mr. David Miller does good work as Mr. Beavis. Miss Ellaline Thorne is very smart as Madame Jeanne; Miss Lilian Birtles is a pretty Lady Elizabeth Thanet, and sang pleasantly; Miss Amy Singleton is amusing as the Duchess of Minster; and Miss Florence Hylton is a charming Mrs. Farquhar.

NEW EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Sherwood and Co.; Manager, Mr. S. H. Laycock.—Lockhart's Elephants, introduced by Captain Taylor, perform clever feats; Mr. G. F. Hall, the American storyteller and reciter, has a good reception; Miss Lila Vesta is an entertaining comedienne; Tom Packer is an amusing comedian; and Paul Pry (comedian) and Marie St John (vocalist) find favour. Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Manning, in a comedy sketch, entitled Knocked Out, are successful.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—The Geni Family of risley acrobats head the bill; Reid and Cully, in a novel tumbling act, bring down the house; Meetz and Whittle have an amusing turn; George Ripley, comedian, proves highly popular; Charles Mentone Ure, soldier vocalist, sings in good style; Paul Lemaire is an amusing wizard; Miss Eileen Hope, ballad vocalist, sings delightfully; and Miss Edna Mayne is a smart dancer.

WARRINGTON. — ROYAL COURT.—Proprietor, Mr. Joseph Beecham; Manager, Mr. A. M. Loader.—Mr. W. W. Kelly's company is here, in the historical play A Royal Divorce. Mr. Keith Fraser as Napoleon, Miss Violet Ellicott as Josephine, and Miss Winnie Tempest as Marie Louise again score triumphs, and the business done has been exceptionally good.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Eric Longden.—J. W. Rickaby heads the bill here, and has made a palpable hit; Mona Garrick, in her delineation of several dramatic rôles, proves herself an elocutionist of a high standard; the Rangers are smart comedy and trick cyclists; the Brothers Victor, smart equilibrists, display rare skill, dexterity, and strength; Ethel Browne is a charming vocalist; and the sketch, The Prince's Love Affair, is well played by Rooke, Rorke, and company. J. J. Mannix scores as a coon delineator. The pictures are good, especially those showing Fishing with Dragging Nets.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, The Franco-British and Animated Picture Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. Wilberforce Turner; Manager, Mr. J. Waters.—Elmo and Kargo are capital knockabouts, and their business is good and original; Violet Beatrice is a smart male impersonator; Mr. Matt Wilkinson's company are very amusing as sketch artists; Annie Martin has good songs; and Stewart and Maurice are clever comedians. The pictures are good.

WEST BROMWICH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. R. Nightingale.—This week Mr. Montague Beaudyn is producing A Beautiful Fiend here. Miss Sidney Crowe as Wanda Lubinoff gives a remarkably powerful study; Mr. G. M. Montanini is a clever Count Fedor Karateff; and Mr. Herbert Skardon as Major Ian Paulovitch admirably depicts the life of a Russian police officer.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. R. Colin; Resident-Manager, Mr. Joe Hastings.—A strong bill here is headed by Aimee and Vera, long-boot toe dancers, who give a clever turn; Barney Stuart is a clever impersonator; Ellean and Rose appear in a musical speciality act with much success; and Yettmah also makes a welcome appearance. The pictures are remarkably good.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. F. Thompson.—Leonard Charburn's young stars, under the excellent training and direction of Mr. R. L. Griffiths, are accorded nightly thunderous applause in the scena A Picnic up the River. John Warren, assisted by Miss Mollie Winter, Messrs. J. G Fenn, Frank Morton, H. J. Collins and company, presents his musical mystery The Magic Carpet, and succeeds in completely baffling his audience. The Glenroy Troupe of Dancers are exceedingly smart; Frank Melvin, comedian, has a style entirely his own; Edith Heron Brown, in songs at the piano, is very entertaining; and a drawing-room interlude by Carl and Carr is mirth-provoking. Chas. J. Johnson, a coloured comedian, dances himself into favour. Some amusing pictures are shown.

GRAND.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fred Granville.—Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company in The Village Blacksmith is on a welcome return visit, Mr. Sam Livesey again making an excellent impression by his masterly interpretation of John Strong.

WHITEHAVEN. — NEW THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietor, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Falconer Jacques.—The Russell Rosse Répertoire Company is appearing here in a round of popular comedies. On Monday A Pair of Spectacles was presented. Mr. Arthur Hare was agreeably prominent as Benjamin Goldfinch, and Mr. Maurice Denham was good as Gregory; Mr. H. St. Barbe West as Dick and Mr. Guy Vivian as Percy both acted creditably; and Miss Ida Phillips gave a pleasing performance of Mrs. Goldfinch. During the latter portion of the week Caste is down for production.

WIDNES. — ALEXANDRA THEATRE. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Kiddie; Secretary, Mr. Thomas Swinton.—Widnes playgoers have an unusually strong drama in The Woman Pays, and Mr. Frank M. Thorne's company interprets it successfully. Miss Alice Greenwood plays Madge Armstrong sincerely and earnestly; Mr. Phil Harper is a convincing Sid Armstrong; Mr. Raymond Thomas makes a "villain" of the first water of Roger Marchant; Mr. Beresford Innes paints Cyrus Treadgold in his true colours; and Miss Kate Blair commands sympathy as Nell Morland.

CO-OPERATIVE HALL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Hamilton and Hughes.—Another attractive programme is presented here. Miss Nellie Brierley, well-known as the Lancashire pit-brow soprano, and a native of Darwin, tops the bill. Mr. Walter Sutton, the laughing entertainer; Mr. Edwin Hall, the society juggler; and Messrs. Geo. and Ed. Carney, the celebrated vocal duettists, are also in the bill.

EMPIRE ANIMATED PICTURES HALL.—Proprietors, Messrs. Caldwell Brothers; Manager, Mr. G. C. Ford.—Turns are provided here by Mr. Sam Redfern, comedian; Mr. E. Boultbee, ventriloquist; Mr. Bert Rose, versatile comedian and dancer; and Miss Maud Hughes, soprano. The pictures are good.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—A welcome return visit is being paid here by Mr. George Dance's company in Miss Hook of Holland. In the title-rôle Miss Gertrude Melville acts with charm and vivacity; as Mina Miss Cissie Sephton is a conspicuous success; Mr Edmond Russell is a humorous Mr. Hook; excellent singing is heard from Mr. Arthur Ballance as the Bandmaster and Mr. M. Wood Mansey as Captain Adrian Paap. Mr. Fred Dark avails himself of all his opportunities as Simon Slinks; and Mr. George Mudie, jun., sustains the part of Ludwig Schnapps with ability.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—An original turn is provided by Minola Hurst with her miniature marvels, who succeed in creating much laughter; Everhart is an exceedingly smart hoop manipulator; Gene Morelle proves himself to be a most capable musician; David Fuller is encored for his baritone selections; the stories of "Mr. C." are greatly enjoyed; Maud Courtney, an American comedienne, contributes an original item; the sketches given by Alice Hughes and company and the Milsted Bell Trio also produce much amusement; Amy Bellwood sings and dances herself into favour; and Little Hackenschmidt wrestles with local light-weights.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles Barnard; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lewis M. Chapman.—Miss Renée Glendower's company opened here on Monday with What a Man Made Her. Mr. Edward Rawlinson was effective as Rupert Danescombe; Mr. C. Hartopp caused amusement as Sir Ernest Cavendish; and Mr. Barnett Lando presented a really clever study of the money-lending Jew. Miss F. Russell Spiers made a capable Countess of Saxon Royal; Miss Stella Carmichael did well as Lady Thora Danescombe; Miss Tessa Myers put plenty of life into the part of Deborah Gunnerstein; and the varying moods of Janet McAllister, the heroine, were admirably portrayed by Miss Renée Glendower.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr Vivian Edmonds.—The Vampire Dance, on its first appearance here, is presented by Mildred Deverez and Tom Terriss. Cissie Curlette, mimetic vocalist, scores a huge success; Curwen and Bell, in a miniature musical comedy, receive well-deserved applause; Harry Russon elicits marked approbation for his dramatic recital; Hayes and Watson, comedians and novelty dancers, provide a pleasing turn; Addie Lennard has a good descriptive song; and Zethus is a smart little comedienne and cornet soloist.

WORCESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Edward Evans.—A delightful performance of The Thief is this week arousing the enthusiasm of thinking playgoers. In the hands of the capable company toured by Messrs. Alban and Bernard Limpus the piece is superbly presented. As Mr. and Mrs. Chelford, Mr. Bernard Limpus and Miss Georgina Wynter leave nothing to be desired. Miss Wynter is responsible for a finished and artistic impersonation of the complex characteristics which she is called upon to portray. Mr. Limpus is fully equal to the demands made upon him, and plays with a restraint which serves the more to convince. Mr. F. Morland is a delightfully natural Raymond Leyton; and Miss Mary Forrester is refreshingly simple as his wife Isabel. Mr. W. Somerset is well suited as Mr. Protheroe; and Mr. Carl Lindsey as Harry Leyton completes an admirably selected cast.

WORKINGTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers.—The Workington Amateur Operatic Society is giving performances of Iolanthe, under the skilled advice and tuition of Miss M. Forbes-Wilson (late of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Co.).

CARNEGIE HALL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers.—Some very good films include Hero and Leander. The Danbys sing and dance well, and Jack Hastings displays talent in double vocalisation.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Mac.—Will Challoner pays a welcome return with fresh songs and dances, Miss Ni Narom also favours us again, and Ellie Barriton still holds the boards with his sweet and quaint ballads. Films are as good as ever.

WREXHAM.—EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. J. Scott.—Another week of special Bioscope attractions, including Blue Beard, a beautiful-coloured film, the Race for the Farmers' Cup, The Lighthouse Keeper (a most interesting drama), The Cowboy Baronet, &c. The top of the bill is appropriated by Alf. Warner, a versatile comedian and instrumentalist; and at the bottom of the poster is printed the name of Edith Garrick, a refined and popular comedienne.

YNYSHIR. — WORKMEN'S HALL. — Lessees, Messrs. Poole, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. W. Bynorth.—A most enjoyable picture of prairie life is presented in The Cowboy Millionaire and Hunting the Wild Red Deer. Capital comic pictures are also furnished, and the Grand National Steeplechase is shown. Miss May McPherson scores with illustrated songs, and the Cinephone, as usual, gives singing pictures

YORK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington and Sons; General-Manager; Mr. H. J. Dacre.—The visit of Messrs. Armitage and Leigh's company in the powerful play With Edged Tools is an assured success. Mr. Hamilton Deane upholds his high reputation in the exacting part of Jack Meredith; Mr. J. D. Geddes as Sir John Meredith plays with force and dignity; Mr. Charles Hartopp as Guy Oscard gives a vigorous and manly impersonation; Mr. Charles Barrett is seen to advantage as Victor Durnoto; Miss Marie Leonhard as Jocelyn Gordon is most graceful; Miss Marguerite Cellier is a charming Millicent Chyne; Miss Elsie Whittaker does well as Lady Herries; and Miss Alice Maude is quite at home as Lady Cantourne.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brooke.—Marie Santoi and company, in their clever sketch, A Night in Japan, gives great pleasure to large audiences. Hector and Lolletta as acrobats, jugglers, &c., give a really clever and neat show; Corman's Juveniles pay a return visit; Hal Bert is a comedian with a quaint style; the Three Sisters Silcott introduce a novel turn; and Olive and Owen appear in an attractive comedietta entitled Roadside Tinkers. Tom Kelso and Edie George in a refreshingly novel sketch, Yoicks and a Yokel, introduce some up-to-date business with good effect; Charles Hatch sings well; and the efforts of Chummie La Mara, a comedienne with a pleasing style, give general satisfaction.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. J. Bowman; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. E. Bradley.—The Valley of Visp, a charming Alpine picture, is a great attraction. The Outlaw's Sacrifice and The Fatal Wedding are of a highly stirring nature, and the comic element is represented by No Followers Alowed and When Courage Fled. The Clancy Girls (Mamie and Elsie) are clever dancers. Large audiences are the rule.

VICTORIA HALL.—Lessee, Sidney Bacon; Resident-Manager, Bert Rutter.—The pictures are of general excellence. Won by a Hold-up, Cupid and the Motor Boat, The Bonesetter's Daughter, &c., are well received. Doyle and Gibson are excellent comedians.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEW YORK, MARCH 30.—The Whirlwind, produced at Daly's Theatre on the 21st inst., is a drama of Parisian life, in three acts, by Henri Bernstein. Originally known as Baccarat, it was produced under that title at the Irving-place German Theatre last year. The first performance of the play in English was made additionally interesting by the début of Mme. Marietta Olly in an English-speaking rôle. Mme. Olly made a distinctly favourable impression. She has mastered the language wonderfully, although she speaks with a decided German accent at times, and has a highly intelligent and interesting personality. In her impersonation of Hélène, Countess Brechebel, she was sincere and natural at all times. Having married Count Armand Brechebel to gratify the social aspirations of her father, Hélène has been clever enough to preserve her reputation as an exceptionally faithful wife while engaged in a liaison with Robert de Clavignon, a gambler. Clavignon loses a large sum of money at the gaming-table, the greater part of which he has embezzled. He threatens to kill himself, and Hélène makes every sacrifice in trying to obtain the money for him, including a confession to her father of their true relations. When all else fails she yields herself to André Lebourg, one of her former admirers, but the money is not obtained in time to prevent Clavignon from shooting himself.

Robert de Clavignon was played with striking sincerity by Mr. Thurlow Bergen. His performance stood out conspicuously as a remarkably easy and finished portrayal. Mr. Albert Gran as Baron Lebourg and Mr. John Emerson as the jilted lover André deserve honourable mention; and Mr. Melville Stewart, who used to sing "Tommy Atkins," appeared with success as Mons. Braceline, a jeweller.

MR. E. H. SOTHERN and Miss Julia Marlowe appeared together for the first time in As You Like It at the Academy of Music on the 21st inst. It was ten years or more since Miss Marlowe had played Rosalind, but her interpretation of this delightful character had lost none of its charm. Mr. Sothern elected to appear as Jaques instead of Orlando, and if we missed him as the ardent lover we were enabled to enjoy his perfect enunciation in the more serious passages of the play, and particularly his fine rendering of "All the world's a stage," &c., a speech that never seems to pall. Mr. Frederick Lewis made an excellent Orlando, and won high praise for his impersonation. Mr. Albert S. Howson was a capital Touchstone, and others who did conscientious work were Misses Norah Lamison, Loretta Healy, and Elizabeth Valentine; Messrs. Eric Blind, John Taylor, Francis Bendtsen, Sidney Mather, William Harris, Charles Howson, Rowland Buckstone, and Malcolm Bradley. Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe's répertoire for the present week is made up of no fewer than seven Shakespearean plays. Their engagement will close next Saturday, and on June 6 they will return to the Academy for a single performance of The Taming of the Shrew for the benefit of the Actors' Fund. That will be the last theatrical performance on the Academy's stage, as the house is to be used for moving-picture exhibitions and vaudeville in future. Thus the appearance of Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe on this occasion will end its career as a legitimate theatre, and make the closing dramatic event dignified and memorable.

MR. FRANK MILLS has succeeded Mr. Charles Richman as Malcolm G

LONDON AND SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.
On Monday, April 4, the Farcical Comedy, by Brandon Thomas, entitled
"CHARLEY'S AUNT."

Judging from the very hearty laughter with which Mr. Brandon Thomas's famous comedy was greeted on Monday evening at the King's, there should be many more years of prosperity for Charley's Aunt before her career is closed and her final retirement from the boards. It is doubtful if there is a more popular farce to be seen at the present time, even after running so many years. The crowded houses amply testify to the appreciation in which Charley's Aunt is held, and the acting of Mr. Brandon Thomas's company leaves nothing to be desired. Mr. Thomas himself is a tower of stength in the part of Colonel Sir Francis Chesney, the military man of the world. Stephen Spettigue is admirably rendered by Mr. Roy Byford, the fiery tirades of the intriguing solicitor being received with laughter. Mr. J. Sims Woolley makes a capital Jack Chesney, his assertiveness and coolness being excellent. Charley Wykeham is pleasantly rendered by Mr. Robert Burnett. A capital representative of Lord Fancourt Babberley is Mr. Stanley Cooke, who has been so long identified with the part that his impersonation is a masterpiece. It is played in the true spirit of farce, without the slightest vulgarity or bad taste. Mr. Sydney Compton as the college scout Brassett is an exceedingly good depiction of sangfroid. Most successful is the Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez of Miss Audrey Stafford, whose handsome appearance and elaborate costumes are very attractive. Miss Ruth Henton is a charming Kitty Verdun, her natural acting being applauded; and Miss Phyllis Back's rendering of Amy Spettigue is also appreciated. Ela Delahay is delightfully played by Miss Bertha Wilson. The scenery, representing Oxford, is entirely adequate. Mr. Brandon Thomas's playlet A Highland Legacy is also given with satisfactory results. The author and several members of the company distinguish themselves and create a most favourable impression.

THE MARLBOROUGH.
On Monday, April 4, the Musical Comedy, entitled
"A COUNTRY GIRL."

Messrs. Dudley Bennett and T. C. Wray's company is here with that gay, hoydenish maiden A Country Girl, and local playgoers have again been made captive by her charms. The cast is an excellent one, and artistic results are attained by the well-trained chorus and the augmented orchestra under the experienced direction of Mr. Evelyn Baker. It is difficult to imagine a more winning, bewitching, and rompish Nan than Miss Anna Hickisch, who is most happily selected for the part. Miss Hickisch is delightfully natural, and sings her musical numbers in fine style, "Try again, Johnny," "Molly the Marchioness," and "The Language of Love" being all very persistently encored. Mr. Nelson Hancock sings "I loved her then" with exquisite taste, and acted the part of Geoffrey Challoner in refined style. Mr. St. John Hamund makes a magnificent Mr. Raikes, Rajah of Bhong, his fine voice and exceptionally good enunciation being utilised to advantage in the "Rajah of Bhong" and "The Valley of Bhong." Miss Dorothea Temple, in the rôle of Marjorie Joy, gives a bewitching portrayal, singing and acting with great charm; and Miss Myfanwy Newell is a pleasing exponent of Princess Melaneh, receiving a well-deserved encore for her rendering of "Under the Deodar." A capital bit of comedy is contributed by Mr. Percy Everard as Sir Joseph Verity; and his son, Douglas Verity, is amusingly undertaken by Mr. H. P. Hargreaves. As Sophie, Miss Hilda Darrell gains a host of friends by her piquant style and skilful vocalisation. That clever comedian, Mr. Coningsby Brierley, as the irrepressible Barry, plays, sings, and dances with untiring energy. Miss Florence Linton is a charming Mrs. St. Quinton; and Miss Violet de Lacy a stately Lady Ancester. Miss Vi Small as Lady Arnot and Miss Claire Latus as Nurse are also well placed; and the small parts of Milliner's Assistant and Indian Attendant are admirably undertaken by the Misses Queenie Arliss and Madge Redding. Mr. C. T. Chapman is a very effective Lord Ancester; Mr. Percy Russell plays Lord Grassmere easily and naturally; the Gran'fer Mummery of Mr. Tom Sheridan is a capital sketch of a country rustic; and Messrs. H. Brean (Rube Fairway), M. Jones (Indian Servant), and J. Edwards (Footman) add to the general success. The tasteful dresses and costumes, and the beautiful and appropriate scenery and mounting, are all worthy of admiration. Mr. St. John Hamund is general-manager for the company.

THE CORONET.
Cavaliere Francesco Castellano's Italian Opera Company began a three weeks' season at the Notting Hill Gate Theatre, the scene of former triumphs, on Monday, with Il Trovatore. Signora Gorreta is possessed of a delightful voice and a highly dramatic method, and as the gipsy, Azucena, she employs her gifts to full advantage, "Te Racconta" being admirably rendered. Signora Protti was artistic and effective as Leonora, and her rendition of "Tacea la notte placida" was very delightful and highly finished. Signor Barbato as Manrico acted and sang with power and virility, scoring a great success in Act III. with "Di quetta pira." Signor Azzolini as the Count of Luna threw himself boldly into the part, and his acting was convincing, whilst his rendering of "Il balen" was exceptionally good. Signor Quintina as Ferranti was impressive in his rendering of the song of "Azucena's vendetta." The Miserere scene in Act IV. was the occasion of a tumultuous encore for Signora Protti and Signor Barbato. An excellent ensemble was heard to great advantage in the men's chorus in Act I., and in the Anvil Chorus. Signor Wehils conducted an augmented orchestra. In Lucia di Lammermoor on Tuesday Signora Padovani as Lucia Ashton, and Signors Folco, Vail, Bartera, Massia, and Antonini, and Signora Massia as Alice, took part; and on Wednesday, in Faust, Signora Desio's Margherita was full of sweetness and melody, the "Jewel song" being exquisitely rendered. Signor Folco was a handsome, ingratiating, and intense Faust, singing "Oh, dwelling pure and lowly" very beautifully. Signor Massia as Mephistopheles was duly sardonic and strong-voiced; Signor Vail as Valentine invested "Dio persenti" with fine expression, and acted with verve and pathos, especially in the death scene; Signora Massia as Martha played and sung with spirit. Signor Camibrera conducts the augmented orchestra. Mr. Frank Yearsley is business-manager, and Signor G. Barterra stage-manager for the company.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.
On Monday, April 4, the Play, by John Rutherford, entitled
"THE BREED OF THE TRESHAMS."

Always assured of a hearty welcome at the Kennington Theatre, Mr. Martin Harvey and his admirable company are doubly certain of a good greeting when he revives there this stirring romantic drama, which had its first introduction to metropolitan playgoers at Mr. Robert Arthur's handsome theatre. John Rutherford's vivid picture of an episode between the Royalists and Roundheads has divided the week with The Only Way, and it is difficult to say which play is more popular with the Kennington patrons. On Monday there were few vacant places in the house, and Mr. Harvey's fine acting produced great enthusiasm, the curtain having to be raised many times after each act. The actor-manager was in excellent form, bringing out with full effect both the blackguardliness and the unselfishness of the character of Lieut. Rercsby, "the Rat." In the third act, in which the lieutenant is tortured to reveal the identity of his brother officers, Mr. Harvey acted with magnificent force. The faithfulness of his little sympathiser and assistant, Batty, was depicted with much skill by Miss N. de Silva (Mrs. Harvey); while Miss Brenda Gibson, as the sister of "the Rat's" treacherous leader, who brings out the good qualities of the swaggering lieutenant, acted simply and naturally. The craven Colonel, haunted by the fear that his subaltern will give him away, was played by Mr. Charles Glenney with a deal of force; and his loyal father, to whom the disclosure of his son's treachery is so great a blow, was vigorously enacted by Mr. Philip Hewland. Mr. Owen Roughwood was an incisive Sir Henry Curwen; and Mr. Fred Wright, sen., an excellent Colonel Bagshaw; while Mr. Leonard Craske was a manly young Tresham.

DALSTON THEATRE.
On Monday, April 4, the Musical Comedy entitled
"THE CATCH OF THE SEASON."

Messrs. Murray King and Clark's company are at the Dalston Theatre this week with The Catch of the Season, which is decidedly catching with North Londoners judging by the full houses which are delighting the heart of the management. It is not too much to say that it is comparatively seldom that a musical comedy is so admirably acted, Mr. Murray King as the Duke of St. Jermyns is a veritable host in himself. His natural hilarity is positively infectious. His scenes with Angela Crystal (the Cinderella of the story), a part charmingly played by Miss Gladys Guy, are admirable. The Lord Dundreary of Mr. Charles C. Ommanney is a most acceptable performance. His rendering of the song "A quaint old bird" is evidently just to the taste of the audience. Mr. Ardene Linden's Sir John Crystal conveys the real idea of comedy; and Mr. James Dallas as Mr. William Gibson, a police-court magistrate, with a host of well-developed daughters, is another entertaining personage. It should be added that he is also stage-manager. Master Willie West as Bucket, a page boy with a susceptible heart, is a fertile source of amusement; Mr. Maxwell Stuart, in addition to the onerous duties of general-manager and producer, appears as Captain Rushpool, and secures an undeniable encore for his effective rendering of the song "Cigarette." Miss Belle Rivers is a charming Duchess of St. Jermyns; and Miss Evelyn Shelley makes herself popular as Lady Caterham. Miss Nora Dwyer as Honoria sings several songs in good style, being encored for "My singing bird of June"; and Miss Louie West as Sophia renders noteworthy a burlesque scene with the redoubtable Bucket, the page. Miss Mildred Cottell's Lady Crystal is quite a typical character, the part being most efficiently presented.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.
On Monday, April 4, the Drama entitled
"THE FATAL WEDDING."

Messrs. Barnards present a capital evening's programme in The Fatal Wedding as given by Mr. Percy Williams' company. Full of dramatic and musical surprises, the play goes with an amusing swing from start to finish. Mr. Edward Lloyd as Howard Wilson is a very efficient hero; Mr. Cyril Melton does well as the debauched Robert Curtis; Mr. Harry M. Vernon scores greatly as Tots; Mr. Watson Hume is a typical old German as Schwartz; Miss Ethel Kay has the part of the heroine, and succeeds in giving a fine impersonation of the divorced wife and much-tried mother; Miss Leah Marlborough makes a sufficiently bad adventuress of Cora Wilson; Miss Blanche Huber is a very hilarious cook, Bridget; Miss Marie Wilson plays the part of Jessie (the little mother) in a most natural way, and is every inch an actress. A great feature of the production are the songs and dances introduced by the excellent band of juvenile artists. Miss Lily Wohlmann gives "Yankee Doodle" in excellent style, with chorus; Miss Gladys Kelly is encored several times for a clever Scotch reel; the Sisters Wohlmann score in "The Pride of the Prairie"; Miss Sarah Rich does "Lena Schmidt" with great gusto; Miss Marie Wilson sings "'Way down in Colon Town"; Master Tom Grice, champion juvenile Lancashire clog dancer, is in great form; Miss Margot Domican and Miss Dorothy Pain sing very sweetly.

BRIXTON THEATRE.
On Monday, April 4, the Musical Play entitled
"THE CINGALEE."

A warm welcome is accorded Mr. Haldane Crichton's company in the above popular musical play, which is presented with much completeness and with a good chorus and augmented orchestra. Mr. Jack Crichton is, luckily, again at hand as the Baboo lawyer, Chambhuddy Ram, and scored heavily. His comicalities, his versatility, and high spirits proved infectious. Mr. Arthur Cartwright is excellent as the Hon. Harry Vereker; his voice is nicely modulated, and his songs gave much pleasure. Miss Florence Watson is delightfully fresh as the Cingalee girl, Nanoya. The tuneful songs were rendered charmingly, and numerous encores were the result. Mr. Douglas Munro is capital as the noble Boobhamba; Mr. Scott Cullen is diverting as Bobby; Mr. F. W. Ford makes excellent use of his opportunities as the irrascible and peppery Sir Peter; Mr. Ernest Trichler is good as the Captain of the Guard; and Messrs. D. Richards, R. Somerville, Fred Creasey, and Stanley Liston do well as the pupils on Vereker's plantation. Miss Ida Ernest is very vivacious, bright, and gay as Peggy Sabine; Miss Pauline Hague admirably realises the part of Lady Patricia Vane, and was seen to the best advantage; a dainty Angy (Sir Peter's daughter) was found in Miss Sadie Thompson; and charming representatives of the plantation tea girls were found in the Misses Winnie Murray, Mercy June, Violet Cowen, and Edie Burton. Unqualified praise must be awarded Miss Sadie Thompson for her exquisite dancing. Mr. Rowland Wood conducted with skill the large orchestra, and the performance is well deserving of the support accorded it.

THE BRITANNIA.
On Monday, April 4, the Drama entitled
"NELL GWYNNE."

Owing to the success attending his production last week, Mr. John F. Preston retains management of the Britannia, and is presenting the drama entitled Nell Gwynne. Considering that only some three days were allowed for rehearsal, the performance goes remarkably smoothly. Miss Mabelle F. Barlow, now playing Nell Gwynne for the first time, is to be highly complimented upon her performance. Her acting as the orange girl and Court favourite is both natural and vivacious. So popular is Mr. Preston that his first appearance on the stage is the signal for enthusiastic applause. As Bellicote Betterton he gives a fine study of an actor acting the part of an actor, and is at his very best. Mr. Ernest Fane gives an excellent representation of Charles II.; and Mr. W. Howard Barlow is responsible for some powerful acting as Rochester. Mr. Arthur Hartley cleverly portrays Sir Edmund Godfrey; Mr. William Rea acts well as Roland Graeme; and Mr. Horace Gustins capably enacts the part of the Duke of York. Mr. Fred Lawrence is admirably suited in the rôle of Andrew Doublechick, manager of the King's Playhouse, and Mr. Frank Ernestone capitally represents Matthew Gale, an innkeeper. Mr. Alfred Wade does well as the French Ambassador; Miss Ethel Rainforth is a charming Abigail; and Miss Mabel Ford acts with distinction and displays the necessary abandon as the Duchess of Portsmouth. The mounting of the play is all that could be desired. The drama is followed by a farcical act entitled My New Partner, played by two old Hoxton favourites, viz., Mr. Fred Lawrence and Miss Marie Brian. The piece is very well received, Miss Marie Brian coming in for a very cordial reception.

THE SHAKESPEARE.
On Monday, April 4, the Drama entitled
"THE EYES OF THE WORLD."

A strong attraction has been provided here this week by the presentation of Mr. Charles Darrell's remarkable play The Eyes of the World, a domestic drama of modern French society. The production is that of Miss Ethel Van Praagh and Mr. J. Edward Whitty, supported by a powerful company, who do full justice to the play.

On the night of our visit the house was packed with an appreciative audience, who displayed considerable enthusiasm throughout, and their hearty applause was a striking tribute to the excellence of the performance. Chief honours are due to Miss Ethel Van Praagh, whose powerful delineation of Helene de L'Orme was the leading feature of the piece. The rôle is an arduous one, but Miss Praagh was equal to all demands, and the varying emotions of the wronged wife were portrayed with an intensity that carried conviction. The faithless Mme. Esme de Carnac was successfully impersonated by Miss Flora Hastings, whose stylish appearance and refined manner was well in keeping with the character; Miss Elsie Capell was an ingenuous Avice, and acted with much charm and grace; Miss Nellie Garside fitted the part of the vivacious Mlle. Susanne Pomfleure to perfection, and her clever and spirited acting kept the house in continual laughter. Mr. J. Edward Whitty extracted every ounce of humour from the character of M. Achille Fanfarade, and scored a decided hit; Mr. Charles O'Connor gave a finished interpretation of the unfaithful husband, M. Hector de L'Orme; and Mr. Fred Bentley as the unsuspecting Gaston de Carnac ample fulfilled the requirements of the rôle. Mr. A. Wilson Wynne contributed valuable assistance by his efficient delineation of Octave de Carnac; Mr. R. Wilton Bedford gave a sound rendering of Paul Roqueville; and Mr. Harold Forde was a capable exponent of the servant Brigard.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.
On Monday, April 4, the Drama, entitled
"THE SINNER."

Mr. Wilson Benge, supported by a powerful company, is presenting for the current week the drama, The Sinner, written by that well-known author of similar plays, Mr. Watson Mill, who, in the present instance, has supplied a well-knit and stirring piece of work which proves highly attractive and much to the liking of patrons of this house. The drama is well mounted and charmingly dressed. Mr. Wilson Benge, in the rôle of Monk Stretton, submits a strong characterisation of this prominent part, and is equally good as either the poor fisherman or as the man in high-class society, acting in a manly and convincing style which gains for him hearty expressions of approval. The villain, Edgar Thornhill, is capitally enacted by Mr. Charles Burdon, who puts plenty of "go" into his portrayal, and is accorded a flattering reception—in hisses. Mr. Alec Finlayson offers a good portrait of Paul Levaine, the diamond thief, and puts humour into the part. Mr. Frank Radcliffe submits a clever and powerful delineation of Bill Stanton, an old fisherman, and gains considerable success. Mr. Sydney P. Clewlow is seen to advantage as Jim Stephens. Chris. Floppington is amusingly sustained by Mr. Jay Kay, who obtains many a hearty laugh. Lord Ewen is suitably sustained by Mr. Ulick Burke; and the same may be said of Mr. Harold Playfair as Jack Ewen. Miss Mona Gray deserves praise for her rendering of Meg Stanton; Vera Ewen is ably undertaken by Miss Geraldine Verden; Honor Thornhill is sympathetically portrayed by Miss Jean Wigney; Miss Dora Olga submits a clever representation of little Ned; and Nora Stretton is capably presented by Miss Sadie Smith.

ARTILLERY THEATRE, WOOLWICH.
On Monday, April 4, the Drama entitled
"THE WORLD, THE FLESH, AND THE DEVIL."

Human nature, from lofty sentiments and high moral tone down to the deepest depths of bribery, corruption, and villainy is vividly depicted in the drama The World, the Flesh, and the Devil, from the pen of Mr. Lawrence Cowen, whose well-selected company at this house offers a very able interpretation. The numerous sensational episodes which abound in the play carry the "gods" to a high pitch of excitement, and the latter are equally as hearty in their expressions of approval of all brave and noble acts as they are in showing their detestation of crime and murder. The drama is well mounted, the set representing the Old Water Mill being noteworthy. Mr. Henry Doughty judiciously handles the character of Nicholas Brophy, and makes his points "telling," and the scheming nature of the man is skilfully indicated. Mr. John Sargent deserves commendation for a powerful rendering of the old tool and toper, Rupert Dyke, a part in which he displays considerable talent. Robert Hall has a worthy representative in Mr. E. Eardley-Howard; Sir James Hall, Bart., J.P., has a clever exponent in Mr. Frederic Jacques; Mr. Lawrence Maitland does well as managing-clerk to Lucifer and Co.; and Mr. Will Harman as Mr. Johnson, the butler, supplies the comedy relief, being ably assisted in this respect by Miss Constance Coopman as the amorous widow. Miss Violet Hammersley contributes a sympathetic delineation of Beatrice Cuthbert in a dainty manner; in the rôle of Gertrude Grant Miss Dora Hammersley offers a clever study; Mr. George H. Lester makes a capital Jonathan Wylde, K.C.; and Miss Maggie Lindsay is suitably placed as Caroline Stanger.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.
On Monday, April 4, the Comedy entitled
BREWSTER'S MILLIONS."

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company in Brewster's Millions are this week appearing at the Alexandra Theatre, and an excellent representation it is they give of this amusing and entertaining play. Mr. Percy Hutchison is the Brewster, and he may be congratulated on the success with which he carries this practically one-part piece to a successful issue, and on his never-flagging efforts to keep the play running merrily along from the rise to the fall of the curtain. Praise is also due to Miss Cicely Stuckey, who appears as Peggy, for her charmingly natural playing of Brewster's future wife. Mr. A. P. Kaye gives a clever and characteristic sketch of Monsieur Bargle; as Mrs. Dan de Mille Miss Lillas Earle proves equal to all the part demands; and friends of Brewster are creditably and carefully played by Messrs. Gordon Ash, Henry Hampson, Aubrey Mather, and H. Douglas Greet. Of the opportunities at their command the most is made by Misses Pauline Straus, Dorothy Whitaker, May Seton, and Phyllis Stuckey. The mounting of the play leaves nothing to be desired, the scene representing the steam yacht Flitter being a particularly well-managed illusion. The longer piece is preceded by Mr. Ellie Norwood's play in one act Chalk and Cheese, in which Mr. A. P. Kaye and Misses Pauline Straus and May Seton appear.

FULHAM THEATRE.
On Monday, April 4, the Musical Comedy entitled
"THE DAIRYMAIDS."

Mr. R. Macdonald's company is supplying a bright and lively evening's entertainment. The Dairymaids is admirably staged, and the company contains some capital artists, Miss Mabel Mudrow is a stately Lady Brudenell; Mr. William Spray is a mercurial Sam Brudenell. His energy and spirits never flag, and his work never lacks humour. As Joe Mivens Mr. Edwin Dodds is another great success, and his quaint antics keep the house in roars of laughter. He is as agile as any acrobat, and dances with wonderful skill. Miss Edie Martin is also eminently entertaining as Eliza, and her songs and dances get well-deserved applause. Mr. Herbert Lugg is satisfactory as Lieutenant Meredith, and Mr. Bernard Vaughan, with his hearty, jovial manner, is excellent as Dr. O'Bryne. Miss Roselene Lester does very well in the character part of the schoolmistress, Miss Pyechase; Miss Vivien Carter plays very prettily as Winifred, and sings in admirable style, with a dainty grace that is much admired; Miss Dorothy Grasdorf also proves a charming representative of Peggy, and her songs go very well. There is a most attractive chorus of milkmaids and Sandow girls, and the "Little Strangers," Misses E. Clare, Beatrice Kling, and Norah Lennox, deserve warm praise. Altogether the production is well put on, and played as it is with splendid vavacity deserves success.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.
On Monday, April 4, the Drama, by Chas. E. Clarke,
"A BROKEN HEART."

The return visit of Mr. Harry Foxwell's company in A Broken Heart is proving a potent attraction this week, and the piece is meeting with all the success it achieved when here before. There is little wonder at this, for the well-written, if rather sad, story has the rare advantage of gaining in interest as the play proceeds. The scenic effects are on a high standard of excellence, and the cast has been selected with much judgment. Mr. Harry Cullenford as John Barnard possesses the necessary physical attributes for the part, and he acts with vigour and variety. Miss Sheila Walsh plays with much power, sympathy, and charm as Mary Barnard; Miss Mamie Thorpe is a sincere and attractive Grace Fanshaw; Miss Louise Millward acts very naturally as Mrs. Barnard; and Miss Nancy Mitchell is a bright and interesting Sally Traynor. Mr. A. C. Holmes submits a clever exposition of gentlemanly blackguardism as the sleek and callous Stephen Rayiton, whose accomplice, Gash Gills, is strongly presented by Mr. Charles Vivian, whose depiction of the miscreant when crippled is a striking piece of character acting. Mr. Newton Pearce is decidedly quaint and amusing as Tony Tibbetts; Mr. Henry Carlisle is duly impressive as the Rev. W. Staunton; and Mr. George Addison is quaintly grotesque as Shrimp. Miss Daisy Rochefort looks and acts the part of the child May particularly well, and minor parts are all in quite capable hands.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.
On Monday, April 4, the Musical Play, entitled
"DEAR LITTLE DENMARK."

Mr. Frank Curzon's company, in Dear Little Denmark, which is paying a first visit to Stratford, is being liberally patronised at the Borough Theatre this week. The piece is very handsomely mounted and dressed, and a well-balanced cast has been engaged. As Christine Miss Netta Lynde acts and sings with charm and animation; and Miss Joan Penrose is a vivacious and spirited Ophelia. Mr. Arthur Staples is an energetic and entertaining Hans Hansen; and Mr. Conway Dixon is a manly and pleasing Conrad Peterson, rendering the numbers allotted to him in fine style. Mr. Henry Kitts is exceedingly droll as Duke Ernst von Rasmussen; Mr. Tom Redmond submits an excellent performance as Simon Jorgensen; and Mr. Ben Clark is capital as Jonas Jensen. Miss Claire Lynch plays 'Xandra very appropriately; and Adeline has a prepossessing representative in Miss Gladys Beech. Other parts all receive careful treatment, and a special word of praise must be bestowed upon the exceptionally good chorus. The orchestra is this week augmented and under the direction of Mr. J. A Robertson.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.
On Monday, April 4, the Comedy, in Four Acts, by Oscar Wilde, entitled
"THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING EARNEST."

There have been good houses at the Kingston playhouse this week to witness this, one of the cleverest of the works of Oscar Wilde. The cast includes Mrs. Peter Davey, wife of the managing-director of the theatre, who appears in the part of Lady Bracknell, and receives a most favourable reception. A pretty study is that of Miss Olivia Glynne as Gwendoline Fairfax, whose pendantic mannerisms are refreshingly portrayed. A creditable appearance is also made by Miss Marjorie Waterlow as Cecily Cardew and by Miss Dorothy Vernon as Miss Prism. The lion's share of the comedy, however, is sustained by Mr. Douglas Gordon, who plays John Worthing, J.P., and by Mr. Langborn Burton, who impersonates Algernon Moncrieff, both artists acquitting themselves with great credit. Mr. Lytton Grey as the Rev. Canon Chasuble, D.D., Mr. W. Lazard as Merriman, and Mr. Arthur Stanley as Lane fill up the remaining parts. The production is capitally stage-managed by Mr. Gordon. It is followed by the Chantecler skit, Cock-a-doodle-doo, produced at the theatre a few weeks ago, the parts being filled by Mr. W. Lazard and the Misses M. Sadie, Dorothy Vernon, and Kathleen Cogan.

"THE BOOKWORMS."

Play, in One Act, by Catherine Evelyn, Produced at the West London Theatre on Friday Afternoon, April 1.

Captain Chelifer .....Mr. Arthur Bowyer.
Pamela .....Miss Clarice Laurence
Elzevir Typer .....Mr. A. L. Burke

This clever sketch was produced at a matinée at the West London Theatre, which was under the able direction of Mr. Clive Currie. Its object is to satirise the rage for books, not as a means of information, but as curiosities. Captain Chelifer, an old sailor, has on board his ship a library of valuable rarities in the book line, and his niece, Pamela, and her lover, Elzevir Typer, are also victims of the same craze. Pamela authorises Elzevir to pay £100 for an old missal, and, in order to prevent her uncle bidding against her, she puts back the clock, so that he may be too late for the sale. The captain, however, has noticed the trick, and returns home with a beautifully-bound old volume, which he gives to Pamela. Mr. Arthur Bowyer was satisfactory as Captain Chelifer; and Pamela and Elzevir Typer were fairly embodied by Miss Clarice Laurence and Mr. A. L. Burke. The piece was produced by Mr. Arthur Bowyer.

Next followed a scene from Two Orphans, in which Miss Evelyn Vanderzee and Mr. Wilfred Fletcher appeared to great advantage as the blind Louise and Pierre, the cripple, respectively. Mr. Montague Mazeran (admirably made up) presented a life-like picture of the bully Jacques.

The wooing scene from Henry V. came as a bright relief after so sombre a scene; and Miss Madeleine Lesley charmed her audience with a delightful rendering of the French Princess, supported by Mr. Osborn Adair (a manly Henry V.) and Miss Letty Paxton (a rather youthful Alice).

Next came a song from Miss Irene Delisse and a recitation by Miss Mary Forbes (of the Lyceum), both ladies being enthusiastically encored. Scenes from The Octoroon and the well-known one-act play In the Eyes of the World completed the programme. In the latter play Messrs. Clive Currie and Cecil A. Collins caused great merriment in the cleverly-written "tit-for-tat" scene at the commencement. Miss Adah Dick was a refined and pleasing Mabel, and Mr. Adair played Carlton with dignity and repose.

"ALMOST HIS BRIDE."

A Thrilling Romance of a Charmed Necklet, Presented for the first time in London at the Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith, on Monday, April 4.

The Earl of Ullswater ..Mr. David McFarlane
Squire Rowland .....Mr. Percy Warlow
Philip Rowland .....Mr. Arthur F. Dudley
Jasper Thorne .....Mr. R. F. Stacey
Simon Simson .....Mr. Stephen Pritt
Clergyman .....Mr. Barton White
Detective-Inspector .....Mr. Harry Houston
Policeman .....Mr. George Cross
Emma Baxter .....Miss Nellie Hook
Myra Thorne .....Miss Lily Prescott
Ruth Gilchrist .....Miss Adela Lidden
Mona Gilchrist .....Miss Louie Peebles

Mr. Stephen Pritt has brought an exceptionally good répertoire company to Mr. Wentworth Croke's cosy Hammersmith house this week, and the result has been the best of business. A Woman's Passion has been given on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, His Wife No Longer on Friday; but pride of place was, of course, taken by Mr. Pritt's best item, Almost His Bride. This drama was first produced, it may be recalled, on Sept. 13 last at the Theatre Royal, Preston, where it scored an immediate success. Several alterations since then have been made in the cast.

The plot of Almost His Bride is a remarkably good one. Squire Rowland, it seems, is the owner of a necklet valued at £100,000. He has been induced to drink not wisely but too well by a pair of schemers, Jasper and Myra Thorne. The latter is in reality Thorne's wife, but poses as his sister. She wheedles the old squire into showing her the hiding-place of the necklet. After their departure Philip Rowland, the squire's son, returns and quarrels with his father. The old squire orders him to leave the house, which his son does, remarking that he must abide by the consequences, a remark that is overheard by Simon Simson, the squire's butler. Later the squire discovers the Thornes in the act of abstracting the necklet from its hiding-place. Jasper Thorne then murders the old man with a curious old dagger. Ruth Gilchrist, having contracted a marriage with a commoner, has been disowned by her father, the Earl of Ullswater, who has, however, adopted her daughter Mona, and is not aware that her son died in infancy. Philip Rowland, who has been on trial for his life for the murder of his father, has been pronounced "Not guilty," and is persuaded by Ruth Gilchrist to personate her dead son, whom the Earl is desirous of adopting as his heir. The Thornes having secured the necklet, Jasper assumes the name of Captain the Hon. Trevor Tremayne, and in this rôle has become the favoured suitor to the Earl of Ullswater's adopted daughter. They advertise for a male servant (a "foreigner preferred") to travel with them; and the ingenious Simon Simeon, who strongly suspects them of the murder of his old master, decides to apply for the situation, and disguises himself as a negro. Tremayne and Myra recognise Philip, and the wily captain, becoming jealous of him, bullies Mona and abuses her supposed brother, and declares that he is not her brother, but the son and murderer of old Squire Rowland. Upon hearing this Mona recognises that the love she has felt for Philip was not that of a sister, and flatly refuses to marry Tremayne. Nevertheless, as the Earl wills it, the wedding day arrives; but a surprise is in store for all, for at the church door Philip denounces the Tremaynes as impostors. He, of course, has to declare that he himself is not the son of Ruth Gilchrist, and as he does so, Ruth Gilchrist appears, and forbids the wedding. A week later from the Grange Farm Tremayne and his wife carry Mona off. Detectives at the instance of Simon have succeeded in identifying the Thornes as persons badly "wanted." They are arrested, the Earl arrives, and is reconciled to his daughter, Simon, the butler-negro-detective, rescues Mona and restores the necklet to Philip, and so all ends happily for everybody except the Thornes.

Mr. Stephen Pritt as the butler-negro-detective and Miss Nellie Hook as Emma Baxter work extremely well together, and are responsible between them for all the fun. The part of poor Squire Rowland is cleverly taken by Mr. Percy Warlow. Although only seen in the first act, his work is so good that the jovial, kindly face of the old squire haunts one right through the three other acts that follow. Jasper Thorne and Myra Thorne, "a real bad lot," were very fine characters in the keeping of Mr. R. F. Stacey and Miss Lily Prescott—good actors both. Mr. Arthur F. Dudley was cast for the part of the hero, Philip Rowland. He has a fine delivery, looks well, dresses well, and was at all times very popular with the audience. The heroine, Mona Gilchrist, had a very pretty, clever, and lovable representative in Miss Louie Peebles, and Miss Adela Lidden, playing the part of Ruth Gilchrist, the mother, is a good sound actress, whose work would be a pillar of strength to any play.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.
On Monday, April 4, the Musical Play, entitled
"THE GIRL FROM KAY'S."

Mr. Neville Claude's large company, with the original scenery from the Apollo Theatre, has been presenting this well-known and very amusing play with a considerable measure of success here this week. Miss Florrie Millington as Winnie Harborough, "the girl from Kay's," did full justice to her part, and her clever dancing and good singing was abundantly recognised. The serious heroine, Norah Chalmers, was prettily played by Miss Blanche Courtenay, her songs being most successful, many being re-demanded. Ellen, the lively serving-maid, was a very sprightly impersonation in the hands of Miss Irene Vere, who introduced some smart and characteristic coon songs and dances in each act, and did much to secure the success of the production. Miss Mary Wiltshire as Mrs. Chalmers, the mother of the bride, was sympathetic and effective, and in the Pierrot trio she sang with great success. Mr. John A. Lathan as Harry Gordon, the bridegroom, had a powerful and well-trained voice, and is a smart and efficient comedian. The Hon. Percy Fitzthistle was made as droll as could be desired by Mr. C. Adrian Kingston, both in make-up and characterisation; and Mr. Richard Andean as the suspicious retired judge, Theodore Quench, K.C., was very good, and made quite a part of his impersonation. Mr. Charles Leverton as Mr. Chalmers, the bride's father, was fully equal to the requirements of the character; and Mr. Barron H. Heron caused roars of genuine laughter by his quaint humours as Joseph, the hall porter. Master Walter H. Pink as Pepper, a page in the same hotel, showed great ability and much promise. Mr. Frank Ashley was good as Archie Pembridge; Mr. Charles Power gave an efficient rendering of Frank, a Savoy waiter; as Max Hoggenheimer Mr. Henry Admes had evidently made a careful study of the mannerisms and vulgarisms of the nouveau riche, and there was not a dull moment when he was on the stage. A large and efficient chorus of ladies and gentlemen as wedding guests, girls from Kay's, visitors, &c., made a bright and well-dressed backing to the principal tableaux, and the original scenery was of an unusually solid description for a travelling company.

In the theatre of the Mechanics' Institute, Bradford, on Tuesday, Mr. Harry McGee, the Edward Compton and George Alexander prize medallist, submitted to a large audience scenes and recitals from Richelieu and Henry V., eliciting warm and well-merited marks of approbation for his scholarly and dramatic interpretations. Mr. McGee was well supported, and his versatility was illustrated by impersonations of Conn, the Shaughraun, and Drown, the Spitalfields weaver.

"THE RIVER OF LIGHT."

A New Play, in One Act, by Neil Morris, Produced at the King's Hall, Covent Garden, on Wednesday, April 6.

Captain Devereux .....MR. LIONEL CORNISH
Henry Lorton .....MR. B. A. EVERITT
Philip Darrell .....MR. H. J. BOWLEY
Jamieson .....MR. CHARLES WOOD
Police-Sergeant Vane..MR. L. H. STANLEY-ADAMS
Marton Clare .....MISS ADRIENESSE CLARKE
Mona Devereux.....MRS. R. BRUCE-SMITH

This new one-act play was produced at a special performance given by the Twelfth Night Players in aid of the Great Northern Central Hospital, Holloway-road. The scene is the drawing-room in Devereaux House, Eaton-terrace, S.W., and the time past midnight. Here are found, in close confab over their ill-gotten gains, Captain Devereux, his wife, Mona, and their associates in crime, Henry Lorton and Philip Darrell. These four form a gang of thieves who, being in a position to mix in fashionable society, contrive to reap a rich harvest in the shape of valuable jewels stolen from the wealthy people they associate with. For five years the gang have succeeded in evading the police. This is principally due to the fact that they have strict rules, and one of these is never to keep in their possession any of the stolen goods longer than twelve hours. In the course of conversation mention is made of Marton Clare. It is the only person they fear—a woman who bears the reputation of being one of the cleverest female detectives in the world. The gang have received news that this woman's arrival from America is hourly expected. More particularly is Mona Devereux in fear of the lady detective, and producing a sparkling diamond necklace (an old family heirloom known as "The River of Light"), she admits that some weeks have passed since she stole it, her excuse for retaining it in her possession being that she did not like the idea of parting with such a beautiful jewel. Her action is strongly condemned by her husband, the usual practice of the gang having thus been so foolishly departed from. Disguised as quite a young girl, Marton Clare gains admission to the house, and the room, on the pretence that she is in search of her father. She further claims to be a Miss Darrell, and a cousin of Philip Darrell. The unwelcome visitor pretends to fall asleep, and Devereux and his associates are at a loss how to get rid of her. They arouse her, and as she is making preparations to depart, the police, as arranged with Marton Clare, break into the place, the lady detective defends herself from the thieves with a loaded revolver, and hands the police sergeant the stolen necklace, which she has discovered in the room.

The new play, which met with a good reception, was produced by Mr. Ernest Young. Mrs. R. Bruce-Smith, in the character of Mona Devereux, made excellent use of her opportunities. The author, Miss Adrieneese Clarke, who has already written several one-act plays under the nom-de-plume of Neil Morris, displayed much ability as an actress in the part of Marton Clare, the lady detective. Mr. Lionel Cornish gave a forcible rendering of the leader of the gang, Captain Devereux; Mr. B. A. Everitt as Henry Lorton and Mr. H. J. Bowley as Philip Darrell proved quite satisfactory; Mr. Chas. Wood as the butler, Jamieson, and Mr. L. H. Stanley-Adams as P. S. Vane completing the cast.

An excellent representation of the light comedy, From Saturday to Monday, by Fredk. Fenn and Richard Pryce, followed the first piece. It was produced by Mr. Sydney Wallace.

"THE TOUCH OF THE CHILD."

A Play in One Act, Adapted by Leon M. Lion from a story by Tom Gallon, Produced for the First Time at the Grand Theatre, Blackpool, on Monday, April 4.

Colonel James Fullard ..MR. WILLIAM MOLLISON
Captain Godfrey Steen, V.C. ..MR. HENRY DEAS
Mrs. Fullard .....MISS HELEN OLIVER
Winnie .....MISS JEANNIE FITZGERALD

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The story is quite out of the ordinary, and deals with an incident which is calculated to destroy the friendship of two men. The scene is the house of Colonel Fullard, D.S.O. He and Captain Godfrey Steen have been close friends for eleven years. Previous to their meeting Captain Steen had been away in Mexico for a holiday, and whilst there had met Colonel Fullard's young brother, without being aware of his identity. A quarrel took place between the two, and a duel was arranged, much against Captain Steen's wish. Shots were exchanged, and Steen fired into the air, but was wounded by his opponent, who insisted on a second encounter, in which Steen fired blindly and killed his adversary. After many years Fullard relates the incident to Steen, adding that he vowed over his brother's grave to find out his murderer, and force another duel on him. Steen eventually confesses it was he who killed young Fullard, and a very strong scene takes place, in which Colonel Fullard insists on Steen fighting. Steen refuses, and whilst they are discussing, Fullard's child is heard calling to her father from outside. As Steen refuses to fight Fullard says the child shall decide, and that when she enters the room the man she touches first shall kill himself within the hour. Steen, who, by the way, has been the child's greatest friend, protests, and says that she will be bound to touch her father first; but Fullard explains that she is just as likely to touch him (Steen) as she is extremely fond of him. Eventually this course is agreed on and they sit side by side in silence whilst the child asks all sorts of questions, and eventually suggests they are playing a game, and implores them to tell her what it is. Just at this moment she touches both of them simultaneously. There is a pause, and the two men clasp each other's hands as the curtain falls. Mr. Molison presented a striking picture of Colonel Fullard, and played with great vigour and intensity, whilst Mr. Henry Deas exactly fitted the part of Captain Steen, and he gave a resolute and powerful impersonation. Miss Jeannie Fitzgerald was good as Winnie.

MISS ALEXANDRA CARLISLE indicates the fashions of the season in the Paquin frocks worn in Alias Jimmy Valentine, the new production at the Comedy Theatre. One of Miss Carlisle's toilettes is of green charmeuse of the hue of absinthe, and with a cape to match. The tunic falls in straight lines, and finishes in a broad hem, under which is shown the flat pleats of the skirt. The blouse, in the same shade of chiffon, is made with wide tucks, and has a turn-down collar of white lace, the ceinture is of gold tissue, and the gold is repeated in the cape in the form of ornaments. The yoke is of Breton embroidery, and there is a large square collar of black velvet with tiny buttons to match on the front and on the revers which form the sleeves. Long, drooping ostrich feathers in green and black adorn the becoming picture hat.

A delicate shade of champagne distinguishes a costume of cloth, with motifs of silk braid embroidery in the same tone, and a novel belt of soft white kid and black patent kid. The sleeves are of three-quarter length, and the jacket collar is embroidered chandron linen. Beneath it is seen the finely tucked blouse with the turn-down pleated collar. The hat of chaudron tagal straw is trimmed with a heron of the same colour, and has an upturned brim. A charming frock of vieux rose tussore with rose-hued silk braids and cords and oxidised steel buttons to fasten it, has a collar and revers of old rose satin. The skirt is quite plain, and of a beautiful cut, with flat folds at the back.

"I WANT TO BE LOVED."

Drama, by Charles Darrell, Produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Grimsby, on Wednesday, March 30.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

During their visit to Grimsby last week Miss Ethel Van Praagh and Mr. J. Edward Whitty produced a new drama, I Want to be Loved, at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, where, fifteen months ago, they produced the successful drama The Eyes of the World. The new drama is by the same author, Mr. Charles Darrell, but follows more upon melodramatic lines than his earlier play.

The story is based upon the kidnapping, during childhood, of the daughter of Lady Constantine. The child is brought up in a rough neighbourhood in London, and at the commencement of the play is found acting as a street flower-seller. However, inquiries set upon foot by Lady Constantine succeed in identifying the girl, who is known as 'Melia Burgess, as the long-lost daughter.

A relative of Lady Constantine, Capt. the Hon. Reginald Parkhurst, who had hoped to be the lady's heir, manages to bring a false accusation of theft against the girl, in the hope of disgracing her and turning her mother against her. 'Melia is sent to prison, but on her release her mother, who disbelieves the justice of the sentence, receives her.

Then follows much further plotting on the part of the Captain to bring about 'Melia's downfall, and he is aided by Annie Petrol, who is jealous of 'Melia. The efforts of these schemers naturally lead to much exceptional incident; but everything is righted in the end.

The first act is decidedly the strongest, and the rest of the play will require some revision to bring it into line with the opening portion.

At the production, which took place on Wednesday evening last week, Miss Nellie Garside played the part of 'Melia Burgess with much success, giving a spirited representation of the sharp-witted flower-girl, and afterwards realising the gentler side of the girl's nature. Mr. Charles O'Connor was sufficiently vindictive as Capt. Parkhurst; and Miss Elsie Capell painted the plebeian character of Annie Petrol with vividness. Mr. Alex. Wilson Wynne gave a striking impersonation of the young hooligan, Jim Mouler; Mr. Harold Forde acted well as James Sudbury; and Miss Flora Hastings as Lady Constantine and Mr. J Edward Whitty as Caleb Valentine also contributed good work.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

An excellent concert was given by the students of Trinity College of Music, at St. James's Hall, on Tuesday evening. The programme was well chosen, one of the pleasing features of the concert being the admirable singing of the choir, conducted by Dr. Henry T. Pringuer. The choir opened the concert with two part songs, "A Border Ballad" (Oliveria Prescott) and "Charm me asleep" (Henry Leslie), while their fine tone and expressive singing of Sir Edward Elgar's lovely part song, "The Snow," and "The spring is here" (F. Hegar) deserved much praise. All the vocal and instrumental students displayed intelligence, and in several instances undoubted talent. Miss Constance E. Martin gave Hubay's violin solo, "Hejre Kati," and although her tone was a little thin, the audience applauded Miss Martin's clever playing. Miss Alice E. Booth sang Siebel's air from Faust with good taste and expression, and an attractive rendering of Schütt's Trio in A Minor and Major for piano, violin, and 'cello, was given by the Misses Edith K. Bird, Kathleen Lawler, and Kathleen Thompson. Mr. Horace Witty was heard to advantage in Dr. F. H. Cowen's song, "For a dream's sake," and a spirited rendering of "Onaway, awake, beloved."

A very youthful pianist, Miss Doris Fell, was warmly greeted for her able playing of "La Campanella" (Liszt), and Miss Margaret Bradfield gave quite a brilliant performance of Papini's violin solo, "Saltarella." Miss Eveline Matthews sang with feeling and clear enunciation A. Goring Thomas's charming song, "A summer night," with a well-played 'cello obbligato by Mr. Leslie Betts; while Miss Florence Griffiths, an advanced student of the college, sang "A memory" (Goring Thomas) pleasingly, being particularly successful in "A birthday" (Dr. F. H. Cowen). Brahms' Rhapsodie in G Minor, pianoforte, was capitally played by Miss Edna Purdie, and two clever little boys, Masters Richard Johnson and Samuel Kutcher, were recalled several times to the platform after their performance of the first movement from Beethoven's Sonata in F Major, for pianoforte and violin. Mr. Joseph Myers sang "Il mio tesoro," from Don Giovanni, with a clear idea of the grace Mozart's music requires. After a violin solo of Weiniawski's, "Obertasse," by Miss Olga Corrigan, the concert concluded with the part-song, "The sweet spring" (Dr. F. E. Gladstone), and Sullivan's madrigal, "When Love and Beauty," by the choir. Mrs. J. R. Blazey accompanied the choir, and the violin accompaniments to the part song, "The snow" were played by Alice M. Lees, Dorothy Meallira, Hazel Giles, and Nellie Simpson; other accompanists were Mr. Herbert W. Dawson and Miss Eunice Lucas. There was a large audience.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Your correspondent, in noticing the performance of Charley's Aunt, at the Marlborough Theatre last week, suggests that I understudied Mr. W. S. Penley in the part of Lord Fancourt Babberley during the historic run of Charley's Aunt at the Globe Theatre. This, however, is not the case. In fact, I never understudied anyone in my life. I played Charley's Aunt originally in all the principal towns of Great Britain and Ireland for the first five years of the old lady's existence, giving 1460 consecutive performances of the character. It is a curious fact that this is the exact number of times the piece was played at the Globe Theatre. Some years later I again played "Babbs" at the first West End revival at the Comedy Theatre, under Mr. Brandon Thomas's management, and subsequently during the seasons at Terry's and the Aldwych Theatres.—Yours faithfully,

STANLEY COOKE.

"GARIBALDI."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I note that Mr. Hall Caine has written a play round the personality of Garibaldi. Will you kindly record that I have had in my possession since 1907 a play in four acts on exactly the same theme, by Arthur Shirley and Sutton Vane, which has been very favourably considered by a West End management for early production.—Yours faithfully,

WILLIAM HOLLES.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS ALICE INMAN.

"Donkeys' years ago," to use her own colloquialism, Miss Alice Inman made her first appearance at the age of six, playing a little fairy messenger in Sindbad the Sailor at the Prince's Theatre, Bradford. After that she played the child's part in Drink for a number of tours, and many other juvenile assumptions included the immortal Willie Carlyle. One night, during the Death scene, the little actress wanted to sneeze, and whispered words to that effect to Lady Isabel. "You mustn't," was the alarmed reply. "I tried not to," says Miss Inman, and gasped through the Death scene, then I relaxed, and just as Isabel said, 'Dead, and never called me mother,' I sneezed! Needless to say, the curtain came down amid roars of laughter. Poor Isabel, in her vexation, gave me a shaking, and I felt I deserved it. I crept to my room ashamed and sorry. The ladies sympathised with me, and so the trouble passed over."

At the age of fifteen Miss Inman joined a Shakespearean company, playing all the little Princes' and Pages' parts. Then she had a varied experience in small rôles, being particularly successful in a little character in The Esmonds of Virginia. Mr. Fred Latham, who was the manager, complimented her, and advised her to go in for character parts. Her ambition, however, was to play a heroine in a grey dress, and at length her hopes were realised. She was called upon at a few hours' notice to play Ruth Medway in The Union Jack, and got through so creditably that Mr. Elliston engaged her to play the part in the two following tours. For several years she played Hester, in Master and Man; Ruth, In the Ranks; Nance and Jess, Hoodman Blind; Tess, Phantoms; Margaret, For the King; Valentine, Proof; Marie, The Face at the Window; and also in several stock seasons, principally at Glasgow. A very favourite part was Effie Deans.

About six years ago Miss Inman left the stage and went in for a photographic studio with her sister. At the end of three years she returned to the profession, and drifted into comedy again. Her first real success in an eccentric part was as

MISS ALICE INMAN.

Araminta in Messrs. Stevens and Buchanan's Cinderella touring pantomime. She was re-engaged by Mr. Stanley Rogers to play the same character at the Grand Theatre, Fulham, in 1908. She met with considerable favour as Mrs. Blaney in The Hypocrites on tour during last autumn This year she repeated her success as Araminta in the pantomime Cinderella at the Elephant and Castle.

"THE Germans, as a nation, worship Shakespeare," says the Berlin correspondent of the Daily Chronicle. "They regard him as the greatest dramatic genius that ever lived, and his plays—principally Hamlet, Romeo and Juliet, The Taming of the Shrew, Macbeth, Julius Cæsar, and The Merchant of Venice—draw large audiences whenever presented.

"AT the Berlin Deutsches Theater, the stage-manager of which, Professor Max Reinhardt, is the well-known German authority on Shakespeare, hardly a week passes without at least one of the tragedies being staged, and sometimes the week's programme contains as many as two or three of Shakespeare's plays.

"AT the Neues Schauspielhaus the performances of Julius Cæsar are among the season's chief attractions, whilst in theatres of lesser magnitude Hamlet and Macbeth are frequently given, with excellent results, both from the financial and artistic point of view.

"IT is in the north of Germany—in Prussia and Hamburg—that the cult of Shakespeare is most highly developed. In Munich, however, the popular mind, both at the Hof and the Residenz Theatres, is frequently entertained with performances of Romeo and Juliet and Macbeth alternately with the national dramas of Schiller and Goethe. In Stuttgart, at the Schauspielhaus; in Leipzig, at the Stadttheater; in Dresden, where everything English is admired; in Frankfort and Cologne, his works are also produced with great success.

"THERE are people in Germany who really believe in the theory—absurd, it is true—that Shakespeare was originally a German called Schüttelspeer, and the average German looks on him as though he belonged to some Teutonic clan, which is a proof of the admiration in which he is held in the Fatherland.

"SHAKESPEARE has been 'Germanised' for the Germans. This is one of the greatest compliments to his genius. German children in the schools read his dramas—the translation by Von Schlegel is excellent in every way, and shows how intimate the translator was with the original. Shakespearean sayings, proverbs, and sentences have, moreover, entered into the ordinary conversation as though they had been really written by a German.

"THE average German knows more about Shakespeare's plays than the average Englishman. He has read them more frequently, seen them played more often, and is more fully acquainted with the beauties of their author's thoughts. Many Germans have learnt English with the sole object of being able to read Shakespeare in the original, and England's greatest national genius has, comparatively speaking, more admirers in the Fatherland than in the British Empire. The reason is that the German taste has been more carefully educated in Shakespearean lore than our own, and this accounts also for his general popularity beyond the Rhine. In Germany his name does not spell ruin; it attracts crowds."

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

SYDNEY, FEB. 22.—PALACE.—The Hugh J. Ward comedy company departed from its screaming farce menu on the 19th, and produced The Fencing Master. This new departure revives the old contention that boisterous humour and deep tragedy and pathos are twin sisters in the Thespian art gallery. I remember, in the early seventies, putting on Richard III. at the old Queen's, with a different actor as Richard in each act. The best of the lot was William Andrews, the Australian low comedian. He was in the last act, and his force was terrific. The fight with Richmond (Dick Roberts, father of Henry R. Roberts, "The Prince Chap") was the best I ever saw. In the present production Mr. Hugh J. Ward, the champion laugh maker, is a fund of tears and emotion, compelling both from his delighted audience. The exiled nobleman, under the pseudonym of Angelo Rossi, never degenerates into maudlin sentimentality or abject fear, but above his apprehensiveness there lingers ever true manliness and cheery aspect. Miss Grace Palotta gives Lillian a most loveable nature, the scenes with her lover, young Rossi, being made more natural by the unaffected style of Mr. Leonard Willey. The autocratic Mrs. Montgomery brings the accomplished Miss Beatrice Day into the cast, a distinct acquisition. The Hon. Stewart Grayville and his son Philip have Mr. Reginald Wykeham and Mr. Wm. B. Beattie to see that they are prominent figures in the picture, and the confidence is admirably placed. Miss Celia Ghiloni is Mrs. Dexter Brown, cleverly acted; and Miss Rose Musgrove creates a thousand laughs as her daughter Mary. The Sisters Cherry are made the most of by the Misses Ruby Baxter and Florence Redfern; and Mr. Charles Howard has a good show as Luigi, the restaurateur.

"THE LION AND THE MOUSE" is in its last week at the Royal, more's the pity, for it is far and away the best performance ever given by Mr. Julius Knight and the J. C. Williamson company. But Arms and the Man is announced for the 26th, with Waterloo as an addition to the bill.

"A WALTZ DREAM" is booking Her Majesty's full every night, and, despite the Lenten weeks, it will run until the theatre is wanted for the Easter pantomime.

OSCAR ASCHE and Lily Brayton return to the Criterion to play The Merchant of Venice on the 16th. Meanwhile, The Girl Behind the Counter is running.

MISS RUTH LINCOLN, Mr. Edwin Brett, and Mr. Tom Payne leave for London next month.

MISS AMY CASTLES, the Ballarat soprano, is announced to appear in the coming opera season of the Williamson régime, under the bâton of Signor Roberto Huzon.

THE Tivoli has a new scene, "Happy Holland," painted by Alfred Clint, whose brush is at Harry Rickards' disposal all through the year. Miss Dorothy Forbes, a Sydney soprano, long learning in Europe, has been secured, and she became at once a pronouncedly welcome singer. Mr. Post Mason, American baritone, is back, and all are glad to see and hear him; the Wille Brothers created a sensation in their wonderful acrobatic menage; Mlle. De Dio is concluding her season of dancing and triumph this week. Last night the mad musician Vasco; ladder experts, Alexandra and Bertie in "After the Ball"; the Two Vivians, and Kelly and Kingston were added to the bill.

"CASTE" is to be revived at the Empire Theatre, New York, on April 26. The cast will include Miss Marie Tempest, Miss Elsie Ferguson, Messrs. G. P. Huntley, Graham Browne, Edwin Arden, and Julian Royce. It is expected that Sir John Hare will appear also, a rumour to that effect having been widely circulated.

MISS VIRGINIA EARLE, who was a great favourite at Daly's Theatre, New York, in the days of The Circus Girl, The Geisha, and A Runaway Girl, was recently removed to an American sanatorium, suffering from a nervous breakdown. Miss Earle appeared in London in The Girl from Up There.

MR. FREDERICK KERR has been engaged by Miss Maxine Elliott to appear in America in The Inferior Sex, and next season he will play the part of the confirmed woman-hater, now enacted by Mr. Arthur Byron, upon whose yacht Miss Elliott, as the heroine, finds herself an unwelcome guest.

MR. THOMAS QUINLAN has engaged Mr. Ellison Van Hoose, the well-known American tenor, for the Beecham Opera Comique season at His Majesty's. Mr. Van Hoose, who has already created a favourable impression in London at promenade concerts, will make his appearance as Werther. He has sung with Madame Melba and Madame Sembrich on their tours, and has recently appeared at Berlin and Leipzig. He is engaged as principal tenor of the Mainz Opera, and is to sing as Guest in the Royal Opera Houses of Stockholm.

ALTHOUGH the drama is forsaking Fourteenth-street, New York, that busy thoroughfare still holds its own as a popular centre for lighter attractions. The passing of the Academy of Music has already been recorded. Tony Pastor's Theatre, next door, is now known as the Olympia, having been turned into a burlesque house. Directly opposite, a new playhouse is being built, to be called the City Theatre. Moving-picture houses, arcades, "fairs," shooting-galleries, and dime museums now line the street that years ago was quite as "classy," in a theatrical sense, as a certain part of Broadway is to-day.

THE flight of Chantecler was retarded by several delays in Vienna on Monday, when a company from Paris was announced to perform M. Rostand's remarkable play. Two truck-loads of scenery and costumes, coming from Roumania, where the company appeared last, were left behind by mistake at the Crajova Station. Thanks to diplomatic intervention, they were sent forward rapidly, but owing to the speed of the train an axle became heated, and this caused further delay. The performance, however, eventually took place without any great detriment to the effect.

"A MAKER OF MEN" has been added to the bill at the Garrick Theatre, New York, as a curtain-raiser to The Girl He Couldn't Leave Behind Him. There are only two characters in the playlet, Cuthbert Farringdon and his wife Edith, and these are acted by Mr. Ernest Lawford and Miss Hattie Williams. The double bill enables Miss Williams to display her versatility, for in the shorter piece she impersonates a loyal wife, and in the other play an amorous Spanish dancer, both characters being faithfully represented.

MR. FRED O. WHITNEY, who has successfully produced a lengthy series of light operas in America, now has in hand a new Viennese opera of the period of Maria Theresa, of Austria, and her gay Court, to be called Baron Trenk. Mr. Whitney's operas usually have a distinct national theme and atmosphere. A few years ago he produced Dolly Varden, with appropriate music by the well-known English composer, Mr. Julian Edwards. Mr. Whitney's current success, The Chocolate Soldier, has had a six months' run, and is still going strong at the Casino.

A CORRESPONDENT, who inquires for the humorous recitation by Jerome K. Jerome, entitled "The Telephone," will find it in "The Second Thoughts of an Idle Fellow," published by Messrs. Hurst and Blackett, Ltd., or in "The Golden Humorous Reciter," published by Seeley and Co., Ltd., 38, Great Russell-street.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, April 7.—Herr Stucken has written some books of merit, but this is his first attempt at a play, and as such it must be pronounced a success, however little to the taste of the present-day theatre-goers versical dramas may be. He has chosen for his theme the old legend of King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table. There is, I am told, a sequence of plays under the title of Der Gral, and Gawân is the first of the series. Herr Stucken calls it a "mystery, in five acts," and mystery is as good a name for the play as any other. Gawân is at supper with the King and the Knights on Christmas Eve, when the "Green Knight" appears, who is, of course, a mixture of Death and the Devil. Our hero slays him—that is to say, he cuts off the visitor's head in open combat; the Green Knight, however, nothing daunted, picks up his head, and allows it to tell Gawân that he is expected to come to the "green chapel" that night in a year's time, or be ever afterwards dubbed a dishonourable man. Why Gawân considers himself bound to obey this obscure command is not very clear, but he does so, and duly sets out on the quest. He comes on a cold winter's night to the castle of Baron de Hautdesert, who gives him shelter and the best that his house can offer. The Baron's wife, the beautiful Marie, makes decided love to the handsome guest—when her lord has retired, of course—but Gawân preserves his and her honour, and starts next morning—a sinless Knight—on his quest. After a while he hops upon the green chapel. It is in a lonely churchyard, where a closed coffin awaits him. At the midnight hour the coffin opens, and the Green Knight springs out to slay him. Then appears the Madonna, whose features are the same as those of Marie, and declares Gawân's sojourn in the castle of Hautdesert was a test of his integrity, which he stood in an exemplary manner. And—strangest conundrum of all—the Green Knight is suddenly Hautdesert himself, and the Madonna gives Gawân the "Cup," for, being pure, he is worthy of the Grail. Full of phantastic mysteries, the piece presents a certain fascination, and mounting and acting were all that could be desired. Author and artists were called repeatedly before the curtain at the close in response to the genuine and general applause.

"DAS STRUMPFBAND" is the title of the latest novelty at the Volks-Oper. It is a three-act operetta by A. Ferry, text by G. Fischer-Ohmann. Unfortunately there is nothing good to be said for either. The composer is little more than an amateur, and not a very talented one, while the book is very poor and unusually trivial. The cast was not so good as it usually is, so that altogether the evening was not an unmixed treat. Great pains had been expended upon the mounting, which was extremely pretty and effective.

HERR JOSEPH KAINZ, the incomparable German tragedian, came for a lamentably brief season to the Royal Schauspielhaus last week. In spite of all rumours to the contrary, it hardly seems probable that he is to exchange the Vienna Burg Theatre for our Imperial Theatre—at any rate at present. Herr Kainz found his principal opportunity once again in Julius Cæsar. His Mark Antony is too well known to need description. He played it on Thursday in his customary masterly manner, and it was long before the audience finished applauding The Emperor and Empress were present, and complimented the great actor at the close of the third act.

HERRMANN HEIJERMANN'S powerful drama Die Hoffnung auf Segen, which was originally produced at the Deutsches a number of years ago, has just reappeared at the Luisen Theatre. The interpretation was remarkably good, and the profound impression created at the first production was not lacking this time either. The author, by the way, although a Dutchman, writes German like a German, and is a resident of Berlin.

DR. STRAUSS'S Elektra will be performed at the German Theatre at Prague next month. The cast will be the original one from the Royal Opera in Dresden. In view of the animosity frequently shown to German works by the Bohemians, the reception of the now world-famous opera is awaited with not a little interest.

MLLE. YVONNE DE TREVILLE, the charming Anglo-Parisian artist, has just finished a highly-successful tour. She has sung leading soprano at the Imperial Opera House at Vienna and the Court Operas at Budapest and Dresden. Mlle. de Tréville is now in Brussels, but is expected on an operatic tour through Germany shortly. Remembering her brilliant success some years ago at the Berlin Opera, her many admirers will certainly give Mlle. de Tréville a hearty welcome.

M. MAETERLINCK has addressed a letter of warm thanks to the management of the Leipzig Stadt Theatre for having so successfully performed his drama Maria Magdalena, which was forbidden by the Berlin censorship.

"LIANE."

One-Act Dramatic Playlet, by Walter Macnamara, Produced at the Theatre Royal, Aldershot, on Monday, March 28.

Frank Rowland .....MR. HARDY JACKSON
Reggie Peterson .....MR. CHARLES KAY
Charles Hawthorne ..MR. CHARLES D. WRIGHT
Tom .....MR. JULIAN GARDEN
Elsie Wood .....MISS MAY HOLLOM
Liane D'Aragon .....MME. ALICE FAVIER

Liane is cleverly written and somewhat out of the ordinary run, being musical comedy ending in tragedy. Frank Rowland, who has been studying in Paris, falls desperately in love with the beautiful Liane, a star of the Variéties. Frank is engaged to Elsie Wood in England, of the Frivolity Theatre, and on his return relates his adventure to his bosom friend, Reggie Peterson, a cynical man about town, who laughs at Frank's fears. The artists of the Frivolity Theatre come to Frank's rooms to supper, and in the midst of the festivities Liane enters unannounced, and realising Frank's desertion and perfidy shoots herself.

Mr. Hardy Jackson as Frank has a breezy and agreeable manner, and fills the part with success. He is the possessor of an excellent voice. As Reggie Peterson Mr. Charles Kay is well suited, and never failed to make the most of his somewhat meagre opportunities. He used his powers as a comedian with effect. Mme. Favier sings well, but hardly seemed to realise the seriousness of the rôle entrusted to her. Miss May Hollom is an engaging Elsie, and Mr. Charles D. Wright a good dude.

On Wednesday, March 30, owing to the indisposition of her sister, Miss May Hollom, Miss Violet Hollom played Elsie with marked success. The piece is beautifully dressed and mounted.

PRESENTATION.—At the Gaiety Theatre, Worksop, on Saturday, Mr. Carr Loates was presented with a handsome silver-mounted travelling bag by members of the At the World's Mercy company and a few friends to commemorate the completion of five years' unbroken tour.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Sir Herbert Tree is the president of the newly-formed Theatre Club in Knightsbridge, one of the features of which is a pretty theatre with 650 stall seats. Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Mr. H. B. Irving are vice-presidents, and on the play-producing committee are Miss Esmé Beringer, Miss Tita Brand, Mr. Hayden Coffin, Mr. Tom B. Davis, Mr. Clarence Derwent, Lady MacGregor, Baroness Voynish, Mr. Yorke Stephens, Mr. Nigel Playfair, Sir Simeon Stewart, and Mr. Harcourt Williams. The organising secretary is Dr. Moyle O'Connor. When it is not being used for plays, the theatre can be transformed into a ball-room, concert-room, or shooting-gallery. There are also a palatial dining and supper-room, writing-room, and card-rooms.

Mr. George Alexander will preside at the annual dinner of the Thespid Cricket Club at the Criterion Restaurant to-morrow (Sunday) evening. Mr. J. M. Barrie, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, and Mr. James Welch will be present, and an enjoyable entertainment will be organised by the hon. secretary, Mr. Ernest Cameron.

Mr. H. B. Irving will propose the toast of "The O.P. Club," and Miss Lily Elsie, Miss Dorothea Baird, and Miss Jessie Bateman will speak at the Ladies' Annual Dinner of the O.P. Club at the Hotel Cecil on Sunday. Mr. A. E. W. Mason will preside.

At the Prince of Wales' Theatre on Wednesday afternoon, just before the end of the first act of The Balkan Princess, two ladies, one of whom was Mrs. Blanche Eardley, the novelist, entered the theatre, taking seats in the third row of the stalls. Both were wearing large black hats. At the end of the act two gentlemen who were sitting behind the ladies went out and complained to Mr. Curzon that the ladies "refused to take off their ridiculous hats."

Mr. Curzon then sent a messenger to Mrs. Eardley and her companion. The ladies went out into the corridor, and Mr. Curzon asked them if they would object to removing their hats. Both ladies refused. "Then I must ask you to take your money back and leave the theatre," said Mr. Curzon. Mrs. Eardley and her friend insisted on going in and seeing the play.

Mr. Curzon, however, refused to let the ladies pass unless they took off their hats. Eventually the ladies left the theatre—Mrs. Eardley leaving her card. Mr. Curzon at once sent a guinea cheque and a letter to Mrs. Eardley by special messenger. The cheque was returned to Mr. Curzon, with a note from Mrs. Eardley, stating that the matter was to be put in the hands of her solicitors. Mr. Curzon hopes that any action that may follow will settle the interesting problem, "Can a theatre manager exclude a lady from his theatre if she refuses to take off her hat?"

Mrs. Eardley presents her side of the case in a letter to the Press, in which she says: "We made our way direct to the stalls, intending to remove our hats, but before we were actually seated a gentleman (?) said: 'Take off those ridiculous hats.' I was annoyed at the unnecessary note of rudeness in his manner, and we did not do so. At the end of the act, he again made the offensive remark, and I made up my mind that, though I disliked being discourteous to other members of the audience, I would keep my hat on, and establish a woman's right to keep her head covered in public if she wishes. Hitherto I have made it a rule to remove my hat at matinées."

A meeting of the committee of the Touring Managers' Association, Ltd., was held at the Managers' Club, Savoy Mansions, on the 1st inst., with Mr. M. V. Leveaux in the chair. Those present were: Mr. A. C. Alderson, Mr. L. Maitland, Mr. G. Brydon Phillips, Mr. G. H. Lambert, Mr. C. Barth, Mr. F. Weathersby, Mr. G. Carlton Wallace, Mr. F. Leslie Moreton, Mr. A. Bertram, Mr. E. Lockwood, Mr. E. Graham Falcon, Mr. W. Muskerry-Tilson (hon. solicitor), and Mr. M. Martin (secretary). The date of the annual general meeting was fixed for May 24. A member reported a serious case between himself and a musical director, and also of a lady artist of his company, and it was directed that the names be entered in the black book. A member wrote in reference to a claim against the estate of his late partner, and the solicitor reported that he had sent in the claim as requested. At the instance of a member, the Association claimed damages against an actor for breaking his engagement, and judgment was given in the Westminster County Court on March 23 in favour of the Association, with costs. The following gentlemen were elected members of the Association:—Mr. Allan Wilkie, Mr. Charles Gibbon, Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson, Mr. Bernard Mervyn, Mr. Harry W. Lumley, and Mr. James Welch.

A meeting of the committee of the Managers' Club was held at Savoy Mansions on the 1st inst. Amongst those present were: Mr. M. V. Leveaux, Mr. L. Maitland, Mr. E. Norris, Mr. A. C. Alderson, Mr. C. Barth, Mr. G. B. Lambert, Mr. F. Weathersby, Mr. W. Muskerry-Tilson (hon. solicitor), and Mr. M. Martin (secretary). The following gentlemen were elected members:—Mr. Allen Wilkie, Mr. Henry Bowman, Mr. Harry Braham, Mr. B. Pareezer, Mr. James Welch, Mr. Charles Gibbon, Mr. J. W. Rosenthal, Mr. Roy Cochrane, Mr. Arthur Hare, Mr. Herbert Darnley, Mr. Hugh C. Bernard, Mr. Bernard Mervyn, and Mr. Robert Dudley.

Mr. Lewis Waller, in his special revival of Henry V. at His Majesty's Theatre on the 21st inst., will be supported by Mr. A. E. George, Mr. Shiel Barry, Mr. William Devereux, Mr. Franklin Dyall, Mr. Alec F. Thompson, Master Harry Duff, Mr. William Mollison, Mr. J. H. Barnes, Miss Madge Titheradge, and Mr. Halliwell Hobbes. Most of these artists have already appeared with Mr. Waller in his fine revival of Henry V. at the Lyric.

Mr. Frederick Whelen, the founder and chairman of the Stage Society, will propose the health of the Repertory Theatre at the annual dinner of the Society at the Criterion on the 17th inst. Mr. Charles Frohman has preferred to leave the task of reply to Miss Horniman and Mr. W. B. Yeats. The Right Hon. Sir John Gorst will take the chair.

In connection with the performance of The Two Gentlemen of Verona, to be given by the Elizabethan Stage Society at His Majesty's Theatre on Wednesday evening, the 20th inst., a special stage is being built over the orchestra and over part of the stalls. This will limit the auditorium, and will necessitate the abandonment of the upper circle and gallery on this occasion, as it will be impossible to see the specially-erected stage from most of the seats in this part of the house. Sir Herbert Tree has, therefore, decided to close the upper circle and gallery in the interests of those who desire to be present, and also to comply with the County Council arrangements as regards the special lighting rendered necessary on this occasion. Those who have booked seats for these parts of the house will be able to transfer them to other parts on early application to the box-office, or should it be preferred, the money will be returned. As the auditorium, in consequence, is rendered much smaller than usual, it is desirable that anyone wishing to see this special Elizabethan Stage Society performance should make early application for seats.

Mr. Martin Harvey will preside at the sixty-fifth annual dinner of the Royal General Theatrical Fund at the Whitehall Rooms, Hotel Metropole, on June 12.

Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson, and Hodge will sell by auction at 13, Wellington-street, Strand, on Wednesday, April 20, and on the following day, a collection of engravings, water-colour drawings, oil-paintings, china, books, and a number of theatrical relics, forming the property of the late Lionel Brough. The collection is full of items of intense interest to those connected with the drama, and a large gathering and eager bidding may be contemplated.

There are some fine old engravings, theatrical and other portraits in the collection. Amongst the water-colour and other drawings are a fancy portrait of Mr. Russell, formerly manager of the Haymarket Theatre, and a portrait of Minnie Palmer, both by Phil May; portraits of Mr. John Toole and Mr. Lionel Brough, in coloured chalks, and portraits of Mr. Lionel Brough and Mr. Boucicault and Mr. James and Mr. Thorne, in coloured chalks, all by Alfred Bryan; and the following by Phil May:—Portrait of Mr. Lionel Brough, in character, in water-colours; portrait of Mr. Lionel Brough as Bob Acres, in pencil; portraits of Sir Henry Irving, Sir Squire Bancroft, and Mr. John Toole, in sepia; portrait of Mr. Fred Sidney in character, in water-colours; portrait of Sir Henry Irving as Malvolio, in black and white; and a portrait of Mr. E. Terry, in water-colours. There is also a sketch, in water-colours, by Fred Storey of Miss Violet Cameron as Bettina in The Mascot. Then there is a portrait of Mr. Lionel Brough, in pencil, by Miss Viola Tree; a picture of a parrot, in pencil and wash, presented to Mr. Lionel Brough by the artist, Harrison Weir; and a portrait of Mr. Lionel Brough, in black crayon, signed, presented to Mr. Brough by the artist, J. Macbeth. Amongst the oil-paintings are a [illegible]ing and Girl Picking Flowers, by Weedon Grossmith; and a portrait, by S. Spurrier, of Mr. Lionel Brough seated on a couch.

Mr. Forbes Robertson, who is a member of the executive committee of the National Theatre, is forming an American committee to colect funds for the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre. He adds that the New Theatre, New York, is daily gaining ground with the public, and is being conducted in admirable fashion. Local committees in connection with the National Theatre continue to be formed throughout the country, including Wolwich, Wimbledon, Crystal Palace, Croydon, Edinburgh, Newcastle-on-Tyne, and Bristol.

Lady Tree graced a brilliant scene at the Ritz Hotel on Thursday evening, when a series of Tableaux Vivants were given, under the patronage of Princess Christian, in aid of the English Branch of the International Catholic Society for Befriending Working Girls and the Incorporated Soldiers and Sailors' Help Society. Lady Tree gave a recitation, which was enthusiastically applauded. The Balcony Scene from Romeo and Juliet was acted by Miss Aimée Lowther and Miss Rita Jolivet. A graceful minuet was danced by Mrs. Percival Davis Griffiths, the Jonkheer Quarles Van Ufford, Miss Alice Eyre, and Mr. Percy Grace, while Miss Mansel, Miss Imelda Harding, and Mr. Jack Eyre gave a Spring Dance.

The tableaux included Reynolds's "Three Graces," Rossetti's "Dante and Beatrice," Marcus Stone's "Love and Mockery," Blair Leighton's "Elaine," Romney's "Lady Hamilton at the Spinning Wheel," Albert Moore's "Midsummer," and Dicksee's "The Symbol." Incidental music was provided by Mr. Alfred de Rothschild's Viennese Band. Among those taking part were the Marchioness Townshend, the Countess Blücher, Countess Vandelin de Mniszech, Lady Norah More, Lady Muriel Watkins, Lady Mary Pepys, Lady Tenterden, Baroness Hildegard von Hügel, Lady Dean Paul, Lady Grove, the Hon. Mrs. R. Erskine, the Hon. Mrs. Eric Thesiger, the Hon. Mrs. Hill Trevor, and the Hon. Mrs. E. Fielden. The entertainment will be repeated to-night.

We are sorry to hear that Mr. Compton Coutts, who had been lying seriously ill at his residence at 80, Barkham-terrace, Lambeth-road, was on Monday removed to Guy's Hospital.

One hears too little now of Clara Jecks, the famous soubrette of the Adelphi and other London theatres in the eighties. Active in Church work, as a parishioner of St. Anne's, Highgate-rise, she is directing a performance this evening, at Stanley Hall, Junction-road, in aid of Church Mission work. She will double the parts of Crafer and Miss Hickson in Liberty Hall.

Mr. Cyril Maude, owing to the great success of the special matinées of The Toymaker of Nuremberg at the Playhouse, has decided to continue these performances every Tuesday and Thursday during the month of April. The cast includes Mr. Cyril Maude as the old toymaker. Messrs. J. D. Beveridge, Fred Lewis, Shiel Barry, and A. Holmes Gore; and Misses Elsie Chester, Emma Chambers, and Miss Margery Maude. Each matinée will be preceded by Monsieur Thales in A Happy Mistake.

Mr. Wentworth Croke will on Monday next open his annual vacation tour of East Lynne at Wolverhampton with a first-class company selected from his various touring companies. The piece will be toured with scenery complete.

Whit Week will see the termination for the time being of Mr. Wentworth Croke's various touring companies in Mr. Hall Caine's pieces. The Bondman and The Prodigal Son will then have completed three years' continuous touring, and The Christian eleven years. The three pieces will be given a rest until the autumn of 1911, when they will be again sent into the country entirely re-dressed and mounted.

On Saturday last the new version of The Christian was played for the last time at Mr. Wentworth Croke's Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith. In the autumn of 1911 Mr. Croke will send out a farewell tour of the original version of this piece.

Miss Pauline Chase will sail on Wednesday, May 4, for New York on the Kaiser Wilhelm, arriving there on the following Tuesday, on which day she will exert herself in the interests of the Actors' Fund Fair at the Botanic Gardens, New York. Miss Chase will endeavour to raise money by selling at auction photographs and autographs of famous English authors and actors. Miss Chase hopes to start on her return voyage to England on the Wednesday morning after the Fair.

The cast of Mr. Charles Hawtrey's production of The Naked Truth at Wyndham's on Thursday will include, besides Mr. Charles Hawtrey himself, Mr. Arthur Playfair, Mr. Eric Lewis, Mr. Ernest Thesiger, Mr. Lyle, Mr. George Bellamy, Mr. L. Williams, Mr. H. Atlay, Miss Frances Wetherall, Miss Maud Cressall, Miss Phyllis Embury, Miss Vera Maitland, Miss Clare Greet, and Miss Gwynne Herbert.

Mr. George Grossmith will return to the cast of Our Miss Gibbs at the Gaiety Theatre to-night.

Miss Annie Hughes has been winning golden opinions in the suburbs and the provinces as the Chorus Lady. After her last night at Kennington, a crowd of pittites and galleryites collected outside the stage-door to cheer her as she left. "Better even than your 'Country Mouse,' Miss Hughes," one or two shouted. Another voice said, "Miss Hughes, we want to see you play Lady Frederick." This request followed Miss Hughes by letter to Liverpool, where she opened on the following Monday.

Miss Hughes is the recipient of many flattering congratulatory letters from the play-going public. One sent her from Liverpool, after visiting there, says, "Your splendid acting as Patricia O'Brien has won you great fame. You have caught a strong grip of many hearts, and great numbers are longing for the time when you shall be here again."

Miss Hilda Trevelyan, the well-known and popular Wendy in Peter Pan, was married quietly in London on Feb. 15 to Mr. Sydney Blow, the author of a number of successful music hall sketches, and part-author of Where Children Rule. Miss Trevelyan, who is thirty-one years of age, made her appearance on Tuesday at the Duke of York's Theatre as Avonia Bunn in Trelawny of the Wells. She played Louie Freear's part in A Chinese Honeymoon, Moira in Little Mary, Tweeney in the revival of The Admirable Crichton, and Maggie Wylie in What Every Woman Knows.

A familiar figure is missing from the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, Mr. Fred Bernardo having resigned his position as business-manager to Mr. Lester Collingwood, after an engagement extending over a dozen years. Mr. Bernardo was the original stage-manager of Mr. Collingwood's When London Sleeps, and acted in that capacity during the summer tours, returning to Birmingham for the winter seasons, to fulfil the duties of business-manager at the Alexandra Theatre. During 1908-9 he managed Mr. Collingwood's pantomime company at the Elephant and Castle Theatre, London, the run extending over ten weeks.

At the close of the Aladdin pantomime on Saturday, Mr. Bernardo, who is very popular in Birmingham, was the recipient of numerous presents, among them being a gold-mounted snake-skin handle umbrella and gold and ivory tooth-pick from Miss Powell (secretary, Alexandra Theatre) and the front of the house staff, an umbrella from members of the pantomime company, fountain pen from the Sisters Oswald, and a crocodile skin pouch from Mr. Booth.

"Aladdin," the most successful pantomime which has been produced at the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, came to a close on Saturday night, after a record run of fourteen weeks. There was a huge audience, and there were several interesting ceremonies. The event of the evening was the presentation of "The Owl" cake by Mr. Lester Collingwood to Miss Ray Ford, this charming artist having been adjudged by public vote to be the most popular pantomime artist in Birmingham. Miss Ford, accepting the tall four-tiered cake, graciously tendered thanks. The proprietors of "The Owl" also gave a big basket of assorted fruit to Miss Molly Wynne, the runner-up in the competition, and bouquets to Miss Ethel Beech (principal boy) and Miss Wynne (principal girl).

Among the presents made to Mr. Collingwood was a framed series of sketches of the pantomime from Mr. Tom Webster, the Weekly Mercury caricaturist. The Aladdin company presented a handsome timepiece to Mr. Barnes, the popular chef d'orchestre, and a dressing-case to Mr. Harry Cooke, the stage-manager. Short speeches were made, and the audience was singing and cheering alternately, the ladies on the stage throwing button-holes from their bouquets to everyone within reach.

Mr. Arthur E. Holland, who was first engaged by Mr. Wentworth Croke to play the part of Factor Nielson (created by the late Mr. Austin Melford at Drury-lane) in his Midland company, concluded on Saturday his third tour in the same rôle. After the first tour Mr. Holland was invested with the responsibility of stage-management in addition.

The Liverpool Royal Court Theatre is about to have its accommodation increased by the addition of over a hundred seats. A large part of the block has for years been occupied by a bank, but as the business of that concern has gone elsewhere, Mr. Robert Arthur is about to utilise the space by furnishing new exits, more cloak-room accommodation, new dress circle entrance, more pit and dress circle seats, widening the proscenium opening, &c. There will be eleven exits, and the seating accommodation increased from 1,695 to 1,803. The authorities have passed the plans.

Friends of Miss Elsie Gaunt will regret to learn she passed away quietly on Monday, April 4, at her home in Stockton-on-Tees.

Early on Sunday the Hippodrome, at Ulverston, a large portable wooden, electrically-lighted theatre, together with scenery, properties, wardrobe, and dynamo, was totally demolished by fire. The fire brigade turned out smartly, but so fierce was the conflagration that the structure was early doomed, and they directed their energies to the salvage of the closely adjacent carriage works. The origin of the outbreak is unknown.

Mr. Weedon Grossmith's farce, The Night of the Party, was successfully produced at the Princess Theatre, Melbourne, on Feb. 26, under the joint direction of George Willoughby, Clyde Meynell, and Sir Rupert Clark. Mr. David James was accorded an enthusiastic reception, and as Crosbie, the valet, scored one of the greatest personal triumphs achieved by an English comedian for many years.

Mr. C. H. Workman informs us that the special matinées of Orpheus which Miss Marie Brema is giving at the Savoy Theatre will not interfere with the run of the Two Merry Monarchs, which is being played nightly, and at the matinée on Saturdays.

Mr. Charles Vane, who is returning to England in June, on the completion of a tour in the Far East, under the management of Mr. Maurice Bandmann, has had the experience of appearing in Shakespeare's plays before an audience entirely composed of the Indian community in their own theatre at Calcutta. The plays produced were Hamlet and The Merchant of Venice. The first performance was something in the nature of an experiment, and proved so successful that on two subsequent occasions performances were given in the Empire Theatre to record houses. In speaking of the performance of Hamlet, Mr. Vane states in an interview on the matter: "It was a most delightful experience. The Star Theatre was filled with the high caste section of the Indian community, who followed the play with rapt attention. It has never been my pleasure to play to an audience so conversant with the text, excepting perhaps the Cheltenham College, when I was associated with Mr. F. R. Benson." Mr. Vane has played Hamlet through all the Far Eastern possessions, and is now contemplating a tour through South America and the West Indies under Mr. Bandmann's management in the late autumn.

Mr. William Mollison produced, for the first time, at the Grand Theatre, Blackpool, this week a new one-act piece, by Leon M. Lion, adapted from the story by Tom Gallon, entitled The Touch of the Child, a notice of which appears in another column. Mr. Lion, who was a member of Mr. Mollison's company when he had the Lyceum Theatre, and, therefore, knew his great powers, has fitted him with a part that enables him to make something like a sensation. There was a scene of great enthusiasm at the end of the play, and Mr. Mollison had to bow his acknowledgments seven times.

Mr. Mollison has been asked to play this very strong one-act play on the music halls, but at present has no intention of doing so. He plays Pistol with his old friend, Lewis Waller, when Henry V. is produced at His Majesty's Theatre during the forthcoming festival. The great success Mr. Mollison made in this part at the Lyceum and Imperial Theatres will be well remembered, the portrayal being so remarkable that a life-size picture of the actor as Pistol, by George Henry, was exhibited at the New Gallery.

An irreparable loss to the musical world has occurred in the death of Edouard Colonne, who passed away in Paris, at the age of seventy-two, on the 28th ult. The revered French conductor was stricken with paralysis in one arm last year, and conducted for the last time at one of the concerts of his 1908 to 1909 season. The disease gained ground, and for many weeks past he had not been able even to attend his concerts.

The deceased musician brought his orchestra to London in the autumn of 1896, and conducted several concerts at the Queen's Hall, returning to England on many subsequent occasions, and in 1908 conducted the Promenade Concerts at the Queen's Hall for a week. His fame is chiefly associated with the concerts at the Théâtre du Châtelet, Paris, where many celebrated works were heard for the first time, such as César Franck's "Rédemption" and "Les Béatitudes," Massenet's "Marie Magdeleine," Saint-Saëns' symphonic poems, "Phaéton" and "Danse Macabre," and that master's oratorio, "Le Déluge."

Messrs. Armitage and Leigh, who for some time past have been associated in provincial touring enterprises, have now, by mutual and amicable arrangement, terminated partnership. Mr. Arthur Leigh will continue touring Lucky Durham, under his own management, whilst Mr. Armitage will retain Leah Klaschna, and his new production, The Greater Love.

So great has been the success of The Shadow of a Crime that Mr. Robert Hewland anticipates prolonging the tour. The play is this week appearing at the Prince's Theatre, Horwich.

Mr. Norman Wrighton, the Strolling Player in Shakespearean impersonations, has been engaged by the Syndicate Halls to appear at Chelsea Palace on April 25, when he will present many well-known characters from the Bard, as performed by him al-fresco in London.

Mr. Cosmo Hamilton and Mme. Pierre Berton's new play, Bridge, founded on Mr. Hamilton's novel "Duke's Son," will be presented in French at the Théâtre Réjane next week, with Mlle. Arlette Dorgère and M. Garry in leading parts. Cheating at cards is one of the motives of what is said to be a very sensational piece.

Mr. Pelissier and the Follies will commence a provincial tour at Birmingham on the 18th inst., ending it at Manchester on June 6. The travesties of The King of Cadonia, Fires of Fate, and Henry of Navarre, and the burlesque upon a music-hall entertainment will be the attractions. On Monday, Aug. 29, they will reappear at the Apollo.

Mr. A. F. Henderson will produce the new musical play The Islander, by Frank Marshall and Michael Faraday, at the Apollo on the 23rd inst., with Miss Elsie Spain as the heroine and Mr. Neil Kenyon in the leading male part. Miss Elaine Inescourt, Miss Mabel Burnage, Mr. Laurence Caird, Mr. Lawrence Legge, Mr. F. Allandale, Mr. Reginald Lawrence, Mr. Sam Walsh, and Master Bobbie Andrews will also be in the cast.

Messrs. Laurence Housman and Granville Barker's pretty piece Prunella will be produced at the Repertory Theatre on Wednesday, with Mr. Charles Maude as Pierrot and Miss Dorothy Minto as the heroine.

Mr. John Daniel Hamlyn, the well-known naturalist, was elected a Guardian of the parish of Wapping on Monday, the result of the voting being: Alderman Barker (late Mayor of Stepney), 78; Mr. J. D. Hamlyn, 78; Mr. Grundy, 32.

"Where is William?" the latest farcical comedy which has been so successfully touring the provinces for the past six months, will make its first London appearance at the Fulham Theatre next week. Mr. Charles Windermere, the author, has engaged a strong cast, which includes Mr. Windermere himself, Mr. Edmund Hollick, Mr. Leslie Norman, Mr. Rule Pyott, Mr. Fred Lake (who will also stage-manage), Mr. T. Mackenzie, Miss Belle Donaldson, Miss Clare Manifield, Miss May Rosine, and Miss Zoe Davis.

Mr. Percy Marshall has been engaged by Mr. Gaston Mayer to play the Professor on a suburban tour of The Brass Bottle.

Mr. J. Henry Twyford, who has lately been playing Neil Partington, in The Little Damozel, now also undertakes the declamatory part of an idol which comes to life in a clever one-act piece by Mr. Guy Newall.

Mr. Horace Lingard and Mr. Arthur Shelton's company, in Fanny and the Servant Problem and Divorçons, are having a most successful tour, playing to big business during their ten weeks at the West Pier, Brighton, and drawing large audiences at the Royal, Bath, this week. They are to be congratulated on having an exceptionally strong company, with Miss Beatrice Moreau in the leading parts. The pieces are beautifully mounted, the entire production being travelled.

Mrs. Mark Kinghorne and her company open their tour with Mr. George R. Sims' celebrated farcical comedy Mother-in-Law at the Royal Palace Theatre, Ramsgate, next week. The company is a powerful one, and includes Miss Nellie Christie, Miss Violet Lewis, Mr. Fred Kaye, Mr. Edward Jephson, and Mr. Alfred Hemming, who is also responsible for the production. Mr. H. Chiswell Billing is the manager.

"The Dollar Princess" company met the Oldham Nomads at football on the ground of the local athletic A.F.C., kindly lent by the directors. A good game was witnessed by a fair number of spectators, although the bad weather spoiled the "gate." In the first half the artists did not play together very well, and at the interval they were in arrears to the extent of four goals. In the second half they improved very considerably and scored five times—Miller two, Henson one, and Ross one, their opponents putting the ball through their own goal. Eventually the theatricals were defeated by seven goals to five. Mr. Leslie Holland captained the Princess team, playing a nice game, as also did H. Henson at centre-forward. The proceeds were given to the Poor Children's Free Breakfast Mission.

Miss Florence Smithson, who has been out of the cast of The Arcadians at the Shaftesbury for more than a month, is now well enough to resume her part. She has returned greatly invigorated by her rest in Cannes, and equally as strong in voice. Miss Smithson's vocal accomplishments have gained the applause of no less celebrated artists than Caruso and Tetrazzini, and it is recorded that when Baroness Cederstrom (Mme. Adelina Patti) heard it from a private box some weeks ago, she wrote this message to Miss Smithson on her programme: "You sing beautifully, my dear.—Adelina Cederstrom."

To take part in nine different Shakespearean plays in a single week is a feat that can rarely have been accomplished, but Mr. J. H. Irvine, a member of Miss Glossop-Harris's company, is about to attempt it. He will appear in each of the eight plays performed by the company during the Festival week at the County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames, and will also play his old parts in the special matinée of Henry V., given by Mr. Lewis Waller at His Majesty's Theatre on the Thursday afternoon. Thus Mr. Irvine will play eleven parts during the week:—Othello, Ford, Bassanio, Mercutio, Orsino, the Pedant, the Ghost and First Gravedigger, Bishop of Ely and Captain Jamy, and Leonato.

Miss Glossop-Harris has secured a lease of the Theatre Royal, Bury St. Edmunds, which she intends to use as a headquarters for her future tours. The theatre will also be opened three nights weekly for touring companies from August Bank Holiday. Several first-class bookings have already been obtained.

Owing to the unavoidable postponement from April 16 to April 30 and May 7 of The Pageant of Empire, which is being organised for production at the Shaftesbury Theatre, Mr. George Unwin, who was engaged by Lady Hyde to produce, has been reluctantly compelled by previous arrangements to relinquish the appointment. Mr. Charles Cruikshanks will now be the producer of the pageant.

Mr. Oswald Chay commenced his tour of When It Was Dark at the Star Theatre, Swansea, on Monday, and although on its third visit to the town the piece created a great sensation. Mr. Coutts was so pleased with the production that he wrote a very nice letter of congratulation, for a copy of which our readers are referred to the "Theatres Wanted" column of this paper.

Mr. J. Forbes Knowles' tour with Her Marriage Vow is fully booked. In the summer he fulfils his second stock season at Mr. Robert Arthur's beautiful new theatre at Aberdeen, and on August Bank Holiday he produces Nick Carter, Detective, by Shirley and Landeck, which is already booked at most of the principal dramatic houses.

A children's strike was successfully carried out at a theatre in Zittau, Saxony, where a popular operetta has been running in which fifteen youngsters execute dances. These young artists are paid starvation wages, and they decided to strike, demanding four marks each nightly. As the curtain had gone up and the juvenile dance was due, the strikers stood firm, and the manager was forced to yield.

It was a good idea of Mr. J. Bannister Howard to produce The Belle of New York in Easter week at the Crystal Palace Theatre, with a cast largely consisting of the artists who had made themselves so popular in his Christmas pantomime. Miss Dorothea Clarke was the Belle, Mr. Paddy Dupres Ichabod Bronson, and Miss Nixon was Fifi Fricot, to mention a few of them, and all went merrily enough.

The Hutchison management, having already secured the entire provincial rights of Don, Smith, and Arsène Lupin, are now negotiating for two other recent London successes, which, if secured, will make eight companies on tour in the coming autumn, all under the personal supervision of Mr. Percy Hutchison. That accomplished actor will succeed Mr. Gerald Du Maurier as Arsène Lupin at Christmas, opening with this enormous attraction and the entire London production at the Opera House, Blackpool.

Mr. Arthur Phillips and his company open a short tour on Monday at the Theatre Royal, Birkenhead, in the revival of The Merchant of Venice from the Court Theatre. Mr. Phillips is touring the entire London company, including new scenery and costumes, a glee party, and a ballet—nearly seventy artists in all.

Mr. H. F. Maltby will restart his tour in July, when his répertoire will number five plays. A feature of the tour will be the production of a play in four acts, entitled Profit—and the Loss.

After a record tour in the Midlands, Mr. Allan Wilkie returns on Monday to the County Palatine, where he will appear during the next six weeks. After his Lancashire engagements are concluded, Mr. Wilkie commences a three weeks' Shakespearian and Old English comedy festival at the Theatre Royal, York.

Mr. James W. Pigott has accepted a commission from Mr. Arthur Phillips to write a play for him, the synopsis of which has already been submitted and approved. Mr. Pigott's first effort was The Bookmaker, an amusing and highly-successful comedy. Since then he has written several plays. He also adapted Kitty Grey from the French.

The annual report of the British and Foreign Musicians' Society, recently presented at its eighty-eighth annual meeting, stated that the Society has had a heavy expenditure on account of sickness, deaths, and old age, thirty-five members having during the year received £229, thirteen old-age pensioners receiving £274, and £100 being spent in death payments, while six widows and two orphans are in receipt of annual incomes from the Special Fund. The Society was founded in 1822, and its membership consists entirely of orchestral players. It was resolved that the title should in future be changed to that of "The Professional Musicians' Sick and Pension Society."

Shanghai boasts a municipally supported orchestra capable of producing modern works and an audience capable of appreciating them. The programme of a recent concert consisted of Glück's "Iphigenia in Aulis," Beethoven's No. 2 Symphony in D major (three movements), Humperdinck's overture to "Hänsel and Gretel," Elgar's Variations on an Original Theme, and a march from Berlioz's "Le Damnation de Faust." The attendance at the concert exceeded a thousand.

The Lincoln Triennial Musical Festival is fixed for June 8 and 9. Proceedings will be opened with an orchestral concert in the Corn Exchange, the programme of which will include Schumann's "Genoveva" overture and the "Dance of Sylphs" and the Hungarian march from Berlioz's "Faust," two Preludes from Sir Alexander Mackenzie's Manfred music, Sir Edward Elgar's "Wand of Youth" Suite, No. 2, Granville Bantock's "The Pierrot of the Minute," and a Festival overture by Walford Davies, composed for the occasion. On the following day the oratorio services in the cathedral will include the "Dream of Gerontius," Brahms's Symphony in D minor, and Stanford's "Stabat Mater," G. J. Bennett's "Easter Hymn," and Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise." The choir and orchestra will number 500 performers

Damns Still Useful.

Mr. Lewis Waller's revival of The Rivals, says the Liverpool Daily Courier, was anticipated as long ago as November last, when it was produced by the Liverpool University Dramatic Society. On this occasion, however, the gentleman who played the rôle of Sir Anthony Absolute was ignorant of a considerable portion of his part. He was struck with the brilliant idea of overcoming his shortcomings of memory by a liberal out-Sheridaning of Sheridan in the matter of curses. The undergraduate audience was delighted at his success, but not so the stage manager, who buttonholed Sir Anthony between the scenes and angrily demanded, "Where, by all that's holy, are you getting all the 'damns' from? I don't believe Sheridan ever wrote so many in his life." "As to that," replied the innocent Sir Anthony, "whenever I forget my part I just say 'damn' until I come to a part that I remember."

The Inception of "Mid-Channel."

Mr. Charles Frohman has an ingenious theory of how Mid-Channel came to be written. "Sir Arthur Pinero," says Mr. Frohman in the Express, "was walking down a fine street, and saw a big balcony high up on a house. 'If some one jumped from that?' he thought. 'Why should somebody jump from a balcony? It would have to be a tragic and dramatic reason. It would be stronger and stranger if it were a woman. Why? Because everything has left her. Why has everything left her?' Then Sir Arthur found the cause—husband, lover, good name, happiness—all were gone."

A Narrow Escape.

Mme. Réjane, according to M.A.P., only narrowly escaped being a school teacher. As a girl she was a student at a small boarding-school, and one day, on returning home, she found her mother overjoyed; the principal of a local school had come to offer her a position as teacher, with a salary of £2 a month and board. Mme Réjane, however, had other aspirations; but when she breathed her desire to go on the stage she was immediately sent to her room in disgrace. Thus she submitted, and accepted the post as assistant-teacher.

At this juncture a wealthy uncle, from whom the family had expectations, died, leaving them nothing. They were reduced almost to poverty. Then the future actress took her courage in both hands and begged to be allowed to study at the Conservatoire. "For," said she, "I may make your fortunes. And if I do not succeed, nothing will be lost." The next year she took a prize at the Conservatoire, and her career began.

Getting the Expression.

Mme. Réjane has her own way of conducting rehearsals. On one occasion she was endeavouring to impress upon a young actor the necessity of a tragic expression.

"Put yourself in his place," she said.

"But I have never been through such an experience," the other pleaded.

"Well, then," retorted the actress; "imagine you have lost three or four hundred louis at baccarat, and that you have been dismissed from the company.

His face fell.

"There you have it," said she. "Keep that expression and you will win."

For a young woman who could not weep to order she tried a heroic cure.

"Very well. I will take the part away from you. You are not pretty enough."

This had the desired effect, and the floodgates opened.

"Weep like that and you will be the hit of the piece," exclaimed Réjane triumphantly.

Miss Lena Ashwell as a Student.

"When my daughter was a student at the Royal Academy of Music," says Ellen Terry in her "Reminiscences," "Dr. (now Sir Alexander) Mackenzie asked me to distribute the medals to the Elocution Class at the end of the term. I was quite 'new to the job,' and didn't understand the procedure. No girl, I have learned since, can be given the gold medal until she has won both the bronze and the silver medals—that is, until she has been at the Academy three years. I was for giving the gold medallists, who only wanted certificates, bronze medals, and of one young girl who was in her first year, and only entitled to a bronze medal, I said: 'Oh, she must have the gold medal, of course!' She was a queer-looking child—handsome, with a face suggesting all manner of possibilities."

Pauline Chase's Début.

"I was only fourteen years of age when I made my stage début," says Miss Pauline Chase, as interviewed by the Glasgow Evening Citizen. "I was always passionately fond of acting. Seeing that the law in New York—I am an American, of ccurse—forbade anyone under sixteen from being engaged on the stage, I determined to make myself older. So I put on a long skirt and tried to look like a grown-up young lady. I nearly tripped over my skirt when I went to apply to a manager. He laughed, but he engaged me to play the part of 'Buttons.' That was all I wanted. The piece was called Rounders, and was seen in London later as Kitty Grey."

Ingersoll's Pronunciation.

Mr. George Grossmith, in his little book, "Piano and I," relates that when in America he met Ingersoll, who stayed at the same hotel. The famous atheist lecturer began "chaffing" Henry Irving, who was also at the same hostelry, about his pronunciation, when Mr. Grossmith said to Mr. Ingersoll:—"You may be right—but you are not infallible. You said just now it's twelve o'clark (with the 'r' left out). You also said that you had received a shark (with the long 'a'). I suppose you mean 'clock' and 'shock.' Now, will you allow me to say, Mr. Ingersoll, that I don't look upon Americans as fools? The result is that Irving's theatre was crammed to suffocation, my little hall was crowded, and I hear that you have played to a nearly empty house."

No Caps.

The wearing of a skull cap in a New York theatre recently caused a fight between the wearer and the attendant who ordered him to remove it. The fight caused a panic and almost emptied the theatre.

Toilette Secrets.

"And now to tell you all the intimate little details of my own toilet," writes Miss Millie Legarde in M.A.P. "We will start with the complexion. I always wash my face with hot water and then dash cold over it. Once a day I use soap, as I do not think one can possibly keep one's face clean in London without. During the day, if I think my face feels rather grubby, I rub it over with a little cream, wipe it thoroughly off, and then use a slight dusting of powder The cream I use is quite a simple, homely one, which I manufacture for myself.

"For exercise I walk as much as I can, and play tennis whenever weather and opportunity permit, also I have recently taken up fishing most enthusiastically, but that cannot exactly be classed as an exercise—unless one calls it an exercise of patience Every morning I skip one hundred times, so that all my muscles may get a reasonable amount of exercise. Skipping is the best exercise I know of, for it brings into play at one and the same time more muscles than anything else."

"THE RIVALS" AT THE LYRIC.

On Monday, April 4, Revival of Sheridan's Comedy.

Captain Absolute ..... Mr. Lewis Waller
Sir Anthony Absolute ..... Mr. C. W. Somerset
Faulkland ..... Mr. Cronin Wilson
Acres ..... Mr. Robert Loraine
Sir Lucius O'Trigger .... Mr. Leonard Boyne
Fag ..... Mr. Herbert Jarman
David ..... Mr. Alec F. Thompson
Thomas ..... Mr. Robert Bolder
Mrs. Malaprop ..... Miss Lottie Venne
Lydia Languish ..... Miss Kate Cutler
Julia ..... Miss Dorothy Dix
Lucy ..... Miss Beatrice Ferrar

The Rivals has so rarely been seen by the present generation that, to all intents and purposes, it is new to many playgoers. It was produced at Covent Garden Theatre on Jan. 17, 1775, withdrawn for alterations after two performances, put on again in ten days after revision, and acted with pronounced and prolonged success. Sheridan's play was a protest against the sentimental comedy which at that time was fashionable. In the prologue which he substituted for the original one on the tenth night of The Rivals, Sheridan, referring to the mask of Thalia in the proscenium of the theatre, said:—

"Look on her well—does she seem formed to teach?
Should you expect to hear this lady preach?
Is grey experience suited to her youth?
Do solemn sentiments become that mouth?
* * * * * * *
Must we displace her? and instead advance
The goddess of the woeful countenance—
The sentimental muse! Her emblems view,
The 'Pilgrim's Progress' and a sprig of rue!
View her—too chaste to look like flesh and blood—
Primely pourtrayed on emblematic wood!
There, fixed in usurpation should she stand,
She'll snatch the dagger from her sister's hand."

The racy animation of The Rivals, its high spirits, and its unflagging vivacity, appeal to audiences of all periods and all classes. The characters are alive, animated, and amusing. Sheridan was accused of many plagiarisms in connection with this work, but most of his borrowings are trivial, the conveyance of Mrs. Malaprop from his mother's unpublished "Journey to Bath" being excusable as keeping the "notion," at any rate, in the family.

"The Rivals," writes Mr. Walter Sichel, in his admirable life of the author, "is the sole play by Sheridan where the humour exceeds the wit, and on that account it is the more lovable. We laugh with his characters more than we smile at their sayings. The wit lacks the steely-brightness of The School for Scandal, and the humour has a modern turn. When Mrs. Malaprop illustrates her maxim that in matrimony "'tis safest to begin with a little aversion,' by 'I am sure I hated your poor dear uncle before marriage as if he had been a blackamoor,' we seem to catch the voice of Dickens. The short interlude where Fag mimics the spleen of his master and vents it on the footboy is humour Thackerayan. And when the uncle rages at his cool nephew with 'None of your passion, sir, none of your violence, if you please,' and tells him to 'get an atmosphere and a sun of his own,' we realise our distance from the Georgian drama."

The comedy was twice revived in the early nineties, was acted in 1797, and was included in the Drury Lane performances of September, 1816. A memorable revival of the piece was that given by the Bancrofts at the Haymarket on May 3, 1884, with Sir—then Mr.—A. W. Pinero as Sir Anthony Absolute, Mr. Alfred Bishop as Sir Lucius O'Trigger, Mr. Forbes-Robertson as Captain Absolute, Mr. Bancroft as Faulkland, Mr. Lionel Brough as Bob Acres, Mr. Charles Brookfield as David, Mrs. Stirling as Mrs. Malaprop, Mrs. Bernard Beere as Julia, Miss Calhoun as Lydia Languish, and Miss Julia Gwynne as Lucy. Strange to say, in spite of this superb cast, the play only ran for a few weeks.

The present revival at the Lyric, with the five acts of the play skilfully reduced to three, is extremely interesting. Mr. Lewis Waller, who touches nothing that he does not adorn, plays Captain Absolute—a personage with a good deal of Macready's "d——d walking gentleman" about him—with complete self-command and all the necessary demure pleasantry and well-bred ease and elegance. Mr. C. W. Somerset shows a slight tendency to gloom as Sir Anthony Absolute, but rises above it when Sir Anthony's wrath has to be depicted, and gives a very firm, strong, and satisfactory embodiment, marked with all the mellowness of old comedy. Mr. Cronin Wilson plays Faulkland with a lightness of touch and an agreeable variety which is highly commendable, and prevents the character from becoming monotonous; and Mr. Robert Loraine gives an excellent exposition of the youthfulness, the exuberant bucolicism, the raw inexperience, and the impulsive vacillations of Bob Acres. Mr. Leonard Boyne has the advantage of being proficient in the "brogue," and flavours his speech with it just sufficiently, and his Sir Lucuis O'Trigger is the most chivalrous and aristocratic of fire-eating Irishmen. Mr. Herbert Jarman hits off cleverly the conceited impudence of Fag; Mr. Alec F. Thompson is quaintly amusing as David; and Mr. Robert Bolder is excellent as Thomas. An irresistibly amusing reading of the rôle of Mrs. Malaprop is given by Miss Lottie Venne, who makes the "she-dragon" much younger and prettier than usual, but is full of exhilarating fun and frolic, and delivers the famous blunders as they should always be spoken—with absolute unconsciousness. Miss Kate Cutler is a charmingly wilful and vivacious Lydia Languish, and the part suits her exactly; Miss Dorothy Dix is an agreeable Julia; and Miss Beatrice Farrar plays Lucy with diverting animation, piquancy, and vivacity. The costumes, designed by Mr. T. Heslewood, are tastefully effective; Mr. R. C. McCleery's scenery, founded probably on old engravings, and realising Old Bath quite artistically, is of the best class; and Mr. B. Camplin Smith's attentive stage-management greatly assists the smoothness of the production. The Rivals had an enthusiastic reception, and such a capital performance of the fine old comedy is certainly well worth seeing.

Maeterlinck's fascinating fairy play, The Blue Bird, is now reaching its 200th performance, and shows no sign of diminishing popularity. The long queue waiting outside the Haymarket is still one of the sights of London. The fact that the performances now begin at 8.30 in the evening and 2.30 at the matinées will, no doubt, be much appreciated by many playgoers.

Waddington and Sons was registered as a company on March 26, with a capital of £60,000, in £1 shares, to take over the business of piano and musical instrument manufacturers and dealers, carried on at York and elsewhere, as "Waddington and Sons," and the business of theatre proprietors carried on at York and Scarborough as the Theatre Royal, York, and the Londesborough Theatre, Scarborough. The first directors are W. H. Waddington, W. Waddington, and C. Waddington (all permanent).

The Ben Greet Players appeared in Julius Cæsar last week at the Garden Theatre, New York. Mr. Alexander Calvert, recently of the New Theatre company, was the Brutus, Mr. Robert Whitworth enacted the title-rôle, and Mr. Douglas J. Wood played Mark Antony. The stage was set in the Elizabethan manner, and the performance proved decidedly interesting, the various characters being ably interpreted.

SCHOOL OF DRAMATIC ART.

A special performance was given on Tuesday afternoon at the St. James's Theatre by the students of the Academy of Dramatic Art, on the Council of which are Sir Squire Bancroft (president), Sir John Hare, Sir William S. Gilbert, Sir Arthur Pinero, Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. J. M. Barrie, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. Forbes-Robertson, Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Edward Terry, and Mr. E. S. Willard. Much valuable assistance was given to the Academy for this performance, Mr. George Alexander lending his theatre, scenery, costumes, and other accessories; Mr. Arthur Bourchier lending the Tableau Scene and that used in The Trap; Mr. Charles Frohman lending the scene and properties used in The Admirable Crichton; Mr. E. Vivian Reynolds, Mr. C. T. H. Helmsley, Mr. Percy D. Owen, Mr. E. Arnald, Mrs. Evans, and other members of the staff in the St. James's Theatre giving sympathetic co-operation; and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hervey D'Egville, Colonel R. Toogood, Mr. Rochford, Miss Elaine Dickens, and Miss Izard playing in the orchestra. The following ladies and gentlemen have given their services during the past year in rehearsing the students of the Academy:—Mr. Henry Ainley, Mr. William Archer, Miss Lena Ashwell, Lady Bancroft, Sir Squire Bancroft, Mr. Granville Barker, Mr. Dion Boucicault, Mr. Hubert H. Davies, Mr. Gerald Du Maurier, Miss Winifred Emery, Mr. Norman Forbes, Sir W. S. Gilbert, Mr. Lyn Harding, Mr. Fredk. Kerr, Sir A. W. Pinero, Mr. Edward Terry, Miss Irene Vanbrugh, and Miss Violet Vanbrugh. Dr. Aikin, Mr. J. T. Grein, Mlle Jean Laurent, and Mr. J. Fisher White have delivered lectures.

The programme on Tuesday afternoon was a long and varied one. It commenced with the third act of The Admirable Crichton. In this act of Mr Barrie's play the really important parts are those of Mr. Crichton and Lady Mary Lazenby. These were sustained with great credit by Mr. Rupert Lumley, the gold medallist of the Academy for last year, and Miss Phylis Thatcher. Possibly the fact of studying the act without reference to the play as a whole had something to do with certain defects in the performances of these young people. For instance, Mr. Lumley was inclined at times to take too oratorical and melodramatic a tone in the delivery of Crichton's tirades, and Miss Phyllis Thatcher failed somewhat to suggest the habitual culture and society tone which were survivals in Lady Mary from her previous way of life. These imperfections apart, Mr. Lumley and Miss Thatcher acted with a vigorous energy and earnestness that deserved very warm praise. The passion and suffering of the pair in the crucial scene after the ship's gun had been heard were strongly shown both by Mr. Lumley and Miss Thatcher, who gave very powerful impersonations. Mr. Richard Carfax was effective as the Earl of Loam, Mr. L. G. Fletcher acted the Hon. Ernest Woolley well, the Rev. John Treherne had a careful and intelligent exponent in Mr. Valentine Penna, and the other Lady Lazenbys were piquantly played by Miss Margaret Bruhling and Miss Dora Jesslyn. Miss Dorothy Jay was a characteristic Tweeney; and Mr. O. G. Johnston made a smart naval officer.

Next followed selections from Love's Labour's Lost. It is a most uninteresting play, and the scenes from it were probably selected in order that the abilities of the youthful aspirants might not be too severely taxed. The cast was entirely composed of ladies. With regard to the immaturity of the performers, their work must not be too harshly criticised. The varying and vivid, though rather too restless, facial expression of Miss Aithna Gover as the Princess of France was, on the whole, agreeable. Miss Gwenta Lockhart's expressiveness and amiability as Rosaline, Miss Dorothy Bowden's efficiency as Maria, and Miss Ruby Browne's agreeable ease as Katharine, were praiseworthy. Miss Jane Wells as Biron and Miss Shirley King as Boyet were bright and alert, and Miss Marion Lockey and Miss Thora Dalemond did reasonably well as Longaville and Dumain, Miss Florence Foote being satisfactory as Mercade and Miss Alma Piercy efficient as Moth. Mr. Ben Webster's care in rehearsing the performance was evident; and Mr. Louis H. d'Egville had kindly arranged the dance and composed the music for a pretty sarabande which was introduced.

The next item was a demonstration of the Delsarte System of Gesture, kindly arranged and rehearsed by Miss Elizabeth Earle. The Delsarte system of physical training aims at the development of responsive muscle and nerve by means of exercise designed to remove muscular tension. A tragic theme had been arranged with the view of illustrating the result of the training. It was called In the Moonlight, and was illustrated by Miss Erna von Appen, Mr. Valentine Penna, Miss Enid Rose, and Mr. Harold Holland.

The tragedy is enacted in a few minutes. Two men are in love with one woman, and a second woman is jealous of one of the men. One of the latter stabs his rival, his inamorata stabs herself, and then the lover strangles the jealous woman. The excellences of the Delsarte system of gesture were well displayed in this strenuous sketch. Then came the third act of The Gay Lord Quex.

There was nothing amateurish about the performance of this, which required neither tolerance nor indulgence, but was a really fine rendering. Mr. Frederick Culley played the Marquis of Quex with admirable ease and aplomb; and as Sophie Fulgarney Miss Grace Croft gave a really clever reading, which, though, of course, on lines laid down by the author, had, nevertheless, many original and personal details. Miss Madge Snell's Duchess of Strood struck exactly the right note, and Miss Marjorie Waterlow was good as Mrs. Jack Eden. The applause which followed the descent of the curtain showed how much the excerpt from Sir A. W. Pinero's play had been enjoyed. The scene from L'Ecole des Femmes, in which Arnolphe cross-examines Agnes, was pleasantly rendered by Mr. Valentine Penna and Miss Grace Elbert, having been rehearsed by Mlle. Jeanne Laurent; a fencing display, arranged and rehearsed by M. Felix Bertrand, was a graceful and picturesque interlude; and the matinée ended with the one-act piece by Arthur Eckersley and Arthur Curtis entitled The Trap, which was produced at the Winter Gardens, New Brighton, last July. This piece, as our readers will remember, shows the terror of a burglar, who thinks he has committed a murder and has a detective on his track. His concubine, Nell, goes out with the intention of beguiling the detective, and bringing him to the burglar's room, where he is to be stunned; but she is run over by a motor, and the "'tec" enters, handcuffs the burglar, and takes him away. Mr. Harold Holland, who played Bill Parsons, did some strong and earnest acting; Mr. C. Trevor Roper was firm and cool as "Needle" Barnes; Miss Dorothy Bowden contributed a really clever sketch of sordid poverty; and Miss Enid Rose acted with real emotional expression as Nell. The Trap had been carefully rehearsed by Mr. J. Fisher White. Also included in the bill was a pretty "Dance Joyeuse," pleasantly done by Miss Margaret Bruhling, Miss Dorothy Day, Miss Nancy Denvers, and Miss Nora Thorpe.

Sir William Gilbert, Mr. George Alexander, and Miss Ethel Irving, the judges, have awarded the Bancroft gold medal to Miss Grace Croft, who has studied at the Academy for over four years, for her fine impersonation of Sophy Fulgarny in The Gay Lord Quex. Miss Enid Rose, Miss Phyllis Thatcher, Miss Dorothy Day, Miss Shirley King, Mr. Frederick Culley, and Mr. Valentine Penna received certificates of merit.

THE REPERTORY THEATRE.

On Thursday, April 7, at the Duke of York's Theatre, Revival of the Comedietta, in Four Acts, by Arthur Pinero, entitled

"TRELAWNY OF THE 'WELLS.'"

James Telfer ..... Mr. Sydney Valentine
Mrs. Telfer ..... Miss Marie Saker
Augustus Colpoys ..... Mr. Edmund Gwenn
Ferdinand Gadd ..... Mr. Gerald Lawrence
Tom Wrench ..... Mr. Dennis Eadie
Avonia Bunn ..... Miss Hilda Trevelyan
Rose Trelawny ..... Miss Irene Vanbrugh
Imogen Parrott ..... Miss Fay Davis
O'Dwyer ..... Mr. Whitford Kane
Members of the company of the Pantheon Theatre ..... Mr. C. C. Vernon, Mr. Lewis Casson, Miss Eva Killick, Miss Mair Vaughan
Hall-Keeper at the Pantheon .. Mr. R. O. Riche
Vice-Chancellor Sir William Gower, Kt. Mr. Dion Boucicault
Miss Trafalgar Gower ..... Miss May Whitty
Arthur Gower ..... Mr. Charles Maude
Clara de Fœnix ..... Miss Nell Carter
Captain de Fœnix ..... Mr. O. P. Heggie
Mrs. Mossop ..... Miss Florence Haydon
Mr. Ablett ..... Mr. E. W. Garden
Charles ..... Mr. Aubrey Fitzgerald
Sarah ..... Miss Mary Jerrold

Trelawny of the 'Wells' was first performed at the Court Theatre on Jan. 20, 1898, with Mr. Gerald Du Maurier as Ferdinand Gadd, Mr. Paul Arthur as Tom Wrench, Miss Pattie Browne as Avonia Bunn, Miss Irene Vanbrugh as Rose Trelawny, Mr. Richard Purdon as O'Dwyer, Mr. Dion Boucicault as Sir William Gower, Miss Isabel Bateman as Miss Trafalgar Gower, Mr. Sam Sothern as Captain de Fœnix, Miss Le Thiere as Miss Mossop, Mr. Fred Thorne as Mr. Ablett, Mr. Aubrey Fitzgerald as Charles, and Miss Polly Emery as Sarah. The plot is simple. A young actress, Rose Trelawny, is engaged to be married to a timid young man named Arthur Gower, grandson of Vice-Chancellor Sir William Gower, an elderly bully and domestic tyrant. She is asked to stay at the latter's house in Cavendish-square, where Arthur, who is Sir William's grandchild, Clara de Fœnix, and her husband, Captain de Fœnix, are sorely oppressed by Sir William's domination. Some of Rose's theatrical friends arrive, and she lets them into the house after the other inmates have retired. The noise which they make arouses Sir William, who appears in high dudgeon. Rose returns to her former surroundings, but she has tasted the sweets of respectability, she is in love, and her acting falls off. Sir William, who has, in his time, been a great admirer of Edmund Kean, visits Rose, and she shows him some relics of the great actor. He indulges in excited reminiscences; and finally agrees to finance the production of a play by an unsuccessful actor named Tom Wrench—an admitted sketch of the late Tom Robertson—and becomes reconciled to the idea of Rose marrying his grandson.

Mr. Pinero's pleasant fantasy is in its right place in the programme at the Duke of York's Theatre. Compared with Mr. Pinero's other works, Trelawny of the 'Wells' is a "curio," and a very charming one. Miss Irene Vanbrugh is fortunately again available for the part of Rose Trelawny, which she played with so much fascination, vivacity, and pathos in 1898. The part of the heavy tragedian Telfer has a very appropriate interpreter in Mr. Sydney Valentine, whose deep voice and power of expressing solid self-conceit and ponderous dignity make his performance a very effective one. Miss Marie Saker depicts the pompous oddity of Mrs. Telfer quite cleverly; and Mr. Gerald Lawrence's Gadd is the essence of bitter self-concentration and scornful egotism. Mr. Lawrence makes a valuable impression by a really well-considered and effective embodiment, and takes an upward step in his profession. Mr. Dennis Eadie depicts Tom Wrench with care and judgment, and with a vast amount of skill and finish; and Miss Fay Davis is deliciously affected and sentimental as Imogen Parrott. As Avonia Bunn, Miss Hilda Trevelyan acts with a bright humour and spontaneous vivacity which greatly delight the audience; and Mr. Aubrey Fitzgerald repeats his original performance as Charles with no diminution of its stolid comicality. Miss Mary Jerrold's Sarah is a quaint bit of low life, Miss Florence Haydon is amusing as Mrs. Mossop, and Mr. E. W. Garden plays the part of the butler Ablett with his usual rich and ripe humour. In the character of Arthur Gower, Mr. Charles Maude shows considerable cleverness and a steady advance in technique; and Miss May Whitty is delightfully dignified and absurd as Miss Trafalgar Gower. Mr. Dion Boucicault seems to revel in the eccentricities of his original part of Sir William Gower, and he acts in a spirit of emphatic comedy which is entirely appropriate. Mr. Edmund Gwenn gives one of his strongly individual and trenchantly artistic impersonations as Augustus Colpoys; Mr. Whitford Kane is capital as the O'Dwyer; and Miss Nell Carter and Mr. O. P. Heggie contribute clever readings of Clara and Captain de Fœnix respectively. Trelawny of the 'Wells,' which was, perhaps, felt to be a pleasant relief from the sterner joys of Justice, has had an enthusiastically favourable reception at the Duke of York's.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I shall be glad if you will kindly allow me through your columns to explain my action in refusing to allow two ladies to resume their seats in the stalls at the matinée performance of The Balkan Princess at the Prince of Wales Theatre on Wednesday, in consequence of their refusal to remove the large picture hats they were wearing.

I am naturally anxious that my lady patrons should not think I behaved in an arbitrary manner. It has always been my policy to do everything possible for the comfort and convenience of my visitors, and it was entirely in the interests of the audience that I insisted on the ladies either removing their hats or leaving the theatre.

With regard to the incident, I fully realised the ladies were acting on principle, considering themselves to be insulted by being asked before they were practically seated to remove those ridiculous hats. Both ladies have my sympathy to a certain extent, but I could not allow them to vindicate the "Rights of Women" at the expense of the peace and comfort of my audience.—Yours faithfully,

FRANK CURZON.

Prince of Wales's Theatre, W.
April 7, 1910.

"The Vacuum," a play in one act, by Preston Gibson, now precedes The Turning Point, by the same author, at the Hackett Theatre, New York. It was evidently suggested by Balzac's "La Grande Bretêche," in which a jealous Spaniard kills his wife's lover by suffocation. John Resen, a scientist, constructs an airtight chamber in which a vacuum can be created at will by means of suction. His wife loves another, and one night when she thinks the coast is clear she telephones her lover to come to her. The husband overhears the conversation, however, and returns home unexpectedly. As he enters the house the lover slips into the airtight cabinet, and closes the door. The husband hears a noise and asks his wife to open the door. She swears there is nobody there, but he turns on the suction motor and looks at his watch. In four minutes his victim dies, while his wife beats on the door of the cabinet and then swoons. The situation is thrilling.

THE SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL.

On Saturday afternoon, April 2, Revival of "JULIUS CÆSAR."

Julius Cæsar ..... Mr William Haviland
Marcus Antonius .. Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree
Octavius Cæsar ..... Mr. Harry C. Hewitt
Marcus Brutus ..... Mr. Lyn Harding
Cassius ..... Mr. Henry Ainley
Casca ..... Mr. Edward Sass
Decius Brutus ..... Mr. C. H. Croker-King

Third Citizen ..... Mr. Arthur Cleeve
Fourth Citizen ..... Mr. W. B. Asingdon
Fifth Citizen ..... Mr. Alfred Bellew
Lucius ..... Miss Iris Hoey
Calpurnia ..... Miss Elinor Foster
Portia ..... Miss Evelyn Millard

There were several very interesting features in the performance of Julius Cæsar at His Majesty's Theatre on Saturday afternoon last. Sir Herbert's Mark Antony is one of the finest parts in his repertory, and it has lost none of its merits. It is still the same noble yet human impersonation, grand in elocution, clear and distinct in characterisation, and stately and gracious in bearing. Mr. Lyn Harding's characteristics came out strongly in his acting as Brutus. He depicted the philosophic serenity of Brutus with admirable effect, and his reading wanted nothing on the side of calm solidity and strength. Mr. Henry Ainley made a strong impression by his very fine performance as Cassius, and impressed even his warmest admirers by the force and passion of his acting. He threw himself heart and soul into the character, and from first to last he sustained it with astonishing passion, earnestness, and intensity. Mr. Ainley's impersonation was a revelation of striking power. Mr. William Haviland's Cæsar had just the needed suggestion of rightful supremacy and royal sententiousness; and Miss Evelyn Millard was, of course, irreproachable in the short space of time in which she was visible as Portia. Mr. Sass made a piquant Casca, and Miss Iris Hoey was winning and simple as Lucius. All Shakespeare lovers owe a debt of gratitude to Sir Herbert Tree for giving them an opportunity of again seeing this superb but rarely-performed play.

On Thursday Afternoon, April 7, Revival of "TWELFTH NIGHT."

Orsino ..... Mr. Gerald Lawrence
Sebastian ..... Mr. Fred Terry
Antonio ..... Mr. Hubert Carter
A Sea Captain ..... Mr. Henry Morrell
Valentine ..... Mr. Frank Esmond
Curio ..... Mr. Eric Ward
Sir Toby Belch ..... Mr. Edward Sass
Sir Andrew Aguecheek .... Mr. Norman Forbes
Malvolio ..... Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree
A Priest ..... Mr. H. Smithson
First Officer ..... Mr. Frederick James
Second Officer ..... Mr. Clifford Heatherley
Fabian ..... Mr. Donald Calthrop
Feste ..... Mr. Henry Ainley
Countess Olivia .... Miss Amy Brandon Thomas
Maria ..... Miss Esme Hubbard
Viola ..... Miss Phillida Terson

There was not a vacant seat in His Majesty's Theatre on Thursday when a special performance of Twelfth Night was given. There were present on this occasion a large number of boy and girl students, whose agreeable task it has been to study this play of Shakespeare's. It has been said of Twelfth Night that it is not only written in the poet's happiest vein of comedy, but the comic personages are his own creations and of native growth. Charles Lamb, in particular, has shown very clearly that Malvolio is a character conceived in Shakespeare's most original vein of mingled pathos and humour. By many it is supposed to have been designed as a satire on Puritanism. It cannot be denied that the character is not without Puritan touches, and there is the fact that incidental ridicule is cast upon the Puritans in certain passages both of Twelfth Night and of All's Well that Ends Well, which belong to about the same period in the series of plays.

Mr. Tree's revival of the comedy, when his accomplished daughter, Miss Viola Tree, appeared in the rôle of Viola, was an event of considerable theatrical interest, as it was the young actress's first serious attempt at the portrayal of a Shakespearean heroine. As regards Mr. Tree's Malvolio, it is by this time a pretty well known embodiment; its many merits have been generally admitted, and it remains one of his best and most artistic Shakespearean character studies. Olivia's steward stands before us to-day as he did when Mr. Tree first appeared in the part—a perfect embodiment of the coxcomb whose extravagant conceit and the exorbitant value he places upon his personal attraction render him fair game for the fun-loving Maria and her fellow conspirators, Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Aguecheek. In the scene in Olivia's garden in the second act hearty merriment was excited, first by the long soliloquy of the steward and the dodging movements of the listening conspirators as they follow in his track round the neatly-trimmed hedge, and secondly, the scheme having succeeded, by Malvolio's appearance in yellow stockings, cross-gartered, and beaming with smiles at his mistress. Mr. Tree's success was a repetition of that achieved on every occasion he has played the part.

As regards the other prominent comic characters, Mr. Edward Sass deserves to be highly complimented on his richly humorous portrayal of Sir Toby Belch. The genial old toper had indeed a thoroughly competent representative in Mr. Sass, who scored every legitimate point that could be made. Mr. Norman Forbes can also be credited with a sound performance as the fatuous Sir Andrew, taking a full share of the honours in all the scenes in which he appeared. The Kitchen scene was admirably worked up to the point where the merry party as they caper round join in the delectable ditty "Which is the properest day to drink," the origin of which is said to be lost in obscurity. Mr. Gerald Lawrence played with due dignity the character of Orsino, and Mr. Fred Terry was a handsome representative of Sebastian. Excellent, too, was the Antonio of Mr. Hubert Carter and the Sea Captain of Mr. Henry Morrell. Mr. Henry Ainley deserves warm praise for his capital embodiment of the clown, Feste, and his song in the kitchen scene was well rendered. Mr. Donald Calthrop was good as Fabian, and commendable were the Valentine and Curio of Mr. Frank Esmond and Mr. Eric Ward. Miss Phillida Terson played with rare charm and conspicuous ability the rôle of Viola, and the special calls she received in the course of the afternoon were quite deserved. Her acting throughout showed a keen insight into the character of the girl, disguised as a young man. In the scene in the Duke's palace she was also successful as a vocalist, her rendering of the song being charming. Miss Amy Brandon Thomas depicted the Countess Olivia in satisfactory style, and Miss Esmé Hubbard put plenty of vivacity into her embodiment of the merry maid Maria. The comedy was staged in the complete manner one is accustomed to at His Majesty's

GERMAN VARIETY ARTISTS.

The International Artists' Lodge, the German sister organisation of the Variety Artists' Federation, with whom it is affiliated, as with the White Rats of America, and with the Union Syndicale des Artistes Lyriques of France, is certainly a powerful ally, and in more than one respect an undaunted pioneer worthy of every support and consideration.

In point of membership this comparatively young Association can boast of a strong, representative, and rapidly-increasing roll; during the past year the numbers rose from 780 to 1,254 members, an increase of over 60 per cent. And under the energetic, circumspect, and always dignified management of its president, Mr. Max Berol-Konorah, the Lodge has a considerable number of radical improvements to its credit, which are of immense benefit to the entire music hall profession. Its introduction, after a hard fight, of a uniform normal contract, would alone suffice to amply justify its existence; some 20,000 forms of that instrument have already been supplied from the Lodge's offices.

It will be remembered that towards the end of the year 1908, on the occasion of the annual "Dom" at Hamburg, the gigantic Christmas Fair, which gathers together artists, directors, and agents from all parts of the Continent, there was ratified a peace between representatives of both parties after a prolonged period of mutual attack. Both sides, the International Artists' Lodge and the Variety Directors' Union, agreed to "bury the hatchet, and gave definite promises of certain performances and omissions. Thus the Lodge immediately raised its boycott against ten music halls, and stopped proceedings for a boycott on a gigantic scale, then being organised by several allied trade unions, and involving some 5,000,000 members. One of the principal causes of friction was largely a personal one. A number of trade unions had been approached by the president of the I.A.L., Mr. Max Berol-Konorah, with a view to enlisting their sympathy with the artists from the paying spectators' point of view, and this step was regarded by the directors, who had convened a Congress at Dusseldorf, as an unwarranted, insolent, and impertinent interference with their right of action. Mr. Konorah's reply was to place his resignation in the hands of his committee, who, however, did not accept it, but forwarded to him a unanimous vote of confidence in writing. As a fundamental condition of peace, the Lodge maintained its right of coalition and complete freedom of ordering its own affairs.

Numerous irksome imposts and restrictions have been removed through the vigorous action of the Lodge. In the case of the town of Bremen, where an amusement tax of 4 per cent. on the gross earnings of a performer used to be charged, plus 10s. per head during the time of the fairs, the Lodge, after wearisome litigation, eventually got these penalties removed by an appeal to the Supreme Court of the German Empire, the "Bundesrat." Then, again, the Augean stables, cyclept agencies, were thoroughly cleansed. Anyone with the least suspicion of "white slave" traffic to his name was relentlessly prosecuted with the utmost rigour of the law. The nefarious practise of giving "backsheesh" to the agents' secretaries or representatives also has been largely stamped out, as the result of a determined campaign. Meanwhile, as far as the law of the country is concerned, the Lodge, in co-operation with the German Actors' Association, has succeeded in rousing the Government into activity, and official as well as private data and statistics are being collected towards the framing of an Imperial Theatre Law, embracing every branch of the profession. The Lodge, however, is not sitting still, but with a wholesome belief in the principle of self-help, has already achieved much that is of benefit.

One enterprise, of great assistance during the winter months in relieving unemployment as far as possible, was the formation of a syndicate, mainly at the instrumentality of the Lodge, which also became the principal shareholder, for the purpose of sending touring companies into those smaller towns in Germany where there are no permanent music halls. The first attempt at sending out touring companies, just completed, shows that twenty-four complete programmes have been on the road, drawing an aggregate of £5,000 in salaries and dividend for the shareholders was, of course, not expected, but this trial has proved so promising that further companies will be sent out after July, more especially to those towns which experience has proved to be remunerative.

At the last annual general meeting of the International Artists' Lodge, held at Berlin, under the presidency of Mr. Max Berol-Konorah, with Mr. Adolf Wotpert in the vice-chair, and assisted by the Lodge's legal adviser, Syndic Dr. Richard Treitel, twenty-four members were present. The principal business before the meeting was a readjustment of some of the bye-laws governing the loan department of the Lodge. In view of the large amount outstanding, about £1,000, and the difficulty in enforcing regular repayment, it was proposed, and unanimously carried, that "for the future the amount out on loan must at no time exceed 25 per cent. of the Lodge's entire capital." A further measure was passed, laying it down that "loans are only to be granted for the payment of fares to take up an engagement, or in case of unforeseen distress arising from incapacity of earning a livelihood. Such incapacity of earning must be caused by force majeure, or similar circumstances." This, it was stated by Mr. Leo Herzberg, was in accordance with the original intentions for which the Lodge was founded, which could not undertake to maintain members during an indefinite period of unemployment. Such loans were simply granted to enable an artist to reach his engagement without being forced to immediately draw on account of his salary, or even before signing the contract. No loans are to be made in future on contracts containing an 'open notice clause.'" A warning was issued cautioning artists against signing any contract containing a paragraph by which the director has the power to annul the engagement within the first three days. Some cases were cited, notably that of Director Prinz, of the "Flora," in Altona, who was in the habit of regularly giving notice to artists within the first three days, only to re-engage them subsequently at a docked salary. In some individual cases these reductions amounted to as much as £40. The legal advice and protection department of the Lodge has also been instructed not to act for anyone holding a contract with an "open notice clause." No loan, inclusive of extension or grace, will be allowed to stand out longer than six months.

Seven members of the committee have retired owing to illness, overwork, and various other causes, namely, Dr. Saubermann, Messrs. Kaufmann, Carl Schwartz, Traney, Will. Franklin, and Mountford, their places being filled by the election of Messrs. Carl Reinsch Fritz Schmuck, Ernst Mayo, C. Baggesen, Emil Waldoff, Schenk-Marvelly, and E. Solbrig (Automatus). In connection with the vacancies occurring on the committee, the president stated emphatically that they were in no way due to any internal dissensions, as had been stated by the opposition Press, but entirely to natural causes. Mr. Mountford was only temporarily suspended from office, owing to some trifling delay of probably a clerical nature.

Carl and Carr's new song, "By the sea," by Mellor and Gifford, and published by Francis, Day, and Hunter, is going great guns.

Those clever children, Beatie and Babs, with their burlesque and their dancing, are scoring a great success at the Folies Bergere, Paris.

THE RUTH ST. DENIS CASE.

In the King's Bench Division on Tuesday, before Mr. Justice Lawrence and a special jury, Miss Ruth St. Denis, the well-known dancer, was sued by Mr. Ike S. Rose for damages for alleged breach of an agreement, under which the plaintiff was appointed the sole manager of Miss St. Denis's business. The defendant, by her defence, alleged that the plaintiff himself had been guilty of breach of contract, and that his services were useless, and she on her part claimed damages.

Sir F. Low, K.C., and Mr. Frampton appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Sanderson, K.C., and Mr. E. T. Spence represented the defendant.

In opening the case, Sir F. Low stated that the plaintiff entered into a contract in January, 1909, with Miss St. Denis, under which he undertook the management of that lady's affairs. The plaintiff was what was known as an impresario, and he was approached some time in the summer of 1908 by Miss St. Denis and her brother with regard to the question of management. Miss St. Denis was a well-known dancer, who commanded a very high salary for her performances. She wished, however, to improve her position, not only in the United Kingdom, but also on the Continent and in the United States. Mr. Rose was a gentleman who could obtain special advantages for such a lady, and an agreement was arrived at in January, 1909, under which the plaintiff was to act as sole manager for Miss St. Denis for a period of twelve months, he receiving by way of remuneration 20 per cent. of Miss St. Denis's salary and fares when travelling abroad.

Mr. Rose, continued counsel, was to have authority to book engagements, and if Miss St. Denis obtained an engagement herself then Mr. Rose was still to receive his 20 per cent. Up to that time Miss St. Denis's salary was never more than £100 a week, but through Mr. Rose she secured an engagement at the London Coliseum at £275 per week. That engagement extended for eight weeks, and a week each in Edinburgh and Glasgow under the same management. What gave rise to the dispute was that Mr. Rose went to the Continent for four days on business, and for that the lady terminated her contract. She then appeared to have entered into an engagement with a Mr. Harris, who was a well-known theatrical agent, to be her manager.

Miss St. Denis then proceeded to the United States, and she was still in America earning salaries at the rate of £400 per week. All Mr Rose had received was £110, and he now claimed £440, balance due on the Coliseum engagement and a very large sum by way of commission for the intervening three years. Counsel characterised the defences put forward as trivial.

The plaintiff, giving evidence in support of his case, said he was not in the ordinary sense a theatrical agent, but managed for one or two "stars." Through his representations Messrs Moss and Stoll offered Miss St. Denis seventeen weeks in London at £275 a week and £300 for a week at York. The plaintiff also offered her engagement in America at £400 a week, but Miss St. Denis said that she was under agreement with Mr Harris. He asserted that he could get Miss St Denis at least thirty weeks a year, so that his remuneration would be at least £1,200 a year under the terms of his agreement. He was not away six days, but only from the Tuesday night to the Sunday. Miss St. Denis claimed commission on the private engagements she got.

Sir F. Low: She complained of the dressing room at the Coliseum?—Yes; but she had the "star" dressing-room, and she had two carpets put in it. It was nicely got up.

Sir F. Low: Every "star" has a carpet. (Laughter.)

And this "star" had two carpets, remarked his lordship, at which there was renewed laughter.

The plaintiff, in reply to Mr. Sanderson, cross-examining, said he had certain business connected with another "star" as well as with Miss St. Denis. He had also to attend to a divorce suit between himself and his wife. He arranged with Ashton's Royal Agency to put Miss St. Denis on their books for 105 guineas in the hope that she would appear before the King.

No evidence was called for the defence, and

Sir F. Low having addressed the jury, the further hearing was adjourned till Wednesday, when Mr. Sanderson, addressing the jury for the defendant, said it was a great misfortune that the defendant was unable to be present. He asked the jury to believe that, in spite of what the plaintiff had said, he had absented himself from business for a longer period than was allowed by the terms of his engagement. While he was supposed to be devoting the whole of his time to the defendant he was in fact devoting his attention to another "star."

His lordship, in summing up, commented upon the fact that Miss St. Denis secured engagements at £400 a week. That was no doubt very good money. It was a large sum for people who worked with their head to get—(laughter)—but when it came to the other extremity he could not form an estimate. (Renewed laughter.)

The jury assessed the damages at £1,750. Judgment accordingly, with costs.

RICHMOND HIPPODROME.

Despite other attractions, business has been distinctly good here for the past week. Among the early turns are Tiny and Mite, who win quite a lot of applause. They have youth on their side, and will do better anon; at present their performance is one of some merit. Arthur Reece demonstrates that he is as popular as ever. His first effort, "The Picture Shows," causes endless merriment. The verses go to prove that even the cinematograph has its drawbacks. His greatest success is reserved for his clever sketch, Good-bye to Bachelor Days. The title tells its own amusing story. Always delightfully droll, Dutch Daly scores an unmistakable success. As a raconteur few can equal him—none excel; and his concertina solos are delightful.

Making a Man of Her is the title adopted by the Oakes duo for their selection. It is a bright little show, crammed with quips, cranks, and no end of funny business.

An ovation is accorded "The Dandies," who renew their acquaintance with old admirers here. Refined, tuneful, and witty, it is small wonder that this gifted little party has rapidly moved along to the front rank. "The ladies of Boulogne" proves one of the hits of the evening, while "If I were King" proves how well the individual members of the party can do. Our Audiences is quite an original skit in its way. It hits off to a nicety the follies and foibles of an everyday audience, and, if a little exaggerated, is none the less amusing.

Mystery in the programme is provided by the Mystic Lazern, who juggles and puzzles the audience to their apparent satisfaction. Lazern is good. Melodrama of the pronounced type is provided by Henry Herne and company, in "a terrific water sensation," entitled Blackmail. The sketch is admirably interpreted by a capable company, which includes Miss Ida Millais. It is quite a novelty in stage-setting. Maidie Burker, a dainty comedienne, the Sisters Herbert, and the Bioscope complete a really fine bill.

Harry Lauder has appeared before many kinds of people, but probably his most curious audience was in an asylum in America. Here he sang to a thousand lunatics. They enjoyed his turn immensely, and joined in heartily in the chorus of "I love a lassie." After the entertainment one patient took Mr. Lauder aside and whispered in his ear, "For my sake, don't make faces or do anything to make them think you're a bit off, or they'll keep you here!"

"DARE-DEVIL DRIPPING."

Sketch, in Three Scenes, by Fred Moule and E. D. Nicholls, Produced at the Surrey Vaudeville Theatre on Monday, April 4.

Ambrosia V.	Mr. Harry M'Clelland
Princess Pauline	Miss Ada Lucelle
Sir Brian	Mr. Harry Lewis
Robert Duke of Athenia	Mr. C. Robinson
Balmiceda	Miss Ada Frank
Dare-Devil Dripping	Mr. E. D. Nicholls

The adventures of "that dreadful detective," who has been entertaining music-hall audiences for some time past, are continued in the edition under the above title presented by Messrs. Adderley Howard and E. D. Nicholls' company. It is an irresponsible mixture of the comic and romantic, a story of love in high places being combined with mirthful episodes amid which Detective Dripping disports divertingly. The "terrible 'tec" is the accomplice of the unscrupulous Duke of Athenia, who comes to wed under threat of war the pretty daughter of his neighbour, the King of Paragonia. The Princess favours the suit of the gallant Sir Brian the Brave, and in order to escape the hated attentions of the Duke, changes places with her lady-in-waiting, Balmiceda. The Duke himself has also rung the changes with Dripping, and falls in love with the real Princess, whom he carries off to his mountain castle. "Dripping" volunteers his assistance, and sallies off on his fiery steed Mazeppa, but it is the doughty Sir Brian who rescues the lady and wins her for his bride.

The opportunities for fun-making are thoroughly grasped by Mr. E. D. Nicholls, whose catch-phrase, "What, what, what!" is as mirthful as ever, his antics as the mock king being very funny. An odd personality is also that of Balmiceda, one of the most extraordinary maids-in-waiting that ever existed, whose eccentricities are quaintly emphasised by Miss Ada Frank. Mr. Harry Lewis makes an admirable hero of Sir Brian the Brave; and Miss Ada Lucelle a dainty and refined Princess. Mr. Harry M'Clelland is a commanding figure as the King; and the malevolent nature of the Duke of Athenia is thoroughly suggested by Mr. C. Robinson. The scenery is new and elaborate, and the costumes well in keeping with the production for which effective music is furnished by Mr. Carl Hamlin.

The success of Mr. Roy Cochrane's production of Rob Roy, with himself as the bold outlaw, has been so pronounced that it is retained in the bill for a second week, and rouses full houses to enthusiasm over the fine acting and remarkable mounting. In addition to the two sketches the variety portion of the programme is most attractive. Miss Emma Ames introduces her mechanical toy dogs effectively in her song "How would you like to make a fuss of this?" and "What the stars tell" is revealed in novel and humorous fashion. Miss Ames scores repeatedly and is loudly recalled. Similar honours are bestowed upon Mr. Harry Bancroft, who cheerily sings of a "Locket in his pocket," and whose fine voice enables him to do complete justice to the sentiment of his ballad of "Years and years ago," in which a "Darby and Joan" are affected spectators of the wedding of a youthful pair. Both songs boast tuneful refrains, in the rendering of which Mr. Bancroft cleverly enlists the services of the house. Harrigan and Holt, the inspector and policeman, are accomplished comedians and patterers, and with their knockabout dance one of the successes of the evening. Chris. Harland gains admiration for his "Fairy Fountains," before which dainty singers and dancers illustrate "The Storm," "Daybreak," "Sunrise," and other natural phenomena. Mr. Chas. Woodward pleases with his songs, and uses his magic mirror effectively and other contributors to the well-furnished programme are Nellie Neil, comedian and dancer, and Clarke and Mostol, in a dancing act, together with the Pick of the Picture World.

WOOLWICH HIPPODROME.

Very attractive and popular fare is placed before the patrons of this hall for the current week, and hearty receptions are being bestowed upon several old favourites. Topping the bill are Lew Lake and company in their latest comedy-drama, entitled King Nobbler, which proves itself a great attraction, and is warmly received. In the title-rôle Lew Lake submits a character which is quaintly humorous and serious by turns, and hearty approbation is accorded him for his efforts. His ever-attached partner Bob Morris is also to the fore as Jerry, and sustains the part in ludicrous fashion. Another member of the company is Dave Bentley, who as the Jew, Abe Isaacs, produces much hilarity by his antics. Zacchari, cannibal astrologer, is ably represented by H. Roberts, and Harry Lavers does well as the Cannibal Chief, and G. Thursby takes advantage of his opportunities as the shipwrecked sailor. The sketch, which is unfolded in four scenes, is admirably mounted.

Jay Laurier, the inimitable droll, as usual, convulses the house, his infectious laugh and facial expressions causing the countenance of the most stern and steely-faced individual to relax at first into a grin and finally into hearty laughter. Graham's juveniles, in their vocal and musical scena, prove an attractive turn, their songs, which conclude with "The boys of the Old Brigade," being greatly enjoyed and flatteringly rewarded.

The jolly little Dutch girl, May Moore-Duprez, continues to bubble over with merriment and good humour, which spreads across the footlights with rapidity, and her singing of "Gretchen—that's me," which is interspersed with considerable humorous banter, is received with emphatic expressions of approval; her clog-dancing is also much appreciated. A juvenile musical comedy is provided by Jacks of Britain, who introduce several well-rendered nautical ballads. The turn also includes several dances, and is highly approved.

Jordan and Harvey, the popular Hebrew comedians, maintain as strong a hold as heretofore in their song "Solomon"; and Ada Cerito is in capital form with her ever-popular football ditty, "Half time—change over." She has another contribution, "If you are looking for a husband," which also fetches the audience. That excellent child mimic Jenny Alexander repeats several of her well-known imitations, and Fred Keeton sings "Simple Simon." The Bioscope concludes.

The Adelphi Theatre, Liverpool, which ceased its career as a playhouse a few years ago, has been turned into a School of Physical Culture, with boxing tournaments as the attraction. The old Adelphi Theatre was first opened in 1789, and in 1805 it was called the Olympic Circus. Three years later the walls were raised, and three tiers or stories were added to the auditorium. In 1831 the circus was rebuilt and decorated, and the ring space was converted into a pit. The theatre was christened the Queen's in this year, but in 1843 it was named the Victoria. About 1846 a townsman, Mr. J. Hammond, took over the premises, and reopened the house as the New Theatre Royal Adelphi on Easter Monday, April 13, 1846. It was quite usual at this time to see lines of carriages reaching as far as Islington. In 1869 the establishment was known as the Adelphi Music Hall and Theatre of Varieties, and in latter days was run as a variety theatre on the two-houses-a-night principle. Since the magistrates refused to license the house for dramatic entertainments the theatre has been occupied by the Liverpool Gymnastic Club, Limited.

The latest quotations for music hall shares are as follows:—Alhambra, 1⅞; Empire (15s. paid), 1⅜; ditto (10s. paid), 1⅛; London Pavilion, 3⅛; ditto, pref., 5; Metropolitan, ⅞; Moss' Empires, 4⅛; Oxford, 6⅞; Palace Theatre (9s. paid), 31-32; Tivoli, New, 6⅛.

"THE SICILIANS."

Sketch, in One Scene, by Hugh Wynter, with Music by Ernest Vousden, Produced at the Chelsea Palace on Monday, April 4.

Gonzalo	Mr. Bert Walton
Beppo	Mr. Harry Turner
Luiz	Mr. Wilfred Howard
Malfia	Miss Amy Augarde

Designed to afford opportunity for a popular vocalist to exercise the charms of a cultivated voice, The Sicilians admirably fulfils its purpose. Apart from that, the motive of the piece is slender, and treats of the well-worn theme of an eccentric will, by the terms of which a miserly innkeeper of Palermo is to marry before the age of seventy or forfeit his fortune to his niece. That young lady happens to be a roving singer, and on the very day on which her uncle attains the stipulated age, she appears at the inn. The old man has not yet been able to find a bride, so he induces the young girl to consent to go through the marriage ceremony with him. Details are discussed over the dinner-table, and mine host, liberally plied with wine, reveals his secret to his niece, who keeps him engaged till the clock strikes the allotted hour, when the miser is compelled to surrender his hoard.

Miss Amy Augarde makes a fascinating singing girl, and acts brightly. Her exquisite voice, beautifully clear and perfect in tone, is heard agreeably in a song with the refrain of "Roses," and later she infuses quite the comedy spirit into a sarcastic lay addressed to the old uncle. That character is cleverly sketched by Mr. Bert Walton, who makes comic capital out of very meagre chances, and causes much laughter. Mr. Wilfred Howard and Mr. Harry Turner give good support. The sketch is prettily mounted.

Farcical features are also apparent in The Wager, in which a young lady, who has made a bet that she will make her backward lover propose, effects her purpose by dressing up as an old Irish lady with a handsome fortune. The comedietta is played by Mr. Percy Murray, who figures drolly as a facetious family retainer, and his company.

Popular contributions to the programme are made by Mr. Arthur Slater, known far and wide as "the whistling man in white." Mr. Slater is a song-writer as well as a siffleur, for he renders a composition of his own, called "Uncle Amos," in which the performer's accomplishments are entertainingly utilised. His reproductions of the songs of the feathered tribe continue to arouse enthusiasm, his imitation of a canary and of a skylark winging its way to the clouds being particularly admired. Operatic selections also come within Mr. Slater's scope, the overture to Poet and Peasant being rendered without a flaw. Mr. Barry Lupino quaintly patters about a father ever "calm and collected," and moves the house to enthusiasm by his extraordinary dancing.

The eccentric side of terpsichore is also presented by Moon and Morris, who have some amusing cross-talk; Miss Queenie Essex is a dainty and refined comedienne. Miss Carlotta Levey gains the hearty vocal support of the house in her tuneful chorus songs, "Study those who study you" and "Dear old pals"; and new versions of familiar tricks are cleanly presented in the series of magical problems accomplished by Mr. Fred Wilkinson in association with his comely assistant, Miss Ruby Mayor. Hughes and Elliott have a skilful singing and dancing act; and Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope concludes the entertaining bill. Mr. J. Norman Berlin and Mr. George B. Andrews occupy their accustomed places as manager and acting-manager respectively, happy in the knowledge of the substantial dividends which the hall is earning under their fostering care.

"A MUDDLED MODEL."

Produced at the Standard Music Hall, Victoria, on Monday, April 4.

The Lady of Colour	Miss Sadie Foote
The Artist	Mr. Leonard Aardale
His Sweetheart	Miss Dora Weber

It would seem to be the worst possible thing to do to become engaged to "the sweetest girl in all the world" if you happen to be an artist. Sweetest girls are often very jealous ones, and when they find that their best boys are advertising for "a lady of swarthy colour with a perfect figure," the poor chap who is found out may be considered to be in for no end of trouble. This proved to be so with the hero and heroine of A Muddled Model, a very laughable and entertaining sketch that has been seen at the Standard this week.

The artist finds that he must have a real lady of colour to pose for the great masterpiece he is working on, having for its subject "The Queen of Sheba." So he advertises for a dusky beauty, who shall have perfect features and a gorgeous figure. His sweetheart discovers the advertisement, and in most decided tones announces her intention of being present when the applicants arrive. In vain the artist urges that it is purely a business transaction, but the admission that she of the perfect figure will be required to display it but thinly veiled with filmy robes, makes the artist's fiancée more determined than ever that her Reginald shall not be left alone with "the woman." Whilst the debate is becoming a very heated one, a knock is heard at the door, and the Lady of Colour is announced. Seizing his sweetheart in his arms, the artist carries her to an adjoining room to the studio, and locks the young lady in, though it must be recorded she vigorously protests with tongue, fist, and feet in fine style against this treatment.

Enter the Lady of Colour (Miss Sadie Foote), very good-looking, and undoubtedly a fine figure, with a generous supply at that. She tells the artist she has come in reply to his advertisement, takes it for granted that she will suit, and asks the nature of the business she is required for. On learning that she is to be a model for the Queen of Sheba, "the lady who made love to King Solomon," and that the young person was not overdressed, she protests that her doctor had advised her in all circumstances always to wear flannel next her skin, and that, come what may, the flannels would not be removed. The Coloured Lady at this stage introduces matrimonial claims on the artist, and goes behind a screen to disrobe. Miss Foote's acting is remarkably good in this scene, her remarks when behind the screen, and again when making appearances from time to time in various stages of undress, being the signal for peals of merriment. The end comes when the artist's sweetheart manages to escape from the room, and confronting the dusky queen, addresses an unfortunate remark to her. The Lady of Colour at once declares her intention of doing damage to her rival's face, and in his efforts to protect his future bride, the artist has a very rough time of it. In the pitched battle which follows the enraged model wrecks the studio, and then departs in a make-up that is as screamingly funny and original as anything we remember to have seen.

The little piece plays for about twenty minutes, and it is quite impossible to record how many times one is compelled to laugh during that time. Miss Dora Weber is brightness itself, and her jealousy is absolutely real, and never overdone, as it might so easily be. Mr. Leonard Aardale looks the artist to the life, and one feels sorry for him when at the curtain the enraged negress does so much damage to his pretty home. His acting was always brisk, and he kept the fun going from first to last. In A Muddled Model Miss Foote has undoubtedly a very fine sketch.

THEATRE FIRE AT BARRY.

An outbreak of fire occurred at Barry Docks on Wednesday morning at the People's Hall. The premises are electrically lighted throughout, and it was only at their last meeting, acting as the authority under the new Act, that the Barry Urban District Council licensed the place as a cinematograph theatre. The lower portion of the premises is used by the proprietors as a variety house and for side-shows, there is a shooting gallery behind, and the large hall is used as the cinematograph show. Upstairs are the sleeping quarters of Mr. Lloyd's family and artists, and a portion of the upper floors is also used as a seamen's boarding-house.

It appears that the outbreak was first noticed by a neighbour named Mr. Edward Woodham, who quickly tried to arouse the inmates. Mr. Patrick Gervase, a nephew of the proprietor, was the first to be awakened, and, quickly realising the danger, went from room to room giving the alarm to the other sleepers. He succeeded in arousing all, and they made their way to the street as quickly as possible. In the meantime, owing to the delay caused by saving the others, Gervase's retreat had been cut off. He was on the top storey of the four that constitute the building. The only means of his reaching the ground appeared to be by way of a rope, but this necessitated a drop of several feet. Seeing his danger, Gervase tied some of his bed-clothing to the end of the rope to lengthen it, and making these fast to a leg of a sofa, swarmed down the novel escape to the ground without receiving any injury.

Another narrow escape was that of an artist named Leslie Smith. He had only time to slip on a pair of trousers, and even then his way down the staircase was cut off. Smith jumped through one of the windows into a yard 20ft. below. Unfortunately, he alighted upon a quantity of glass, and his feet, being bare, were badly cut.

Under the command of Supt. D. Morris and Inspector R. H. Thomas, the police Fire Brigade was quickly on the scene, and their energetic efforts with but primitive appliances resulted in the conflagration being got under control about four o'clock, three hours after the first alarm.

It was at first thought that everyone had got out safely, but it was later found that William Walters, a dwarf, who stands about 3ft., hailing from Plymouth, was missing. He had been seen to follow Mrs. Lloyd, the proprietor's wife, downstairs, but since then no trace could be found of him. Mr. Woodham, Supt. Morris, and Inspector Thomas, with their nostrils swathed in wet handkerchiefs, repeatedly entered the flames at the risk of their lives, but could find no trace of the unfortunate dwarf; while one of the constables in his search tripped over what he thought to be a human body, but which turned out to be that of a dog of Mr. Lloyd's which had lost its life in the flames. Walters' body was discovered later in a quantity of water in a cellar. He had evidently taken a wrong turning in this endeavour to escape, and, falling down the cellar steps, lost his life either by suffocation or drowning.

The New Theatre, New York, will shortly close for the season. It will reopen on Oct. 17 with the production of Maeterlinck's fairy play, The Blue Bird.

The lessees of the Porte Saint Martin Theatre, Paris, before the first night of Chantecler, brought three actions in £4,000 damages each for infringement of copyright against three newspapers, the Eclair, the Paris Journal, and the Bonne Chanson, which had published extracts of the work. After the first performance MM. Hertz and Jean Coquelin reduced their claims to 10d. in each suit. On Wednesday afternoon two of the actions were struck off the list by agreement.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[We do not answer inquiries by post. In all letters the names and addresses of inquirers must be given as a guarantee of good faith. Initials only or pseudonyms will be used in the answers if so desired.]

E. S.—Inquire at the theatre. (1) We have not seen a full cast. (2) The Editor.

Caldecot (Camberwell).—Amy Robsart was produced at Drury Lane Theatre on Aug. 29, 1871. Creswick was the Richard Varney.

G. C. W.—We have studied a cyclopædia of play titles, old and new, and cannot find the one you indicate. We therefore conclude that it has not been used.

S. A. Potter.—The hall dropped out of the running without any special announcement, and none of the Press was informed at the time. Write to the manager of the restaurant at Villiers-street. He could inform you.

Thomas Dimelow.—Write to Stationers' Hall, London, E.C., for the necessary forms for registering both the publishing and performing rights in the song. Fill up the forms and remit to Stationers' Hall, with 5s. for each form. A certificate of registration will then be forwarded and your rights preserved.

Haymarket Bureau.—The title is "The Telephone," by Jerome K. Jerome, and we are informed by a courteous correspondent that it will be found in "The Golden Humorous Reciter," 2s. 6d. from any discount bookseller, publishers Seeley and Co., Ltd. There is, we believe, another one, in "The Reciter's Treasury of Prose and Drama," same price; and if you ask to see both books you will soon find out which is the recitation. The one in "The Golden Humorous Reciter" is from "The Second Thoughts of an Idle Fellow," published by Hurst and Blackett, Ltd.

H. W.—King of Cadonia, musical play, in two acts, was produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Coventry-street, W., on Sept. 3, 1908. The cast was as follows: Duke of Alasia, Mr. Huntley Wright; Alexis, Mr. Bertram Wallis; General Bonski, Mr. Roland Cunningham; Captain Laski, Mr. F. Pope Stamper; Lieutenant Jules, Mr. Harold Deacon; Lieutenant Saloff, Mr. Cameron Carr; Paniz, Mr. Arthur Laceby; Laborde, Mr. Akerman May; Bran, Mr. George Barrett; Militza, Miss Gracie Leigh; Stephanie, Miss Peggy Bethell; Natine, Miss Queenie Merrall; Wanda, Miss Gladys Beech; Ottaline, Miss Claire Lynch; Fridoline, Miss Gladys Anderson; Duchess of Alasia, Mme. Amy Martin; and Princess Marie, Miss Isabel Jay.

Litt and Dingwall (New York).—Mrs. John Wood is still living. Born at Liverpool 1833, went to the States in 1854, first appeared in New York at the Academy of Music, Sept. 5, 1856, as Gertrude in The Little Treasure; from 1863 to 1866 was manageress of Mrs. John Wood's Olympic Theatre, New York. First appearance on London stage as Miss Miggs, in Barnaby Rudge, 1869; opened St. James's Theatre, October, same year, in She Stoops to Conquer; and after other productions at that house and appearances at the Adelphi, returned (1871) to the States for two years. Reappeared in London at the old Queen's Theatre, Long Acre, November, 1873, as Philippa Chester in The Wandering Heir; appeared at the opening of the Criterion, 1874, in the play, An American Lady; subsequently played engagements at the Gaiety, St. James's, Olympic, Prince of Wales's, Haymarket, Criterion, and Vaudeville; and in 1885 became connected with the Court Theatre, where she produced some excellent pieces by Sir Arthur Pinero. She appeared at Drury Lane Theatre in The White Heather (1887), The Great Ruby (1898), The Best of Friends (1902), and The Prodigal Son (1905). She is not acting now. To give a full answer to your question would require at least a page of our journal. These few particulars of a most interesting stage career will, we hope, be sufficient.

Presentation.—At the Star Theatre, Swansea, on Saturday, during the performance of For Love and the King, Mr. Watson Mill presented Mr. Wm. Coutts, the lessee and manager, with a token of his wife's and his own regard in the shape of a handsome gold match-box and gold-mounted fountain-pen. Mr. Mill made feeling reference to Mr. Coutts's excellent management of the Star, and to the forethought and consideration he always showed in arranging for the comfort of the artists. He also referred to the excellent business done at the house during his visit with For Love and the King. Mr. Coutts said he was quite unaccustomed to any such tributes, and asked Mr. and Mrs. Mill to accept his hearty gratitude.

In connection with the scheme for building a "Paris in London" on the Strand site, the L.C.C. Improvement Committee has received from the French Development Co., of Paris, a deposit of £5,000, which gives the company an option of a site covering 134,000 square feet. It is proposed to erect a large building at a cost of at least half a million sterling. It will have a frontage to Aldwych of 413ft. and to the Strand of 636ft., and will comprise:—Shops, with offices, fronting the Strand; a stone building of commanding architectural appearance; galleries for exhibitions of arts and manufactures; a theatre and concert hall; restaurants with courts around; and café restaurants.

The building will be bounded on east and west by 50ft. approaches. The French syndicate is represented in London by M. Ernest Gerrard, the architect, and M. C. de Lapré.

The negotiations have been conducted by M. Gerrard, and although the syndicate is not at present committed to any scheme, it will forfeit the £5,000 deposit if the option is not taken up within six months. A deposit of £55,000, including the £5,000 already paid, will be required by the Council upon the exchange of the building agreement. In the first year, however, the rent will be a peppercorn one. In the second it will be £13,750, £27,500 in the third year, and £41,250 in the fourth, after which the full rent will be paid.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR
ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
By ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).
RIGHT.
Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes" which is at present required. — St. James's Gazette.

PURPOSELESS PLAYS.

Although we are not in the confidence of that excellent man of business and able manager Mr. Charles Frohman as to his intentions with respect to future productions at the Repertory Theatre, it is pleasant to note that while Justice is retained in the bills, on and off, for the next fortnight, and Trelawny of the Wells has been twice played this week, Mr. Bernard Shaw's Misalliance and Mr. Granville Barker's Madras House have apparently been withdrawn from the programmes at the Duke of York's Theatre. Mr. Frohmann is too good a judge to make this change if these pieces had proved really successful. Of course, we know that a feature of the Repertory Theatre is the avoidance of long runs, and it is possible that it is intended to revive them; still, the removal of Misalliance and The Madras House is significant.

There is no doubt that there is a considerable "crank" minority in the playgoing world. The system of writing long "screeds" of mystic or humorous dialogue to conceal poverty of invention and weakness of construction was originated by Mr. Bernard Shaw in Major Barbara, which was produced at the Court Theatre on November 28, 1905. By calling the piece a "discussion" Mr. Shaw apparently imagined that he had done all that was necessary to defend it from criticism—a most mistaken conclusion. Major Barbara was not a discussion. It was a badly-constructed play, with slabs of talk used, as stucco is employed in "jerry-building," to cover the defects of the workmanship. At that time Mr. Shaw was what is called "the fashion"; and, in such circumstances, fair criticism seems impossible, for the peculiar mesmerism which is in the air affects the Press as well as the public. Not a single influential critic denounced the defects of Major Barbara as they would have done if the play had been the work of an unknown author. In this case the greatest injury was done to Mr. Shaw himself. Previously, though the plots of his plays had been simple, they were coherent, and the dialogue always tended to advance the action. After that Mr. Shaw's works became more "wobbly" and "talky" than ever. He seemed to think that anything would do for the public in the way of plot. The real trouble with Mr. Shaw's "second manner" was that a little grain of the playwright instinct still lingered and spoilt the game. Getting Married, the first two acts of which consist of a very droll discussion, was spoilt by the attempt to introduce incident in the last act in connection with an extraordinary female of ill-regulated sexual instincts, who fell into a trance and said strange things to a bishop. Had the discussion closed at the end of the second act, or had the amusing argument been protracted for a third, the audience might have gone home satisfied. Then there was The Doctor's Dilemma, a comedy which commenced with a first act of remarkable humour and cleverness, started a most interesting motive, and then gradually wandered away from the point at issue in mazes of cleverness; and, last of all, as a culmination of decadence, we have had Misalliance, against which even Mr. J. T. Grein, one of Mr. Shaw's most devoted admirers, has lifted up his indignant voice.

Our own opinions are well known; and we have maintained them through all the discouragement which is caused by seeing false principles flourish, as they often do pro tem., like the Scriptural bay-tree. It is strange to find our "old-fashioned prejudices" endorsed by so advanced a paper as the New Age, which has often shown its affection for Mr. Shaw. The dramatic critic of the paper says, writing of Misalliance and The Madras House:

> The defenders of Mr. Shaw and Mr. Barker talk of "an outworn tradition," or of "antiquated stage conventions." They assert or imply that all traditions of dramatic form are out of date, and that the new conversational dialogue of ideas is replacing them. They seem to imagine that such traditions are an obstacle to progress akin to the veto of the House of Lords; that they are "useless, dangerous, and ought to be abolished." Now the existing form of drama is pretty firmly established, and it cannot conceivably be upset by anything short of a masterpiece. If there is anyone who claims that either Misalliance or The Madras House is a masterpiece, that is, a great work of art, I imagine it will be futile to argue with him. The most that can reasonably be claimed for these plays is that they are extraordinarily suggestive and stimulating to thought. They do not stir enthusiasm, and it is not of such material that an artistic renaissance is made. . . . If Mr. Shaw and Mr. Barker were leading a revolt against mere staginess of this kind their position could be understood. But disregard of continuity of action is a very different matter. This is a dramatic tradition that cannot be despised, for it is really vital to the proper understanding of the play by the audience. It asks no more than that an issue once raised shall be followed out to its conclusion, that there shall be no superfluous characters, no "loose ends" or "blind alleys." This is a perfectly fair demand, for the time of three hours allotted by the conventions of the theatre, although quite adequate for the treatment of a single theme, is hopelessly insufficient for all the side issues that may legitimately be dealt with in an average novel, let us say, of a hundred thousand words. The real difficulty in play-writing is not what to say, but what to leave unsaid. Misalliance reaches the extreme of discursiveness and incoherence.

Of The Madras House the writer adds: "Surely it would have been better either to throw the whole story into the form of a novel, or to select only those incidents that could be conveniently treated upon the stage in the course of three hours." And he goes on to point out that D'Annunzio, Suderman, Strindberg, Björnson, Gorki, Schnitzler, and Maeterlinck are all consummate stagecraftsmen, and consequently careful constructors of plots.

All this is just what we have been urging against Mr. Bernard Shaw's recent work for years past. It is refreshing to find one's opinions echoed by the most literary of our modern weeklies and by the cultured public of the Duke of York's Theatre. We think that Mr. Shaw's game is nearly up. He must either reform or retire. It is a pity, though, that the author of The Voysey Inheritance and Waste should have been mesmerised into imitating a fashion which is outworn.

MISS VIOLET VANBRUGH AT EDINBURGH.

The annual meeting of the Needle and Thimble Guild was held on the 29th ult., in the Oak Hall of the Edinburgh Café, Edinburgh. Lady Dunedin, one of the patrons of the Guild, occupied the chair. Miss Lindsay Jardine, hon. secretary and treasurer, read the report, which showed that the membership was 526 in 1909, compared with 550 in 1908. In 1908, 1770 garments were contributed, and in 1909, 1251; while the amounts contributed were £33 in 1908 and £35 in 1909. Lady Dunedin thereafter introduced Miss Violet Vanbrugh, one whom, she said, really needed no introduction to an Edinburgh audience. They welcomed Miss Vanbrugh not only as one of their leading actresses, but as a friend. It was exceedingly kind of Miss Vanbrugh to come there that afternoon to encourage the work of the Guild. They were sometimes apt to forget that the life of the successful actress meant very hard work and constant study. To arrive at the top of the tree and to remain there meant great devotion to work and a very strenuous life, and, therefore, they were the more grateful to Miss Vanbrugh for giving up some of her leisure time to come there that afternoon. The object, as they knew, was to help the poorer members of the theatrical profession. They were still in need of members, and she hoped that meeting would lead to an increase in the membership, so that it might be even more successful than it had been before. In this connection Lady Dunedin commended the work of Miss Jardine. Miss Vanbrugh, at the request of Lady Dunedin, thereafter presented badges to Mrs. Ferguson and Miss Bruce in virtue of their having respectively contributed the most garments and secured the largest number of members. Miss Vanbrugh thanked Lady Dunedin for the very kind words she had spoken, and for saying that they regarded her as a friend as well as an actress. She was always delighted to play before an Edinburgh audience. She was glad to be allowed to give away the badges to those who had won them by their industry and goodwill, and who had worked for those who were unable to help themselves. That charity was founded by a member of the profession whose loving heart was always striving to help in some practical way those who had fallen. Few, if any, charities worked more unostentatiously for the good of others than the Theatrical Ladies' Guild in London and the Needle and Thimble Guild in Edinburgh—the only two organisations outside the theatrical profession that helped that good work. Votes of thanks were accorded to Miss Vanbrugh and to Lady Dunedin.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Your leading article of last Saturday conveys, unintentionally I am sure, a very mistaken impression as to the views set forth in the scheme and estimates for a National Theatre published some three years ago by Mr. Granville Barker and myself. In the first place, you say that we assume "an imaginary building holding 300," which is, of course, absurd. I presume that 300 must be a misprint for 1,300. Even this number is smaller than we ultimately estimated for. Then you say that we assumed the theatre to be usually only half full, from which your readers, I think, could not but gather that we expected this to be the normal condition of things at the National Theatre. This is very far from being the case. On the contrary, we stated over and over again that we were sanguine of success and popularity for such a theatre as we outlined. But in considering the amount of the requisite Guarantee Fund we were, of course, obliged to consider numerous possibilities; and among several other possibilities which we forecast—some much more favourable and others even less—we speculated on what might have to be done if, for a certain time, the average audience represented only half the capacity of the house. To prepare for an unfavourable possibility is not to assume it to be inevitable, or even probable. This distinction is clear, and I am sure you had no intention of obscuring it; but as readers of your article would be apt to overlook it, I hope you will find space for this explanation.—Yours faithfully,

WILLIAM ARCHER.

Mrs. George Cornwallis-West and other ladies are organising a costume ball in aid of the fund for the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre. Amongst those who have promised to assist is Lady Tree. The tickets will be 25s. each, to include a buffet supper. The grand tier boxes will be twelve guineas, the loggia boxes eight guineas, and the second tier boxes four guineas, in addition to the price of the entrance ticket, and special arrangements will be made for supper in the boxes. A band of a hundred performers has been engaged, and the costumes will represent characters in Shakespeare's plays, or personages of the Elizabethan period.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY ON THE NATIONAL THEATRE.

An eloquent speech in connection with the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre was delivered on Wednesday afternoon by Mr. Martin Harvey, at a meeting held at Lady Dickson-Poynder's house in Chesterfield-gardens, with the Countess of Wemyss in the chair.

Mr. Martin Harvey said:—Ladies and gentlemen, what we want, it seems to me, in this question of the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre, is unanimity. That is what I am here to pray for to-day. I remember some few years ago a question was raised whether we should have a statue of my great master, Sir Henry Irving, put up in a public place. Innumerable questions were immediately asked: Was not the record of his glorious reign at the Lyceum sufficient monument? Should we get money? Should not the memorial of his fame take some other form? Would it not be wiser to have a museum where the portraits and personal relics of other great actors as well as Sir Henry Irving might be housed? Was such a memorial necessary at all? &c., &c. A meeting of the members of our profession was called at the Garrick Theatre, and, luckily for us, Sir John Hare was in the chair. The meeting was very nearly rendered abortive by the diffuse discussions of these various questions, and I truly believe we should never have arrived at any decision at all had it not been for an eloquent appeal to the meeting by Sir John Hare for unanimity. Those who were present at the meeting immediately recognised that the right note had been struck. The situation was saved. Subscriptions came in at once. The statue is an accomplished fact, and stands at this moment in the studio of Mr. Brock, and will be set in its place (we hope) in a few weeks' time.

Now, it seems to me that we want something of the same spirit of unanimity to animate us at this present juncture. All civilised people have expressed their grateful remembrance of their exalted men by some tangible memorial, and it seems to me an inconclusive argument that, as we already possess the imperishable monument of Shakespeare's works, we need no other memorial or reminder. We might as well say: "Here is our Empire, here are our possessions, why float over them a Union Jack?"

Scotland does not deal with the question of rearing monuments to her literary giants in this half-hearted way. There are few cities of any importance over the Border which do not possess their monuments to Burns and Scott, "and a greater than these is here." We might have some excuse for our attitude if we could point to that continuous and unanimous enthusiasm for our great poet-playwright which other European countries present. It is notorious that in Germany, at least, the performance and knowledge of Shakespeare's works is far wider than our own. The fact is that we have no real excuse for this plea. So, then, let us clear the ground and decide that we must have that tangible memorial to Shakespeare.

Well, we have made a start, and, largely through the munificence of one princely donor, a good start too. Nearly one-fifth of the amount needed is already subscribed towards the erection and endowment of a Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre, for it has been decided that a National Theatre is the form this memorial to our great Shakespeare is to take.

You will remember that there were originally two proposals for the Shakespeare Memorial. One a comparatively modest scheme for a statue, the other for a theatre, and it was owing to the urgency of a large section of those interested in the performance of the drama that those who favoured the less costly memorial statue allowed themselves to be merged into that section who clamoured for a Memorial Theatre. And that is the point which we actor-managers and theatre-folk must not forget. It seems to me we are bound to see this through, lest we should be open to the reproach that the larger scheme failed for want of unanimity in our ranks, and after the more modest proposal had been forgone at our entreaties. For my own part, and aside from my own personal convictions, which are entirely in favour of it, I hold it a heritage of duty that I should do my small part in the furtherance of a scheme which Sir Henry Irving never lost an opportunity of enforcing upon our attention.

Long before his later misfortunes deprived him of the theatre he had, single-handed, reared into a national institution he had realised that it was not for one man to bear upon his shoulders such a stupendous burden as the maintenance of a National Theatre. In no other European country is he expected to do it. The State, the Municipality, the wealthy art patron, whichever it is, comes to the rescue, and says: "We recognise that the theatre has a refining and educational influence; that mere amusement is very well in its way; but the theatre shall not be narrowed down to amusement alone; the theatre shall be placed on such a footing that it shall be independent, to a great extent, of the consideration of financial success. Here is a freehold site to build your theatre upon, here is half a million to endow it; or, better still, here are both!"

Well, ladies and gentlemen, we know the old argument on the side of British individual enterprise and what it can accomplish, and we are proud enough to point to what it has accomplished: but how many of us know the cost? Especially when the enterprise has been exercised in the domain of art! We all look back with a glow of pride to the long series of revivals at the Lyceum Theatre under Sir Henry Irving which have added such lustre and dignity to the annals of theatrical history, but how many of those revivals paid? And shall we always be willing to allow one man who has the genius to rear such a national blessing to hold it aloft on his own unbuttressed shoulders—I say, shall we always be willing to stand by and see him wear out many years of his precious life in this effort for our benefit?

There have been long gaps in the history of the drama where no man has been found willing to sacrifice himself for the good of his generation. And what has been the history of the drama during that time? Little but a long sequence of senseless inanities. In the days to come we must not be content to either sacrifice more rare genius or to "muddle through" by trying to do the distinguished thing in a popular way, for that is an end which has never been achieved in the history of art. We must have an institution placed on a footing above the single necessity of paying, and which shall maintain the high standard which it will be nerved to maintain when associated with the immortal name of Shakespeare.

And the time is ripe for the rearing of that standard. The tercentenary of Shakespeare's death is approaching, and a great part of the civilised world will be paying tribute in some form to the memory of this greatest literary and dramatic genius. It is absolutely impossible to contemplate the possibility of that event being uncommemorated by some great movement in England—this "dear, dear England," of whom no man has spoken so inspiringly as Shakespeare himself—without the realisation of that memorial to him to the building of which we have put our hands.

Remember, we have burnt our boats—it cannot be a statue now. That scheme has been abandoned. It must be a Shakespeare National Memorial Theatre, and it will come. The public is ready for it. Look at the renewed interest there is in Shakespeare and his works; renewed largely because the tendency of modern Shakespearean scholarship has been to humanise the great author himself. In every important centre in the British Isles is growing up a branch of the British Empire Shakespeare Society, which will, I venture to say, prove to be a powerful organisation for the collection of subscriptions for our Memorial Theatre. Mr. Benson renews his Shakespearean Festival at Stratford-on-Avon under happier auspices than ever before; and Sir Herbert Tree is also able to announce no less than five weeks' festival at His Majesty's Theatre. Surely this last spectacle alone is enough to win over any who may be sceptical as to the possible success of our enterprise. I am sure we of the executive of the Shakespeare National Memorial Theatre are grateful to Sir Herbert Tree for proving to us at the critical moment the readiness of the public to support the undertaking and a great series of Shakespearean plays. The mere fact that so many distinguished members of my calling have lent their names to the Festival at His Majesty's Theatre is surely proof of their desire to honour Shakespeare in the most practical way, and indirectly to show their sympathy and belief in the ultimate destiny of the Shakespeare Memorial National Theatre. And that belief in its destiny will be realised. It is surely coming.

It is useless for the detractors of the proposal to write letters, to make speeches against it. It is premature, it seem to me, to discuss variations in the administration of such a theatre, that will come in due time, when we shall all be glad of further expert help and advice. In the meantime let us forget the little axe we all have at home which may be getting blunt and in need of grinding. Let us not worry too much about the composition or the administration of the executive—all these things will right themselves in time. Let us feel nothing but indebtedness to the many distinguished ladies and gentlemen of our committee who are pledged to promote this scheme, and whom my friend Harry Irving has a little unkindly, if very wittily, described as "superfluous magnificoes." Let us not dwell overmuch upon the cautious excellence of modern beginnings, but let us, remembering that it is the greatest name in literature we have to honour, do the big thing, and, as Lord Milner would say, "Damn the consequences."

A letter from Mr. Forbes-Robertson to Mr H. S. Perris, the organising secretary, was read, stating that Mr. Forbes-Robertson had made a start in the formation of an American committee to raise funds for the memorial.

A "new version" of the play-scene from A Midsummer Night's Dream was enacted in costume by a cast that included the Hon. Cynthia Charteris and Mr. Tom Heslewood.

"CURING A SELFISH HUSBAND."

A Comedietta, in One Act, by Guy Newall, Played at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne, on Monday, April 4.

The Man ..... Mr. Wyn Weaver
The Thing ..... Mr. J. Henry Twyford
The Woman ..... Miss Margerite Unett

(From our own correspondent.)

Old Scrooge is the classical example of a man's character being changed for the better through the agency of a dream, and in this comedietta the same idea has been cleverly utilised to provide an interesting front piece. The Man is a selfish gentleman with a taste for antiques. He has purchased a life-sized Indian idol, which he proudly places in a corner of his drawing-room. Seating himself comfortably upon a carefully cushioned sofa, he proceeds to enjoy himself with an interesting book and a good cigarette. His charming wife is very desirous of seeing a certain play at the theatre, and the husband casually remarks that he has two tickets for this particular theatre, but he forgot them until it is too late to use them. The wife, in desperation, warns him that her endurance of his selfish manners has reached the limit. Like most selfish people, he is the last person to realise that he practises this vice. However, he receives his wife's admonition philosophically, and soon falls asleep. The idol comes to life, and impressively points out to the husband that his selfish behaviour is killing his wife's love and driving her away from him. The wife is summoned by the idol, and she avows her intention to quit the house with the strange idol, and leave the Man behind to enjoy his own good opinion of himself alone. The husband attempts to protest forcibly, but a wave from the hand of the idol sends him reeling back in pain, and he is compelled to listen to the forceful remonstrance of both wife and idol. The husband awakes from his dream a changed man, and to make amends he displays kindness and consideration towards his loving wife, who disclaims any idea of familiarity with "Chutney," the idol, and all ends happily.

Mr. J. Henry Twyford plays impressively and with much dignity as The Thing (an Indian idol), and Miss Margerite Unett gives a praiseworthy rendering of The Woman. Mr. Wyn Weaver was excellent as the Man. The comedietta was favourably received.

At the council meeting of the Actors' Association, held on Tuesday, April 5, at 32, Regent Street, with Mr. Cyril Cattley in the chair, there were present Mr. H. W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Messrs. F. H. De Quincey, Robson Paige, H. Le Grand, Langford Reed, Leonard Shepherd, C. Hayden Coffin, Edward Morgan, Murri Moncrieff, Richard A. Greene, Miss Joan Pereira, Miss Beatrice Chester, and Mr. D. Young (secretary). The secretary read the minutes of the meeting held on the 29th ult., and the meeting confirmed and the chairman signed the same. The secretary read a letter from Miss Blanche De Lorme, and received instructions.

The hon. solicitors reported that they had advised two members, and were instructed further in regard to the recent Strand Theatre fiasco. With reference to licensing of agents by the L.C.C., it was proposed by Mr. R. A. Greene, seconded by Mr. R. Paige, and carried unanimously, that Mr. Cecil Raleigh be asked to represent the Association before the Parliamentary Committee of the L.C.C., and, in the event of his being unable to attend, that Mr. Greene be asked to attend.

The following were elected members: Mr. H. L. Lyndhurst, Mr. A. M. Carlton Crowe, Miss Myfanwy Newell, Miss Florence Radcliffe, Miss Penelope Wheeler, and Mr. Charles Graham; Miss Isabel Grey was reinstated; and Miss Beatrice Park, Mr. Ronald Squire, Mr. George Mudie, Mr. M. Hayden Hewitt, and Mr. R. Arthur Lane were nominated.

Mr. R. A. Greene drew attention to several advertisements appearing recently in the Press for amateurs and artists willing to give their services for trial performances of sketches in music-halls. Mr. Greene contended that these advertisements tended to foster "bogus management," and, on the motion of Mr. Paige, seconded by Miss Chester, it was arranged that Mr. Greene and Mr. Reed should interview the editor of the paper in which the advertisements appeared on the subject, and report at the next council meeting.

It was proposed by Mr. Greene, and seconded by Mr. Reed, that an advertisement be inserted asking all members of the profession to communicate particulars of any authentic case of bogus management to the secretary, and directions were given for the insertion of this advertisement, which was carried unanimously.

The Scottish Repertory Theatre, which has attained its first anniversary, has produced a play a week during the thirty-six weeks of its season, fourteen of the plays being novelties. The capital of £3,000 was subscribed by some citizens of Glasgow; the theatre is run upon the stock system, and is managed by a board of directors and an advisory committee.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

"LA BÊTE."

Play, in Four Acts, by M. Edmond Fleg, Produced at Antoine's on Monday, April 4.

Lucienne ..... Mme. A. Mégard
Mme. Esselin ..... Mme. Even
Mme. Marcès ..... Mlle. Massart
Sylvie ..... Mlle. Fusier
Germaine ..... Mlle. Mirval
Ketty ..... Mlle. Lecuyer
Pierre ..... M. Gémier
Guillaume Bussière ..... M. Roussell
Claude Patrice ..... M. Royer
Dr. Bussière ..... M. Clasis
Rosembray ..... M. Plateau
Saillard ..... M. Loris

(From our own correspondent.)

Paris, Thursday, April 7.—M. Edmond Fleg, a young playwright, has given us a very bold comedy, but it is to be regretted that his inexperience has caused him to deal with his subject in a decidedly indelicate manner, the subject being the "beast" of carnal passion that lurks in man and woman. His hero is Pierre Marcès, a debauchee, in whom the "beast" is strongly developed. In fact, he glories in his immorality, and would, if he could, emulate Nero. Unfortunately, we live in a prosaic age, and the law would not allow pranks like those in which that imperial scoundrel indulged. Pierre, therefore, is compelled to practice immorality on a smaller scale, something after the manner of a Don Juan or a Marquis de Priola. In search after fresh sensations, he gets himself introduced to Lucienne Esselin, a girl belonging to a highly respectable family, with the intention of marrying her first and then effecting her ruin. Lucienne loves her cousin Guillaume, a young scientist; but Pierre has such a wonderful influence over her that one night, yielding to temptation, she gives way to him. Although warned by Pierre's mother, Lucienne then becomes that man's wife. She despises her seducer, yet she is attracted towards him through the "beast" that has taken possession of her. Pierre's next move is to give himself the sensation of jealousy, for which reason he deliberately exposes his wife to the attentions of Claude Patrice, his friend, a painter. Until then the play had not much success, and the audience even laughed at some of the most pathetic scenes. But the turning point came in the third act, when Lucienne, after having rejected Patrice's advances, upbraids her husband for his villainy. She is in her own home, and has so far conquered herself that in response to Pierre's supplications to return to him she laughs in his face, telling him that she is "free," and will never again become his slave. Pierre goes away threatening vengeance. But, when alone, Lucienne calls out for her cousin, the young scientist, whom she wants to take care of her, for she realises the fact that she requires someone to protect her, possibly against herself and the "beast" within her. Mme. Andrée Mégard handled the difficult rôle of Lucienne with exquisite tact. In less skilled hands that part might easily have become ridiculous, but Mme. Mégard was equal to the occasion. M. Gémier was less satisfactory, in so far that at times he tried to overreach himself. M. Royer, on the other hand, impersonated the wicked painter, Patrice, with his usual talent. The other rôles were also well sustained by an efficient cast.

"TAIS-TOI, MON CŒUR!"

Vaudeville, in Three Acts, by Maurice Hennequin and Pierre Veber, Produced at the Palais-Royal on April 6.

Mirette ..... Mlle. Mistinguett
Prudence ..... Mme. Rosine Mauriel
Isabelle ..... Mlle. Simon
Balbine ..... Mlle. Calvat
Euphémie ..... Mlle. Lepers
Louison ..... Mlle. Garcia
Savinien ..... M. Le Gallo
Pinoche ..... M. Hurteaux
Edgard ..... M. Milo
Charles-Amédée ..... M. Reschal
Baruch ..... M. Clement

This smartly-written farce is a skit on the professional "rescuers," men whose aim in life is to rescue ladies who have strayed from the right path. Savinien de le Bombardière, a romantic youth, has undertaken this task, and he, therefore, feels only interested in girls who have "gone wrong." He looks after their moral and physical welfare, and, if by chance he feels casually attracted towards them, he remonstrates with himself, and calls out: "Tais-toi, mon cœur!" He is chaste, and, for this reason perhaps, is misunderstood—the fate of all true apostles. When the play opens he has taken in hand a flighty damsel of the name of Mirette, the daughter of an old cartomancienne, who has predicted the future to at least three generations of cooks and housemaids. Mirette has been brought up in a milieu of acrobats and clowns, whose company she prefers to that of the good Savinien, who, in return for his kindness, wants her to read edifying books and to play scales on the piano. The result is that the moment Savinien has turned his back, Mirette flies into the arms of Dupont, an elderly but funny man, whose company she prefers to that of the austere youth. This funny old gentleman's name is not Dupont. He is M. Pinoche, Professor at the Collège de France, where he lectures on Virtue and Duty. He has a daughter, Mlle. Balbine, and it so happens that Savinien's uncle wants him to marry her. Savinien is introduced to her, but he does not fancy marrying a respectable girl. He would rather rescue one and make her his wife afterwards. Nor does Balbine care for Savinien. She has lost her heart to her father's secretary, and she has sworn to remain faithful to him. The fact is she has many admirers, hankering after her fortune, but she has discovered a smart trick to drive them away. The moment a youth comes forward as a suitor she tells him that she is an illegitimate child. The effect on the suitors is electrical. When, however, she tells this story to Savinien, the latter at once becomes enthusiastic, and swears that nobody but Balbine will become his wife. The plot then degenerates into a broad farce. Mirette happening to call on M. Pinoche, discovers, to her dismay, that the great scientist and the funny Dupont are the same person, and this scene between the representatives of the scientific and the half-world is one of the best in the piece. Mirette is tired of being treated with respect by Savinien, who is by no means a bad-looking man. She tries her powers of seduction, and Savinien is not proof against them. He will remain with Mirette, but no longer as a rescuer. As to the funny Dupont, his wife, having had wind of his pranks, grants him a free pardon. The farce was spiritedly played by a good all-round company. One of the hits was the dancing of Mlle. Mistinguett, who introduced a new step, which will not be adopted in our drawing-rooms. For some unknown reason a dance is now introduced in almost every farce, many times without any raison d'être whatsoever.

Mr. Charles Fisher has invented a contrivance called "Loop-Golf-Hits," which can be played with standard golf clubs in a spare room, drawing-room, on a stage, on board ship, grass plot, lawn, or links. A private demonstration showing the advantages and the game of Loop-Golf-Hits will be given at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, April 13 next, by the famous golf champions James Braid and J. H. Taylor. Loop-Golf-Hits is intended to assist the novice and all golfers in acquiring the art of playing a straight shot and picking up cleanly one's ball from the ground—which is the foundation of golfing. Also it enables one to rectify faulty shots at once by playing them over again immediately without wandering miles over the links and wasting valuable time in recovering the ball.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

The grand total of The Era Music Hall Home Fund for 1910 has reached the record sum of 6073 shillings—£303 13s., and with the closing of the collection it is our most agreeable duty to thank the contributors and collectors and to congratulate the profession on the increased interest manifested in that excellent charity.

Miss Vesta Tilley's magnificent effort has resulted in a collection to her credit of £81 0s. 6d.—another record—and to her will be given the gold medal awarded by The Era to the largest collector. To this favourite artist the work, we know, has been a labour of love. She has persistently urged in the most fascinating manner possible the claims of the Home, and will be heartily felicitated on the result of her whole-hearted exertions on behalf of the aged performers now resting at the Home.

It is expected that building operations in connection with the new Glasgow music hall—the Alhambra—will be commenced in a few weeks. The house is to be erected under the auspices of the Palace company, and, incidentally, in connection with the controlling interests of the Butt-Beck-De Frece-Gibbons combine, on the site of the Waterloo Rooms.

The spacious auditorium will provide seating accommodation on the ground floor and two galleries for about 2,400 people. The ground floor will be occupied by the stalls and pit, the first tier by the grand circle and first circle, and the second tier by the amphitheatre and gallery. On each floor a lounge and bar will be fitted up. A long portico, the full width of the pavement, will be erected over the main entrance from Wellington-street.

The offices of the United County Theatres, Ltd., now at 63a, Shaftesbury-avenue, will be removed on Saturday next, April 9, to Broadmead House, Panton-street, Haymarket. The houses controlled by the Circuit are the Palace, Plymouth; Palace, Bristol; Palace, Aberdeen; King's Theatre, Gateshead; and the Palace, King's, and Gaiety, Dundee, and the Grand Theatre, Stonehouse.

One of the saddest cases of misfortune that we known of is that of Mr. Fred H. Millis, the popular ventriloquist, now afflicted with blindness. Coming from the Colonies about twenty years since, he secured a deservedly high position in his profession, and held it until his on-coming calamity prevented the continuance of his work on the stage.

For some years he has resided at Wattle Bloom, Broom Water West, Broom Water, Teddington, a freehold residence which is to be sold on the 20th inst. at the Clarence Hotel, Teddington, by Richardson and Martin, who will also offer the contents of the pretty residence on the premises next Wednesday and Thursday, April 13 and 14.

The catalogue of the furniture, which may be had of the auctioneers, whose offices are opposite Teddington Station, reveals some very valuable lots. Among the choice paintings are examples by C. H. Passey, R.A., and the name of Carl Brennir—the famous Christy Minstrel tenor, whose brush was responsible for much artistic work—is attached to other pictures. A rare piece of furniture is a Chinese model pagoda bookcase. An exhibition 8ft. bedroom suite, a three-quarter billiard-table, a costly gilt timepiece, a full compass pianoforte by Ronisch, Dresden and Chelsea figures and ornaments, a 20ft. double skiff, and a 15ft. motor dinghy are also to be offered.

Mr. Richard Northcott, the musical critic, leaves London to-morrow for a tour on the Continent, and will visit the opera houses in Berlin, Dresden, Prague, Vienna, Budapest, Munich, Frankfurt, and Brussels, in the hope of finding one or two works suitable for production in England. While in Munich Mr. Northcott will go to Oberammergan to witness a representation of the Passion Play. He will not be back in London until the beginning of June.

At the Lal Brough sale on April 20 and 21 will be dispersed many interesting relics. One of them is a Sheffield plated cigar box, which originally belonged to Professor Anderson, who was giving one of his shows on the night that Covent Garden Theatre was destroyed by fire. It is inscribed: "Presented by Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States of America, to Professor Anderson, as a mark of appreciation of talent displayed in an entertainment given in the White House, Washington, 1863." Mr. Lionel Brough bought this from the wizard's nephew.

Another interesting memento is a stage armlet worn by Marian, the giantess, who, it will be remembered, led the Amazons in a revival at the Alhambra in 1882 of that remarkable piece Babil and Bijou, with Miss Constance Loseby and Harry Paulton in the cast. In the original cast at Covent Garden old playgoers will remember Lal Brough by his humorous performance as Auricomus. It was Bill Holland who conceived the brilliant idea of choosing a giantess to lead the forces of aggressive womanhood in fine casque and helm.

At the Hippodrome on Monday Mlle. Anne Daurcy, a fascinating singer of light love songs, will renew the favourable impression formed of her entertainment on her previous London appearances at the Alhambra. Another fresh arrival in the programme will be found in a comedy-duologue performed by Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Faber. The prestige of the Hippodrome has been sensibly enhanced by the engagement of Mme. Réjane, who is welcomed by two packed houses every day. Business is phenomenal.

We are given to understand that if the necessity arises for an understudy in the cast of Lolotte, Mr. Fred Trussell, the popular manager, who can speak more languages than many ambassadors, will be available. He has a fine Parisian accent, and a manner quite in accord with the traditions of the famous house of Molière, the Comédie-Française. He could play le Baron or Croiselles quite easily with just a rehearsal or two.

Mr. Edward Terry, though not a member of the distinguished theatrical family whose name he bears, is nevertheless a famous comedian and an actor-manager, whose absence from London is regrettable. He is to find a new field for his comedy at that Mecca of the theatrical star—the Palace—and will make his variety début on May 16. Mr. Terry, like Sir W. S. Gilbert, is a justice of the peace.

On the authority of Vanity Fair we are told that one of our best-known music halls in the West-End will probably be purchased by a gentleman whose name is a household word through the country with a view to turning it into an opera house. His son, who is very popular, has for many years past taken a prominent part in musical affairs in London, and has distinguished himself by his courageous support of modern musicians. According to our information, it is proposed to bring over from the Boston Symphony Orchestra some of their most prominent musicians, and it is rumoured that a representative is already on the way to Boston for that purpose.

The Dover Palace has reopened under the direction of Mr. Fred Southern, who is well known as a sketch manager.

Electric Theatres are starting a boom in Glasgow. Mr. A. E. Pickard, of the Panopticon, has secured a site in Castle-street for one, and another is being fitted out in Sauchiehall-street, near Charing Cross. Several others are "in the air."

The New Britannia Pier, Great Yarmouth, is now under new management, and any artists holding contracts for it must communicate with Mr. Harry Tunbridge, New Spa, Bridlington, who is now prepared to make further arrangements for the season.

Mr. W. F. Frame, "the man you know," who is meeting with much success in the North with his vaudeville one-night towns, celebrated his birthday on Tuesday last in the city of Brechin, where he was the recipient of a silver cigarette case from his company. Mr. Robert Dunning made the presentation.

At the recent fire at the Opera House, Crewe, Terrier Jack Harris had the misfortune to lose everything he had in the dressing-room. The Terriers' Association has made him a grant of £3 to cover the loss, and Terrier Harris has generously given the amount to the Emergency Fund of the Association.

Glasgow is promised another place of amusement. Two steadings of ground, extending together to about 1,024 square yards, with tenements of shops and dwelling-houses, forming Nos. 149 to 155, Castle-street, recently came into the market. Mr. A. E. Pickard, the well-known amusement caterer, was the purchaser.

It is his intention to demolish the buildings, which are supposed to be over 200 years old, and erect on the site a theatre to be called the Glasgow Casino, in which entertainments of the variety order will be given. The theatre will have a frontage to Castle-street of 70ft.

Mr. Tony Iveson, the well-known pianist comedian, is laid up with a severe illness in Hull, but hopes to resume work again in the course of a few weeks with his new show, An Artist's Love, in which he will be assisted by Miss Millie Clifford. The act, he tells us, is full of comedy, music, and pathos.

Owing to the enormous success of the Jungle and Arena, Glasgow, Mr. Frank C. Bostock has decided to continue the season another week longer. As an extra attraction Mr. Bostock offers a handsome present to any engaged couple who will be married in the arena along with the lions and their trainer.

It is with regret that we have to announce the decease at the early age of thirty-seven of a very talented and versatile comedian, Richard—better known as Dick—Thomas, who, in conjunction with Mr. Taylor, has been touring in a clever sketch Fun on the Midland, in which the deceased appeared in a quick and varied change of character. His last appearance was at the Palace of Varieties, Northampton, last week.

Mr. H. Curline Baldry, who has been for the last eight months assistant-manager at the Hippodrome, Birmingham, is now in London seeking an appointment. He has had a good London experience, having held a similar position at the Empire, Shoreditch; also Broadway Theatre, New Cross, S.E. He had a good send-off from Birmingham, and wishes to thank the merry little crowd for their purse of gold.

The sympathy of all friends will be extended to Mr. W. Christie Grant, manager of the Grand Theatre, Glasgow, on the death of his wife, which took place on Thursday, the 31st ult., after an operation at the hands of a specialist, for the removal of an internal tumour. The funeral took place on Monday, to the pretty little country cemetery at Thornliebank, near Glasgow, and a carriage was filled with the flowers sent by many professional and private friends.

Notice is given that the occupancy and tenancy of the Alhambra Theatre of Varieties, Higher Openshaw, Manchester, by the Lyric Theatre Company (Manchester), Ltd., shall cease and determine on and after Monday next. All contracts with artists effected by the said company during a period of two months from the said April 11, 1910, will be taken over by the new tenants or occupiers. Artists desirous of rebooking should communicate with the manager, Mr. Arthur Preston, Alhambra Theatre, Higher Openshaw.

Rhyl Amusements, Ltd., have taken a long lease from the District Council of the Marine Lake (over 40 acres of water) and pleasure grounds surrounding, for the purpose of laying out the whole as a pleasure park. Arrangements have already been made for a water chute and a number of other successful amusement devices. The proprietors are prepared to let sites for any kind of outside amusement (marine or otherwise), side shows, novelties, &c. Applications may be made to the secretary, Mr. James Lucas, 26, Birley-street, Blackpool.

Rhyl is easily accessible from the industrial districts of the North and Midlands by rail and sea, being the first of the famous North Wales watering-places on the London and North-Western main line.

Mr. Louis Cohen's clever playlet Nelson, which had such a favourable reception on its original production, and afterwards at the Tivoli and Oxford, is being revived on Monday at the Standard, Pimlico. The capital cast includes Mr. Arthur Max (Nelson), Mr. Edmund Lea (O'Sullivan), Mr. Clifford Marle (Collingwood), and Miss Josephine Colona (Mrs. Liebmann).

Last week, at the Alhambra, Brighton, proved a rather momentous time for Mr. Charles Coborn. He says with regard to Brighton that, like Eccles, in Caste, he should like to go there "often—very often—every day." On the Friday night an enthusiastic admirer threw a silver-mounted stick on the stage as a token of esteem and approbation. It is painful to have to record that the generous donor was promptly and ignominiously ejected from the hall, and warned never to come again, for having been guilty of conduct calculated to injure the tone of that well-conducted establishment. On Saturday night Mr. Coborn was the recipient of a very handsome bouquet, intended as a tribute to his impersonation of the lady beauty-doctor. So, what with these and other tokens of amity and regard from the genial proprietor, Mr. A. Smith, and his patrons, our Charles seems to have had rather a good time.

He wishes V.A.F.'s to remember particularly the address of their local agent, Mr. Marlow, formerly member of Sussex County cricket team, as members are so apt to make excuses as to not being able to find it. It is the Lord Nelson, Russell-street, right opposite the side of the Alhambra, so there is no excuse for excuses. A most comfortable and well-appointed room is at members' disposal, and every thoughtful attention is paid to his duties as agent by Mr. Marlow, who is courtesy and consideration personified.

Mr. Edward Cranston and Mrs. Bennett are producing the powerful sketch, by Will Evans and Tom Craven, entitled The Mystery of the Cliff, at the Foresters' on Monday.

"The Will of Allah," a romance of the Sahara Desert, by Lewis T. Dalrymple, music by J. Parry Cole, will be produced for one night only on Monday, April 18, at the Euston. The author introduces into this dramatic sketch an original and fantastic Franco-Arabian Dance.

Mr. Oswald Stoll is giving his patrons at the Shepherd's Bush Empire next week a sensation called "Shooting the Bar and Whizzing the Wheel in a Motor-car" which will be performed by Darracq. Darracq claims that he circles the wheel at a speed of eighty-five miles per hour.

The head of the firm of Ted Snyder's Music Publishing Company in America has just mailed to their London manager, Mr. J. H. Squire, a solid gold penknife, the handle being studded with diamonds. The recipient's delight and surprise at the costly gift may be better imagined than described.

The action brought by Mr. Cox against Mr. Fred Karno for an injunction to restrain Mr. Karno from performing Perkins, M.P., and for damages for alleged infringement of copyright, has been dismissed with costs, owing to the plaintiff having failed to prosecute the action after Mr. Karno had put in his defence.

Mr. Jack E. Cohen, the popular manager of the Paragon, goes to the Canterbury as assistant (pro tem.) when the Mile End hall closes, which will be on May 23, and the energetic young stage-manager, Mr. Brooke, will commence with Mr. Oswald Stoll, who is sure to appreciate his ability in the back of the house.

Congratulations to Mr. Llewellyn Johns, who recently took the place of Mr. Alan Young at Cranbourn Mansions offices, on his return from New York, where he represented the Moss-Stoll interests. He was married at the British Consulate in Paris, on Saturday last, to Miss Florence Bertie, daughter of Mr. John Hayman, Stoll's Continental representative. The happy couple have been the recipients of hearty congratulations and sincere wishes.

The bridegroom is the son of the late David Johns, of Cardiff, and was first engaged by Mr. Oswald Stoll in Cardiff about ten years ago, and soon after was appointed manager of the Empire in the town. When the headquarters of the Stoll interests were transferred to London, Mr. Johns took charge of the Continental bookings, and afterwards went to New York.

The secretary of the Empire, Camberwell, Ltd., writes: "In connection with the recent tragedy at the Camberwell Empire, we shall be greatly obliged if you will publish a paragraph stating that, several letters having been received from people desirous of assisting the two women and four children left destitute by the occurrence, a committee, consisting of four gentlemen and two ladies, has been formed with the object of promoting a fund for that purpose.

"The proprietors of the Camberwell Empire have relieved the immediate necessities of the families, and headed the list with a donation of £5. They have also arranged to hold a special matinée performance and to present the whole of the takings to the fund. The treasurer is Mr. Percy Ford, Camberwell Empire, Denmark Hill, S.E., who will be pleased to receive any donations. The following amounts have been already received:—The proprietors, Camberwell Empire, £5; Iris Fox, £5; Frank Hurst, 10s. 6d.; William Nutt, 10s. 6d.; Mr. Cocks, 10s.; Dr. Evans, 5s.; Dr. Turner, 2s. 6d.; and Mr. Cameron Matthews, 2s. 6d."

Mr. Harry S. S. McCalla, whose address is given at 193, Piccadilly, London, and who acts as business manager for his daughters, Dolly and Madge McCalla, writes as follows:—"My two daughters, Dolly and Madge McCalla, were to have opened at the Palace, Northampton, on Monday. Last week they appeared at the Empire, Dudley. On Saturday night, at 6.30, Dolly left her younger sister Madge at the stage door of the Empire, saying that she would return in a few moments, and that she was going to call upon a lady friend who lived some three minutes or so from the hall.

"Since that moment she has not been seen. She disappeared completely. The police were communicated with, a thorough search made, and a description was telephoned and telegraphed to all connecting railway stations, but all to no avail. All her friends and acquaintances have been communicated with, but up to now nothing whatever has been heard of her. This is a very serious and terrible matter, as we cannot discover even the slightest reason for my daughter's disappearance."

The first regular meeting of the Proscenium Lodge, the latest lodge of Freemasons, established in the interest of the vaudeville profession, was held at the Town Hall, Chelsea, on Tuesday last. Owing to the unavoidable absence of Mr. Albert Le Fre, the master, Mr. J. W. Mathews, A.G.D.C., and first master of the Chelsea Lodge, at the request of Mr. H. Coutts, the I.P.M., accepted the compliment of opening the Lodge, his officers being Mr. Roberts (Atlas), S.W., Frank Hardie, J.W., Wolfe S. Lyon, L.R. (treasurer), acting as I.G., C. J. Doughty (secretary), G. A. Keen, acting S.D., Andie Caine, J.D., and Charles Levy, acting organist.

After transacting the usual business of the opening of the lodge, Mr. Mathews vacated the chair in order to allow Mr. Lyon to have the honour of initiating the first candidate for the privileges of Ancient Freemasonry, having performed that ceremony at the first meeting of the Chelsea Lodge, the candidate being Mr. Reginald Hedley Sherborne Roberts, the son of the S.W., who, being a minor, was admitted under dispensation of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, the Grand Master. At the conclusion of the ceremony Mr. Mathews delivered the charge in a most impressive manner. Mr. Lyon vacated the chair in favour of Mr. H. Coutts, who initiated Messrs. Fred Earle and Gilbert Hart into the mysteries of the order.

The chair was then taken by Mr. G. A. Keen, who, at the request of the W.M. of the Chelsea Lodge, bestowed upon Mr. Chas. Levy the benefit of the complete ceremony. The whole of the members of the lodge in town were present; Messrs. Mathews, A.G.D.C., and C. Cruickshanks, P.A.G.S.B., represented Grand Lodge, and Messrs. P. Weeks and G. A. Shuter as visitors.

Miss Anna Chandler, who appeared for the first time on this side at the London Hippodrome on Monday, comes with high artistic credentials from the States. Miss Chandler has a real talent for parody, in that her entertainment does not suffer from undue exaggeration. With a handsome and genial personality and a determination to be on the best terms with kind friends in front, she should go far. She gives a clever representation of the styles and mannerisms of Yankee vaudeville artists of both sexes, and as she is well endowed vocally, is capable of producing tone colour, and is careful in the choice of her songs, she easily made good on the night of her London début, in spite of the fact that it was a case of Réjane in excelsis at the splendid house in Leicester-square.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of the Music Hall Sick Fund will be held on Wednesday afternoon next at the Crown, Charing Cross-road.

Mendel, the blind pianist and improvisatore, will sail for Australia on the 22nd inst. A warm welcome awaits this clever musician in the land of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Arthur Slater's new production of whistling scena, Morning, Noon, and Night, will be a feature of the programme at the Empire, Hackney, next week. There will be special scenery and effects.

S. W. Windham is making a big success at the Hippodrome, Southampton, this week. This unique comedian is rapidly coming to the front, and is already secured for the Oxford, Tivoli, and Pavilion till 1913.

Sandy McNab is at present making an enormous hit on the Barrasford tour. At times his success is quite embarrassing, for after thirty minutes of laughter he has to take several curtains and make a speech before the audience will allow him to go.

Marcus Witmark, a pioneer publisher of popular music, died on March 29 from heart failure at his home, 57, West Eighty-eighth-street, New York. He was born in Germany in 1834, and went to America when he was twenty-two years old. He was married some years later.

Although Mr. Witmark was engaged in various commercial enterprises, his sons, before they were of age, became interested in popular music to such an extent that they decided to become publishers. It was then that Mr. Witmark formed the firm of M. Witmark and Sons in order that his sons might have the protection of his name.

Later, he became so interested in the new business that he gave up his other activities that he might give it his undivided attention.

To-day the Witmarks are represented not only throughout the United States but also in England and on the Continent. Mr. Witmark was prominent in Masonic circles and belonged to several charitable organisations in which he was greatly interested. He is survived by five sons and one daughter.

The Bensons, who were the star turn at the King's Theatre and Hippodrome, Dundee, this week, were unfortunately unable to appear through the indisposition of Miss Marguerite, who was suddenly attacked with laryngitis. They trust to be able to resume business on Monday week.

Bella and Bijou, the society entertainers, played to tremendous business at the Empire, Middlesbrough, last week. They produced, with great success, some new sketches, which will be heard shortly at the London Coliseum, and all round the Moss and Stoll tour.

Owing to her music-hall engagements Miss Dot Stephens will terminate her first year of tour with her company with A Child of the Streets at the Opera House, Kidderminster, to-day. This drama, which is from the pen of Frank Price, will be sent out again in the autumn for a lengthy tour.

During her recent tour of the world Miss Florence Baines secured the rights of several musical numbers, one of which, the popular American song, "I wonder who is kissing her now," she has introduced into her play, Miss Lancashire, Limited, and is making a big hit with it nightly.

Miss Lillie Lassah, one of the prettiest of the many pretty ladies on the music hall stage, and the wife of the lucky manager of the Battersea Palace, Mr. J. McCarthy, is this week having much success at the Empire, Nottingham, with a pretty little Irish song entitled "Top o' the morning."

Miss Lassah was the bright particular star of the last pantomime at the Grand, Fulham—The Forty Thieves—in which she gave a most artistic and charming performance as principal boy. On Saturday last, at the Shepherd's Bush Empire, she completed the round of the Moss' Empires in London, and has now commenced a lengthy tour of the same firm's provincial halls.

Miss Sable Fern's new boy scout scena, "Boys in Camp," concludes with a song on the boyhood of great men, which is illustrated with lantern-slides. The pictures are thrown on one of the tents in camp by a scout who lies by the side of the lantern, which is placed on the stage immediately in front of the conductor. An elderly lady, who saw the show at Rotherhithe last week, upon being asked what she thought of Sable Fern's scouts, said: "I liked it very much, it's very pretty indeed; but what a pity they couldn't make that cannon go off."

"Little Sophie," the miniature Vesta Tilley, aged eleven, has been engaged by Mr. Oswald Stoll to appear at the London Coliseum on Monday next. Her gifts are hereditary. Descended from a theatrical stock on her father's side, her musical ability is inherited through her mother, whose progenitors were well-known musicians. Sophie sings her own particular songs, imitates most faithfully singers and dancers, and works quite spontaneously as occasion demands. She is making a hit this week at the Hippodrome, Margate, with her new numbers from the pens of Arthur Wimperis and Seymour.

A larger attendance than usual distinguished the 653rd meeting of the Executive Committee of the M.H.A.R.A., held at the office of the Association on Wednesday afternoon. There were present Mr. Fred Herbert, who presided, Messrs. J. H. Milburn, Bernard Stavordale, Charles Coborn (vice-president), J. Rich, G. H. Smythson, T. C. Callaghan, E. H. Lucas, Albert Schafer, Tom J. Morton, Walter Munroe, Harry Blake, Harry Bancroft, Lieutenant Albini, Jack Crawley, Harold Finden, and Jeff Vendome.

The question of the working of the various provincial branch offices was brought up by Mr. Charles Coborn, who said that he thought the work hardly justified the expenditure of a large sum. Mr. Fred Herbert said that his idea was to dispense with the offices in Glasgow, Manchester, and Liverpool, and employ residents in those towns who would cover the halls and get their lists made up, using rooms in their private houses as their offices. There was some discussion and opposition to Mr. Herbert's scheme, and Mr. Coborn gave notice of motion to raise the whole question of branch offices at the next meeting.

The families of Barnard and Abrahams are among the oldest amusement entrepreneurs in the country, and it is interesting to read a few of the reminiscences of Mr. Charles Barnard, who has been talking to an Evening News interviewer. Barnard's Hall at Chatham—where the old-time "chairman" still lingers—was the first place of amusement in the county to adopt the twice-nightly system, and did so owing to the necessity for making special provision for the military section. Indeed, this historic house presents the history of vaudeville in miniature. Fifty years ago a whole company would cost about £17 a week. Mr. Barnard remembers one star whose salary was 35s. a week. The whole Leno family worked at one time for £6, and the salary of Harry Rickards, the present Australian impresario, did not reach double figures for his last Barnard engagement.

"The Woman in the Flat" is the title of Mr. Walter Macnamara's new sketch which will shortly be produced by Mr. Henry de Bray for Mr. Cyril Bruce. The cast will also include Miss Mignon Clifford and a selected company of three other artists. The plot is of strong interest.

The very latest novelty in the variety world is Mr. Norman Telma, a wonderful contortionist, who performs on a billiard table. He is this week making a very big success at the London Coliseum. His postures are really very funny. His agents are Messrs. G. W. Gerald and Frank Coyle, of London and Leeds.

France and Stewart are again touring with their always successful sketch, The 100 to 1 Chance, and next week will be at Gateshead-on-Tyne. Although the popularity of The 100 to 1 Chance is by no means exhausted they are busily rehearsing a new sketch for early production, which they have reason to hope may be equally successful. It will be first played on the Moss and Stoll tour.

Miss Jessie Albini, the dainty comedienne, who has just finished the Moss and Stoll tour, produced last week at the Hippo., Hastings, a new low comedy Chantecler song entitled "Cock-a-doodle-doo," from the pen of T. W. Connor, which made a big hit. This song promises to be one of Miss Albini's greatest successes. She opens in London on Monday next, April 11, at the Hippodrome, Crouch End.

Few men have had a more romantic career than that of M. Paulhan, the famous aviator, who has now returned from America. Now one of the world's leading flying-men, he not so very long ago was earning something less than four pounds a week as an ordinary mechanic in an aeroplane factory.

He began life (says M.A.P.) as a performer in a traveling circus, touring round the smaller towns and villages in France, combining the work of a general engineer and that of a performer. He was a bare-back rider and an expert tight-rope dancer. In the latter capacity, he remarked recently, he first learnt the art of balancing, which has proved of the utmost value to him since.

Leaving the circus at the age of eighteen (he is now only twenty-six), he took to a seafaring life, in which capacity he shipped as a sailor on a line of boats that ply between France and Japan. The turning-point in his career came some two or three years later, when he joined as a volunteer the First Genie, the aerostatic battalion of the French Army. It was here that he first became acquainted with balloons and the remarkable flights of M. Santos Dumont, who, by the way, claims the credit of discovering him.

But cramped by the lack of means, M. Paulhan for long was forced to limit his activities to the construction of models. His first appearance as a flyer was not made until last year, when he made a long flight of fifteen minutes. Two days afterwards he flew for an hour and eighteen minutes, and three weeks later he became the holder of the world's record by rising to a height of four hundred feet.

A ladies' concert was held on Sunday last at the Three Stags Hotel, Kennington. Terrier Harry Gribben, W.T., occupied the chair, supported by Terrier H. Cee Mee. Terrier Ernest Ball acted as musical-director, and Terrier J. Chas Moore was the efficient accompanist. The following artists contributed to an enjoyable programme:—Terrier T. C. Callaghan, "Wait until my ship comes in"; Terrier Tom Packer, "What becomes of our songs?" Terrier Ernest D'Almaine, "Star of my life"; Terrier Harry Brown, "In the summertime—yes"; Terrier Andie Caine, "Dingle Dangle Dell" and "Sparrows"; Terrier Ernest Ball, "Still your friend"; Terrier Harry Gribben, recital, "How the Favourite Lost"; Mrs. Kloof, "For evermore"; Mr. Arthur Lloyd, "What's the use?" and "Queenie was there"; Mr. D. Graham, "Don't take me home"; Mr. Revill Hall, "At twelve o'clock he's delighted" and "That fatal wink"; and Mr. Eddie Comet, monologue.

Terrier Griff offers a gold medal for the best suggestion on how to increase the attendance at the Sunday meetings. All suggestions must be forwarded to the secretary as soon as possible. The date of the annual river outing has been fixed for Sunday, June 26, 1910.

On behalf of the committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., Miss Melinda May, secretary, begs most gratefully to thank the following:—Mrs. Herbert Shelley (giving and collecting), 10s.; Mrs. Nance Pounds, Dorset Hotel, Chapham-road, donation, 2s. 6d.; pair lady's boots, anonymous, from Walsall; Dr. Wallace Eales, Manchester, attending one of the Guild cases free of charge; Mrs. Charles Coborn (collected), 12s. 6d., towards which Miss Ella Chapman, Mr. Chas. T. Aldrich, Mr. Fairlie, Mr. Alfred Smith, and others contributed.

In reference to Miss Irene's Rose's guessing competition, she writes to say that the lady's name was (Ann), won by Avon and Crest (Hippodrome, Liverpool), and the Teddy Bear's name was (Luke), won by Mr. George Lyons (Samford and Lyons), and returned. Will anyone please make an offer for the model toy butcher's shop still on view at the Guild rooms? Will friends in and out of the profession please note that a prize will be given to anyone collecting the most money for this deserving charity in twelve months from Nov. 4 last. Friends of the charity are heartily welcome to tea and reception, held every Wednesday from four to five o'clock. Funds, boots, and clothing are urgently needed.

Mr. Fred Karno's new production Won't detain you, which will be seen at the Paragon on Monday, will be a triumph of stage-craft and enterprise. In the first scene, which shows the departure of the "Won't Detain You" for New York, a built-up liner, 120ft. long, will leave a landing stage, and steam away down the Mersey. The vessel, which will be loaded with passengers, will be built on steel girders on the cantilever principle, and worked by three hydraulic lifts. Other exciting scenes will be those representing the promenade deck of the vessel, with some marvellous lighting effects, and the dining saloon. In the latter scene Mr. Karno has contrived to give a vivid idea of the motion of a liner at sea. The piece is the work of Mr. Charles Baldwin and Mr. Fred Karno, and will be produced by Mr. W. H Morgan, under Mr. Karno's superintendence.

At the recent sittings of the Committee appointed by the Bishops of the Upper House of Convocation and the Clergy of the Lower House, to confer with representatives of the Imperial Alliance—a body endeavouring to combine religious and industrial forces in securing one day's rest in seven—Mr. Charles Coborn represented the Sunday Defence Committee, that has been organised on behalf of the employees in the amusement industry, viz., the Variety Artists, the Actors' Association, the Amalgamated Musicians' Union, and the Association of Theatrical Employees and Bioscope Operators. Mr. Coborn pointed out in his address that the Alliance had been of great assistance to theatrical workers in their endeavour to uphold the recent decision of the London County Council to prohibit the Sunday opening for mercenary purposes of cinematograph shows and other entertainments.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

MR. LOUIS DREYFUS, of the New York music publishing house of T. B. Harms and Francis, Day, and Hunter, is once more in England, and has been received with acclamation by his numerous friends. His plans, during his absence from America, will include the making of some extensive reciprocatory and, it is expected, lucrative arrangements with the great publishing houses of Germany, and the securing of the publishing rights of certain musical plays that will be performed presently in the United States.

ONE of the new numbers that have lately been published by Messrs. Francis and Day appears to have caught on in no uncertain manner when sung by the Anartos. It is called "We did enjoy ourselves in London," and is by J. P Harrington, B. W. Rogers, and John Neat. Mr. Gus Garrick is also scoring with it, and the seaside entertainers will have in it a sure applause getter.

MISS MADGE TEMPLE'S new song, "On the silvery, silvery sand," is an assured success, though but a few days old. The audience at the Euston Palace on Tuesday evening, without invitation, promptly made the chorus their own, and the fair artist was greeted with great applause at its close. Like her other great success, "I'm looking for Mr. Wright," it is published by Messrs. Francis and Day. The author is Arthur C. Findon, and the music is by Hermann E. Darewski, who must be growing corns on his pen, judging by the number of successful new songs he has just had put on in town and elsewhere.

MISS JOSS COLLINS'S cultured voice has this week been heard to great advantage in Findon-Vaughan's pretty new ballad "Won't you play with me?" and Hermann E. Darewski's melodious air is one to remember with keen pleasure. It is being issued by Messrs. Francis and Day, who also publish "Pride of the prairie, Mary," also delightfully sung by Miss Collins.

MR. MARK SHERIDAN, at the South London, has been winning fresh laurels by his characteristic rendering of "When the lights are low," and is to be congratulated on having secured the rights for the United Kingdom of the item, the American rights of which belong to Miss Lily Lena, who caused a furore with it across the Pond. It is by Arthur Findon and Hermann E. Darewski, jun.

MISS FLORA CROMER has secured a number of fine songs recently, including several by such well-known writers as Paul Pelham, Herbert Rule, and James McGee. Their titles are: "Fine strawberries!" "You won't always have it, Mr. Johnson," "My donkey Joe," "I can see them all to-night," "Jenny Jenkins from Jenkinstown," and "When someone else." Miss Cromer's songs are always in great request among publishers, so, to save heartburnings, Mr. David Day's firm have secured the whole of the above ditties for publication.

THE frontispiece of Mr. George Lashwood's great chorus song "There's another fellow looks like me," which Messrs. Francis and Day are issuing, is embellished with a strikingly handsome portrait of the Beau Brummell of the halls, and it is one of the latest and best likenesses of the renowned actor-vocalist extant. The song is by F. W. Leigh who has, in collaboration with George Arthurs, written the same artist yet another number, which is called "Oh, blow the scenery on the railway!" Messrs. Francis and Day have secured it for immediate issue.

AMONG other songs about to be published by Messrs. Francis and Day may be mentioned a quaint and tuneful song by George Arthurs and Alfred J. Lawrance, entitled "I'm after Pekoe," "You used to be a friend to me" (sung by Miss Ida Barr), by Paul Pelham and J. P. Long, "Grandfather Green" (sung by the Brothers Brooks), "The ladder of fame" (sung by Mr. F. Wildon), and "Non-stops," a laughable ditty, sung both by Mr. Ben Albert and Mr. Fred Rome. The three last-named numbers are by Mr. Charles Osborne.

MR. ARTHUR LENNARD, at the Royal Standard, has been commanding attention of the keenest with "Sweet Seventy-two," a beautifully-rendered pathetic song, and with "Pass along, please," a policeman song, of more than average humorous merit. Both are issued by Messrs. Francis and Day. Mr. Lennard is also essaying with much success a song entitled "Put it there," by a new writer.

MR. FRED ELTON, who at the Shoreditch Hippodrome as been reaping his usual harvest of applause, has just acquired a song entitled "Sea Sights," a ditty written and composed by the writer of that celebrated mirth-provoker "Potted Poetry."

AT Boscombe Mr. Fred Barnes has during the week been receiving ovations nightly, his fine song "The scapegrace of the family" being specially singled out for high encomiums. The dramatic recitation embodied in the number, which, words and music, is from Mr. Barnes's own pen, is declaimed in forceful style, and the refrain has that infectious swing which causes it to linger on the memory long after one has heard it.

A HUMOROUS song from the joint pens of Fred W. Leigh and Henry E. Pether—the English writers whose "Waiting at the church" and "Poor John!" were the rages of America some time since—is a thing to be prized by an artist, and Miss Helen Trix is to be congratulated in securing their amusing song "Sam," a ditty in which a lovesick maid urges her backward swain to wed his lamb whilst it is "yet in season" and ere it grows into old mutton. Miss Trix, in congratulating the author and composer (which she did in very tangible form), declared that it was a "scream" on the occasion of its initial production a few nights since.

MESSRS. BARNES, Weston, and Maurice Scott's latest number, "Tahiti," promises to be a formidable rival to their now famous "I've got rings on my fingers and bells on my toes," with which Miss Terriss has been delighting Coliseum audiences. "Tahiti" is delicious foolery and a delightful Hibernian-heathenish hotch-potch.

MR. GUS ELEN, who in "You 'ave made a fine old mess of it!" has a song of much humour with a haunting refrain, has, in addition, been singing that old favourite "It's a great big shame," and at the Canterbury one night last week the audience nearly took the roof off with Le Brunn's well-remembered strains.

MESSRS. VERNAR AND DENT have in study a new duologue, entitled The Missing Earl. It is from the pen of Percy Edgar, and contains three new and amusing numbers and a quantity of smart and original cross-talk.

LITTLE MAUDIE OLMAR, Birmingham's clever child dancer and vocalist, made her first appearance in vaudeville at the Empire, Birmingham, on Monday, when she sang a bright and delightful song, entitled "Won't you play with me?" a new number by Hermann E. Darewski, jun., and Arthur C. Findon.

MR. WILL CHALLINER will, all being well, make his bow to a London audience at the Standard, Pimlico, next Monday week. He will produce "No sweeter words," a chorus ballad, by Mr. Eric Graham, the author of Fred Elton's "Mary Ann Lizzie" and "Moth and the candle." Miss Dorma Morgan's "Actions speak louder than words," and Arthur Clifton's "You must come home."

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE OXFORD.

With the inclusion of Mr. Mark Sheridan in Mr. Blyth-Pratt's current bill at the Oxford, the scheme of amusement at that popular house may be said to have reached its full comic strength. Mr. Sheridan's outlook on life seems to be one of the cheeriest optimism. He seems to be saying to himself all the time "A happy world this, my masters!" To him, as he appears on the stage, life seems to be full of humour, and he possesses such an irresistibly happy style that audiences directly they see him settle down with faces eloquent of serene content and listen to him. His numbers are invariably well and pointedly rendered, and this is especially the case with "I'd like to be beside the seaside"; but it is his patter—which has the great merit of appearing to be entirely unprepared—that tells, and then there is his quaint and delightful dancing. Mark certainly deserves the high place he has taken in the front rank of London's favourite humorists. Precisely the same remark applies to Mr. Ernest Shand, an unctuous comedian, whose curate song evokes shouts of laughter, and who has another great success in his "Nelson" song. A great Oxford favourite, too, is Mr. Dan Crawley, who repeats the success of his number, "Here's a nice how d'ye do"; and then there is that humorous pair, the Polaskis, in patter and parody that always touch the springs of laughter.

Heading the distaff side of the cast is Miss Clarice Mayne, who has one of her characteristic songs in "Georgie took me a-walking." The behaviour of Georgie seems to excite fierce jealousy in the breast of the pianist, who appears to be the well-known composer, Mr. James W. Tate, who has developed remarkable talent as a genuine comedian. Miss Mayne's comedy, too, is delightful, and the genuine success that is hers is well won. A débutante at the Oxford is Miss Ethel Loftus, a young artist with undoubted comedy gifts. She has youth on her side, and we may therefore expect even greater developments with further experience. She comes almost at the end of a big programme, and the position is not a favourable one for a newcomer. Nevertheless, she arrests attention and evokes applause by her comicality in her song, "What's the matter with father?" Miss Bessie Slaughter's voice, resonant and full, is heard to advantage in popular contralto songs; Miss Rosie Lloyd, a sister of the popular Marie, has much of the talent that seems to belong by prescriptive right to a very remarkable family; and bonnie Miss Gladys Huxley gets home in chorus songs.

Mr. Wilkie Bard heads the list of comedians, and liberally educates his legion of admirers in the intricacies of his numbers, some of which have been the delight of Old Drury audiences during his most successful pantomime season. Mr. Walter King has a comically lugubrious style that betrays considerable originality. H. J. Byron created a comic character many years ago known as the melancholy clown. Walter is much too young to have ever seen the creation, but he gives us a new edition of him quite up to date and of approved quaintness. Mr. Phil Ray's shortened words never lengthen the faces of his audiences, and abbreviation's artful aid enables him to score all the time he holds the stage.

We get a capital musical show from the Romanis, who introduce a tremendous instrument, which is something like "Sally's nose" in the song "It sounds like thunder when it's blown." It is called the tornadophone, and belongs to the trumpet family. Arden and Abel are scoring in their favourite sketch Three of a Kind, full of screamingly comical situations; Dale and O'Malley's cross-talk is very smart; and other turns announced on the bill are Alick Lauder and company in The Christening, the Black and White Girls, Miss Carlotta Levey, the Whittakers in their comedy skit Dick Whittington, and Miss Queenie Essex, comedienne.

THE COLISEUM.

On Monday, April 4, a Musical Play, in One Act, by Seymour Hicks, Music by Frank Tours, entitled

"COOK'S MAN."

Lord Freshwater .....MR. SEYMOUR HICKS
Jackson .....MR. J. C. BUCKSTONE
A Cook's Man .....MR. STANLEY BRETT
Hazel Cholmondeley ....MISS ELLALINE TERRISS

The return of the happy pair Seymour Hicks and Ellaline Terriss to the Coliseum is the most welcome feature of the current programme at that house. The novelty that they bring with them is entitled Cook's Man, and is quite in the Hicks vein. It serves its purpose well enough, as it gives all the necessary opportunities to Seymour and Ellaline to co-operate with light-hearted gaiety in a scheme of fun. Lord Freshwater has been struck by the beauty and charm of Hazel Cholmondeley, and is in despair because he can get no forrarder in his scheming for an introduction to her. Both he and she are travelling on the Continent, and owing to an accident to his luggage he appears on the platform of the station at Genoa in pink pyjamas. An obliging man from Cook's, an interpreter, lends him his uniform, and then the fun begins with the new guide's endeavours to explain things to various irate passengers. With the arrival of Hazel Cholmondeley the embarrassment of the new Cook's man increases, but his colossal cheek is quite equal to forcing an interview with her. A good deal of diverting twaddle is talked into telephone receivers by man and maid; and in the result the pair have no doubt that they were made for each other. The final duet is a joyous trifle, "Rings on her fingers and bells on her toes," from the pens of Messrs. Barnes, Weston, and Maurice Scott. Miss Terriss also sings an original song to her pet dog, a patient and pretty dachshund, and dances daintily in a chic travelling dress.

A very diverting interlude is supplied by the Marco Twins, the "long and the short of it," whose wrestling match is a real screamer. The beautiful singing tone produced by the Miles-Stavordale Quintette on four banjoes, accompanied by a harp, enables them to imitate with rare musical art a quartet of voices singing "Love's old sweet song." A very original entertainment is submitted by Norman Telma, a contortionist whose feats on a billiard table have occasionally the rare quality of humour. Norman doubles up quite easily, is a fellow of "infinite chest," and is really equal to making both ends meet. Nothing more is possible in his line. Chass Lewis puts his pierrot figure in a cabinet, and by rapid change of vocal tone realises the effect of speaking with closed and open door. The turn is clever and novel.

Miss Lina Verdi is responsible for a capital imitation of Harry Lauder, but so popular a subject has been well worked by other mimics; the Tiller Chicquettes have all the vim and vivacity of a famous school of dancers; and the Brothers Bright, a pair of fine athletes, and the Elite Harmony Boys are other turns in the programme. The counterfeits of Lord Kitchener and the King are scarcely complimentary, and the experiment of whitening the face of a nigger—if it be intended for humour—seems to us to miss the mark.

HOLLOWAY EMPIRE.

Interesting and well-varied items constitute the programme at the Holloway Empire, and business is brisk. Those who are early in their seats have the pleasure of listening to a charmingly-performed overture by Baife, "Le pinto D'Amour," by the orchestra, under the able direction of Mr. Fred Camp. A song with some amusing patter, entitled "The Landlady," is contributed by the popular comedienne, Alice Maydne, who is favourably received; Mlle. Haydee, with her miniature vaudeville theatre, introducing capital representations of some of the star performers in the variety world, also wins general approval; and the Manchester Mites, a bevy of twelve charming little singers and dancers from Cottonopolis, appear in a very pleasing scena, receiving quite an ovation for their rendering of "Mr. Man in the Moon" and "Daddy Longlegs," both items concluding with cleverly and gracefully performed dances.

The clown mimic, O'Gust, is heartily welcomed, and repeats his clever representations of animals, musical instruments, steam saw, &c. Pat Rafferty's selections are "Kelly" and the old Chelsea Pensioner's song on "Foreign Invasion." The Carmos give a marvellous exhibition of skill and strength, and are received with unbounded applause, which is fully deserved. Some of the items are positively herculean; for instance, the male member balances his lady partner, seated on a pedestal, on his chin, and again carries her, seated on a chair, up and down a flight of stairs by his teeth. These are only two items selected from a series of wonderful and novel feats.

It is pleasing to come across a comedian of originality, and we find one in Harry Weldon. From the time he takes the stage until he finally retires the house is kept in one continual roar of laughter. His first item is a song on "pedienacts (that of a French priest and missionary, one Père Marlotté) he makes most sympathetic and lovable. The company appearing with this popular artist is a large one, and includes Mr. H. A. Saintsbury (an actor whom one is always glad to see), Mr. Alfred Beaumont, Mr. J. R. Crauford, Mr. W. R. Staveley, and Miss May Taverner. The play is splendidly staged and dressed.

Lee Andres appear in their well-known protean and terpsichorean act, in which they introduce various national dances; and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden, a couple of the most popular of sketch artists, are as successful as ever in one of their humorous little "episodes." A turn which attracts considerable attention and places the audience at once on the qui vive is that billed simply as "Lucia Collins, comedienne." It is an open secret that this charming artist is a daughter of the famous Lottie Collins, a fact sufficient in itself to arouse one's interest, and it is delightful to notice that her singing and dancing and her general demeanour are so reminiscent of her talented mother. Miss Collins is singing this week a song dealing with (and probably entitled) brench of promise, and the vivacity and abandon with which she delivers the item are of the type which one associates with the Parisian rather than the English stage. Miss Collins is a very handsome girl, and with charm and ability such as she possesses should have a splendid future.

Tom Moore is a character comedian and a vocalist with "quite a manner" who sings in a clever way a song apparently entitled "My father's a farmer"; and Rich and Rich, the "two comedians who couldn't be poor," arouse much laughter with their humorous singing and dancing. That master of melody, Orpheus, plays as well as ever on various musical instruments, including the heckelphone (adopted by Strauss for use in Elektra); and Amos Howard deputises in an entertaining fashion for Lupino Lane. A turn which one always anticipates with pleasure is that of Miss Lydia Yeamans. As a vocalist-actress Miss Yeamans is quite unique, and the sheer merit of her performance compels admiration. This week she commences by singing "Sally in Our Alley"; this is followed by her wonderful imitation of a little girl singing "Rock-a-bye, baby," then we have a most amusing bit of burlesque operatic comedy melodrama, and finally an imitation of an amateur coon singer. Miss Yeamans is an actress and singer with a splendid method, and it is matter for regret that there are not more entertainers of her type on the stage to-day. One must not omit to mention that this genuine artist is assisted by that charming gentleman Mr. Frederick J. Titus, who at the piano is an object-lesson to accompanists.

The programme, as usual, includes the Bioscope, which this week is illustrating a story entitled The Convict's Sacrifice, interpreted by Harry Hinton and Marie Bennett. Mr. Lewis Vincent is as attentive as ever to the comfort of those in front, and receives admirable assistance from Mr Herbert Mack.

THE BALHAM HIPPODROME.

Full houses wait upon a fine programme this week at the Hippodrome which graces the foot of Balham-hill, where Mr. E. W. Hancorne James has ministered so long and successfully to the amusement of an ever-increasing patronage. The particular attraction of the current bill is Mr. Will Evans, who is renewing a popularity already well established in the district. Fair game for the comedian is found in Chantecler, the play which has lately set Paris on the qui vive. The audience may or may not gather an adequate idea of M. Rostand's famous work from Mr. Evans' exposition of it, but what they distinctly do obtain is a full measure of fun. The appearance of the volatile Will in complete rooster regalia is sufficient to upset the gravity of the most hardened variety-goer, and his representation of the play with the assistance of the indispensable stage hands, arranged in the latest fowl fashions, is carried out amid laughter that never languishes. Mr. Evans has also a droll song in which his ancestral tree is traced in irresistibly humorous fashion.

The name of Karno is again conspicuous on the programme, and a rollicking representation is given of The Bailiffs. The leading broker's man is played by Mr. Harold Wellesley, who invests Perkins with several new features of comic interest, and maintains the mirth at high pressure. Mr. Gilbert Childs creditably shares Perkins' misadventures as Meredith, and the sketch is effectively sustained throughout. Roze and Calvert entertain cleverly with Captain Kettle and his Charming Mate, and spontaneous bursts of laughter are the result of their travesty of melodrama, in which the most surprising situations are evolved. Mr. Walter King delivers himself of his quaint confidences, which afford the house much amusement, and he is also seen in a grotesque burlesque of a serio song and dance. Miss Cissie Lupino illustrates the poetry of motion in a series of characteristic dances, including a Highland reel, a sailor's hornpipe, and the passeue of a poupée. Miss Lupino's work is neatly and nimbly executed, and she is compelled to concede an encore.

Foot-play is also the feature of the item furnished by Miss Anna Gold and Boys, the latter of whom supply a boot obbligato to the melodious singing of the lady, and also execute a dance duet. The youngsters' feet are never at rest throughout the turn, but they appear none the worse for their exhaustive work, and smilingly acknowledge the generous applause accorded. The O'Gorman Bros., patterers and expert dancers, are popular favourites; and Marshall and Parr in a vocal comedy act, Jeannie Deans, comedienne, and the Imperial Bioscope are also included in a diversified entertainment.

THE FORESTERS'.

Many excellent improvements have recently been made at the Foresters', the new seating accommodation in the stalls, with carpets to match, looking particularly attractive. Mr. Fred Baugh, whose genial personality has done much to make him so popular, may be found nightly in the buffet, where he will be pleased to see artists and friends.

A most interesting programme has been submitted this week, the premier position being occupied by Bernard Mervyn and company in a new and original miniature melodrama in eight scenes, entitled Nick Carter, the adventures of the Black Hand, written by Fred Moule. The action of the play takes place in Warsaw on Christmas Eve, and deals with a Mme. Zaleska, who endeavours to obtain her husband's release from prison. Her brother, Colonel Zuropski, Chief of Police, is responsible for her husband's imprisonment, and as he refuses to assist Madame she vows vengeance, viz., that of killing the Colonel's little daughter, of whom he is very fond. Fortunately the lady's efforts are frustrated by Nick Carter, the detective, a character splendidly portrayed by Mr. Mervyn, and after many exciting situations, the finale is reached by the lady being electrocuted. Miss Phyllis Dailley as the adventuress played perfectly throughout, being ably supported by Mr. James Skea as Zuropski. Mr. Hyland T. Shea was a humorous Patsey, the remaining characters being well cared for by Mr. F. H. Woulfe, Miss Mamie Rendle, and Little Phyllis Howe.

The Ten Dixie Girls, a talented set of bright young ladies, are exceedingly entertaining in their scena, The Silver Coon, for they act, dance, and sing exceedingly well, their best items being "Somebody loves you" and "Lady Vi," the setting being most effective. Mr. Tom Hulme, versatile comedian, fully justifies his title, for after relating some good stories and singing a well-written

SHEPHERD'S BUSH EMPIRE.

Of the many actors who have crossed the border (now somewhat ill-defined) which separates the theatrical from the music hall stage, few can be said to have achieved popularity equal to that enjoyed by Mr. Huntley Wright. There were many who thought that when Mr. Wright severed his lengthy connection with Daly's Theatre he made a great mistake. Those who held this opinion would have been pleasantly surprised had they witnessed (as some of them may) the reception given to this talented and versatile actor during the present week at the Shepherd's Bush Empire, where he has been appearing in that charming but pathetic little play, written by Lloyd Osborne and Austin Strong, entitled The Little Father of the Wilderness. Mr. Wright, of course, made his name as a musical comedy comedian, and the great success which he has since obtained in "the legitimate" inclines one to wonder how much genuine dramatic talent there is being—from a certain point of view—wasted. At all events, Mr. Wright proves himself a really fine actor in this excellent little play, and the character which he humorous song "Tit-bits," he renders in fine style a patriotic number "The flag of liberty," for which he is well received. Miss Maud Lorry has some cleverly trained dogs, who perform many well thought out feats, the great feature being that the lady remains in the wings whilst the dogs are doing their various tricks. Parker and Bracey's yaller coloured coons, five in number, greatly amuse with their songs, glees, &c., the dancing being especially brilliant; Mr. Josh Collins presents Miss Eva Ellis, an accomplished and attractive little lady, and her six pretty maidens in a musical scena, The Seaside Girls. Good effect is produced by the cinematograph, which represents the waves, the songs sung being very tuneful.

Miss Elsie Kedwards renders a catchy number, "Maggie Lee," concluding with a neatly executed dance, and Miss Connie Duprés is a chic comedienne and dancer. Many excellent films are displayed on the Bioscope.

BATTERSEA PALACE.

The Macnaghten house in John Burns's country was packed out on Tuesday last to witness an all-round excellent bill. They are good judges of a turn Battersea way, and the news had evidently quickly got round that there were many fine items in this week's programme. Of well-known names, it must be confessed, there were very few, but we have all heard that "there is just as good fish in the sea as ever came out of it," and so it came about that the artists we saw were of such a calibre that we could hope it would be our good fortune in the future to witness shows up to the same standard.

If we had a liking for one turn more than another, the pronouncement must go in favour of Messrs. Damerell and Rutland, topical talking comedians, D. and R. are great. They have a style that is new, and which nobody has imitated—as yet. We are glad to note that they have copyrighted some splendid business methods in getting the audience to sing their chorus song. The audience swallowed the bait to a man, woman—and small boy. Our sincerest congratulations, D. and R.

A Ruined Life is given by Miss Grace Lester's company. It is a very good little dramaette, the story being the return of John Bellingham's wife, after an absence of eighteen years from her husband's home, only to find that her merciless millionaire husband is on the point of turning his daughter into the streets, even as he had turned the mother in the long ago. It is a touching little piece, and goes right home to Battersea's heart. Both Miss Grace Lester and Miss Alice Bowes act charmingly.

Cadwell and Verne are a good sample of a bright, active, young fellow and a pretty girl—dainty actress and nimble dancer—in double harness. The trifle they present, Early Closing Day, is very well played, and is also merry, bright, tuneful, and just pleases everybody.

Vivians and company top the bill with the dancing scena, The Toy Shop. This has, of course, been seen in London many times, but it is always welcome, for Mark Lupino's eccentricities cause us to laugh heartier than ever we did each and every time we go to see them.

Three of the trial turns seen at the Surrey Theatre a few weeks since, and noticed in The Era, were included in this programme. These were Desmond and Diss, Hugh and High, and Captain Lemar.

Josephine Crook should be heard of in the West End soon. She sang in delightful style, in well-trained voice, two songs, illustrated; one was a pretty love story about flowers, and the other "I like your old French bonnet."

J. H. Greener, Charles Edwin, and La Raieda were included in the programme.

WALTHAMSTOW PALACE.

It is distinctly fortunate for Mr. Pierre Cohen that he has been able to present this week a programme replete with interesting items and containing several "turns" of more than ordinary merit.

A great and instantaneous success is made by Clarice Mayne, who can now number the pleasure-seekers of Walthamstow among her adorers. This artist's dainty style is exactly suited to a piquant "aeroplane" song, while her rendering of "I'm longing for someone to love me" is a thing to remember. Dressed in an Early Victorian costume—great crinoline, purple silk dress with countless flounces, a parasol nearly as large as a cheese-plate, side curls, mittens, and a black lace shawl for the shoulders—the lady might have stepped out of a fashion plate in "Le Follet" of 1850 to '60. Her singing has much charm, and her by-play is admirable. Miss Mayne is amusingly seconded by the unnamed gentleman at the piano, who proves himself no mean comedian.

Master Clark, juvenile comedian, is a pretty little boy, immaculately dressed, and with a voice that is rather above the average of those infant phenomena. Jessie Buckle sings prettily about "The Old Brown Cow," and is warmly received in this and her other contributions. Sterling and Love are much applauded for their vocal and instrumental efforts, the playing of several instruments by the gentleman being particularly pleasing. Andie Caine soon establishes himself as a favourite, firstly in "There's no place like England," and anon in an amusing ditty about sparrows. Madoline Rees looks handsome, and sings with the greatest taste and expression.

Rats may not be favourite pets with the majority of people, but Diavolo's troupe of the white variety prove themselves very clever rodents and a credit to the skill and patience of their trainer. Harry Claff appears here once more in his up-to-date satire, "The Demon and the Fairy." As the Demon Mr. Claff rattles off his satirical lines glibly, and sings with his accustomed effect; as the Fairy a lady acts with vivacity and sings well, but although the Fairy is as important as the Demon, her name is not given on the programme.

In these strenuous and hustling days of the great "rubber boom" Dick Tubb's face should be his fortune, because if it be not made of india-rubber it certainly does not appear to be made of flesh and blood as ours are. The contortions into which he throws his facial muscles are extraordinary; but although the artist appears to suffer no pain in the process, his audience are excited to an almost painful degree—with laughter. In fact, on the occasion of our visit they seemed unwilling to let him leave the stage, his "Coke" song being particularly amusing, and his burlesque of the American "coon" being almost outrageously funny. The Five X-Rays are well described as mad athletes, their doings making something like a nightmare of extravagant fun. Ruffell's Bioscope is as popular as ever. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. H. Petersen, gives an artistic rendering of the overture to The Pirates of Penzance.

Mr. W. F. Frame, the celebrated Scotch comedian, is on a visit to Arbroath this week with an excellent vaudeville company, including Miss Jeannie McIntyre, ballad vocalist, Jack Chalmers, coon singer and dancer, Karoly Czynski, musician, Miss Evie Denton, serio, Kahn and Kahn, magicians and second sight readers, and Professor Dunning, ventriloquist.

Mr. C. Foster Marner, manager of the Kilburn Empire (who formerly had charge of the Putney Hippodrome), has been the recipient of much sympathy in the sad loss he has sustained by the death from consumption on Saturday last, at Bournemouth, of his wife, Miss Venie Belfry (of the Sisters Belfry). The sister of the deceased lady, Miss May Belfry, died some years ago. Mrs. Marner was for some years associated with Bert Clark in the Clark and Hamilton duo. The funeral took place on Thursday at Eulham Cemetery.

REJANE AT THE HIPPODROME.

On Monday, April 4, the Playlet, by Henri Meilhac and Ludovic Halévy, entitled

"LOLOTTE."

Lolotte ..... Mme. Réjane
Le Baron ..... M. Alerme
La Baronne ..... Mlle. Suzanne de Behr
Raoul de Croiselles ..... M. Lauzeties
A Servant ..... M. Derives

Two brilliant houses on Monday afternoon and evening gave Mme. Réjane a truly British welcome at the Hippodrome. This homage to the art of the gifted Parisienne must have been very gratifying to her, especially as one knows that she regards London, artistically speaking, as her second home. Her fascination, her charm, her variableness—if we may use the word—found their fullness in the representation of the thirty-year-old comedietta from the pens of Meilhac and Halévy (authors of Frou-Frou) entitled Lolotte. This has before been presented, by Celine Chaumont on the London stage at the St. James's in 1890; and in its English dress under the title of The Lesson, it was given by Mrs. Bancroft at the Haymarket in 1881.

"Mon ami, you will be so good as to put on your hat and go away without asking me the slightest explanation; you can come back at five." Such is the sentence pronounced on her husband by the Baronne, and it is also that which begins the comedy. Of course, the Baron is most anxious to remain, and a young dandy, Raoul de Croiselles, a friend of the Baron, who happens to call, is asked to decide whether monsieur shall obey the edict of madame. Why, certainly, and the Baron takes up his hat and leaves the room. Hardly has he closed the door than Croiselles urges his suit as a lover of the Baronne, who, much to his chagrin, is imperious and cold.

She has another and more important affair on hand. She has promised to appear in a theatrical performance for a charity, and as the parts allotted her are difficult, she has asked a professional actress to coach her. Indeed, she expects Mlle. Lolotte every moment. At the mention of the name Croiselles is only too desirous to obey the Baronne's behest, and leave her alone with her coach. But before he can escape, the actress is announced, and her simple elegance and distinguished bearing astound her hostess. It will be easily guessed that Croiselles is the lover of Lolotte, and this much is made plain by the few words spoken by the two.

On the departure of Croiselles the lesson commences. Madame is to appear in two characters—those of a chevalier and a country girl. Lolotte gives clear instructions as to what her gait and manner should be, and also shows her the correct "swagger" when wearing a sword, by fixing a light cane to the skirt of her dress. The Baronne is making wonderful progress when, as ill-luck would have it, the actress picks up from a table a copy of the book of the play, and there, on the margin, discovers pen-and-ink sketches just like those Croiselles makes chez elle.

Jealousy at once strikes Lolotte to the heart, and when the Baronne offers her a 500 franc note, she takes one of equal amount from her purse and begs madame to add it to hers, and give both to the charity on behalf of which she is going to play. With a display of frigid politeness the actress then takes her leave. Then comes the opportunity for Croiselles to urge his suit with the Baronne; but, to the confusion of both, Lolotte returns. She hurls epithets at madame, and in the height of the rumpus the Baron arrives. "Take care," says Croiselles to Lolotte; "it's the husband!" "What's the husband to me?" screams the infuriated woman, whose rage has reached such a pitch that she is going to divulge "all," when a glance at the unfortunate wife suddenly restores her mental balance. With a sweeping gesture to monsieur le mari, she says: "Such, sir, is the way in which Madame la Baronne ought to play the scene she has been rehearsing with me!"

The incomparable art of Réjane again delighted Londoners, and the changing moods of Lolotte the lady and Lolotte the divette enabled one to appreciate the fine sense of character displayed by the popular Parisienne, who was evidently enchanted with her reception and the number of magnificent floral trophies handed over the footlights. Mlle. Suzanne de Behr, looking well in a confection the colour of Parma violets, made an excellent foil to Réjane; and M. Lauzeties was light-hearted and amusingly cynical as the lover. M. Alerme and M. Derives were adequate in small parts.

PUTNEY HIPPODROME.

Business at this house is deservedly good this week, for looming large in the strong and well-varied company is the name of George Robey. "George" is singing "Archibald, certainly not!" "Miss Green," and his historical screamer, "King Charles II." The first of the three appeared to be the most popular, but his patter in all of them is excruciatingly funny, and earned him a great reception. Cassie Walmer, Frank Foot, the Johannesburg jester, Gala and Norris, in their skit on the roller skating craze, without skates, and Herbert Clifton also appear.

The turn of the evening is undoubtedly the sketch Toplitsky, which concerns the love affairs of Sam Levy and his sweetheart, who are unable to get married because Sam's father, Abraham Levy, declines to advance the wherewithal, basing his action on the words of "Toplitsky," an author, who is guide, philosopher, and friend to the father in everything. How the lovers make "Toplitsky" serve their ends, and eventually get the father's blessing and £2,000, we leave the very clever trio engaged to show. Too much praise cannot be given to Mr. Frank Bernard for his impersonation of the father, Abraham Levy. It is by no means an easy character, and in less capable hands might have been ridiculous; but by sheer ability he gets every possible laugh, and when the moment of pathos comes the house is hushed in a trice and held. His final exit and the silent business that accompany it are especially fine, and richly deserve the storm of applause they receive. Mr. F. H. Dale, as the son, and Miss Edyth Marlyn are good, and contribute materially to the fun.

"THE SPIRIT OF MUSIC."

Presented at the Wilfesden Hippodrome on Monday, April 4.

Prince Rupert of Roumania .. Mr. Carl Junor
King of Ouldaria ..... Mr. W. G. Blunt
Princess Iris of Ouldaria .... Miss Mabel Adams
The Spirit of Music ..... Miss Cora Deane

Mr. Fred S. Jennings is this week presenting with much success here a romantic playlet entitled The Spirit of Music. The scene is laid in the Music Room of the king's palace at Ouldaria, and with the rise of the curtain is heard the noise of battle outside. The King and his daughter, Princess Iris, are discovered discussing the situation caused by the serious quarrel between Ouldaria and Roumania. The monarch suggests that the only way in which this country can be saved is by his daughter's acceptance of an offer of marriage made by Prince Rupert, who is at the head of the hostile army. The Prince bears a bad character, and news of his unenviable reputation has reached the ears of the Princess, who bewails her fate; but her scruples are overcome, and for the sake of her country she consents.

Prince Rupert, thinking his army will not prove victorious, gains entrance to the castle unobserved. He is attired as a trooper, and is by way of negotiating terms of peace with the King and of pressing his offer of marriage. Whilst he soliloquises the Spirt of Music appears to him and informs him of the bad reputation which has preceded him. There is one thing, however, which would win for him the love and admiration of the Princess—the display of musical power.

The Prince says the marriage would only be one of convenience, and disclaims any knowledge of music. The Spirit, recognising his many good qualities, exercises magic power, and endows him with great musical talent. At the Spirit's command the soldier Prince sits down at the piano and gives a masterful rendering of a number of works. The Princess listens to the music, and falls in love with the player, in spite of his lowly appearance. The two there and then admit a great mutual affection. But the Princess immediately says he must try and forget their meeting, remembers her approaching betrothal to Prince Rupert, and leaves the disguised Prince.

The Prince makes as if to follow Princess Iris, but is prevented by the reappearance of the Spirit of Music, who tells him that the Princess, having met the man, must now meet the Prince. The latter retires to garb himself according to his rank. The King enters, and is met by the Princess, who begs that she may be released from her agreement to marry Prince Rupert in order that she may be free to marry the talented stranger. The rest may be easily guessed, and the Spirit of Music unites the lovers, and the two hostile countries are in complete harmony at the fall of the curtain.

The sketch is most excellently mounted, and the parts are all well taken. A long and successful run may be safely predicted for the production.

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS.

In the excellent catalogue of new songs published by Messrs. B. Feldman and Co. are to be found the crême de la crême of America's popular songs. The demand for such winners in both continents as "I wonder who's kissing her now," "I'm longing for one sight of you," "Santa Fé," "The garden of Roses," "I wonder if it's true," "It's the Alpine dress you're wearing," "Pretty little girl from Nowhere," "Won't there ever be any wedding-bells for me?" "Sweet garden queen," and other charming new Feldman chorus songs has been incessant these last few days.

Yet another prominent artist who is on the eve of exploiting a Feldman song is that gifted young performer, Miss Gertie Gitana, who early next week will produce at the Oxford and the other halls where she is engaged Messrs. Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford's charming new song, "You were coming through the corn, Molly dear." Never before, perhaps, has this dainty artist been fitted with a number so eminently suited to her special type of business, and a success far out of the ordinary is confidently anticipated by all concerned.

At the Oxford and Tivoli this week Mr. Mark Sheridan, happily recovered from his recent illness, has been evoking roars of laughter accompanied by plaudits loud and long for his masterly rendering of his original song, "I do like to be beside the seaside," and Messrs. Feldman and Co. are to be congratulated on the possession of a number which, despite its enormous pantomime vogue, still flourishes like the green bay tree.

That dashing and dainty comedienne, Miss Chummie La Mara, will next week produce at the Tivoli, Barrow-in-Furness, two of the new Feldman publications, to wit: "We can't go into the parlour," by Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford; and "Ev'ry girl loves a military man," a sparkling new satire on things military, by Harrington, Godfrey, and Orlando Powell.

The "feature" song par excellence for the present pierrot and alfresco season is Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford's characteristic romance, "It's the Alpine dress you're wearing," which Messrs. Feldman and Co. publish. The worth of this song has been amply proven in two-thirds of our recent pantomimes, in which it was always received with tumultuous applause. The song may be highly recommended even if sung in orthodox pierrot attire.

A genuinely humorous new number, with a melodious chorus, which Messrs. Feldman and Co. are just putting on is "Ev'ry girl loves a military man," by John P. Harrington, Fred Godfrey, and Orlando Powell. Performers looking out for a striking chorus number for seaside exploitation should make early application to the famous Arthur-street firm for permission.

Fresh from her pantomime success at the Alexandra, Birmingham, Miss Molly Wynne opened at the Gaiety, Birmingham, this week, and scored an instantaneous hit with the two Feldman songs she made so popular in pantomime, to wit, "Pretty little girl from Nowhere," by Rogers and Neat; and "It's the Alpine dress you're wearing," by Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford. Miss Ray Ford, from the same pantomime, has also been appearing during the current week at the local Empire with "Send me a picture postcard," yet another of the Feldman publications.

A communication just received at Arthur-street from Mr. G. H. Elliott records the pleasing fact that "Moon, moon, moon," by Edgar, Lawrance, and Gifford, is his third song nightly, at the Grand Theatre, Hanley, this week, and is received with deafening applause. Mr. Elliott is also going "great guns" with "By the light of the silvery moon." Both these latest Elliott successes are published by Feldmans.

"THE EVE OF WATERLOO."

An Episode, in Three Scenes, Produced at the Camden Hippodrome on Monday, April 4.

Napoleon ..... Mr. G. W. Cockburn
Marshal Ney ..... Mr. T. Ritchie
General Gerard ..... Mr. W. Young
Chevalier D'Orsay ..... Mr. Watty Brunton
Sergeant ..... Mr. R. Mansell
Josephine ..... Miss Lilla Wilde

Anything dealing with the life of Napoleon is interesting, and this new sketch, produced under the direction of Mr. Henri Cassell, is no exception. It is in three scenes, two of which are laid at the Château St. Malo, the home of the Chevalier D'Orsay. Here Napoleon is making his headquarters, and when the scene opens it is early morning on the day of Waterloo. Napoleon has made his plans for the battle, when Josephine comes to see him. In an affecting interview he tells her of his feeling of coming defeat in the great engagement he is about to undertake. After a short scene on the battlefield we are again brought back to the château; the battle is over, and Napoleon defeated. He is held prisoner, and while he sits in loneliness beside the fire we see his vision of the final defeat he had just suffered. Josephine comes in to comfort him, and closely following her is an English officer, who tells Napoleon of the decision to send him to St. Helena.

Throughout this striking sketch Mr. G. W. Cockburn played with great force as Napoleon, and his make-up was admirable. Miss Lilla Wilde enacted Josephine with much skill; Mr. T. Ritchie made a capital Marshal Ney; and General Gerard, whom Napoleon detects in an act of treachery and orders to be shot, was played with much force by Mr. W. Young. Mr. Watty Brunton supplied the lighter side of the piece by his comic impersonation of the Chevalier D'Orsay. The sketch is well staged, the tableau of Waterloo being very effective.

At a recent meeting of the general committee of the Birmingham Musical Festival it was announced that the last festival resulted in a loss of £1,172. The receipts for the 1906 festival were £9,778, and for the 1909 festival, £7,353.

"Burton's Professional Diary and Date Book" for 1910-11 just to hand, has reached the eleventh year of issue. The chief feature of the work is the fifty-two weeks' balance-sheet, by means of which the whole year's accounts may be kept in order, and the exact financial position of the possessor revealed at a glance. A page is devoted to each week's receipts, and is faced by a printed list of every imaginable kind of expenditure incidental to a theatrical or variety tour. Among the useful contents of the book, which is of a handy pocket size, are to be found address sheets, sizes of printing, commission and discount tables, a comprehensive table of percentages, printing stock sheets, and two years' bookings. To resident and touring managers it must be of inestimable value, and can be obtained at 1s., post free, from the compiler, Mr. George Burton, Milner's Chambers, Fargate, Sheffield.

Messrs. Fred Wilkins and Brother, Ltd., the well-known Liverpool theatre furnishers and expert electric theatre fitters, have opened London offices and show-rooms at Lyric Chambers, 27, Shaftesbury-avenue, W., where a choice selection of their renowned tip-up chairs can be seen, and estimates and illustrated catalogues for all kinds of theatre work may be obtained. RINKING GOSSIP AND NOTICES.

"Tetrazzini of the Wheel."

Miss Bertha Doud Mack has been appearing at the Slowhill Rink, Newport, and her act has induced a local scribe to dub her "the Tettrazini of the wheel." He further says: "She is a genius on rollers, and introduced to an enormous audience on Monday night, much that was novel and unexpected. She has, as it were, translated one art into the language of another—she is a dancer on rollers, and her display was specifically dancing rather than rinking. She gave some spectacular skating as a preliminary and as interludes, swerving and skimming round the rink like a swallow over a lake, but the real point of her performance lay in the fact that she overcame the difficulties of rollers, and gave clog-dancing, ballet-dancing, musical-comedy steps, and concluded with the splits on her heels, picking up two flags from the floor with her teeth."

Bertha Doud Mack's Return.

Miss Bertha Doud Mack, who sailed from Liverpool for America last Wednesday, will only be absent from England six weeks, when she will return to fulfil her contracts. Her business in America is in connection with the settlement of her late mother's affairs.

Harley Davidson's Great Win.

Harley Davidson is still the Anglo-American roller skating speed champion, having defeated Joseph Altman, the challenger, in a wonderful race at the New Rink, Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A., on March 4, in the fast time of 2min. 49⅘sec. This is better time than Davidson made at Olympia in February, 1909. The issue was in doubt until the very last lap, where the strength and experience of the big champion triumphed. The race gave Davidson a fine opportunity to show the crowd that the title rests in good hands, for after losing considerable ground in the ninth lap he regained his stride and set sail after the leader. It did not look as if he had a chance, but by some great sprinting he caught Altman on the tenth lap and passed him, getting the lead and holding it to the finish, beating the Cincinnati boy by about five feet. In addition to the purse a handsome loving cup, emblematical of the world's championship, was presented to the winner. After Davidson has disposed of several important challenges from Chicago and elsewhere in the States he will return to this country to defend his title on this side of the Atlantic.

Miss Ray Wallace's Skating Song.

"Won't you come Rinking" is the title of a pretty little waltz number by Miss Gabrielle Wodnil, which Miss Ray Wallace has just added to her repertoire. It has a refrain which everyone who has listened to finds irresistible. The consequence is that audience after audience departs from the theatre at least humming, if it does not actually sing, the haunting melody.

Birmingham Skating Rinks.

The managers of two of the Birmingham skating rinks hold carnivals this week. At Monument-road an exhibition of fancy skating was given by Mr. C. N. Dawes, the floor manager, and Miss Jeanie Fisher. Excellently managed by Mr. Humphrey, this rink retains the support of a large number of the original patrons. The directors of the new Empire Skating Palace in Walford-road, Sparkbrook, are highly pleased with the results of the first few weeks' business. At nearly every session the huge floor—the largest out of London—has been crowded. A private skating club is in course of formation. April 20 has been fixed as the date of the first fancy dress carnival.

Lancers Competition at Blackheath.

The Wandsworth Roller Skating Club sent a party on Tuesday last to meet the Blackheath Rink Lancer Party (who, it will be remembered, issued a challenge in The Era to meet anybody in a set of Lancers) in a competition. Blackheath took the floor first, and completed their set in about fifteen minutes. Wandsworth followed, and got through their set in twelve minutes, and were subsequently declared winners. A return competition will take place at the Wandsworth Rink on Monday, May 21.

Changes at Brixton.

Mr. Percy Morgan having resigned his position as director of the Brixton Rink, Mr. Alec Flood has accepted the vacant seat on the board. Mr. H. Dennison has been appointed secretary.

Burnley Coliseum Hockey Team.

The extraordinary success of the Burnley Coliseum Team in the North-East Lancashire Amateur Rink Hockey League is creating remarkable enthusiasm in the town and district, as many as two thousand spectators gathering to witness their matches, in which they have not yet been beaten. The remarkable play of this team is evidenced in their League table returns:—Played 18, won 17, drawn 1, lost 0. Ninety-two goals against 4. The players are J. Smith, W. Richmond, G. W. Jobling, J. W. Duxbury, and F. Barker. They met their nearest rivals for League supremacy, Nelson Spring Bank, on Friday last, and won by 4 goals to 1.

Jessie Darling in Cork.

The Cork City Skating Rink is being daily and nightly well attended. Large crowds of rinkers continue to patronise it, and everyone speaks in high praise of the management. The chief attraction is Miss Jessie Darling, who wears the title of a skateuse of world-wide popularity. Her performances, ever fresh, provide wonderment as well as amusement, and her high praise of the floor and general equipment of the rink count for a good deal. Big crowds are enjoying the entertainment.

Tournament for Dennistoun.

A very attractive programme was drawn up by the Dennistoun Rink management for last Thursday's dance. Next Monday a series of races will be started. The races will extend over three evenings, and the first prize will be a 10-guinea Royal Enfield bicycle. On Thursday, the 14th, a three days' hockey tournament will be begun.

Rinking at Dover.

Rinking has reached the zenith of its popularity at Dover, and the Pier Pavilion Rink, under the management of Mr. Wilkinson, is doing exceptional business. In connection with the pastime a gentleman's hockey club has been formed and matches arranged with clubs of surrounding districts.

Getting Ready for Whitsun.

Buxton's Skating Rink, Douglas, Isle of Man, is now closed for cleaning and redecoration. This popular little skatery, however, reopens on Whit Saturday (May 14).

Round the Dundee Rinks.

A very successful carnival and gymkhana was held at the Olympia Skating Palace, Dundee, on Monday evening. Some very interesting items were witnessed. A hockey match took place between the Dundee Olympia team and an eleven from the Kirkcaldy Olympia, which resulted in a win for the Dundee team. The American Cinematograph is shown at intervals during the evening session here, and always proves a popular item. At the Melrose Terrace Rink a contest night was announced for Thursday evening last. The West End Rink continues to be well patronised.

Fancy Skating at Eastbourne.

The competition for the Devonshire Park Challenge Bowl was held last Saturday afternoon. There was a very good attendance, and some excellent fancy skating was witnessed. Mr. D. Resta was announced as winner of the first prize (438½ points), and he also holds the challenge bowl for one year. Miss J. Robertson was placed second (398 points) and won the special prize, for the first lady, presented by the club. Mr. M. Garcia (374 points) and Mr. H. B. Weller (369 points) were the competitors next in order of points, and were awarded medals. The arrangements were carried out under the direction of Mr. G. G. Stonham, honorary secretary and treasurer of the Devonshire Park (Roller) Figure Skating Club. The competition was held on the outer open-air rink at the Devonshire Park. A cold wind made the conditions a little difficult, particularly in the case of Miss J. Robertson, who, in spite of the handicap of ladies' attire, exhibited some excellent skating and came out second on the list. The judges were Messrs. H. D. Faith, A. March, and Horatio Torromé.

A Maypole at Exeter.

Although the conclusion of the season is now rapidly approaching, the Victoria Palace Rink, Exeter, is even more largely patronised than at its commencement. On Friday last a highly successful carnival was arranged by the manager, Mr. W. J. Barratt, the crowds of skaters and lookers-on in the evening straining the holding capacity of the rink to its utmost. A charming feature of the carnival was the introduction of a maypole dance on skates. A confetti battle proved an agreeable wind-up to an enjoyable evening, for the organisation of which much praise is due to Mr. Barratt and his popular assistant, Mr. E. Bowden.

At the Glamorgan Rinks.

The Winter Gardens, Porthcawl, was opened on Saturday, the 26th, when upwards of 150 skaters in fancy costumes were soon enjoying the excellent floor. Mr. P. A. Priest, the floor-manager (late of the Central Rink, Cardiff), speedily made himself popular with the patrons. The rink bids fair to be the favourite resort of the visitors and residents, as it is proposed to lay out the gardens for open-air rink, alfresco concerts, &c. Bridgend owns two excellent rinks, the best of which is undoubtedly the Station Hill one, where the patrons are taught every style of the art by Mr. T. Ponting. There is also a very good rink laid in the Drill Hall, where, under Mr. Cottle, the floor-manager, the patrons are kept thoroughly interested. Mr. Cottle, by the way, claims to be the originator of the Flirtation Waltz, as applied to a rink.

Lost!

Events in Hampshire.

The recently-formed Salisbury Rink Hockey Club played the Southampton Coliseum Club last Monday. The onlookers displayed the greatest interest and encouragement, and after some exciting encounters, the home team won by 2 to nil. The Salisbury team played on Saturday last the Premier Rink Hockey Club at Trowbridge, a fast and exciting game ended in a draw of 1 goal all. A fancy dress carnival will be held on April 20.

Hard Luck.

At Kingston on Tuesday last Mr. Byng Hall, managing-director of the County Roller Skating Rink, was fined £50 for not having taken out a music and dancing licence in respect of the rink, although he cannot obtain the licence until October next.

Novelty in Decoration.

The last Cinderella of the season was held on Monday evening at the King's Lynn St. James's Hall Roller Rink. There was an excellent attendance. The building was decorated with a series of magnificent panoramic pictures of the English Lakes, and on the platform a huge set scene of the Old Toll Bar, Edinburgh. Prizes were presented by the Mayoress, Mrs. Holcombe Ingleby, for the most attractive, the most original, and the most humorous costumes. These were secured respectively by Miss Gathercole as a rough rider, Mr. L. Nicolson as a highwayman, Mrs. White as a tea service, and Mr. Mawer as a policeman. Mr. Aubrey Bridges was M.C., and the arrangements were carried out by Mr. W. Winch, the businessmanager.

A. E. Court's Benefit.

Mr. A. E. Court, the manager of the Empress Rink, Leicester, is to take a benefit next Thursday. Mr. Court, who last year was in charge of the big rink at Earl's Court, has become a very popular personage in Leicester, and already there are big preparations in progress to make the function the most successful of its kind ever held in the town. Syd Martin will do his remarkable trick act during the evening, there are several kinds of races put down in the programme, and the proceedings will terminate with the inevitable, but always enjoyable, confetti battle. We wish Mr. Court every success and a very big gate.

Leicester's Lady Champion.

At the Leicester Boulevard Rink on Monday evening Miss W. E. Holdsworth, the daughter of the manager, who won the "Peerless" Cup in London last week, lowered her own record by four seconds. The preliminary heats for the £60 shield given by Mr. J. Noble are being run through, and this (Saturday) afternoon such stars in skating as Cooper, Holland, Little, Meredith, and Swain are to compete.

Good Business in Nottingham.

The end of the season is drawing nigh so far as roller-skating is concerned, but many visitors daily attend the Empress Rink, Nottingham. The next big event is to be a carnival, to be held on April 14.

Professional Skating at Newbury.

Newbury Skating Rink has been thronged during the Easter holidays by both skaters and spectators. Additional interest was imparted by the engagement of Colin Gorham, an expert exponent of the art of roller-skating. His graceful evolutions, waltzing, and two-step dancing, elicited loud applause. Mr. Campbell showed how it is possible to maintain an equilibrium at all sorts of impossible angles—when you know how. He was watched by many critical as well as admiring eyes, and there was no lack of applause to reward him for his clever performances.

Rinking for Ogmore Vale.

A local gentleman, Mr. Chas. Raitray, is building a rink about 65 by 50 in this busy little centre, and has secured as manager and instructor Mr. F. Studd, jun., late of Olympia, Pentre. It is hoped to have this rink opened by the end of April.

Confetti Fête at Penzance.

The Palace Rink, Penzance, presented a picturesque and animated appearance on the occasion of its third fancy dress carnival and confetti fête on Wednesday evening. The rink is as popular as ever, and on this night there was a very large attendance. During the evening exhibitions of fancy skating were given by the instructor, Mr. Willis, and instructress, Miss Rogers.

Peterborough Rink Fire.

The Princess Royal Skating Rink, Peterborough, was totally destroyed by fire just before noon last Saturday. About a score of skaters were on when the fire started in the skate store. In a few minutes the canvas roof fell, and some skaters had narrow escapes, but no actual personal injury is reported. The building was partially wrecked by a gale some few years ago.

At Porth Rink.

To increase the popularity of rink hockey a Rhondda Valley League has been formed, and a most valuable trophy cup has been presented by Messrs. C. A. and G. F. Rollinson to be competed for. The first match took place on Friday, April 1, between Treorky and Porth. Scores: Treorky, 3 goals; Porth, 1; and the second on Monday, April 4, between Pontypridd and Treorky, resulting in a win for Pontypridd. Scores, 4 goals to 1.

The Preston Carnival.

On Wednesday evening a most enjoyable fancy dress carnival was held at the Preston Rink, and much credit is due to Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son and their resident-manager, Mr. Largford, for the excellent arrangements. Fifty couples took part. The prizes, which had been provided by the management, were presented to the winners by Mr. Langford. The awards were by ballot of the spectators, and resulted as follows:—Prettiest costume (lady), Miss Myerscough, "Japanese Lady"; best stage-character (lady), Miss Dickenson, "Chanticler"; most humorous (lady), Miss Turner, "Topsy"; gavotte, Miss Taylor and Mr. Bibby; musical chairs, Miss Lovegrove and Mr. Bell.

For the Summer Season.

The interior of the Royal Victoria Pavilion, Ramsgate, is given up to the carpenters this week, and the sound of the hammer rings out in the place where the whirr of the wheels is shortly to be heard. In other words, a fine new rock maple floor is being put down for skating. A big carnival is in preparation for Thursday of next week, and the Mayor of Ramsgate has consented to reopen the rink.

New Rugby Skating Rink.

A new skating rink was opened in Station-road, Rugby, last week. It has been substantially built at a cost of nearly £5,000, and, standing on 2,000 square yards of land, has a floor capable of accommodating 500 skaters at a time.

Skating Rink to be Re-opened.

The Southport Improvement Committee has succeeded in letting the Glaciarium for a term of three years to a Liverpool gentleman, Mr. J. H. Hughes, who will reopen the premises as a skating rink next week. Mr. Hughes has taken the building on a three years' lease, at a rental of £12 per week inclusive of taxes. It is stated that Mr. Hughes proposes to carry out considerable alterations and improvements, and among other things will provide a café to be run on good-class lines.

Sparkhill's Magnificent Skatery.

The opening of the new Empire Skating Rink, Walford-road, Sparkhill, took place last week. There is no skating rink at Small Heath, Sparkbrook, Moseley, Balsall Heath, Sparkhill, Hay Mills, or Acock's Green, so that the rink has a vast area of new ground to work upon. The design of the new building is reminiscent of the Great White City. The outstanding feature is the grand entrance, which has been designed with delightful effect, being flanked with bold and ornate octagon turrets, the whole being richly embroidered in ivory and gold and other luxurious colourings. The skating area is 25,000 square feet, and there is a capacity for 1,500 skaters. There are no pillars or other obstructions. The promenade and gallery accommodate 3,500 spectators. Music is provided by a fine band of sixteen performers. A great attraction is the grill room and café, which is under the supervision of Messrs. Fletchers, Ltd., Birmingham. The rink is under the managing-directorship of Mr. Will Hart, of Leicester.

An "Easter Egg" at Stourbridge.

A huge fancy dress and advertisement carnival was held at Stourbridge Rink on Thursday in last week. The principal attraction was a smart spectacle got up by the manager, Mr. H. J. Wharton, called "An Easter Egg." Some twenty-four children took part, and on the Good Fairy tapping the egg a smart little skater emerged therefrom, and after giving each of the children an Easter egg, performed some clever evolutions on the rollers. There were some twenty prizes in all, and our correspondent, Mr. C. E. Evason, again took the prize for the most original costume. He went as an alarm clock. The next carnival in May will be a benefit for the manager.

Next Wandsworth Carnival.

The third fancy dress carnival will be held at the Central Hall, East-hill, Wandsworth, next Wednesday. A gold watch will be given to the lady, and a canteen of cutlery to the gentleman, with best costume in any class, and twenty other valuable prizes will also be given for the following:—(a) ladies most handsome costume, (b) ladies' most original costume, (c) ladies' best national or historical costume, (d) ladies' best advertisement costume, (f) gentleman's most original costume, (h) gentleman's most comical costume, (k) gentleman's national or historical costume, (l) gentleman's best advertisement costume, (m) junior class, girls under sixteen (any subject), (p) junior class, boys under sixteen (any subject). The Peerless Roller Skate Co., Ltd., will give a diamond brooch for the best dress representing their Peerless skate.

Professional Waltzing at Wandsworth.

Although only seven couples entered for the professional waltzing competition at the Central Hall Skating Rink, Wandsworth, on Wednesday last, quite a large number of spectators watched the performance. It was left to Miss May Pickering and G. W. Furlow, of the Finsbury Park Rink, and Miss Olive Fossett and Mr. W. Doland, of the Wandsworth Rink, to waltz for the prize (£3). There was very little to choose between the two couples, and after a consultation, which lasted five minutes, the Finsbury Park couple were declared winners. The judges were three gentlemen from the N.S.A., viz., Messrs. Pannell, Whitlock, and Evans. Mr. Hewitt, N.S.A., acted as referee.

The Little Yorks.

It appears that after all the Little Yorks will not sail for America until the end of May. In the meantime they have a few open dates this month and next, which their manager, Mr. A. H. Nale, of Royal London Buildings, Princes-square, Wolverhampton, would like to see filled in.

Fancy Dress Carnival at Wolverhampton.

At the Wolverhampton Skating Rink, Birch-street, a fancy dress carnival and skating competition is to take place on April 14. The management offer a number of useful and valuable prizes for competition, and these are sure to provoke good sport and plenty of fun.

"On the Grommet."

Hockey on roller-skates has become a popular pursuit on at least one of His Majesty's warships. The "ball" used is a grommet, which, for the benefit of the landlubber, may be described: It is a ring used for fastening the upper edge of a sail to its stay, and is made by taking a strand just unlaid from a rope, "forming a ring of the size wished by putting the end over the standing part, carrying the long end twice round the ring in the crevices till the ring is complete, and then tying the two ends by an overhand knot."

A Great Skating Policeman.

"Sergeant Lightning" and his far-famed "force" of comic skating policemen will be present at Herbert Izod's benefit on Friday next at the Earl's Court rink. This individual's pranks at previous Earl's Court carnivals have been productive of a great deal of fun, and the Sergeant this year has established himself a firm favourite with rinkers in many parts of London.

Answer to Correspondent.

Rink Manager.—We think you are entitled to at least one month's notice, and very possibly three months. You should consult a solicitor, and get him to write a letter claiming this amount. No doubt you would have to produce witnesses as to the custom.

ROXBURY AS A ROSSER.

The Birmingham Evening Despatch gives prominence to the description of an experience of Mr. Harry Roxbury, the well-known Detective Longfellow in his sketches On the Track, Prince of Monte Carlo, &c., during his recent visit to that city. The story reads:—

"A well-known 'star' in the theatrical world, who is as fond of a joke off the stage as on it, won a curious wager in Birmingham the other night. His burlesque impersonations of a man in blue prompted one of his friends to challenge him to walk from Five Ways to Hagley-road Station and back attired in the costume of a policeman.

"In company with a few friends the 'star,' having rigged himself up in his uniform (which is of the fit-where-it-touches sort), betook himself in a cab to Five Ways at about 11.30 p.m., in order to accomplish his walk. It was agreed that in case any real guardian of the law hove in sight the comedian should be at liberty to take refuge in any side street or garden until the danger was past.

"The 'policeman' commenced his patrol, much to the amusement of his friends, who walked a convenient distance behind. A party of young men and girls, who were evidently returning from a holiday outing, were first met, and they stared with amazement at the sight of a man shuffling along in policeman's clothes and helmet that would have held a man almost double his size. Then one of the party exclaimed: 'Why, he's a fireman, not a policeman; but what a rig out!'

"With another outburst of laughter the young people proceeded on their way, much to the relief of the comedian. Several other people were encountered, and nearly all of them had a hearty laugh at the odd figure of the comedian. Two policemen were seen, but a manœuvre down a side street until the coast was clear was successfully executed.

"The most amusing incident of all, however, was reserved for the last. When within a quarter of a mile or so of Five Ways on the return journey a man who had supped not wisely but too well and was toddling off home with unsteady gait espied the grotesque 'officer,' to whom he wished good-night. One of the comedian's friends exclaimed in stentorian voice, 'Now, then, you've had plenty—go home quietly.' The late reveller stopped, and, rolling up his sleeves, declared with many hiccoughs, that he would knock the policeman's 'top' in if he again said he was drunk. The comedian beat a hasty retreat, but he duly completed his walk, and a charitable cause benefited by the amount of the wager."

Complimentary benefit performances were accorded on Tuesday to Mr. G. R. Badcoe, the popular manager of the Palace Theatre and Hippodrome, Burnley, and were a great success both in the afternoon and the two evening performances, the house being literally thronged. The magnificent programme comprised no fewer than fifty turns, including many of the principal artists from variety houses in Lancashire and Yorkshire.

A trades and inventions exhibition opened at the County Hall, Salisbury, on April 1. On Saturday morning last a fire broke out on the stage, but was fortunately discovered by some of the workmen. The fire brigade were instantly summoned, and a hose was played on the burning curtains, the outbreak being speedily got under, but not before the curtain had been destroyed. The building was filled with smoke for some time, and the floor was also under water. Little or no damage, however, was done to the exhibits.

THE MODERN OPERATOR.

HIS POSITION TO-DAY—THE NEED FOR ORGANISATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I have recently read a series of articles on different subjects by that eminent authority, Mr. A. S. Newman, and from him I quote: "First and of most importance among the safeguards for the public safety is a good and competent operator—a man careful at all times, and ready to act on his own responsibility should occasion arise. It is quite time the official licensing of operators should take place. The competent operators would not mind, and the incompetents would drop out of the business. If an operator knew that his licence would be endorsed were his box found in a dangerous state he would take care that such a condition did not exist; and if, in the case of a serious fire, his licence were forfeited, it would not be long before the careless and incompetent ceased to be." That is Mr. Newman's contention. Is there a man, in or out of the business, who disagrees with that contention as a whole? I venture to say, No. There has been too little attention paid to the operator in the past, and this fact is mainly responsible for the bomb of 1910. People have contended, and do now, that there is nothing in operating. Incompetent men have been put in charge of shows, in some cases proprietors' sons or managers' sons, often under age, with the result that accidents have resulted in fires, arousing such a dread reputation for the cinematograph that drastic regulations were the outcome. Some of these regulations are necessary, and, in looking back, there must be many operators who wonder that they have never made a slip. The conditions under which the operator now does his turn are much improved. The glorified baked-potato can which once confined his beads of perspiration to the vicinity of his lenses now gives way to the brick or other chambers, which are as marble halls to the old boxes. He has room to move, room to breathe, and, if he is fortunate, he has a shaft to carry off the vitiated air of the box to the outside world. These are things for which he is thankful, but, from an operator's point of view, there is much more to be done. Of quite recent growth is the modern electric theatre—the foster-child of the exploiter, the financier, the dividend-seeking octopi. Does the operator in these places obtain fair conditions? The N.A.C.O. was in existence before the advent of these places; so, too, the K.M.A., but with their coming there was need for the C.T.P.S. That was all right. We had the three interests guarded—the manufacturers, the exhibitors, the operators. Then came the Cinematograph Act, and the great mass meeting at Holborn which saw the birth in a golden halo of the C.D.L. At this meeting we saw the financiers who would fight every known body, from the local council to the House of Lords, and who knew as much about the technicalities of the regulations they were shredding as did the people who framed them. However, the C.D.L. has done good—for themselves. The summit was reached with the trade dinner—the greatest success since the inception of the business. We heard the complacent after-dinner oratory, in which we were told of the glorious future, whilst the operator had done six hours in the box and had three more to do. The chairman of the K.M.A. said all sections of the industry had been brought together. Another speaker said the industry had passed from childhood to manhood. If this is manhood there must be some who pine for the happy days of youth. Another speaker alluded to the reunion of "all branches of the trade." Now, I have reviewed some events, I have quoted some utterances, but at any or in any is there mention of the operator? No; he is ignored—he is nobody, nothing. The operator has the effrontery to represent to the L.C.C. that he objects to work on Sunday, unless paid. The opposition deputation "understands that the L.C.C. have been approached by some operators and others." One can imagine the contempt with which the words "some operators" were uttered. The man who gives the show, the man who earns the 40 and 50 per cent. for the shareholders, the man who can put on his hat and coat and stop the show—he is "some" operator. The deputation in favour of abolishing Sunday rest for the worker are backed by four millions of money. At the banquet one is surrounded by seven millions. Money, money—everlasting, almighty money—nothing else! What has the operator on his side? Nothing but his natural gifts, and a desire to earn his own living that he may exercise the functions of an intelligent human being, that he may live in some degree of security and comfort, that he may provide for and maintain a wife and family. What facilities has an electric theatre operator for these? Do any of these dividend-snatchers or golden ogres know what it is to be shut in a chamber for nine hours a day in a hot carbonic atmosphere, debarred the light of day, under the close influence of a powerful arc lamp, working all faculties at a high tension, and the awful strain on the eyes, the monotony of watching the same pictures over and over again, the same buzz and click, the same little wheels and rollers going round? They do not know what it is; the public do not know it; only the man who has done it, he knows. For this he is asked to be well satisfied on 28s. per week. This is no wild assertion. An operator at a picture palace, a member of the N.A.C.O., was asked to sign an agreement to this effect. He refused, and left, and through this society obtained a berth the same week at £3 per week, hours 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Again, the L.C.C. decrees that proceeds of Sunday shows must go to charity. Does the operator get a look in? No; his money is juggled about, so that if he works on Sunday he gets what he got before, and if he does not he loses about 30 per cent. of his money, and eventually gets the sack. There is a benevolent fund for the operator in sickness or distress, but do the proprietors give to this? No. To the Society for Women's Health, to the Cab-drivers' Union, the Printers' Assistants, the Society of Sandwichmen, hospitals, actors' orphans, anybody—but to the operator, no. We recall articles in the trade journals under the heading, "We Want Equal Rights." We want—the same we, the same want—always what we want. Never mind what the worker wants. Would it not be a better motto—"In all things fair"? Is the operator being treated fairly? we ask of you as an operator, we ask of you as an employer. He (the operator) is, at the least, a man of some knowledge, some skill, ability, and should be of experience. Yet he is offered 28s. per week; a scavenger gets 30s. Everybody is anxious to see unity in the cinematograph business; the operator desires it, but the labourer is worthy of his hire, and, that being so, he will not be content until he gets it. Would it not be better, more satisfactory, if a scale of pay were drawn up? It has been done in America; why not here? There is a demand for operators. The N.A.C.O. is being continually asked for operators, always with the condition—"they must be good men." The N.A.C.O. are working on these lines for the operators of Great Britain. Organisation is the only way to attain these ends. It is good for the masters. The existence of the Kinematograph Manufacturers' Association, the Cinematograph Trade Protection Society, the Cinematograph Defence League is evidence of that. Surely if it is good for them, it is good for the men. As a unit against such forces, what can an operator do? Operators, think it over, and send for a form to join the National Association of Cinematograph Operators, founded April, 1907, by operators, composed of operators, and run by operators.—Yours truly,

HERB. L. MERRITT,
Hon. Secretary, National Association Cinematograph Operators.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD

Great Success of the Showmen's Guild.

Although we have dealt with in special articles the good work of the Guild, there are one or two observations that will come more fittingly in this place. Less than twenty years ago the showmen of Great Britain were engaged in a life-and-death struggle for the barest tolerance, and were begging at the door of Parliament for existence. It was thought to be a presumptuous thing for showmen to dare to ask for toleration, and, as for the rights of citizenship, that was a demand of incredible audacity. The common opinion being that fairs were dying out and that show-people were dying out with the fairs, it was thought to be a highly meritorious and Christian work to hasten their inevitable end by penalising legislation. That was, briefly states the official view of show life, twenty years ago.

How the Showmen Helped Themselves.

Twenty years' hard work, and note the change. To-day the rights of citizenship are assured to every showman. He is no longer a beggar at the gate seeking a crumb of toleration. He stands erect, and demands what every worker in the commonwealth has a right to seek—equal justice with his fellow-workers in the State. His claim is recognised, his manhood is vindicated, and he takes his place in the community he serves respected and honoured.

A Triumph of Combination.

From the outset of its beneficent career the Showmen's Guild has had wise leadership and a settled policy. We are rejoicing to-day in the success of that policy. Not without toil of brains and hands, not without the devoted service and self-sacrifice of its strenuous workers, has this triumph been gained. That is the inevitable toll exacted for success in every movement for God and for good in the world. The worker shall see of the travail of his soul is true of all men.

The Forward Movement in Showland.

Having enterprised thus far and having won their right to full citizenship, it is for showmen to go forward and prove their right by even greater enterprise and truer service to the show-loving public of Great Britain. Mitcham is but a sign of the times in which we live. The settlement with Handsworth is but another landmark in the onward march of the hosts of showland to full and complete vindication of their right to serve the people without let or hindrance. Showmen have a work to do, and that work makes for the common good. It is for the nation as a whole to recognise this when that time comes; then will the Showmen's Guild devote all its energies to new fields of enterprise to uplift the open amusements of the toilers of the Empire.

Showmen's Letter-Box.

Letters await W. Haggar, W. Biddall, H. Fossett and J. W. Chipperfield at The Era office.

Dewsbury Spring Feast.

For the amusement of the people of this great centre of industry were J. W. Waddington's Cinema Pavilion, motor-car set, steam yachts and racing birds; Dunwell Johnson's bicycle track variety frames, and throwing games; C. Jameson's steam swings, coker sheets, and games Proctor and Riley's hand swings; Gavin and Blake's gem horses and toy swings; James and Holdsworth's shooting concerns; football frames by Messrs. Gallagher, Hyde, Casey, and Mitchell pannum stalls by Messrs. Bassett, Riley, and Holdsworth; throwing games and variety stalls in splendid array by Messrs. Fawcett, Redfern Daly, Clark, Blake, Steward, Burgin, Riley Rhodes, Turner, Bassett, Mitchell, and other caterers.

Brighouse Feast.

Harry Ashington's Cinema and Marionette Theatre was the chief attraction at this spring fixture, the other amusements being G. Marshall's motors, T. Burgin's steam swings and juvenile high flyers, Morley's steam swings, Bentley's shooting range, Kershaw's gem horses, Wright's confectionery stall, and Hodgkinson's refreshment saloon. Hoop La frames, Emma sheets, ring and dart boards were provided by Messrs. Brooks, Thompson, Joy, Chapman, and Guthrie.

Milnsbridge (near Huddersfield) Feast.

This thriving suburban village held its spring feast in grand style during the past week, the principal entertainers being W. H. Marshall and Sons with Palace of Delight and splendid motor-car set, Gavin's scenic slide, Pagotto's swings gem horses and pannum stall, Seed's shooter and juvenile roundabout and swings, Radcliffe's bottle battery and houp-la, Wright's confectionery stall, and numerous houp-la and throwing games by Messrs. Barker, Burgess, Castle, Ackroyd, and others.

Roundabout Proprietors and Showmen's Union.

Members of this society are requested to attend important meeting at the Manchester headquarters on Wednesday next. See our advertisement columns for particulars.

Pinder's Circus at Pau.

A correspondent of The Era, whilst attending the Blériot Aviation School at Pau, paid a visit to Pinder's English Circus, now on tour on the Continent. He reports that the performance was in every way excellent. Besides the Pinder Family, the company included the Brothers Decan, M. Eugene, Harry Brothers, M. Vasserot, M. Cairoli, M. Aussude, M. John, and Miles. Vésuve, Lakkitta, and Uselce. The Pinder Troupe of performing elephants were a great draw.

SHOWMAN GUILD VICTORY AT MITCHAM.

An excellent example of the many-sided activities of the Showmen's Guild is afforded by the result of the election for Parish Councillors at Mitcham. During the past three or four years the organised showmen, through the Guild, have strenuously endeavoured to bring about a mutually satisfactory conclusion of the dispute over Mitcham Fair.

The progress of these efforts has been fully chronicled in our "Showman World" pages, and it is only just to the Showmen's Guild to state that the failure to effect a reasonable compromise has rested entirely with the obstinacy of the small group of gentlemen at Mitcham, who had set their hearts on abolishing the people's fair.

The enthusiasm of the people for the fair may have been a revelation to these gentlemen, but, like the Bourbons of old, they never repent or change their mind. In spite of the fact that the Home Secretary refused their petition to abolish the fair, and that two properly convened parish meetings voted almost unanimously against abolition, and also that many public meetings endorsed the action of the Guild, and supported the showmen in their fight to retain the fair, these gentlemen, up to the present time, have persisted in ignoring public opinion.

The executive council of the Showmen's Guild, under these circumstances, made no concealment of their purpose to appeal direct to the people upon every possible occasion. The people's rights were threatened, and it was only right and proper that the people should have leadership and direction in combating the enemies of popular rights.

The Showmen's Guild to the Rescue of Popular Rights.

Not for the first time in its history has the Showmen's Guild been compelled to drop futile negotiations with local authorities, and make a direct appeal to the people. Instances of the Guild's activity in this respect will readily occur to our showmen readers—Wigan and Burslem being notable examples.

The recent successful petition of the Guild against the abolition of the fairs at Hounslow, Heston Green, and Isleworth are also cases in point.

The Guild upon several occasions, when negotiating with the owners of the franchise, and their supporters upon the Parish Council, for a reasonable settlement of the difficulty of a better site for the fair at Mitcham, intimated that if the local authorities were not able to settle the matter, the Guild would have to make a direct appeal at the next election of the Parish Council, in order that the ratepayers might express an opinion on the matter.

Readers of recent articles in our pages upon this question will remember that the executive officials of the Guild were careful to avoid any appearance of partisanship, and also to keep apart from both political parties who were running candidates for election.

The supreme issue kept before the electors by the propaganda work of the Guild was the maintenance of the people's fair rights.

The triumphant issue of the struggle is the vindication of this extremely wise and moderate policy. So strictly was this line of action carried out by the Guild, that the usual party machinery of a personal canvass of the voters, and conveyances to bring the voters to the poll, was not attempted by the Guild.

All that was done was by public meetings in the open-air and in Public Halls, to rouse the electors.

Another method adopted was to send a circular letter, explaining the position of the fair rights as it affected the people and the showmen.

Triumphant Return of the Champions of the Fair Rights.

After the most careful consideration, the Guild determined to link its case with the names of two candidates only. This decision was justified by the result. Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, of The Era, and a member of the Guild executive council, with Mr. J. M. Bland, ex-Councillor of Mitcham, were the official candidates for the Guild.

This limiting the Guild ticket to two names placed the issue clearly and boldly before the electors. The special distinction of both these gentlemen in the struggle for the people's fair rights was in the fact that they stood unconditionally for the preservation of the fair, whether it could be removed or not to a better site.

As indicating the progress of public opinion, and the better mind of the Parish Council, it is interesting to note, that out of the twenty-six candidates for municipal honours who went to the poll at Mitcham, there were only three or four known abolitionists.

The rest of the candidates made it a condition of their support of the fair that it must be removed to another site. The importance of this movement for removal of the fair is very significant of the altered state of public opinion in Mitcham. Very few of the public men and still fewer of the people are against the fair, and desire its abolition.

In fact, coupled with removal of the fair as a condition of their support, there was no dispute between the vast majority of the candidates and the Guild.

Nevertheless, it was eminently wise, in the face of the difficulties that have arisen in past negotiations with the local authorities, that the Guild should interfere, and bring the question of the fair rights before the public at the time of elections. This could best be done by the Guild running two out and out champions, with or without conditions, ready to defend the people's fair rights.

Incidents of the Electoral Battle.

Every step that the Guild took in contesting the election was the theme of universal conversation. The opening of the committee room, billing the town with large posters, the distribution of ten thousand handbills, the sending out to the parochial electors four thousand circulars by post, were demonstrations ample enough to prove that when the organised showmen determined to enter the lists as champions of popular rights, that no effort is neglected that wise counsel and astute leadership can suggest.

A very special feature of the Guild propaganda was the series of open-air meetings on the Fair Green. Here, on the historic spot devoted for hundreds of years past to the open-air amusements of the people, the Guild chaplain found the open-air forum for his vigorous appeals to the people. In this open-air work Mr. Horne was well supported by Councillor Bland and other local champions of the fair. A word of praise must be given to Mr. W. E. Roche, the well-known showmen's artist, of Lee, S.E., who gave ten days of his most valuable time in the assistant secretarial work, and other arduous duties of the day-by-day propaganda.

Happening as the contest did in Easter week, it was impossible for the London showmen to forsake their business and join in the struggle at Mitcham. Amongst those who did manage to give time and work were Mr. Alf Ball, Mr. Wm. Wilson, Mr. F. Wilson, and Mr. John Searle.

Mr. Alf. Ball was at one of the polling stations the greater part of the day of election, and Mr. Roche was there from the commencement of the poll to its close. It is no exaggeration to say that the Guild chaplain has devoted himself entirely for several weeks past to this extremely important, urgent, and exhausting work.

The Victors in the Struggle.

Hard work tells. It is a triumph of good work and high principle. The Guild has not condescended to the ordinary electioneering methods. It has not joined its fortunes to either of the political parties hard at work during the contest. It has fought for its own hand, and has won a signal victory. Messrs. Pedgrift and Bland are to be congratulated on the result, and the Showmen's Guild on the soundness of its policy and the worth of its methods in public controversy.

When the result was declared, it was an amazement to many of the enemies of popular rights to find that, despite all their efforts and all their methods of bringing the electors to the poll—methods which the Guild did not adopt—that the Guild candidates were amongst the successful fifteen members of the new council. We are quite certain that with such men as Messrs. Pedgrift and Bland to look after the people's interests and the trading rights of the showmen that we are entering upon what we trust will be the very last stage of the controversy with regard to the maintenance of Mitcham Fair.

We are sanguine enough to believe and confidently to anticipate that with these two gentlemen in the Council chamber justice will be done to the showmen and to the people of Mitcham.

With regard to the interests of showmen, Mr. Pedgrift will be able to speak with authority, and with regard to the interests of Mitcham, his colleague, Mr. Bland, will speak with equal directness and knowledge of the needs of the people.

We commend the consideration of this victory of the organised showmen at Mitcham to the careful thought of our readers. Why has a triumph been gained at Mitcham? It is because at every stage in the dispute the executive officials of the Guild have taken wise and moderate action.

Whatever has been done has been done peaceably. There has been no defiance of the local authorities. The action of the Guild has been covered at every point by the decision of the Home Secretary not to abolish the fair. The Guild officials have only intervened in the true interests of public peace and popular rights, and in taking this wise and reasonable stand the Guild has carried with it the approval of the justice-loving public.

The end of the matter is for the present that the outlook is brighter and better at Mitcham, public opinion against the abolition of the fair has been strongly emphasised by the return of the two Guild candidates, and we look forward with every hope that all the parties concerned will come together, in order that by conference and united action a scheme may be formulated that will secure not only the rights of the fair in perpetuity, but its removal to a more commodious and convenient site.

Fatal Fire at a Permanent Show.

Professor Lloyd, for many years a travelling showmen at the Welsh fairs, settled at Barry Dock, and opened a permanent show in a fine block of buildings in the centre of the town. This enterprise was highly successful, and Mr. Lloyd has greatly developed the feature year by year since his settlement at Barry. A cinematograph theatre and a shop show, with succession of freak novelties, being amongst the attractions. Early on Wednesday morning this last week a fire broke out in the basement of the building in which the permanent shows were located, and through the bravery and resourcefulness of Prof. Lloyd's son-in-law, Mr. Gervaise, many lives were saved from the show premises and an adjoining Sailors' Boarding House

A greengrocer living next door discovered the outbreak early in the morning, and he succeeded in waking Gervaise, the showman's son-in-law, who had the task of arousing the people on the premises, all of whom, except Mrs. Lloyd, were asleep on the top floor.

Flames Overtake Dwarf.

Gervaise, scantily clad, went from room to room waking up the sleepers. Nine of them rushed downstairs and escaped, but in his endeavours to persuade a dwarf, named Walters, of Plymouth, to make his escape, Gervaise found himself cut off by the flames.

It appears that the dwarf was so terrified when warned of the fire that he was too frightened to leave his bed. Gervaise had to pull Walters out, and after telling the dwarf to run for his life, lost sight of him. The unfortunate dwarf soon met his death.

Down Rope to the Street.

Meanwhile Gervaise, finding he could not escape down the stairs owing to the fire, had the presence of mind to go to one of the upper rooms, and fastening a piece of rope to a sofa, let himself down by it into the street.

Last Monday the Torry Skating Rink reopened its doors as an up-to-date picture palace, the catering being unreservedly placed in the hands of Mr. Dove Paterson by the proprietors. There will be two houses nightly, with a matinée on Saturdays for the children. The opening programme was a most attractive one, and included Supreme Recognition, a thrilling Russian drama; An Indian's Trust, a Wild West dramatic; Miss Annette Kellerman, the world-famous aquatic sportswoman. Nor has the fun been forgotten. The "comics" are first-class, among them being The King's Command, A Day Off, Aspirants for the Hand of Ellen, The Amateur Pugilist, &c. The cinephone contributes musical pictures, the trip being Through Yorkshire. The newly-appointed manager is Mr. Robertson-Prosser.

Cinematograph Act in Swansea Valley.

At Pontardawe last Friday Messrs. Wadbrook and Scrab, showmen, were fined £1, and costs, in each case, for giving cinematograph performances at Pontardawe and Ystalyfera without notifying the police. This was the first case under the Cinematograph Act.

Leicester.—Temperance Hall.—Proprietor, Mr. Caygill-Holt.—Vaudeville and pictures presented practically alternately are the order of things here. We are given first a comic series of pictures, then Miss Elsie Forster and Miss Clarice May give their clever turns. More pictures—this time a dramatic film—and then the Merrie Mannikins and Miss Marie Pascoe take the stage. In the second half of the programme, in addition to the pictures, Mr. Frederick Nantell and Miss Edith Maynard appear.

"Cinematograph Bill, 1909." Price 1d., by post 2d. Address, The Publisher, "The Era" Buildings, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR THE SHOWMEN'S GUILD.

At the beginning of the Parliamentary Sessions, 1910, there were only two Corporations with private Bills threatening the interests of travelling showmen. The Corporation of Heywood, Lancashire, in a General Powers Bill inserted clauses to restrict and to control cinematograph exhibitions.

These were singularly inept proposals, because the Cinematograph Act, which came into force on Jan. 1, 1910, secured to all Corporations the powers that Heywood was seeking by private Bill legislation. The Guild Executive officials corresponded with the Corporation of Heywood, and pointed out the ineptitude of their proposals.

The result was that the Heywood Corporation dropped the clauses that the Guild objected to, and that matter was speedily settled.

The Handsworth Urban District Council in a private Bill sought extraordinary powers. Clause 125 of their Bill read as follows:—

"The Council may make bye-laws for all or any of the following purposes (that is to say)—

"For prescribing the hours within which during any fair or at any other time any show, booth, caravan, circus, or menagerie may be kept open and for preserving order therein:

"For preventing the use of whirligigs, roundabouts, steam-organs, or other similar contrivances so as to be a source of danger or annoyance to residents or the public."

And clause 126 "proposed to enact that the Council may prohibit any vans, tents, sheds, or similar structures being erected or placed on any lands in the district where their use for human habitation is, in the opinion of the Council, likely to cause the pollution or fouling of any streams or ditches, and any person contravening such resolution, and the owner or occupier of any lands on which any such van, tent, or other similar structure shall be so erected or placed in contravention of the resolution, and who may have knowingly permitted the same, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding £5, and to a daily penalty not exceeding 20s.

The Guild solicitor opened up negotiations with the clerk of the District Council, and efforts were made, under Mr. Watson Wright's guidance, by the local showmen to bring the matter under the consideration of the District Council.

This was in accordance with the usual practice of the Showmen's Guild, the Guild policy being to exhaust every possible means of an amicable settlement or compromise before proceeding to the expensive work of Parliamentary Trade Defence.

These negotiations doubtless had considerable weight with the Council, but in the meantime, and in order to show that the organised showmen were determined to defend their rights, it was necessary to deposit a petition against the Bill at the Private Bills Office, and to take steps to get in order the showman's case against the Bill.

These extremely important and somewhat expensive steps were taken, although sanguine hopes were entertained that a settlement might be arrived at before the matter came before the Private Bills Committee of the House of Lords.

In the petition against the Bill, the Showmen's Guild set out the following cogent reasons against the clauses objected to.

"Your petitioners humbly submit that Clause 125 of the Bill, in so far as it gives power to the Council to prescribe the hours within which shows may be kept open, would, if passed into law, be a most unwarrantable infringement of the personal liberty not only of showmen, but of those persons, chiefly of the working classes, for whom they provide a cheap and wholesome form of amusement. The power to prescribe the hours during which the business of showmen could be carried on might be so used as to entirely extinguish their businesses within the Urban District of Handsworth. Your petitioners further submit that the portion of Clause 125 relating to the use of whirligigs, &c., so as to be a source of danger or annoyance, is wholly unnecessary, as there is full power under the general law to make bye-laws for preventing any such nuisance.

"Your petitioners are apprehensive, in view of the prejudiced and unreasonable attitude of many local authorities towards the business of showmen, that the provisions of Clause 126 of the Bill are sought for other than the merely sanitary reasons which are apparent on the face of the clause, seeing that the likelihood of the pollution of streams is not a fact to be demonstrated in a court of justice, but need only exist in the opinion of the Council. If the object of the Council is to enforce the powers contained in the clause for sanitary reasons only, the clause is wholly unnecessary, as the general sanitary law is equally applicable to van-dwellers as to other persons.

"It has been for some years past the settled policy of Parliament not to allow clauses similar to Clauses 125 and 126 of the Bill to be included in private Bills, and such clauses have been rejected on several occasions."

Satisfactory Issue of the Negotiations.

Having safeguarded the situation by depositing the petition and preparing the case for the showmen (whilst negotiations were still pending between the Guild and the Corporation) it will be recognised that the interests of the showmen of the United Kingdom were being conserved at every possible point of danger.

We are extremely glad to be in a position to announce that the labours for a peaceful settlement have been triumphantly successful, as the following official communication from the Handsworth District Council's Parliamentary Agent to the Showmen's Guild Parliamentary Agent evidences:—

"Referring to the petition which you have deposited against the Bill promoted by the Handsworth District Council, we now write to inform you that the promoters will not proceed with Clauses 125 and 126 of the Bill. You may take this letter as our undertaking to delete these clauses in Committee of the House of Lords.

"Please withdraw the petition of the Showmen and Van-dwellers' Association.

"Yours faithfully,

"Signed) Sherwood and Co.,

"Parliamentary Agents.

"To F. Millar, Esq., Parliamentary Agent."

It will be a great encouragement to the President and Council of the Showmen's Guild as well as the members of the society to see the end of their Parliamentary work for the present year.

Although the confident expectation of the annual report was not fulfilled with regard to Parliamentary work coming to an end speedily, it is gratifying to know that in the case of the two Bills threatening the interest of its members in the present session of Parliament the organised showmen have secured all they asked for without recourse to the expensive work of defending their interests by counsel and witnesses before the Parliamentary Committee.

We congratulate the Guild members on two signal victories in one week, victories in the Parliamentary arena and in the equally important work of defending the old charter fairs of the country.

The triumph of Mitcham and the victory by agreement with the Corporation of Handsworth are notable and encouraging results of hard work and a high tribute to the efficiency of the Guild as a trade protection organisation.

Mr. Clarence W. Green (late manager to the West End Gramophone Supply Co., of Regent-street) has joined Mr. Alfred Hays as manager of the gramophone department, and is giving a gramophone recital at the Æolian Hall, New Bond-street, on April 18, at 3 p.m. The features of this recital will be the introduction of new gramophone records by Mme. Clara Butt, Signor Caruso, &c., accompanied by the "Court" orchestra.

FILM GOSSIP.

The Story of Columbus.

A good Gaumont film is The Voyages of Christopher Columbus, to be released on April 13. We are shown the meeting with Queen Isabel of Spain and her promise to fit out a fleet. The next scene gives one a splendid idea of the Spanish galleons at sea. Months seem to have passed and no sight of land, the sailors are very impatient, and in the end mutiny. Just at this moment land is sighted, and here we get a very fine view of the "look-out" in the "crow's-nest." The next scene gives us an idea of how Columbus had to fight his way with the natives. The next scene brings us back again to Spain, where he has awakened great jealousy, and is charged by some of his crew with cruelty. Investigations are made, and he is cast into prison. He hears from his cell the great welcome Americ Vespuce receives, as having added a new world to the throne of Spain, which he himself ought to have received, and broken-hearted he dies in his cell.

On a Middlesex Duck Farm.

Tyler's have dealt with the above subject in an admirable way, and have produced a film 442ft. in length, which everybody should secure. The whole of the various stages of a duck's life, from its incubation until its preparation for the table, is shown in the pictures, which include some humorous touches. A preliminary view of the farm is followed by close pictures of the incubator, which has a capacity for 25,000 eggs. The quality here is exceptionally good for an interior, and the lines upon lines of egg-trays are clearly shown. Later the eggs are "turned" in the tray, and a pretty picture is given of the young ducklings hatching out. A close view gives a large view of an intact egg, in which appears a small hole, and the latter gradually enlarges to release a feeble, awkward-looking fledgling, which however, in a very short space of time, is full of energy and curiosity about its surroundings. The method of feeding the thousands of birds on the farm is next shown. At seven weeks old the birds are ready for market, and the final scenes show the plucking operations and the subsequent packing of the birds ready for carriage.

Life in a Danish Village.

Three hundred and ninety-five feet in length, a picture dealing with this subject has just been issued by the Cosmopolitan Film Co. The uneventful, but pleasant, pastoral life led by the inhabitants of innumerable Danish villages is interestingly shown in this short film, which opens in the cornfield, where the men are busily loading the sheaves into stacks, while the children make merry among the stubble with the dogs of the village. Next good views of some fine horses are given, one mare being accompanied by two foals, who make a pretty picture as they are seen in a close view enjoying nourishment. Then comes a visit to the ducks, and to the sheep pen, where animals, held between the workman's knee, is being closely shorn—rather a different method to the machine-shearing used on large farms. Several goats give evidence of being as hardy and sure-footed as the rest of their species, and a young one makes a pretty picture as held up to the camera by a study villager. A newly-born calf looks ungainly, but well able to take care of itself when teased, and other pictures include a close portrait of a baby pig, a pretty study of a cat and her kittens, and a good view of a number of the children paddling.

Quaint Disbelief.

The popularity of the many cinematograph exhibitions which have sprung up in the metropolis has not unnaturally led to an inquiry as to when the earliest such was known. This has been declared to have been at the Photographic Convention of the United Kingdom, held at Chester in 1890. "Animated photography" was known some years earlier as having originated in the United States. A curious instance of this is to be found in a London illustrated sporting journal, which in the summer of 1886 published as novelties some instantaneous photographs of race-finishes, while evincing a certain disbelief in their literalness of accuracy. One example of this disbelief reads quaintly to-day: "Whatever we may or may not see with our eyes, I can never believe that our jockeys in England climb about on their horses' necks as they near the winning-post." But that was years before "Tod" Sloan and "Johnny" Reiff and "Danny" Maher had come from America to teach "our jockeys in England to climb about on their horses' necks" as they all do to-day.

Inventor's Troubles.

Who invented the cinematograph? That is a question which again arises in connection with the bankruptcy of William Friese Greene, photographer, Western-road, Brighton, who underwent his examination at the local Court. During the proceedings it was stated that Edison is taking action in America against a certain company for infringing his patent, and the point to be decided will be whether Friese Greene, and not Edison, was the inventor of moving pictures. It is claimed for Greene that he was the first man to make a public demonstration of this now popular form of entertainment. In the late 'seventies he patiently experimented until he was able to show a cinematograph apparatus in the window of a Piccadilly photographer's studio. Finding glass plates very unsatisfactory for the purpose, he eventually discovered the celluloid film, and exhibited his invention before the Photographic Society in London in 1880. Five years later, he alleges, Edison copied his invention.

The First Cinematograph.

In regard to Mr. Friese Greene's claim to be the inventor of cinematography, Mr. Houghton Rockett, of Brockley, S.E., writes "At the Photographic Convention of the United Kingdom, held at Hereford in 1907, the president, in his speech respecting the origin of photography, referred to animated photography, and stated that the 'first cinematograph exhibition was given by the inventor, Mr. Friese Greene,' at a convention meeting held at Chester in 1890."

Thornton Heath's New Electric Palace.

The new Electric Palace, Thornton Heath, was opened on Wednesday, March 23. The new building was crowded with people to witness the arrival of the Mayor and invited guests. The Electric Palaces, Ltd., who are the proprietors of electric palaces at the Marble Arch, Brixton, and Lewisham, have added this new picture playhouse to the number of their undertakings. The hall is 87ft. long, with a width of about 40ft. Sitting accommodation is provided for 300, all the seats being plush-covered, with tip-up cushioned seats. Mr. Horace Sedger is managing-director of the Electric Palaces, Ltd.

Pictures at Tussaud's.

At Madame Tussaud's famous show cinematograph performances are now a regular feature of the daily itinerary.

Electric Theatre for Bath.

At a special session of Licensing Justices held at the Guildhall, Bath, the application by Mr. F. Bannister Howard for a licence for an Electric Theatre at 22, Westgate-street, and for a singing and music licence for the theatre, was granted. The Bath theatre will be the first Mr. Bannister Howard has opened of this kind, although he has several others in course of erection. The pictures shown will be of the very latest, this being ensured by an arrangement with Messrs. Jury. Mr. Howard's local manager is Mr. Arthur Hales, who has been with him for many years, and has managed two theatres in Scotland.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

At a meeting of the committee held with reference to the annual theatrical sports on Thursday evening a number of favourable replies were read to the circular issued by the committee. It is requested that those who have not yet replied, will kindly do so as soon as possible. Tuesday in the last week in June seems to meet with most favour from those who have replied.

Some interesting letters have passed between the Musicians' Union and the Rev. Roger Curtis of the British Pageant (Festival of Empire) Committee, to be given at the Crystal Palace. The Union allege that unfair preference is being shown to foreign musicians, and that the musical arrangements have been placed in the hands of foreigners. The Union wish to follow the decision of the Belgian Government which recently decided that no foreign musicians should be engaged for the National Exhibition in Belgium. The hon. secretaries to Festival of Empire assert that the Union's criticism is not well founded.

A well-attended meeting of the Cinematograph Operators' Association was held on Tuesday morning in the Musicians' Club, 9, Great Newport-street, W.C. Mr. A. Malcolm, president, took the chair, supported by the committee and other officers. The Chairman said this was the first of a series of monthly meetings of members which would be held to inform members as to the work of the committee, and to elicit the views of members on questions under consideration of the committee. He hoped the meetings would arouse more interest in the Association, and be the means of making the members better acquainted with each other. Mr. Wm. Johnson, hon. treasurer, submitted a summary of the accounts for the first quarter of the year. The receipts for the quarter were more than half the receipts for 1909; some thirty-six members had been elected, and three honorary members. Many of the new members were taking a great interest in the work of the Association, and if the same progress was made during the year they would have a substantial balance in the funds.

The arrangements for the examination which will take place on Tuesday were reported. The following gentlemen would constitute the board of examiners:—Messrs. E. H. Bishop (Messrs. Walter Tyler, Ltd.), J. D. Walker (Walturdaw, Ltd.), W. F. Jury (Jury's Imperial Bioscope), L. Kamm (L. Kamm, Ltd.), and the following officers of the Association: Messrs. Wood, Merritt, Malcolm, and E. H. Mason.

Further particulars of the arrangements for luncheon were given, and the special business of the meeting, the preparation of a scale of wages and maximum working hours for each class of business was fully discussed. The result of the discussion will be issued to all members with a view to further alterations or additions, as may be generally approved.

The following additions to the list of vice-presidents to the Sunday Defence Committee have been received: Sir Edward Moss, J.P., Rev. Scott-Lidgett, L.C.C., Mr. George Lansbury, L.C.C. At a meeting of the committee held on Thursday, Mr. Eugene Judge accepted the position of honorary solicitor to the committee. Mr. Charles Coborn reported the result of the meeting held on Monday in the Chapter House, of the Manchester Cathedral, which he attended on behalf of the committee, and a report of which will be submitted to the Northern convocation to be held next month in York. The Bishop of Chester presided at the Manchester meeting, and many influential gentlemen were present.

It is stated that the committee of the Actors' Benevolent Fund have cancelled, on the advice of their solicitor, the permission obtained from the London County Council to give Sunday entertainments in picture theatres for the benefit of this fund.

WINTER GARDENS, NEW BRIGHTON.

Messrs. Jones and Douglass, the managers of the New Brighton Winter Gardens, are evidently determined to keep their place of amusement in the very front rank. During the two and a half years the old Winter Gardens were opened the managers proved that a first-class entertainment hall could be run successfully all the year round. So anxious were the best companies to visit the Winter Gardens that same were found to be too small to accommodate the large combinations and heavy scenery, and the auditorium was unable to seat all those who nightly presented themselves for admission. Now all this has been changed, and in less than five weeks a new and handsome theatre has been built. Nearly two hundred men have worked night and day to accomplish this task, and on Wednesday the reopening took place before a large and delighted audience. Although the balcony has not yet been completed, it was an easy thing to see that the building is most handsome and entirely up to date, the seating of the ground floor being of such a splendid rake that everyone can obtain a good view of the stage. There are four private boxes, and there is accommodation for nearly 1,500 people. The new and enlarged building has been reconstructed, and with the exception of a portion of the span roof of the auditorium, the whole building is entirely new and up to date in every respect. In addition to the entrance-hall, four extra exits have been built on the ground floor. Lounges and cloak-rooms for ladies and gentlemen have been constructed on each side of the foyer, and every convenience provided for the comfort of the patrons. The magnificent stage, one of the finest and most commodious in the provinces, will make it an easy matter to stage any class of production. The architect is Mr. J. Brierley Preston, of Liverpool.

The programme submitted on the opening night gave complete satisfaction, and was contributed to by Mr. Ernest Luck and company, the Five Havannas, the Custances, Mr. Craig Lee, Mr. Harry Maynard, the Cliffords, and Mr. J. H. Wakefield.

Miss Hilda Elen writes that she is under contract with Hickman-Smith's Royal Entertainers now until October.

At the Queen's Hall on the 15th inst., H.S.H. Prince Tschagadaeff will conduct a special grand concert of the Balalaika Orchestra of over forty performers. The Prince is a great musical enthusiast, and intends doing his best to popularise the Balalaika in this country. This Russian national instrument was introduced, it will be remembered, at the Coliseum. The Prince is a lineal descendant of one of the oldest reigning families in Europe. At the same concert Baron Jervis Scalisi will render a new work of his for the piano, and Miss Hemper will sing contralto songs.

Presentations.—At the Royal, Castleford, on Saturday evening, Mr. Wm. Pardoe's pantomime Dick Whittington concluded its fourteenth week's tour before an enthusiastic audience. During the performance Mr. Pardoe was presented with a silver-mounted calabash pipe and 2lb. tobacco, and Miss Lottie Holland (Mrs. Pardoe) with a jewel garter, boxes of chocolates, silver-mounted brush and comb, silver travelling clock, silver smelling and scent bottles, bouquets of flowers, baskets of Easter eggs, silver fish knives and forks, case of gloves and handkerchiefs, silver butter knife, bread fork, and pickle fork from the members of the company.

MR. ARNALD CRAY'S
Magnificent Production of S. Buchanan Rogerson and Guy Thorne's Wonderful Play,
"WHEN IT WAS DARK"
(by arrangement with T. Morton Powell), opened Monday to a packed house at the Star Theatre, Swansea, its third visit, and greater success than ever. Read Mr. Coutts' letter:—
The Star, Swansea, April 5, 1910.
My dear Cray,—Just a line to thank you for the elaborate and painstaking manner in which you have produced "When It Was Dark" at my theatre. The story is one of thrilling interest from first to last, and my audience was held spellbound by the grip of the daring and original plot. I am glad, too, that you have selected so excellent a company. Your mounting is magnificent, and your printing most effective; and I am sure that the bumper house which opened our week's business is the forerunner of a prosperous tour. I congratulate you on your work, and confidently and cordially recommend your production to all my brother managers.—Yours faithfully, WM. COUTTS.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1910.
Besides the dramatic and musical calendar, and the list of pieces, places, and performers enumerated in it, this annual gives also particulars of new plays and important revivals produced at the London and suburban theatres and in the provinces, with their casts, and also lists of plays produced in New York, new pieces produced at the principal Paris theatres, new plays and important revivals presented at the principal Berlin theatres, and an alphabetical list of the principal sketches produced at the London and provincial variety houses. Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree contributes an interesting article entitled "Where was the Old Globe Playhouse?" and there are close on thirty stories told by well-known people and illustrated by photographs and autographs, as well as a miscellaneous lot of information connected with the stage, and an illustrated obituary of the year.—Cork Examiner, Feb. 12, 1910.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1910.
"The Era" Annual will, as usual, be found full of useful dramatic information, besides miscellaneous reading of distinctly personal interest. Mr. Dan Rolyat, for instance, tells how he once attempted "a straight part."—Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury, Jan. 29, 1910.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1910.
Quite among the best and most interesting of the annuals and year-books for 1910 that have reached us is "The Era" Almanack and Annual. About 250pp., beautifully printed on good paper, interspersed with scores of portraits of stage celebrities, living and recently deceased, are included in what can honestly be described as a wonderful shillingsworth. In addition to a mass of tabulated information on new plays and revivals in London and the provinces, in Paris, Berlin, and New York, casts of new plays and sketches, obituary of 1909, lists of theatres and music-halls, and a dramatic and musical calendar, there are about fifty pages of stories told by well-known people and illustrated by portraits and autographs, providing a fund of amusement and interest, not merely to those in the profession, but to all who appreciate good yarns. A copy of the annual may be had post free for 14 stamps from "The Era" Office, 5, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.—Bazaar, Feb. 16, 1910.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1910.
Congratulations to our contemporary "The Era" on the excellent year book known as "The Era" Annual. Everything of interest to the entertainment profession which the year 1909 has brought forth is noted in this publication, and it contains besides many valuable contributions from well-known performers and authorities on stage matters, together with directories of useful information. Amongst those who have written stories are Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, Messrs. Fred Terry, Henry Neville, Rutland Barrington, John Le Hay, J. H. Barnes, Harry Nicholls, Charles Collette, Alfred Lester, Arthur Williams, Dan Rolyat, and Fred Trussell, Miss Louie Freear, Miss Vesta Tilley, the Rev. Donald Hole (Organising Secretary of the Actors' Church Union), the Rev. T. Horne (Chaplain of the Showmen's Guild), and several others, including Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, who, in dealing with "Charity and the Profession," tells an interesting story of a Nihilist visitor. It is an indispensable shillingsworth.—Performer, Jan. 27.

SPECIAL NOTE.—NO DEPUTIES WILL BE ACCEPTED AT REHEARSALS.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.—All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier. Artists employing agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents. New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our Districts Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, and DISTRICT.—MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.
LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, and DISTRICT.—MR. T. GERALD MORTON, Empire Palace, Leeds.
BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.
LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, and DISTRICT.—MR. HORACE COLE, The Empire, Liverpool.
SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.—MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.
LONDON DISTRICT.—MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.
TOURS COMMITTEE.—LLEWELLYN JOHNS and DISTRICT MANAGERS.

EMPIRE THEATRE, SOUTH SHIELDS.—Artists and Agents wishing to submit TRIALS for their Acts in the North, should apply to the Manager, as Matinées are held every Wednesday for that purpose.

N.B.—MR. OSWALD STOLL or MR. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously. Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.—Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled. It is important that separate bill matter, blocks, pictorials, &c., for Dublin, Belfast, and South Shields, be sent direct to Mr. Frank Allen at the Co-operative Offices. IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities. ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers." By Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. 3s. 6d. The Era Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. The work of accountants has now been brought to a fine art, and in almost every branch of business a different system has been elaborated. The present work deals in a small compass fully and clearly with all the special features of theatrical management on the business side.—Financial Times, Feb. 1, 1909.
"Theatrical Accounts." By Cuthbert E. Smedley (The Era, Ltd., 3s. 6d.). Shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given. Receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts, audit—each is allotted a separate chapter. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Morning Post, Jan. 27, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (The Era, Ltd., London, 3s. 6d.), is a most concise and comprehensive little work, calculated to prove of assistance to the theatre-manager. It shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given, and the chapters treating of receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts, and audit will be found to contain much useful information. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury, Feb. 3, 1909.
All concerned with the business side of a theatre will find much useful information and many valuable hints in "Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Mr. Cuthbert E. Smedley, published at The Era office.—Referee, Jan. 31, 1909.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Robert Arthur Theatres Co., Ltd.—The Arcadians, Mr. Robert Courtneidge's superb production, is drawing crowded audiences. Mr. Walter Passmore is the bright particular star, his Simplicitas being irresistibly droll; first-rate support is accorded by Miss Veronica Brady, Miss Ethel Erskine, Miss Billie Sinclair, Miss Mabel Munro, Miss Margaret Paton, and Mr. Oliver J. Round, the last-named running Mr. Passmore hard for mirthful honours.

PALACE THEATRE. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Percy H. Gallagher. —A capital all-round programme is headed by Harry Radford and Mlle. Valentine, clever and funny jugglers; the Harvey Boys present their mirthful boxing scena; Paul Ess and Billie Hoey a ski and skating dance turn; and vocal contributions come from Florence Yayman, Jack Hylton, W. G. Wesley, Selby and Myers, and Boden and Bell.

ABERTILLERY.—PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. E. and H. Tilney; Manager, Mr. E. Price.—A Woman Worth Winning is played by Mr. Percy Norman's company, under the direction of Mr. A. B. Mackay. Mr. Sidney Barton makes a powerful Czar Nicholas; and Mr. Gilbert Standing gives a good impersonation of Amos Pauloff. The comedy is well sustained by Mr Ernest Kendrick as Peter Popples; Miss Margaret Noble is decidedly good as Roma Pauloff; and Miss Trixie Leighton gives an effective impersonation of Lola Kalnovsky.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Mr. J. A. Thomson's company is here with the sterling drama Shadows of a Great City. Mr. James Stidwell makes a good Tom Cooper; and praise is due to Mr. Arthur Knight for his George Benson. Mr. Robert H. Howard is excellent as Mr. Arkwright; Abel Nathan and Jim Farren are well played by Mr. Reginald Weighill and Mr. Frank Medhurst; Nellie Benson is ably portrayed by Miss Ethel Knight; and Miss Zorma Dumoyne is clever in the comedy part of Biddy Bowan.

ACCRINGTON. — PRINCE'S THEATRE. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—The attraction here is Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company in Her Secret Lover. Mr. Arthur St. John submits a manly portrayal of the hero Gilbert Seymour; Mr. Walter H. Wilson is most efficient as Captain Darrell Rose; Mr. Alfred Stretton acquits himself with distinction as John Strange; and Mr. Robert Lord gives a telling assumption of Mr. Murfield. Mr. J. Newton-Cowling is seen to advantage as Jim Jones; the Rev. Arthur Holmes is ably enacted by Mr. Alfred James; and an amusing portrayal of Billy Burley is given by Mr. Victor Vernon. Miss Laura Walker gains the heartiest approval for her clever interpretation of Ivy Seymour; Miss Flora Leslie fills the arduous rôle of Alicia Royale effectively; and Miss Lynn Darlington is most satisfactory as Jane Marie.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Accrington Hippodrome Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—The chief position here is occupied by Kitts and Windrum, who have one of the most mirth-provoking sketches imaginable in The Cuckoo. Edith Haley, versatile vocalist, has made herself a big favourite; Mlle. Renée, with a refined musical scena, proves herself an instrumentalist of the first order; Walker and Lake are an exceedingly witty couple of comedians; and Rhuart, in his burlesque productions, is heartily applauded. The Zampas, bâton manipulators and expert dancers, are cordially received; the Three Sisters Kilner, acrobatic dancers, submit a skilful exhibition; Horace Jones is a very good comedian; and the Bioscope pictures are interesting.

ALDERSHOT.—ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jack Gladwin.—Mr. Herbert Sleath's company is on a return visit with A White Man. Mr. Wilfred Forster is new to the part of Jim Carston, and deserves praise for the handling of this difficult rôle; Mr. Chas. Maunsell's Kerhill is ably presented; Mr. R. A. Brandon's Big Bill is excellent; Mr. Eric Hudson in his portrayal of the chief Tab-y-Wana, with natural dress and make-up, adds to the realism with his introduction of the Ute language; Mr. Frank Mayo as Cash Hawkins is capital; and Mr. Ray Raymond as Hardy is excellently placed. Miss Kathleen Maude's is a charming impersonation of the Countess of Kerhill; and Miss Ormonde Wynne's Countess is good. Misses Hilda Barita, Nora Nagle, Messrs. A. E. Warren, Harold Richardson, Gerald Valentine, John Rogers, Alexander Munro, and Jay Ellis also contribute to the success.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—The week's bill here is the domestic drama Another Man's Wife, one of Mr. Fred Granville's Productions Limited, the author being Mr. Miles Wallerton. Mr. Alfred D. Adams sustains with vigour and skill the part of Carlos De Vergas; Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan interprets the varied phases of craft and cunning peculiar to the Russian adventurer, Paul Bernstoff; Mr. Geoffrey Sutherland scores as the young English doctor, Gilbert Eardley; notable characterisations, too, are those of Mr. Willie Reid as Sam Smiles, a globe-trotter; Mr. Leonard Marshell as Andy Brommer; Mr. Fred Forde as Count Pelikoff; and Mr. E. Davies as Colonel Matterson, an American millionaire. Miss Lily Griffin as Maisie is amiable and forceful; Miss Dorothy Love as Lucy is all that the character suggests; Miss Lilian Radbourne as Inez De Castro finds in the character scope for impressive interpretation; and Miss Ruby Loncraine is satisfactory as Lucy De Vergas. The humour of Miss M. Mayne as Tibby affords comic relief.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Jesse Burslem —This week a revisit is being paid by Mr. Raynor, the talented actor, and his company. On Monday evening Mr. Haddon Chambers' dramatic play, Captain Swift, was presented. Mr. Raynor sustained in his effective, nonchalant, yet forceful manner the character of Mr. Wilding, alias Capt. Swift; Mr. Joseph B. Montague as Marshall gave an effective impersonation; Mr. M. C. Curtis scored as George Gardiner, from Queensland; Mr. Clinton Baddeley as James Seabrook fully justified his choice in his able interpretation; Mr. Conrad Heywood as Harry Seabrook was quite equal to the demands made upon him; Messrs. Ed. Ashworth and T. Babbington were sufficient for all needs in minor parts. Miss Cecilia Dare as Mrs. Seabrook was sufficient for all requirements.

THE NEW PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. A. Sims.—The "variety" portion of the Pavilion programme for the week includes some popular baritone songs, illustrated, by Mr. Alan Wright, the vocalist and lecturer; Hanson and Hartley, vaudeville artists, give a good musical and patter turn; and Drummer T. Rogers, late of the Manchester Regiment, appears in his musical novelty, which includes performances on various instruments. It is a clever performance, a real artistic treat. "The Lassie fra Lancashire," Miss Lucy Lynd, as character comedienne sings and dances; some of her ditties are in the vernacular, and are highly amusing to a native audience. Beautifully displayed cinematograph films, including a fine historic one of Richelieu, depicting a portion of French history, continue to delight audiences.

THE ODDFELLOWS' HALL.—Lessees, The Ashton Entertainments' Syndicate; Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Marks.—The "palace of pictures and variety" here continues to pull audiences. The pictures are up to date and well displayed. The special interlude artists for the week are Miss Nelly Gannon, who sings some sweet songs, illustrated with lantern slides. The other artist is Mr. Harry Wright, a versatile singing comedian and extempore artist.

THE PICTUREDROME.—Lessees, Messrs. Weisker Bros.; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. Luckie.—Admirably-developed films are exhibited here, including the great picture of the Spanish-American War, and others. The great interlude novelties are of the "star" order. Neven Tossau, the tramp artist, paints land and sea scapes while you wait; Gesta and How—the gentleman is a clever farmyard mimic, and the lady a neat top-boot and skipping-rope dancer.

ATTERCLIFFE.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing - Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manageress, Miss Ethel J. Hope.—The leading picture in this week's varied selection is Lieut. Rose, or, The Robbers of Fingall's Cave, which is full of exciting incidents. The Death Disc is an absorbing story of the days of Cromwell; full of pathos is Little Nell, the Drunkard's Child; Temptation and Forgiveness and Tempered with Mercy are both highly dramatic. Comic subjects are represented by The Porter's Dream, The Doctor's Monkey, Golf Mania, and An Unlucky Day. Mr. Hyam Thace, facial comedian, and Mr. J. Cooper Price, in illustrated songs, contribute to the programme.

PICTURE PALACE.—Lessee, Mr. Matt Raymond; Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward King.—A programme of star subjects, including some of the latest productions, is drawing crowded houses nightly. The headliner is a thrilling drama of Indian scenes entitled Cowboy and Squaw. Other subjects are Votes for Women, Cyclist Carbineers, A Wife's Folly, Poet at any Cost, One Night, and then——, and one of the popular Foolshead series, Am I Mad? The Cecilias, lady instrumentalists, give a refined, clever, and pleasing musical act, which is highly appreciated. Mr. Guest's "Scarlet Band" add to the pleasure of the entertainment.

AYR.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry W. Day.—New Frivolity is the attraction here. The company is Mr. John Leopold's, and includes Mr. Jack Leopold and Miss Amy Hall, who sing well and dance better, Mr. Watson Hume, Mr. Harry Ugar, and the Four Kellys, who are responsible for a capital acrobatic display.

PICTURE PALACE.—Another comprehensive programme includes the interesting pictures The Spanish Girl, The Waves at Tontarabic, Lancelot and Elaine, On the Border, and The Albanian Rebellion.

BACUP.—COURT THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. John Walters.—Good business is being done this week with a picture and variety show. Miss Doris Myddleton is a versatile artist, and her acting in a sketch with Teddie Hugh is most praiseworthy. Little Vera contributes several songs in excellent style.

BARNSLEY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. A. C. Mitchell.—Mr. T. Arthur Jones company in When Other Lips, is making a welcome reappearance here.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Smithson.—Conway and Leland, the merry monopedes, top the bill here; Juno Salmo, who bottoms the bill, is deserving of great praise; the Bustons are good as comedy acrobats; Tom E. Dean is a quaint comedian; the Sisters Desmond are well received; Ida Dorrie is a chic comedienne; Adela Varcoe is a good vocalist with illustrated songs; the Bros. Legardo are exceedingly clever as acrobats.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone. —Mr. George Munro, with his répertoire company, is here, opening with The Sleigh Bells. He himself gives a clever portrayal of Matthias; and Miss Doris V. Horrocks presents a fascinating Annette. Mr. E. Diggle makes a clever Christian; and Mr. H. Lawrence as Hans and Mr. Ivor Barnard as Father Walter both do well. Miss Littlewood presents a good study of Catherine. David Garrick, The Lyon's Mail, The Dead Heart, and The Corsican Brothers are also billed.

HIS MAJESTY'S.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—Mr. Arthur Randal's costume company, entitled "Middies and Maids," give a capital entertainment. The company includes Messrs. Scott, Wood, and Kenworth, and Miss Maisie Everette and Miss Gladys Haysack.

TIVOLI.—Lessee, Signor R. Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Wood.—The Ando's Happy Little Japs, the premier turn here, present a unique combination of acrobatism, contortionism, equilibrism, and rope-walking; the mimicry and songs of J. P. Ling are perfection; Miss Adah Payne, a sweet soprano, is excellent in two good songs; Alf. Chester renews his popularity; and the Newen Brothers submit a classical turn of posing and equilibrism. Fred S. Howard as a lightning sketcher and Chummie La Mara, a great favourite, complete the programme.

BATH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—The third visit of The Country Girl to Bath is proving the popularity of this West Country lass. Miss Anna Hickisch is, both vocally and personally, a most delightful heroine; Miss Dorothea Temple as Majorie Joy also comes in for much admiration, her sweet singing being greatly enjoyed; the Princess Melanch finds in Miss Newell another cultured vocalist; and Miss Hilda Darrell proves herself a lively and engaging Sophie. Amongst the gentlemen Mr. Coningsby Brierley is prime favourite by his humorous portrayal of Barry; Mr. Nelson Hancock as Geoffrey Challoner sings with capital effect; and Mr. St. John Hamund is an excellent Rajah.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—Quite the feature of this week's bill is the staging of Mr. George Sheldon and Mr. F. Rawson Buckley's thrilling sketch Before the Dawn, in which Mr. Rawson Buckley and Master Reggie Connor in the two chief parts score an undoubted success. No more popular comedian than Morny Cash ever appears here, and his present repertoire is much to the liking of the audience. Rooke, Rorke, and company in their burletta The Prince's Love Affair provide a turn that is brimful of fun and capital vocalism. Irene Meldon is a dainty comedienne and dancer, and another lady who meets with a good reception is Vesta Nixon. Walter Aubrey dances with excellent results. The pictures include a fine film entitled In Old Kentucky.

BATLEY.—THEATRE.—Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. J. Edward Whitty; Manager, Mr. Alfred A. Taylor.—The management have adopted the measure of producing drama twice nightly for a short season, and the initial experiment has met with success. The attraction this week is Mr. James E. Lewis's company in the musical dramatic play, The Welsh Maid. The acting and singing all round are all that can be desired. Miss Zeta Murdock is a dainty Jenny Jones, and infuses a pathetic interest into the character; Mr. Laurie H. Stuart as Jack Francis gives a good account of himself, and Mr. Victor Cannon as Caradoc Howell and Mr. Herbert de Ville in the rôle of James Seymour are both strong actors, and get the most out of their parts; Mr. William Pernon and Miss Madge Raymonde are responsible for the humorous element, and the Celtic Troupe of dancers also entertain.

BEDFORD.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—The Mummy and the Humming Bird is being presented by Mr. H. Hamilton Stewart's capable company. Mr. Hamilton Stewart as the Mummy, otherwise Lord Lumley, gives a forcible and perfectly restrained rendering of the part; Miss A. Bruce Joy contributes a clever impersonation of Lady Lumley; Mr. Lewis Mannering acts in finished style as the Humming Bird; Mr. Lancelot Lowndes is excellent as the Italian; Mr. Percy Marmont is a pleasant Commander Lord Ronalds; and Miss Viola R. Garland is a charming Ruth Thornton.

BELFAST.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Leedham Bantock and Fredk. Mouillot's company opened on Monday in the farcical comedy Those Terrible Twins. Mr. Bantock as William the Butler is decidedly successful; Mr. Harry Cane furnishes a capital impersonation of Samuel Pringle; and the rôle of Mrs. Pringle is ably sustained by Miss Margaret Skelton. Miss Louie Beckmann and Miss Edna Morgan as Violet Fairfield and Lillie Leyton are charming in their respective rôles; and congratulations are due to Mr. Charles Esdale for his finished impersonation of Charlie Pringle. Mr. James Harcourt is well suited to the rôle of the Hon. Harry Scott, into which he infused plenty of spirit; and Mr. Archie McCaig as Minks, the lift boy, has a part that fits him like the probial glove. The cast is completed by Miss Marion Hargrave as Maria. The one-act play, Only a Clown, forms an acceptable curtain-raiser, the various rôles being capably sustained by Miss Nora Walker and Messrs. Harry Cane, Jas. Harcourt, Charles Esdale, and George Rathbone.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Salmond.—The ever-popular East Lynne is produced by Mr. Tom Watt's company. Mr. Rayson-Cousens furnishes a clever impersonation of Archibald Carlyle; and the fine emotional actress, Miss Laura Hansen, gains a gratifying success in the dual rôle of Lady Isabel and Mme. Vine. Much humour is infused into the rôle of P.C. Bullock by Mr. Joe Rowland, who presents an unexaggerated portrait of this popular character; and Mr. Wilfrid Percy Mansfield as the polished villain, Frances Levison, furnishes an excellent impersonation. Miss Isabel Singleton as Cornelia Carlyle is all that could be desired; and the rôle of Barbara Hare is in the safe hands of Miss Ida Heron, an actress of much ability. Mr. Tom Watt is effective as Lord Mountsevern; and Mr. Jerrold Manville furnishes a capital impersonation of Justice Hare. Miss Alice Moseley as Little Willie deserves a word of praise; and Mr. Eric Lugg as Richard Hare furnishes a skilful impersonation. Other rôles are efficiently sustained by Miss Ethel Ray, Miss A. Nunn, Miss B. Forbes, and Messrs. E. Elliot, Clifford Clifford, &c.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Willmott; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs. —Fragson at the piano is the star turn here, and made a great hit on Monday. Frank Elliston and company appear to decided advantage in a costume-sketch My Lady Betty; Lowenwirth and Cohan, Hebrew comedians, are enthusiastically received; Lindsay and Harte appear in their droll Scotch comedy act; and the juggling feats of the Cromwells are marvellous. Also here are the Two Countees, harmonising duettists; Wardo Brothers, eccentric comedy acrobats; and the Hipposcope.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. C. Laidler.—George Lashwood is here fresh from his American triumphs, and has achieved a notable success with his capital rendering of several songs; as a ventriloquist Vanando has few equals; and Edwards and Espinosa, in their musical dancing act, would be difficult to beat. Miss Marjorie Lawrence is a charming comedienne; and Harry Taylor a really funny Lancashire comedian. Also appearing are Carl Howard, comic conjurer; Chas. Robinson, character comedian; and the Bioscope, under the direction of Mr. Frank McGibney.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General Manager, Mr. Will White.—A fine series of pictures here includes Laddie, Anarchists on Board, and The Heart of a Cowboy. The vaudeville element is sustained by Kendrick and Laura, in harmony and eccentric dancing; and Mr. Frank Boyce, character vocalist.

ST. GEORGE'S HALL.—General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Rogers.—Under the direction of Mr. Rogers some beautiful films have been shown here, including the House of Cards, Patricia and the Slave, and The Flirt. Miss Hether Belle, a talented Scotch character vocalist, appears with gratifying success.

BILSTON.—ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Edwin G. Jazon; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. J Tunstall.—The management here is introducing an innovation in the shape of dramas twice nightly. On Monday Mrs. Frank Bateman and her company appeared with The Way Women Love. Mr. Fred W. Goddard made a manly and convincing hero and Miss Camille Treherne was very successful as Violet; the passion and emotion incidental to the character of Verene Alabra were vividly brought out by Mrs. Frank Bateman; Mr. Percy Shaw was very good as Dick Palmer, and the remaining parts were well sustained. Sapho and Camille are also in the week's bill.

BIRKENHEAD.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Herbert M. King.—Mr. Arthur Phillips's company is fulfilling a week's engagement in The Merchant of Venice, and a large audience were much interested on Monday, when a fine intellectual and powerful performance of Shylock by Mr. Arthur Phillips was much appreciated. He was adequately supported by his company, notably so by Miss Amy Brandon Thomas, who in every respect gave an admirable rendering of Portia. Mr. James Berry made good and careful use of his opportunities as Antonio; Mr. Cyril Vernon as Bassanio displayed exceptional ability; and Mr. Ross Shore exhibited considerable humour as Launcelot Gobbo. Other leading characters were well represented by Mr. Leslie Palmer, Mr. Stewart Vinden, Mr. Richard Fielden, Mr. Herbert Dancey, Mr. Scott Sutherland, and Miss Christie Laws. The scenic effects and costumes were excellent.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Keating.—Mr. Arthur Prince, a remarkably clever and able ventriloquist, is the premier attraction here; Daley Cooper and Mabel Lait, in A Man of Spirit, present a most enjoyable entertainment; and Mr. Ernie Myers, a patter comedian, with a sense of humour, is again scoring heavily. The Angelina Trio of comedy acrobats and jugglers are an acquisition to the bill; and other excellent turns are given by the Two Arnatos, entertaining comedians; Miss Lily Lonsdale, an accomplished vocalist; the Three Royal Temples, operatic duettists; Miss Maudie Forde, vocalist and dancer; Miss Frances Hanlon, a clever comedienne; and the Westbrooks, in a dancing scena. Brown's Royal Bioscope completes.

HIPPODROME.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Weston. —Miss Lole Esmond's company, in The Sorrows of Satan, is filling the house twice nightly. Mr. Edward Neville is well suited as Prince Lucio Rimanez; Mr. Jack McCraig is an excellent Geoffrey Tempest; and Miss Rosie Neville appears to advantage as Lady Sybil Elton. Miss Lole Esmond is an admirable Diana Chesney; and Mr. Frank Wheatley, Mr. J. Le Fleming, and Miss Dorothy Dewhurst are also prominent.

BIRMINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davis; General-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—Mr. Frank Curzon's company introduces the bright musical comedy Dear Little Denmark, and the performance is greatly enjoyed. The music, choruses, and individual numbers are delightfully rendered, and the scenery and dresses are magnificent. Mr. Henry Kitts is the Duke, and he works hard to make the character a success; Miss Netta Lynde as Christine and Miss Joan Penrose as Ophelia figure prominently, and share honours for pleasing vocal numbers; Mr. Arthur Staples as Hans Hansen is hightly amusing, and Mr. Conway Dixon acquits himself excellently. The Columbine ballet, led by Miss Gladys Beech, dance delightfully.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Johnstone.—Mr. J. M. Barrie's delightful play Peter Pan is again attracting crowded houses. Miss Pauline Chase is an ideal Peter Pan; and Wendy is played with great charm and natural grace by Miss Gertrude Lang. Others who deserve warm praise are Master Harry Duff and Master Herbert Hollow; Miss Margaret Fraser, the melodramatic Indian maiden; Mr. Frederick Annerley, as the humorous pirate captain; Mr. Walter Pearce, the affectionate father; and Miss Sybil Carlisle, as the mother.

ALEXANDRA.—Proprietor, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. T. Guest.—Mr. Hall Caine's popular drama Pete is proving one of the most successful attractions ever presented at this house. Mr. Henry Smith is at the head of a clever company whose reception is striking evidence of the popularity of Mr. Hall Caine's plays in Birmingham. Mr. Austen Milroy, in the title-rôle, provides a splendid conception of the generous-minded Pete; and Miss V. Malcolm Barnett as Kate is particularly successful in the emotional situations. Mr. Alfred Gray shows restraint in his interpretation of Philip Christian; and Mr. Frank Stone is responsible for a clever study as Cæsar Cregeen. The remainder of the company is well chosen, and the stage effects are all that can be desired.

BORDESLEY PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—Audiences find the popular musical play The Belle of New York as pretty and tuneful as ever, and it is proving a great attraction this week. Mr. T. Bannister Howard's company has the piece in hand, and the dresses are tasteful, including exact facsimiles of the Chantecler dresses. Mr. Frank Lawson is conspicuous in a capable company for his whistling contributions in the rôle of Blinky Bill; and Miss Dorthea Clarke is a captivating personality as the Belle of New York. The other characters are in efficient hands, and the play is assured of a successful tour.

METROPOLE.—Proprietor, Mr. Andrew Melville; Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—The many sensational incidents in the Melville drama The Female Swindler appeal strongly to audiences here, as presented by Mr. Douglas Bruce's company. Miss Olive Warne acts with the requisite freedom of style as Lu Valroy, and Mr. Henry Lonsdale provides a powerful study as Jack Coulson, criminal investigator; Mr. W. T. Riley is seen to advantage as Geoffrey Warden, and Miss Irene Atchinson and Mr. Frank Howard make a typical pair as the young lovers whose fortunes play such an important part in the plot. Other good characters are represented by Mr. Fred Hudson and Mr. Fred De Vere, the latter scoring a distinct triumph in four different rôles.

On their garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before.—The Tempest.

Theatre Royal, Aston.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Chas. Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Manager, Mr. F. Martin Morris.—The Coal King is a drama that is making a strong appeal to audiences here this week, Mr. A. Clifton Alderson's company scoring a great success in the production. The features in the story includes a mine disaster, rescues, and scenes on the pit-bank. Mr. A. W. Norman has been well chosen for the title-rôle; and Mr. Henry Deane gives a clever impersonation as Tom Roberts. Miss Winifred Love as the heroine earns the sympathies of audiences; and other characters are capably filled by the Misses Effie D. Crawford, Lucy Caton, and Dennis Duncan, and Messrs. Sam Roberts, Frank Dalton, Robert Faulkner, and H. K. Williamson.

Carlton.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—Messrs. Fox and Leonard's powerful company is responsible for a thrilling presentation of the melodrama Greed of Gold. The company has been well chosen, and a feature of the production is the clever acting of Mr. B. M. Fox in the character of the dumb boy. Miss Mabel Phillips scores a success by her clever emotional acting as Dora Hood; and Mr. Carthage Caldclugh portrays a realistic type of adventurer. Mr. Herbert Leonards is a lively and entertaining personality as Con Crewer; and other characters are well represented by Miss Nora Bedford, Mr. Alf. Edwards, Master Bernard Fox, Miss Violet Leyton, Mr. Allan Gordon, and Mr. G. Newell.

Empire.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Williams.—A strong bill is headed by Frank and Jen Latona, two smart entertainers, in a bright musical act. They introduce new business, which is warmly appreciated. George Newburn's impersonations of well-known performers are excellent, his voice mimicry being especially good; George French has some up-to-date songs which are highly amusing; a really funny act is that of Toch and Tard, burlesque athletes and wrestlers; Miss Gladys Hooley plays the violin delightfully; Stephens and Rennior are warm pantomime favourites here, and deliver humorous lyrics and patter; and other clever turns are supplied by Lillie Lassah, Kerr and Koe, and Essman.

Grand.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Foster; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. Lucas.—Herbert Darnley's new three-act sketch, Private Potts, is meeting with enthusiastic approval. In the title-rôle Fred Kitchen is the heart and soul of the piece, and it is quite the truth to say that every line he speaks means a laugh. The irimitable Kitchen is ably supported by a strong company, and the piece is splendidly mounted. The Eighteen Lancashire Singers render their vocal numbers in perfect harmony, and with satisfactory effect; Violet Lloyd and Horace Lane are pleasing entertainers; Rita and Roma appear in an original and versatile act; an exceptionally clever demonstration of juggling is given by the Blank Family; Sylvia Du Barry's songs are well received; Rauschle is responsible for clever impersonations; and Peter Bermingham has very funny Scotch patter.

Gaiety.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—Harry Roxbury's laughable sketch Sergeant Longfellow loses none of its mirth-provoking qualities as presented by Will Lytton and company, and the production is an excellent top-liner, Mr. Lytton being a conspicuous success in the leading part; Clara Coverdale's Dainty Dots appear in a charming vocal scena, The Gipsy's Revels; the Three Krakes keep audiences continually amused in their comedy act, The Tram Conductor; Ruby and Laws are pleasing vocal comedians; the Smart Set are clever society entertainers; the Yokels present a novel and tuneful musical act; Denby and Dent are an original pair of comedians; Charles Cardell is a pleasing vocalist; and the Malbans are successful mirth-provokers.

Hippodrome.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Barrasford; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne.—A well-varied programme is attracting crowded audiences. Minola Hurst and her Miniature Marvels give a bright and interesting entertainment; a strong item on the programme is a farcical skit, entitled A Suit for Divorce, in which Hayman and Franklin appear to advantage; clever acrobatic feats, including the human bridge, are performed by the Braggs; the Forsythis give a "potted" version of La Poupée; Everhart is a smart hoop-manipulator; Nora Stockelle renders her songs in pleasing style; and other acceptable turns are given by Crawford and Johnson, Dolly Rois, George Campbell, and Stuart and Evans.

Aston Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Aston Hippodrome, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. T. H. Middleton.—The Casey Army, presented by Mr. Ernest Cadle, is proving a draw. Mr. Will Murray is a success as Mrs. Casey. Jack Sheridan is a favourite comedian and dancer; Blanche and Powell are a couple of clever society entertainers; Frank Weaver is a smart sand dancer; Syd Brandon appears in several striking character impersonations; Denby and Dent are original comedians and dancers; Ivy Aberdare is a dainty singer and dancer, and Harry Nelson a popular comedian.

Curzon Hall.—Lessee, Mr. Walter Jeffs.—Capital colour photographs are prominently featured in this week's programme, a beautiful sacred picture entitled The Birth of Christ, arousing keen interest. Another popular subject illustrates the Shakespearean tragedy, Antony and Cleopatra. A striking series of photographs illustrates the construction of the Cape to Cairo Railway, and there are several dramatic films of an exciting type and comic pictures in great variety. Mr. Fred Brampton scores a success in a patriotic song scena, "For England and England's King," and Miss Lily Mulvaney is also a popular vocalist.

King's Hall.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. J. P. Moore and B. Kennedy.—The management are reaping a good reward in the shape of well filled houses. The most striking pictures exhibited are The Highlander's Defiance, Don Cæsar, and A Motherless Waif. Other good subjects are The Land of Eternal Snow, The Flower Girl's Christmas, and The Cold Water Cure. The Edoras, gymnast, and Marion Blake, descriptive vocalist, also contribute acceptably to the entertainment.

Queen's Hall. — Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. B. Kennedy and J. P. Moore.—The entertainments provided at this picture hall are up-to-date in every respect. This week's programme includes several first-class dramatic subjects, and the juvenile element is well catered for by a good stock of humorous films.

BISHOP AUCKLAND.—Eden Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. R. Addison, Ltd.; Business-Manager, Mr. J. Huntley.—Miss Florence Baines's company is here, in the successful play Miss Lancashire, Limited. Mr. Chas. Williams makes the most of John Higgins, singing well; Mr. Sydney Dench, jun., is an effective Harry Higgins; and Mr. Billy Brereton a lively Herbert Fox. Miss Marie Lorenzi is a fascinating Eva Lancashire; and Miss Fanny Olive a typical Mrs. Thompson. Miss Madge Grey is perfect in her Lancashire dialect, and keeps the house in high spirits by her funny antics. Miss Alice and Mr. Chas Neilson give a remarkable violin and piano speciality.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Hippodrome, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Signor Pepi.—A capital bill included the Four Royal Scots, in a delightful musical turn; Lotto, Lillo, and Otto are wonderful trick cyclists; Mr. John Vert's songs are effectively rendered; clever comedians and dancers are the Brothers Hannaway; and Robb Wilton is a good comedian. Messrs. Leo and Roland are marvellous equilibrists, being especially smart on the ladder; and Ada Cerito is a most amusing comedienne. The Hipposcope films are very interesting.

BLACKPOOL.—Her Majesty's Opera House.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr. Herbert Sleath's company is here this week with A Woman in the Case. The part of Thompson is capitally played by Mr. James Lindsay; and Julian Rolfe has a capable exponent in Mr. C. W. Standing. Mr. Paul Winter as Jimmy O'Neil and Mr. Sydney Palfrey as Louis Klaufisky also do their work well. A better Margaret Rolfe than is supplied by Miss Kathleen Russell could not be desired; and Miss Winifred Pearson, who plays Claire Forster, is an actress possessing great dramatic power. Her Ladyship's Guest is the title of the curtain-raiser, which is very ably interpreted by Miss Gertrude Gwynne and Messrs. Christopher Steele and Mervyn Rentoul.

Grand Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Harrop.—The Merry Peasant is being presented here this week by Mr. Courtice Pounds and company, who are meeting with well-deserved success. Mr. Pounds has a very congenial part in the title-rôle and sings delightfully; Stefan is ably accounted for by Mr. Percy Carr; and Lindoberer finds a good exponent in Mr. William Hindson. Little Mary Glynne as Little Rosalie and Miss Gwladys Gay as Annamal, are both seen to distinct advantage; whilst Miss Madge Vincent is a delightful Freda. The staging is a special feature.

Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—Dolly Elsworthy and company are here this week, and appearing with considerable success in a romantic sketch entitled Nana. Rich and Rich, the comedians, nightly receive their usual warm reception; Niagara and Falls are clever acrobats; Elsie Robey sings well; Bessie Knight is a smart comedienne; Nellie Farrell sings Irish songs; and Dort and Lenard excel as comedy acrobats.

BOLTON. — Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Moncur.—Mr. J. W. Turner's English opera company is paying its annual visit this week. The opera selected for Monday evening was Balfe's Satanella, with Mr. J. W. Turner as Count Rupert and Miss Sarah Williams as Satanella. Other operas in the week's répertoire are Gounod's Faust, Bizet's Carmen, Verdi's Il Trovatore, Wagner's Tannhäuser, and Wallace's Maritana. The orchestra and chorus have been under the direction of Mr. T. Lawton.

Grand Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—Fred Karno's Comedians in their latest production, The Yap-Yaps, top the bill here, and are responsible for much boisterous fun. Other turns appearing are John G. Brandon and company in the American dramatic sketch The Girl and the Tough, being a story of the criminal quarter of New York. Les Marsumas, comedians on wheels, in the screaming absurdity, The Navy's Rest; W. H. Webb and Edna Branston, operatic duettists; Billy French, wooden-shoe dancer; D'Aulby, lightning painter; the Czars, a troupe of whirlwind dancers; Sabie Bizet, comedienne; Babs Lloyd, a dainty comedienne and expert dancer; Madeline Rees, comedienne; and Premier Imperial Pictures.

Empire Hippodrome, Ltd.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. Will Sley; Manager, Mr. A. R. Harrison.—Yangar, the West African wonder, is appearing in a series of original mystifying illusions, and for which he is heartily applauded. Tom Woottwell, comedian, renews his acquaintance this week with a Bolton audience and is well received. Items are also contributed by Happy Attwood, "purveyor of patter and parodies"; Annie Heath, comedienne and dancer; the Beckett-ow Bros., in their pot-pourri act The Eccentric Butler and Dude; Rosie Lee, child comedienne, mimic, and dancer; H. Harold, coon vocalist and dancer; the Boisset Troupe in The Bricklayers; and the Hippodrome pictures.

BOOTLE. — Muncaster Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Pennington; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Young.—The popularity of The 10.30 Down Express is demonstrated by the large crowds that assemble nightly to witness it. The company consists of Mr. T. Arthur Plummer, Mr. George Calsford, Mr. Edwin Clarke, Mr. T. B. Brabazon, Mr. Fred Seymour, Mr. Horace Stanley, Mr. Charles Williams, Mr. Ernest Griffiths, Mr. Fred Stephens, Mr. Harry Loates, Mr. George Jacques, Mr. Mark Lane, Miss Cora Linda, Miss Ida Fane, Miss Leila Drummond, and Miss Kate Kilpack.

Winter Gardens.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler, Sutton, and Allandale; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. Lionel Cole.—At the Winter Gardens this week Messrs. Adeler, Sutton, and Allandale present Mr. Charles Heslop and Mr. Ernest Crampton's highly-successful musical comedy entertainers. The Brownies. The company includes Miss Maidie Field, Miss Vivien Stafford, Mr. Alec S. Clunes, Mr. Harvey Brinton, Miss Beatrice Willey, Miss Dorothy Webb, and Mr. Charles Heslop.

BOURNEMOUTH.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Sole Proprietors, David Allen and Sons; Sole Lessee, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Hubert Dunbar.—Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison were well received here on Monday in Don. Miss Hutchison, a great favourite at Bournemouth, adds another to her long list of successes in the part of Mrs. Bonington; Mr. Gordon Bailey is decidedly good in the title-rôle; Mr. Arthur Willoughby as Canon Bonington presents a sincere and realistic portrayal of a Clergyman; and Mr. Chas. Tyrel gives a clever study of the irascible General Sinclair. Mr. Chas. Harley gives a clever character study of Albert Tompsett, and Miss Violet Harley provides a most sympathetic rendering of his ill-used wife. Miss Celia Gordon as Mrs. Sinclair, Miss Viola Garland as Ann Sinclair, and Miss Dorothy Gordon as the servant are all good. The chief piece is preceded by Her Dearest Friend, in which Miss Viola Garland deserves special mention.

BRADFORD.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Richardson.—Brilliant audiences this week cordially greet the popular actor Mr. Edward Compton, who is paying his annual visit, supported as usual by a fine company. Davy Garrick was presented on Monday night, and in the title-rôle Mr. Compton again won unstinted applause for the excellence of his acting. Miss Kathleen Leigh completely won her audience, too, with a charming impersonation of Violet Gresham; Mr. H. Crocker's Alderman Gresham was a capital performance; Mr. Frank Royde played the rakish Hon. Tom Tallyhaut capitally; and there was great merit in the Rumbelow of Mr. Philip Gordon, the Sowerberry of Mr. J. W. Austin, the Simkins of Mr. C. Marquand, the Mrs. Rumbelow of Miss M. Hassell, and the Selina of Miss Lorraine Stevens. The familiar comedietta Tom Noddy's Secret proved a most acceptable curtain-raiser. A Reformed Rake, The Road to Ruin, The School for Scandal, and a new adaptation of Used Up are the plays billed for representation during Mr. Compton's brief visit.

Prince's Theatre.—Lessee, Councillor F Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. M. Hamilton.—An unqualified success has been achieved here by Messrs. Silvanus Dauncey and H. Browning's company in The Walls of Jericho. Mr. Ethelbert Edwards, with rare skill and power, represents the Colonial-bred, manly Jack Frobisher, and he has fine support from Miss Gwendoline Hay as his pleasure-loving wife Alethea. Mr. Rutland Barrington in a clever conception of the autocratic match-making Marquis of Steventon won unstinted marks of approbation; Mr. Russell Barry did well as the genial Hankey Bannister; Mr. H. Browning's Harry Dallas was a good performance; Miss Ethel Trevor-Lloyd was natural as Lady Westerby; very brightly Miss Hilda Sims played Lady Lucy; and amongst the most notable types of the "Smart Set" were Miss May Havellot as Mary, Miss Sylvia Jones as Miss Wyatt, Miss Muriel Wren as the Duchess of Skye, Miss Eva Westropp as Lady Porchester, and Miss Doris Digby as Tiny Mornington. Mr. Lambert Plummer as Bertram Hannaford, Mr. Eric Bridgeman as Lord Marchmont, Mr. Ben Barnett as Lord Drayton, and Mr. J. Douglas as Wilfred Renton were efficient; and in lieu of a curtain-raiser Mr. Barrington furnished a delightful entertainment, comprising songs, stories, and musical sketches.

The Empire.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—The beautiful living statuary and the classical dances introduced here this week by Mlle. Irma Loraine, assisted by Marjah and Mlle. Leony, are very delightful features of a fine programme. G. W. Hunter, the popular comedian, and quaint Dusty Rhodes are individually responsible for much laughter; Adey Spencer as "the Girl from the Hat Shop" furnishes a bright turn; D'Arc's Marionettes are wonderfully lifelike and a marvel of mechanical skill; L'Incognita, who possesses a rich soprano voice of purity and culture, renders florid Italian songs and popular ballads in a manner which elicits very enthusiastic applause; with his Sexton Blake burlesque and general humour at the piano Phil Percival elicits great laughter; the Sisters St. Julian are a dainty pair of duettists and dancers; Kisbey, the call-boy, sings comic songs acceptably; and there are some amusing pictures shown by the Bioscope.

The Palace.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. E. Harrison.—Les Piccolinos, a smart versatile troupe, present a combination of skirt dancing, Russian dancing, wire-walking, sharp-shooting, trick cycling, and acrobatic feats which is not only clever, but unique, and well deserving the applause which greets it. Lisbon and Barker are good topical comedians; Walter Barrett sings some good baritone songs very acceptably; Rosie Archer at the piano is responsible for some excellent mimicry; there is originality in Joe Cookson's smart turn as a ventriloquist; clever instrumental work by Stidder and Dunbar is effective and greeted with applause; and in spasmodic style distinctly original Ted Waite submits good comedy.

BRIGHTON. — Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Gates; General-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—The drama Hush Money occupies the boards here this week. Mr. Horace Denton gives a masterly impersonation of Sexton Blake; Mr. Ernest E. Imeson merits warm praise for his admirable portrayal of John Shard; Miss Theresa Osborne submits a capital enactment of Lady Annie Montressor; Mr. J. H. Darnley is seen to great advantage as Lord Hervyn Dalgrave; Mr. Harry Hartley as Tinker and Miss Agnes Paulton as Euphemia Pattacake afford unbounded fun; and the remaining characters are ably sustained. The drama is finely staged and mounted.

Alhambra.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Alfred Smith; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. W. Smith.—Ernest Legh and company achieve great success in an original version of David Garrick and also in the farcical sketch The Scotch Cousin; Ching Ling Fee is a clever magician; the Two Lowells are effective in a novel musical jugglery act; the Sisters Robertson are capital duettists and dancers; Keir and Kempton, Scotch vocalists, are cordially received; Lace and Leno win hearty applause for their comedy songs and smart dancing; Ernest Clifford contributes some taking songs; Boutelle is an entertaining comedy juggler; Thelma Rivini, soprano vocalist, sings with artistic finish; and the Alhambra Picturegraph completes.

Barrasford's Hippodrome. — Resident-Manager, Mr. Bertram J. Brown.—Reano and his band submit selections, which are enthusiastically appreciated; Albert Le Fre, a versatile comedian, achieves great success; the perfection of animal-training is exemplified in the performances of Renroff's dancing horse; the Six Juanitos are clever Spanish acrobats; Moon and Morris are droll comedians and capital dancers; Rolando Martin is an eccentric comedian; Madison and Webb are diverting in My Husband; and pleasing turns are also given by Fred Lyndo, comedian; Lily Hayes, comedienne and dancer; and Tom Lee, light comedian.

West Pier.—Secretary, Mr. A. W. Scholey.—Mr. Ernest Dare's company is here this week with His Excellency the Governor. Mr. Ernest Dare makes an admirable Captain Carew; Miss Eva Coleridge gives a charming enactment of Ethel Carlton; Miss M. Lowe-Dare acts brightly as Stella de Gex; Miss Irene Malvesyon is well placed as Mrs. Wentworth-Bolingbroke; Mr. Edwin Ling is highly successful as the Governor; Mr. Robert Boriande is entertaining as Baverstock; and Mr. J. E. Savery submits a good impersonation of the Hon. Harry Carlton.

Palace Theatre.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Jay and Mann; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wilfred H. Kent.—Messrs. Daniel and Franks' company is here this week with Bevis. Mr. Dudley Stewart is distinctly effective in the title-rôle; Miss Florence Radcliffe makes a delightful Rachael Hopkins, whose father has a clever exponent in Mr. Arthur Gibbons; Miss Dorrie Roberts merits high praise for her representation of Mrs. Pymm; Mr. Percival Madgewick gives an admirable enactment of Lord Herbert Penrose; and Miss O'Neil is splendidly suited as Lady Bewdley. The play is preceded by The Tooth of Necessity.

Court Theatre.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. Maud Barrasford; Manager, Mr. F. J. Thompson.—Prominent among the animated pictures exhibited here this week is Jean Valjean, a splendid drama; Bessie's Wreath of Roses conveys a pathetic story; and The Curse of a Wandering Minstrel is a stirring drama. The Angry Sea is finely descriptive; and the comic films include the Cap of Fortune, Inspiration, Pals, and All on Account of the Milk.

Theatre de Luxe.—Proprietors, Electric Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. H. Consens.—Attractive animated pictures are submitted here this week. A Trip Round Brighton and The Western Riviera are admirably descriptive; dramatic stories are conveyed by A Thrilling Rescue and The Squaw's Revenge; Richelieu is a fine historical film; and those of a comic character are An Old Maid's Valentine, The Box of Chocolates, and A Lady's Train.

BRISTOL. — Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Macready Chute.—Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Benson and company are here for the week. On Monday evening Macbeth was played to a full house. Mr. and Mrs. Benson successfully presented their well-known and highly finished expositions of Macbeth and Lady Macbeth; Mr. Eric Maxon and Mr. Murray Carrington both acted remarkably well their respective parts of Macduff and Banquo, and all the remaining parts were in competent hands. The staging was elaborate and appropriate. The Merry Wives of Windsor, School for Scandal, A Winter's Tale, Richard the Third, Twelfth Night, and Julius Cæsar are also billed.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mrs. Emma Carpenter; Manager, Mr. H. C. Alty.—Her Love Against the World is being admirably played by Messrs. W. H. Hallatt and Walter Howard's company, the staging being excellent. Miss Elsie Roberts plays Princess Iris in charming style; Mr. Fred Emery is decidedly convincing as Eric Earl o Strathmere; Miss Rosie St. John acts prettily as Lionel; Mr. Fred Rivers displays dramatic ability in the unpopular part of Ulric, Prince of Ravensburg; Mr. W. H. Hallatt makes a fine bluff soldier of Prince Othmar; and Mr. Henry Hallatt acts with dignity and effect as Prince Maurice of Saxonia. The comic parts of the two Pimpernickles, Katinka, and Gretchen, are cleverly undertaken by Mr. Allan Carruthers, Mr. John Mill, Miss Nana Flensberg, and Miss Hettie Ferguson.

Palace.—Local Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Assistant-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Happy Fanny Fields is packing the house, singing new songs, which go well. A fine rendering of selections from Il Trovatore is given by Ethel Pender-Cudlip and Claude Anderson; the Creedons score with their comedy sports act; Little Frankie, juvenile Scotch comedian, is amusing; the Three Phydoras please with their comedy musical act; Jenny and Willie Fordyce do well with their dancing specialities; Cummin and Seaham do some smart comic acrobatic work; and animated pictures conclude.

Empire. — Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry.—The programme here is headed by Margaret Cooper, her refined entertainment being warmly appreciated; Bains and company amuse with their comedy-acrobatic and dancing act Humps and Bumps; the protean spectacular sketch, Change; or, The Haunted Castle, is cleverly performed by the Jewells; Fred Conquest and company entertain with their comedy sketch Something for Nothing; Norris and Morgan are capable comedy artists; Ida Katherina, the dolly girl, pleases with her interlude, in which she introduces a smart dance; the Brothers Ford are expert dancers in the simultaneous style; and Gladys Warren is a pleasing vocalist and dancer. Interesting animated pictures conclude.

BROUGHTON.—Victoria Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. James Cramer; Manager, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—The theatre has this week been devoted to twice-nightly performances, and on Monday the musical sketch That Terrible Page was given by Messrs. Edwin Garth and J. Fred Watson's company, including Mr. Fred Dale, Mr. T. E. Owen, Miss Marie Montague, and Miss Lily Hill. Afterwards some very good animated pictures were shown.

BURNLEY.—Victoria Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—Oh, Susannah! put on here by Cecil H. Woodhouse's company, is greeted with hearty laughter. Mr. Woodhouse himself is seen in the rôle of John Sheppard, the handsome doctor, and Miss Aide Boyne is a delightful comedienne in the part of Aurora; Mr. Plant, the fussy solicitor, is capitally played by Mr. Alfred Ibberson; Mr. Frank Kingsley as Lieutenant Merry and Mr. Robert Laurence as Waverley Vane are a clever pair of jokers; and the lively Buttons is represented by Mr. Ivor H. Smith; the Sisters Ruby and Pearl are a vivacious pair as represented by Miss M. Leatham and Miss K. Webster.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—At the head of the programme here are Barnes and Ascot, who give a brilliant exhibition of simultaneous step-dancing; Morritt is an able illusionist, who also introduces "The Blind Man of Memory"; and the Four Powells, in their acrobatic sketch, are clever and pleasing; a charming comedienne is Ruby Roya, and J. W. Gallagher, comedian, is responsible for much laughter; Sim Morell is a wonderful Mahommedan contortionist; and Falco and Elda, in a ju-jitsu dance, show marked ability; Frank Lauri is clever in patter and song, "The old man"; and an amusing film is shown by the Empire Theatrescope.

Palace Theatre and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. R. Badcoe.—Potted plays and poetry, as presented by Bert Shepard, are productive of continuous laughter; another fine turn is that of Harry Atkinson, "The Dickens Boy," with instrumental solos; the Three Alskarnos have good comic business; and the Lyons Trio are a combination of capital comedians; Ada Fawn has two good songs, and Max Carl and Harry Carr, comedians, who create endless laughter; Bert Maddison, the happy Welshman, a humorous film on the bioscope, and Alice Lingard, comedienne, complete the excellent programme.

BURTON-ON-TRENT. — New Theatre and Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. De Hague Body.—Miss Florence Tyrrell's company are here with The Woman in the Case. Artists in the truest sense are Miss Florence Tyrrell and Miss Beth Elliot. The former, as Claire Forster, acts the spurned, revengeful woman with reckless abandon and dramatic intensity; Miss Elliot puts passion and pathos into the part of Margaret Rolfe; Miss Ethel Lodge as Mrs. Hughes is amusing; Mr. Cecil Newton is exceptionally good as Julian Rolfe; and the family lawyer is cleverly portrayed by Mr. W. T. Elworthy. The play is effectively staged and dressed.

BURY (Lancs.).—Royal, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Assistant-Acting-Manager, Mr. J. McPherson.—Mr. Frank M. Thorne's company is presenting Little Phil's Mother. Mr. Percy Ballard has an exacting part in Frank Towers, of which he gives a clever representation; Mr. Frank Thorne is excellent as Sam Perkels; Mr. John E. Tomlinson gives a clever character study of Bill Brisket; and Mr. J. P. Marsden is excellent as Donald Taggerty; Miss Maud Russell is eminently successful as Ruth Towers, Miss Violet Crauford as Elspeth, Miss Leslie Warner as Julia Worrilove, and Little Gertie Renaud as the crippled boy render valuable assistance.

Circus of Varieties.—General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Assistant-Acting-Manager, Mr. J. McPherson.—Pictures continue to attract big houses, and Fred Lloyd, comedian, and the Northcotes, vocalists, complete the bill.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Manager, Mr. Thomas Baker.—J. W. Hall is a popular comedian; the Georgians appear to advantage in vocal and dancing scena; some clever musical effects on violin and harp are produced by Norman and Leonard; the Great Four Comedy Harmonists provide a most enjoyable turn; Marie Blythe possesses a deep contralto voice, which is used to great advantage; Atlas and Vulcana present a novel and interesting weight-lifting exhibition, Vulcana being also prominent in beautiful poses.

CAMBRIDGE. — New Theatre. — Managing-Director, Mr. W. B. Redfern, J.P., D.L.—A strong attraction here is The Catch of the Season. Mr. Murray King is responsible for the company, and also for the Duke of St. Jermyns, which he plays in his usual humorous way; Miss Gladys Guy makes an exceptionally charming Angela; Mr. Chas. C. Ommaney a distinctly good Lord Dundreary; Mr. Ardene Linden a humorous Sir John Crystal; Mr. Jas. Dallas in his old part of William Gibson is as diverting as ever; Bucket is played remarkably well by Willie West; Mr. Maxwell Stuart is a successful Capt. Rushpool; and Miss Belle Rivers (Duchesse St. Jermyns) and Miss Evelyn Shelley (Lady Caterham) are most pleasing. Miss Mildred Cottell's Lady Crystal is also well acted.

CARDIFF.—New Theatre.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Robert Redford.—A delightful visit has been paid this week by Mr. Weedon Grossmith and company in Mr. Preedy and the Countess, and the appearance of the eminent comedian after a long absence has been greatly appreciated. As Mr. Preedy Mr. Grossmith keeps his audience vastly amused, and adds materially to his popularity; Miss Ruth Mackay, as the Countess of Rushmere, charms everybody, her sweet voice proving a valuable asset in a rendition which lacks nothing; Mr. Frank J. Arlton is a sufficiently bombastic Mr. Bouncall; Mr. Frank H. Denton is successful in his well-made-up representation of Reginald Saunders; and the mannerisms of Belson are cleverly assumed by Mr. Arthur B. Murray. Miss Lydia Rachel as Mrs. Sidgrave, Miss Evelyn Kerry as Emma, and Miss Lynn Fontanne as Harriet Budgen are reliable artistes, and equally at home in their parts are Mr. Ed. H. Wynne (Mr. Sidgrave), Mr. Ronald Square (Lord Rushmere), Mr. Edward Bonfield (Hon. Jennerway), and Mr. Oswald Marshall (Lord Kinslow).

The Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manger, Mr. Herbert J. Taylor.—Sharing the premier position in a strong programme is the chocolate-coloured coon G. H. Elliott, whose delightful renderings of coon melodies in a sweet and clear voice made this talented artist such a huge success at the last Bristol pantomime, well remembered by Cardiffians; a great hit has been made by the Will o' the Wisps, vaudeville entertainers, in a pleasing mélange of music, melody, and dance, under the direction of Mr. S. Sherrington Chinn; the sensational "Globe of Life," performed by Wizard and Irene Stone, once again commands attention for a marvellous and daring entertainment; the Welsh humorists Ted and May Hopkins are as popular as ever; the eccentric dancing of Lupino Lane (Nipper), comedian, quite "makes" his performance; and the Bros. O'Brien in a horizontal bar act are "tip top" of their profession. Annie Purcell, a charming comedienne, renders her songs in a delightful manner; Haidee Lee and Wallace Kingston in a sketch, A Resourceful Lover, are quite humorous; and Lily Palmer is a chic comedienne. The Bioscope is still to the fore.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, The Cambrian Theatres, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. E. Clay.—Good business has been done this week with Mr. C. Watson Mill's company in For Love and the King. The scenery and costumes are magnificent and picturesque. As Jarvel Mr. C. Watson Mill makes a conspicuous success with a clever piece of work; Mr. Alfred Maurice as Michael Obrenovic closely approaches perfection; and the Vladimir Obrenovic of Mr. C. H. Matthews is clever. The important rôle of Prince Dragomir is safe in the hands of Mr. F. K. Wickstead; and no more kingly impersonation of Kara Dragomir could be desired than Mr. Stanley Weston's. A pathetic and pleasing interpretation of Natiia is given by Miss Joan Ellis; and Miss Rosalind Tate as Edith Meredith could scarcely be improved upon. Miss Kitty Melville (Grazia Obrenovic) and Miss Laura Munro (Princess Milania) acquit themselves creditably. Mr. Oscar Power (Carl Oppenheim) and Mr. Geoffrey Chate (Duke Dragomir) give able delineations.

Palace and Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Will A. Jackson.—Heading an enjoyable programme are Will Douglas's troupe of Five Jolly Bakers, who give their great comedy Risley act The Baker's Beano with much success; Miss Lily Vine, with Bonnie Goodwin's Piccaninnies, in a delightful vocal and dancing scena, proves very entertaining; Les Zanonis, in a modern juggling scena, are no less pleasing; and a capital vocal turn is provided by Alfred J. Long, the gifted alto. Flo Warner (comedienne), Lennard and Vereker (in a pictorial song speciality), and Gena Manon (vocalist and soubrette) are others who delight the full houses nightly, the programme being completed by the Palace Perfection Pictures.

CARLISLE.—The Palace.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. D. Askew.—The Tan-Kwai Troupe of Chinese acrobats are the centre of attraction here this week. Knife juggling, balancing, and bending are done by these clever artists with wonderful ease and dexterity. A smart sketch by Fred and Lulu Camplin was brightly worked; Miss Mildred Bryan has a charming and well cultivated voice, which she uses with effect; Lambert and Butler contribute patter and dance cleverly; George Geoffreys is a capital mimic; Ray Royal sings popular songs; and some excellent pictures conclude a fine programme.

CASTLEFORD.—Royal.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr. Chas. Gadsby; Business-Manager, Councillor Henry Masterman, J.P.—Miss Augusta Tullock and company are here for the first time with Judith, the Woman Who Sinned. Miss Tullock presents an excellent interpretation of Judith; Mr. Edward Vivian successfully portrays the villainies of Eugene Darville; Mr. A. Young is happily suited to the character of Jack Carrington; Miss Dorothea Vivian invests the part of Hester Norris with much womanly sympathy; Mr. C. Hughes as Silas Norris gives a performance of merit; Mr. William de Lacy provides a good deal of fun as Percy Hogg; and Miss Amy Osborne acts with verve and sings with distinction as Maudie Green. Mr. Harry King is a decided acquisition to the comedy as Sergt. Jones; Bill Scamp finds a suitable exponent in Mr. H. Danby; and Blind Meg is well played by Miss Dot Dainton. Mrs. Sergt. Jones receives careful treatment by Miss Rose Watson.

Queen's Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, The Castleford Queen's Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Messrs. Chas. H. Beanland and Will H. Emerson.—Heading the bill here are Edward Crosland's melody-makers in a phantom scena, The Burglar's Dream. Their vocal efforts and amusing antics are decidedly clever. The McConnell Trio are loudly applauded for their clever song-sketch, The Invalid; Thornbury, lightning painter and ventriloquist, is deservedly praised on all sides; Shenton and Chicks in a speciality, Uncle's Return, come in for the heartiest appreciation; Sid Bandon, eccentric comedian, is on a return visit; Elly Adair is well received in Irish songs; Harry Tomlin's songs meet with approbation; and animated pictures by the Loyal Dominion Co. are still a prominent feature.

CHATHAM.—Barnard's Palace of Varieties.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Malcolm Cumming and company are scoring in A Tooth for a Bride; Ronald George's musical act is quite appreciated; the dancing of Cliff and Kean is greatly admired; Franks pleases with his ventriloquial entertainment; De Biere succeeds in mystifying his audiences with a number of neatly worked illusions; The Rival Burglars is one of a series of amusing films projected by Lacey's Erascope. Ethel Piedce, comedienne, and Peter Pan, comedian, complete the bill.

Gaiety Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Capt. H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr. Geo. Humphries.—The leading item in the programme here comprises Mr. A. C. Lilley's company in Drummed Out, a sketch which is staged in a manner which reflects much credit on all engaged in the production; Lili Elfreda presents faithful imitations of many well-known music hall stars; Lydia Neilson and her boys and girls please all with their songs and dances; Clare and Pastor prove a highly entertaining couple. Other variety turns are the POOLE'S PICTURE PALACE opened on Monday to a crowded house, and the new venture, which has converted the old Victoria Rooms into a perfectly equipped picture palace, is assured success. The cinematograph chamber has been erected outside the hall, and the comfort and safety of the patrons in every way considered. On Monday the pictures were wonderfully steady and clear. A good programme was assisted by Miss Mollie Gwynne, who sang two capital songs.

THE ALBERT HALL, another building devoted to electric pictures, also opened on Monday night, on the two houses-a-night system. A good set of pictures were supported by the Two Reenos, Will Ivor, Marion Collette, Jack Morrell, Mabe D'Aubyn, Jack Colvil, and Annie Tate, comedy artists

CHESTER. — ROYALTY THEATRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. B. Fountaine.—The Moody-Manners Opera Company are providing Cestrians with an exceptional treat, Monday's attraction being Saint-Saëns' maserpiece Samson and Delilah. Mr. Albert Bowyer's excellent tenor voice was heard to great advantage in the rôle of Samson; and his rendering of this exacting part was most artistic; Miss Helen Culver, who possesses a mezzo-soprano voice of high quality, interpreted the arduous part of Delilah to perfection; Mr. Dudley S. Marcus as the High Priest of Dagon was much admired for his rich baritone voice and finished acting; and the remaining parts were admirably sustained, and the chorus of thirty-eight voices earned well-deserved encomiums. The orchestra, under the able bâton of Mr. Cuthbert Hawley, did full justice to the score. The staging, scenery, effects, and dresses could not have been more complete. The following additional capable artists appear during the rest of the week :—Mesdames Beatrice La Palme, Lillian Matthews, Rita Wallace, Mary Norton, Grace Nicoll, Rosa O'Farrell, and Messrs. Graham Marr, William Anderson, John Child, William Farmer, in Faust, Carmen, Il Trovatore, Tännhauser, Maritana, and at to-day's matinée Samson and Delilah will again be presented.

CHORLTON - CUM - HARDY. — CHORLTON THEATRE AND WINTER GARDENS.—Proprietors, The Chorlton Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Stott; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frederick J. Reece.—Messrs. Shiel-Porter and Garth's Repertoire company opened a six nights' engagement here on Monday, when A Fool's Paradise was presented. Mr. Harry T. Wood played Sir Peter Lund carefully; Mr. T. G. Vane was a capable Philip Selwyn; and Mr. Bartlett Garth an efficient Lord Normantower; Miss Ella Thornton filled the rôle of Beatrice Selwyn satisfactorily; Miss Gladys Morris made a charming Kate Derwent; Mr. J. Montgomery did well as Johnson; Mr. Shiel-Porter and Miss Doriel Dalvy as the Hon. Tom Verrinder and Kate Selwyn respectively created a fund of humour. Still Waters Run Deep is in the bill for the week.

CLYDEBANK.—NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. A. E. Pickhard.—An attractive programme is headed by La Dor troupe of acrobats, whose efforts are well received; Jackson and May perform wonderful cycling feats on a miniature track; the Dolorosas are excellent in their double trapeze act; and other turns are Ko-Chi and Foo-Sing, the eccentric Chinese on horizontal bars; Lofton and Dewey, in "Coon Tit-Bits"; Fred. Fulton, comedian; and Mlle. Eugene, a lady baritone. The Bioscope completes a varied programme.

COLCHESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Chas. Macdona; Lessee and Manager, Mr. F Graham Macdona; Mr. Leo. King, for Co-operative Varieties, Ltd.—The top of the bill is Sidney Bedford and company, in the farcical comedietta The Second Mrs. Chester; Lalie Brooke, in her song-scena "Girls past and present," is an artistic success; Valvero's Naval Bombardment is a novelty in a variety of ways; the Soho Trio include an excellent soprano; Percy Dalton exhibits some really excellent dancing steps; Vasey and Ramsey appear in the comedy act Jerks, the Butler; and Gibbon and Bell give a good show, the male artist being an able contortionist.

HIPPODROME.—Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—The Kitties Band is the star engagement here this week, and thoroughly deserve the terrific applause awarded. The remainder of the bill comprises Lottie Leighton, a smart little dancer; Wun Hi and Chung Soo, Chinese eccentrics and acrobats; Lilian Rose, juvenile entertainer; Hazel Ellis, lady conjurer; and Charles Sloman, eccentric comedian.

CONSETT.—NEW THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance. —Edwards and Ward top the bill here; Funny Fred Davis causes endless fun; and animated pictures conclude.

CORK.—OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr. R. J. Bell. —The second week of the Hippodrome season opened here on Monday night. Wee Georgie Wood, who tops the bill, is most laughable; the Beelong Bros. give a daring exhibition of cycle balancing and cycle somersaulting; Signor Arvi and his troupe produce a series of coloured pictures and statuary with the aid of living models; Sam Elton supplies a turn which is provocative of continual mirth; the Gallimore Trio sustain the humorous side of the programme in their bustling comedy act; Arabella Allen gives two character sketches from Dickens; Cosgrave and Burns, duettists, are entertainers of considerable skill; and the Operascope show capital pictures.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. Thomas F. O'Brien.—The bill of fare provided here is full of good things. The star turn is provided by Jan Rudenyi, a celebrated actor-violinist, who presents a dramatic musical sketch, entitled The Power of Music, in which he is supported by Miss Hilda Stewart and Mr. Drew Mackintosh. Castria, comedy juggler and acrobat, is accorded a good reception; Tom Lloyd's turn is enjoyable, as is that of Charles Penrose; an attractive turn on the wire is presented by Yetta; the acrobatic act by the Alaskas is very clever; Emmie Harlow renders her songs admirably; the Sisters Florence prove to be successful duettists and dancers; and the Palascope shows the Oxford and Cambridge Race, 1910, and some other excellent films.

COVENTRY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's talented company is at this house this week playing A Broken Heart, by Mr. Chas. E. Clarke. Mr. Harry Cullenford takes the part of John Barnard, the blacksmith, with great success; Mr. Chas. Vivian as Gash Gills is effective; Mr. A. C. Holmes as Stephen Rayton is good; and Miss Sheila Walsh plays well in the rôle of Mary Barnard.

HIPPODROME.—The Amateur Thespians are occupying the boards this week, playing Sweet Lavender, and the funds go to benefit the local hospital.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—The top of the bill is an entirely new and original burlesque by Fred Karno, entitled G.P.O. Mr. Harold Wellesley as Perkins is most droll. He is well supported by a strong company, including Victor H. Smith, Frank Gallagher, Julia Bessell, Madge Rockingham, &c. The Forestiers present a dramatic playlet entitled A Society Sinner, by Ivan F. Gore; Mr. J. A. Wilson causes much amusement with his wonderful dog "Towser"; Ryde and Beeman are eccentric acrobats; La Vie appears in a series of art poses with success; and Lily Burnand, the fascinating burlesque actress; Dancit, the American dancing nugget, and Dave Carter, a popular Irish tenor, complete a capital programme.

CROYDON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr Alexander Watson; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest Archer.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company, in The Arcadians, is giving great pleasure here. The scenery is very fine, and the dresses are rich and appropriate. Miss Marion Edwardes makes an enchanting Sombra, and her singing is exquisite; Miss Katie Yates is a charming Chryses; Miss Madge Haines is in her element as Mrs. Smith, and her presence is always welcome; Miss Mysie Devine makes a sweet and lovable Eileen Cavanagh; and other ladies who look attractive are Misses Rita Carr, Georgiana Fischer, Trixie Smith, and Daisy Bindley. Mr. Gus Onley enacts the rôle of Simplicitas with unctuous humour; Mr. Frank Collins is quaint and curious as Peter Doody; Mr. Roy Sidney sings and acts to perfection in the rôle of Jack Meadows; Mr. Roy Lorraine is well to the fore as Bobby; Mr. C. Herbert Hewetson is a commendable Sir George Paddock; and a good word is also due to Mr. Hubert Glenny (Percy Marsh), Mr. Percival Latimer (Reggie), and Mr. Patrick Evans (Sir Thomas Ryan). A noteworthy feature is the excellent orchestra, under the able bâton of Mr. Albert Bartlett.

EMPIRE PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter Gibbons; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—John Lawson and company are causing a sensation here in the weird sketch The Monkey's Paw; George Mozart, comedian, is exceptionally droll; the Sisters Tower are clever duettists and dancers; Walter King keeps the house agog with merriment; the Szarvasi Ferencz Troupe of Hungarian dancers and acrobats are marvellous; Cissy Lupino is a bewitching and expert dancer; Ben Albert is a popular comedian; Shirley and Ransome act with good effect in coster sketch Jim's Pal; Joe O'Gorman is a smart Irish raconteur; the Thompson Trio are humorous in sketch Watch the Chalk; and Ouida Macdermott is a pleasing vocalist.

DARLINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Bell.—Mr. Ian Robertson is here in The Passing of the Third Floor Back. Mr. Robertson is the principal character, and holds the house from start to finish. Miss Parsons as 'Stasia gives a capital rendering; Miss Everest as Vivian must be congratulated on her clever handling of the part; Mr. Billington is a good Joe Wright; Mr. Woodall Birde is a convincing Christopher Penny; and Major Tompkins is taken by Mr. Twynan in an efficient manner.

HIPPODROME.—Theatres, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert E. Nicholls.—Percy Honri heads the programme this week with Concordia. Other artists include Thiessen's acrobatic and balancing dogs; Pat Lynch, the dancing demon; Dora Barrington, assisted by Miss Lesley Gray, in an operatic scena, Sentiment and Jest; Marco; Chas. Denton, comedian; and the Hipposcope pictures.

DERBY.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Donley.—Mr. Geo. Dance's company is making a welcome appearance here with Our Miss Gibbs. The play is handsomely staged and dressed, and excellent business is ruling. Mr. Vincent Erne as Timothy Gibbs is a host in himself; Mr. Eustace Burnaby as the Hon. Hughie Pierepoint is admirably suited; and Mr. J. S. Durant as Slithers is another capable comedian. As Lord Eynsford Mr. Arthur S. Radcliffe does remarkably well; Mr. A. Gordon Begg plays with dignity and feeling as the Earl of St. Ives; Mr. David Miller acquits himself creditably as Mr. Beavis; and Mr. Eric A. Boyd merits mention as a taxi cabby; as also does Mr. Campbell Browne as Mr. Amalfy. In the name part Miss Effie Vincent, dainty and demure, plays, sings, and dances with grace and charm; and Miss Lilian Birtles is artistic and in every way successful as Lady Betty. Madame Jeanne has a clever and versatile exponent in Miss Ellaline Thorne; as the domineering Duchess of Minster Miss Amy Singleton shows an intelligent appreciation of the requirements of the part; and Miss Florence Hylton figures picturesquely and acceptably as Mrs. Farquhar. Misses Mollie Cole, Norah Nelle, and Olga Grey dance and sing agreeably. An augmented orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Hubert Bogetti, does excellent justice to the catchy music of this popular production.

PALACE.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Moyes.—Wilfred H. Benson and company present a dramatic sketch, entitled The Steam Hammer, which proves a good attraction; the Musical Marvels are vocalists and instrumentalists of real ability; Griffiths and Carmen are a breezy comedy duo whose turn is greatly appreciated; the Mezzettis are acrobats of a clever and amusing order, and their act The New Recruit goes well; Bertie Crosbie intersperses his tuneful songs with neat dancing; Will Harris, comedian, makes himself distinctly popular; and Flo Delamere is a pleasing comedienne and dancer. The Bioscope adds to the general enjoyment.

DEVONPORT. — HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Herbert Taylor.—Charles Whittle is the chief attraction. Briff, Braff, and Broff are responsible for a really clever tumbling act, with which some comedy business is judiciously interwoven; Paul Cavalli entertains with interesting feats of strength; Mlle. Dalmere's performing rabbits, dogs, and rats go through all manner of tricks, evidencing much patient training; Little Tichbourne is an amusing comedian and dancer; Arthur Sutcliffe's songs are popular; and Nellie Wigley is a vocalist of merit.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—Rogues of the Turf provides an excellent evening's entertainment. As Lady Heathcote, an adventuress of the most uncompromising type, Miss Mabelle Barlow proves herself a really clever actress; Mr. John Preston does well as Joe Flaxman; and Miss Mabel Fare as Phillis Winzel is very amusing. Messrs. W. H. Barlow, Fred Laurence, and Tom Phillips give a realistic picture of the deception practised on the turf.

DEWSBURY. — EMPIRE. — Proprietors, Messrs. G. W. and G. E. Smith; Manager, Mr. Claude Shayler; Musical-Director, Mr. E. G. Summerfield. —Corman's Juveniles present a clever scena, The Waif; Rose Elliott delights with her répertoire of catchy chorus songs; the Milstead-Bell Trio are seen to advantage in the musical comedietta, Three Sharps in a Flat; an excellent turn is given by Les Atans, aerial dental artists; Geo Antill furnishes a humorous turn; The Roxbys are clever singers and dancers; a capital equilibristic exhibition is given by the Millwards; the Two Kays are well received in a novel musical speciality; and Gladys Re-Vel, a pleasing vocalist, completes a good programme.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Asquith.—Mr. Norman V. Norman's répertoire company is here in David Garrick, Caste, and The Marriage of Kitty. On Tuesday night Caste was performed, Mr. Norman presenting a finished performance of Captain Hawtree. Polly Eccles was excellently depicted by Miss Beatrice Wilson; Mr. Norman Leslie submits a fine character study of Eccles; Miss Maud Trenchard wins sympathy by her excellent interpretation of Esther Eccles; Mr. Alec Williams meets with much success for his capable portrayal of Hon. George D'Alroy; Mr. Fred Lock Whitaker is a humorous Sam Gerridge; and Miss Bessie Stannard a dignified Marquise. A Little Misunderstanding is an admirable curtain-raiser.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. George Weldon; Stage-Manager, Mr. Jack Harris; Musical-Director, Mr. R. H. Riley.—Mr. Charles Parker's company is here in the sketch, The Professor's Academy, in which are introduced some fine singing and dancing. Arthur Metz as the Professor and Walter Whittle as the would-be singer evoke much laughter. Andrews and Thompson in their vocal scena, The Rube and Romany; Miss Florence Raymond, an excellent lady ventriloquist; Charles Mentone-Ure, the soldier vocalist; Will and Roze, comedy acrobatic conjurors; Edna Deno, a smart comedienne and dancer; and films, both humorous and dramatic, complete the bill.

DONCASTER.—NEW GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE, LTD.—Manager, Mr. J. W. Chapman.—Messrs. F. Marriott Watson and James Ussher's company in The Face at the Window drew a crowded house on Monday. The Paul Gouffet of Mr. T. W. Dunscombe won warm appreciation; Mr. Houghton Macaulay in the rôle of Le Loup was also popular; Mr. Alfred Warner as Henry de Brisson was well placed; and excellent support was given by Mr. Arthur Chisholm as the discharged clerk. Mr. John A. Stimson's quaint humour constituted him an ideal English tourist; Mr. T. Carter made a decided success as Jean Barbelon; Miss Clare O'Sullivan acted Marie de Brisson with abandon; and Miss Nina Imeson gave an artistic rendering of Barbette. Miss Constance Glenabyn's conception of La Pinau was admirable.

DUBLIN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frederick Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Terry.—On Monday a grand concert was given here by Mr. Henry B. Phillips, the following artists appearing :—Mme. Clara Butt, Mr. Kennerley Rumford, assisted by Miss Pauline Hook (soprano), Mr. William Green (tenor), Mr. Charles Barre (violinist), Mr. W. H. Squire ('cellist), with Mr. Arthur B. Godfrey as conductor. On Tuesday night the theatre was closed for the final rehearsal of Mr. Martin Harvey's revivals and first production of Richard the Third, which took place on Wednesday night.

GAIETY THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. Frederick Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Charles Hyland.—This week we have Mr. Mouillot's company, by arrangement with Mr. Robert Courtneidge, appearing in Tom Jones. Mr. Cyril Thompson acts with great perfection, and has a splendid voice, which was a pleasure to hear; as Tom Jones he would be hard to excel. Mr. Fred Seymour gave a clever and characteristic representation of the Old Squire; and as his servant Gregory Mr. Michael Dwyer was particularly good, and sang right well. Mr. Charles Goffrey and Mr. Clifton Yates were all that could be desired as Grizzle and Dobbin. Mr. E. Statham Staples was undoubtedly clever as the village barber Partridge; his quaint and original comedy kept the audience in roars of laughter from the beginning to the end of the opera. Miss Dorothy Castles gave a charming personation of the squire's daughter, Sophia, and sang her music nicely. Miss Clare Marsden played the part of her maid, Honour, in a most pleasing and effective manner, and won applause for her song and graceful dancing. Miss Ray Vivian, as the stern and severe Miss Western, acted her rôle admirably; Miss Edith Jeffries was excellent as Lady Ballaston; and Miss Gynne did very well as her maid, Etoff. Mr. Roland Stagg as Blifil and Mr. Edwin George as Squire Cloddy were both good in their respective parts. The remaining parts were exceedingly well fulfilled. The dresses and scenery were very pretty and artistic, and the choruses were excellently sung, and Mr. Ernest Hartman conducted in a highly efficient manner.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Marriott Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. F. Wright.—Messrs. J. C. Lodge-Percy and James Martin's company occupy the boards here this week in His Life for Hers, which is excellently staged and capitally played by a strong company. Miss Henrietta Schrier gave a very effective and dramatic study of the rôle of Fuchsia Leach; Mr. Andrew Money represented the character of Prince Sergius Zouroff in a creditable manner; and Mr. J. C. Lodge-Percy acted splendidly as Lord Jura. Mr. Roland Bridge also gave a good reading of the Duke of Mull and Cantire. Miss Nellie Statham was most successful in her portrayal of Lady Dolly Vanderdecken, and her daughter Vere Herbert was ably played by Miss Veronica Clinton; Miss Marie Ramuz submitted a clever study of the Duchess de Sonnaz. Mr. F. Douglas Howard as Raphael de Correyo and Mr. Geo. Mercer as Ivan both did full justice to their respective parts.

EMPIRE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Marsh. — Harry Roxbury, with his own company, tops the bill here this week in a musical absurdity On the Track, which creates much amusement. Mike Nono has many friends here, and his songs and dancing were warmly appreciated; Merlin astounded all with his exceedingly clever and smart manipulation of cards; Ted E. Box was most amusing with his antics and clever songs; Mimi Thornton sings nicely and dances splendidly; Beatrice and Bert gave a refined and pleasing comedy act with great success; Welda and Wynne in their juggling and sand dancing were very good; Nellie Dallwood, comedian and dancer, and Vera Rochdale, soubrette, are also on the bill.

TIVOLI. — General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. A. Murphy. —The Ten Loonies are appearing here in a most amusing musical sketch, which goes well. Harry Mackenzie acquitted himself in clever style as a Scotch comedian; Durozcoe and Azella won rounds of applause for their smart equilibristic act; Harry Russell and company did a most laughable sketch, Milk-Ho! Deno and Dixon in duets and dances were well received; and Carlotta Wood sang some very pleasing melodies. A good duo was provided by Snowball and Mac; Cressie Leonard had a host of admirers, and her songs went excellently; Charles Grantley, comedian, also appeared ROUND ROOM ROTUNDA.—The bright and amusing programme of the Irish Animated Picture Company given here is drawing excellent houses. A new and original selection of pictures are being shown, including Life of Cagliostro, The Heart of a Cowboy, Hunting with Exmoor Hounds, Mount Etna Eruption, Aviation Flights, California, and Grand National Steeplechase. The Gay Gondoliers Company of high-class musical vaudeville specialities, including Mr. George Robins, Mr. Alf Wharton, Mr. Leslie Burgiss, Miss Rowe, and Miss Mira Lorenzo, are a particular and special feature this week; and the orchestral work of the Royal Scots Fusiliers is very pleasing.

CINEMATOGRAPH THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. H. Huish.—The series of pictures shown here at this newly erected theatre, which opened its doors last Saturday, consists of the Eruption of the Etna Volcano, Pals, His Last Burglary, Dancing Tabloids, Winter Sports in the Vosges Mountains, and Cowboy and Squaw. The attendance at all the performances has been extremely large, and warmly appreciated the excellent programme.

WORLD'S FAIR.—Proprietor, Mr. Charles A. James. —Here we have Harry Vernon, a capital sand dancer; Miss Nina May is a pleasing soprano vocalist; Tony Walton scores a big success as a comedian; the mysterious and clever conjuring tricks by Galligan are warmly appreciated; and Naye and Bray provoke much merriment in their sketch.

DUDLEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. Maurice Clement; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. Tilley.—A Life for a Life is visiting here, Mr. Chas. H. Lester's company giving an effective representation. Mr. Lester in the principal rôle, Don Leon Fernandes, gives an impressive rendering; Mr. Hugh Travers is a convincing Pedro Li Calci; Mr. Geo. Draper an earnest and successful Kit Oswald; Wee Winnie Warden, a clever child actress; Miss Lallah Davis plays Eulalie with dramatic feeling; and Miss Dorothy Riddell is a complete success as Kate Evelyn.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, the Midland Entertainment Corporation, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. J. Bleasdale.—The Martialo Trio, in a sensational juggling and balancing act of extraordinary cleverness, are at the head of affairs this week. The songs of Harry Luck, comedian, go with a good swing, and please the audience; the Gilberts are really remarkable on the bounding table; the Three Warners, whirlwind lady dancers, are deservedly appreciated; Chas. F. Best (Mac Bunker and Mountebank) is as eccentric as ever; Kennedy and Barry have many good jokes in a new comedy act; and the Bros. Ethairien are first-rate eccentric and acrobatic comedians. Maude Phillips, contralto, is in good voice, and the Empire pictures are enjoyed.

DUNDALK.—TOWN HALL THEATRE.—Proprietors, Urban Council.—Mr. John A. Thomson's pantomime company is here in The Sleeping Beauty. Miss Adele Roze makes a dashing Prince Charming; Miss Gertie Douglas is highly successful in the part of Princess Beauty; and Messrs. Harlin and Hanlon as Johnny Green and Simple Simon are the cause of abundant mirth. The merriment is also ably sustained by Mr. Henry Warren as Queen Ruby, who fits the part well. Able support is given by Miss Emmie King as Boy Blue and Miss Nellie Scorey as Bo-Peep. Miss Adele Florence fills the part of Jill with distinct credit.

DUNDEE.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—Mr. John Tiller's gorgeous production, Amsterdam; or, The Mystery of the Black Tulip, occupies the stage here, and has created quite a furore. The audience is kept highly amused by Mr. T. W. Volt's quaint impersonation of Frau van Stoop; Mr. Arthur Stigant as Theodore van Toozleveldt also proves invaluable in the cause of fun; Hendrik von Dunck is well characterised by Mr. Sidney Vincent; Mr. Charles V. Sandford as the Hon. Percy displays real comedy powers; and Jan has an admirable representative in Mr. Frederick Smythe. Miss Lulu Valli as Evelyn Anna (the up-to-date girl) plays in exhilarating style, and scores both in song and dance; Miss Dorothy Firmin as Gretchen sings and acts brightly; Miss Nancy Hearne is a vivacious Hans; and Katrina is cleverly undertaken by Miss Florrie Page. Mr. Charles Verno as Cornelius is an amusing donkey. Specialities by the Tiller Troupe and the Twelve Manchester Mites constitute a feature of this most attractive and pleasing show, as does also the brilliantly-executed solo dances contributed by Miss Enid Erroll. The orchestra is ably directed by Mr. Peter Flitcroft.

KING'S THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—A most attractive bill is headed by the Seven Bramusas in their versatile brass band extravaganza, entitled Music Afloat, which is hugely enjoyed. The Bros. Egbert, the "happy dustmen," maintain the fun at high pressure; George Prince is vociferously applauded for his quaint songs; Cole and Rage present an acrobatic and comedy juggling act of an entertaining order; Vincent gives a very clever exhibition of tumbling; Allen and Austin are an accomplished couple, their dancing being good; Leslie, Lyn, and Willie, in addition to being really funny, sing in commendable fashion; the Sages (Jenny and Willie) submit a pleasing turn; and the Kingscope pictures are enjoyable.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Moul; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—A strong attraction here is Mr. Arthur Lee-Mitchell's company in the sensational drama In the Shadow of Night. Mr. Forbes Carrington displays considerable ability as the Squire of Hazlemere; Mr. Leonard Williams acts with distinction as Gordon Allington; Mr. Paul Beckett as the scoundrelly Clifford Yorke calls down much execration, the same compliment being extended to Mr. William Hayward for his realistic impersonation of the poacher, Jake Grudgewell; considerable amusement is caused by Mr. Ern Carlton as Tom Nainby, and Miss Kittie Roze, a particularly lively Mollie Woodstock; Miss Irene Arondel, a prepossessing Violet Kingston, acts with pleasing effect; Miss Kitty Johnstone's rendering of the little tramp Bob is very commendable; Mr. Fenton Wingate in the dual rôle of Joe Jackson and the Rev. Nathaniel Hope presents a finished performance; as Farmer Woodstock Mr. Harry Emmerson supplies a really good study; and the other characters are all in efficient hands. The scenery throughout is most effective.

PALACE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. Tom Lunn.—The enterprising manager succeeded in securing a fine film of the Scottish Cup-tie at Ibrox last Saturday. The scenes in the sensational game are clearly depicted, and are followed with much interest by large audiences this week. Amongst other pictures shown are The Purse, Taming a Husband, The Man Hunt, An Equine Hero, and a humorous film entitled Am I Mad?

EMPIRE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. W. Austin.—An excellent programme of pictures is accorded an enthusiastic reception here.

DURHAM.—THE PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. T. C. Rawes.—The principal attraction here is provided by Marie Santoi and company in A Night in Japan, which wins enthusiastic applause. Carl Lynn mimics animals realistically, and proves exceedingly popular; an original ventriloquial scena is given by Oakdene; Doyle and Gibson are entertaining cross-talkers and dancers; August, September, and May create merriment; Dolly Golden is a clever dancer; and J. J. Mannix is a good singer of coon songs.

EASTBOURNE.—DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clark.—Messrs. Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's company is here in The Midnight Wedding. Miss Margaret Brodie plays with much sympathy as Princess Astrea; Miss Gwladys Faunce is a satisfactory Rozel; Miss Jessica Black a lively, sparkling Kathie; Mr. Alfred Paumier a manly and interesting Paul Valmar; and Mr. A. E. Winnington Barnes does well-defined and penetrating work as Captain Rudolf. Mr. Charles Whitlock, too, is an excellent Lieutenant Eugene; Mr. John Nesbitt is dignified and impressive as the Prince Leopold; Mr. Arthur Radford does suitable work as Kulman; Mr. Forbes Harrison is a fitting Father Gerard; and the comedy element is mainly in the hands of Mr. Algie Spalding, Mr. George Frere, and Mr. J. E. Page, who provide many hearty laughs.

PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Mr. Frank Weathersby's company is here, in The Best People. A well-balanced and exceptionally capable company includes Miss Lillian Hallows, whose charming voice and clever work generally make her performance as Mrs. Bayle conspicuously successful, and Miss Irene Lavington, who plays with very distinct ability as Lady Emsworth; Mr. Pennington-Gush is an entertaining and animated Gerald Bayle; Mr. H. Elliot-Ball is very happily placed as Lord Emsworth, and he acts with commendable point and naturalness; Mr. Arthur Dennis does consistently good work as Lord Wyrlea; and Mr. R. King helps as Jackson. The Tooth of Necessity precedes, and is well played by Miss Vida March, Mr. George Ainsworth, and Mr. King.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. F. Woodward.—Heading the bill here this week is an intensely interesting and exceptionally well-played (in pantomime) melodramatic sketch, Life. Miss Margaret Carolee is a beautiful woman and an accomplished actress; and the work of Mr. Ernest Goslar and Mr. Antone Pascal is deserving of all praise. The Plumbers is one of the funniest sketches seen here for a long time, and the clever efforts of Mr. Tom Taylor are conspicuous; Miss Marie Jones is one of the smartest quick-change artists to be seen, and she is ably assisted by Mr. Ernest Munro in a sketch, entitled Wanted, the Co-respondent; Baby Wolff is a popular singer; Virto and Venelta are pleasing musicians; the Saletos skilful balancers; and Miss Mabel Moss, comedienne, and Mr. Dan Filmer, comedian, complete the bill.

ECCLES.—CROWN THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Sons.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's company, in the drama, entitled Mother, is here this week. Mr. J. O. Stewart as Duncan Fairweather acts throughout in a convincing manner; Mr. Alexander J. Haviland as Frank Rodney proves himself a capable actor; the character of Stephen Carrington is made interesting by Mr. Reginald Brown; Mr. Harry Foxwell as Jasper Rawden is responsible for a clever performance; Miss Grace Jones as Nellie Fairweather is pleasing and natural; Miss Mary Holmes as Little May is a pronounced success; and Miss Kathleen Hunt as Mrs. Baggot is responsible for a clever character sketch.

EDINBURGH.—ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE.—Managing-Directors, Mr. F. W. Wyndham and Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—In Madame X, presented here by Messrs. Baring Brothers, Mrs. Brown-Potter and a strong company gave a realistic rendering of a painful play. To the part of Jacqueline Fleuriot Mrs. Potter brings all the resources of an accomplished artist, and her interpretation of the rôle was marked by a fine display of emotional power; Mr. Douglas Alington played excellently as Raymond, particularly in the Trial Scene; Mr. Leonard Pagden, too, was notable as Louis Fleuriot, and Mr. Thos. Sidney's Perissard was another of the successes of the cast. The Laroque of Mr. Charles B. Bedelles, Mr. Frank Bradley, and Mr. Lionel C. Brock as Merivel and Noel respectively; Miss Emma Stockley's Rose and Miss Sara De Groot as Mme. Varenne were admirable impersonations; and the remaining parts found capable representatives. Repeated recalls followed the fall of the curtain.

KING'S THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Armand Mascard.—Miss Bessie Butt is an immense attraction in her male impersonations; Mr. Tom Leamore makes a success in his patter songs and eccentric dances; Pete and Minnie Lee are infinitely amusing actors, whose sketch, A Scotchman's Visit to London, goes with a laugh from first to last; Mr. Mike Gray's turn is always good, and his intelligent dog, Dooley, is worthy of the applause it receives; Miss Violet Ray proves herself to be a violoncello player of much merit; and "Dainty" Daisy Sloan dances in admirable style. Lady Mansel's comedy sketch, A Concert Rehearsal, shows her juvenile performers to advantage; Merton and Brydon are excellent entertainers; and turns in which trained animals figure largely are those of Captain Devereux and Piccolo and Fiori. The Haverleys are capital song illustrators, and interesting views are displayed by the King's Bioscope.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—An excellent programme is headed by Mr. George Leyton with his successful military scena, The Roll Call, in which the artist is assisted, not only by a good chorus, but also by the presence of a number of Crimean and Indian veterans; Miss Alice Raymond and her players provide an enjoyable item in the spectacular musical production, A Night in Egypt; and the realism of the "Vampire" Dance is made interesting by Miss Alice Eis and Mr. Bert French. A pleasing performance is given on the "glassophone" by Miss Mabel Davis; some clever and diverting comedian and comedienne interludes are submitted by Little Ganty, Billy Hobbs, and Maudie Francis; and the comedy vein is also ingeniously exploited by Barrett and Knowles, who figure as the Green Lizard and his Friend, and by Les Martineks, their novel acrobatic act, styled The Rag Doll. The American Bioscope shows a series of fine pictures.

OPERETTA HOUSE.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. J. H. Sanders.—Several vivid pictures, including The Stampede, The Last Deal, and How the Old Pensioner was saved by Boy Scouts, form the leading features in this week's programme, with, in addition, a humorous series. Mr. Leslie Lynn is a clever entertainer and ventriloquist.

PRINGLE'S PICTURE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. Edmunds.—Richelieu, portraying Lytton's well-known drama in a series of artistic tableaux, is the notable picture here; but A Woman's Story and The Forgotten Watch and Tommy's Locomotive give food for laughter. Miss Jessy Jukes, comedienne and clog-dancer, and the Boston Twins contribute pleasing turns.

"THE BIRTH OF A SMILE."

A smile on the beautiful face of a young girl gives her a charm so irresistible that one is tempted to be always saying amusing things to her, so as to win her to laugh again and again. But, sad to say, there are many ladies whose smile has little or no fascination; and it is sometimes difficult to understand the reason.

When a lady begins to smile, one expects the next instant to see two rows of pearly teeth glittering between the rosy lips, and how painful is the impression produced when this anticipation is suddenly disappointed.

It is a cause for great satisfaction that in recent times courage has been found to write upon this subject, and to bring to light a simple remedy. All that is necessary is a habitual regular care of the mouth and teeth with the assistance of Odol. Decay of the teeth and its inevitable consequence of impure breath are results of impurities and fermentation processes in the mouth, occasioned by millions of injurious bacteria which nest in the oral cavity. Odol absolutely debars the development of these bacteria, and as surely counteracts the processes of decomposition and fermentation in the mouth. And these beneficial effects of Odol are not limited to the brief moment during which the mouth is being rinsed with it, for its antiseptic qualities continue active for hours afterwards.

In this manner not only is sweet breath ensured, but, what is far more important, the teeth are preserved by the Odol from decaying. We therefore most strongly recommend you not to wait any longer but purchase at once a bottle of Odol. Of all chemists and stores.

EXETER. — Theatre Royal.—Chairman and Managing-Director, Mr. Edward J. Domville, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy M. Dunsford.—For the first three nights of the week amateurs presented The Liars on behalf of the local Sailors' and Soldiers' Institute. During the latter half of the week Messrs. Lyn Harding and Sydney Cooper's company are paying a welcome return visit with The Flag Lieutenant. Mr. Edgard Kent excellently fills the title-rôle; Mr. George Mallett appears as the Vice-Admiral with good results; Mr Montague Love is a praiseworthy Major Thesiger; Mr. John Wheatman very capably characterising Michael Palliser. Mrs Cameron is charmingly played by Miss Florence Jackson; Miss Dorothy Ripley is very successful as Lady Hermione Wynne; and Miss Winifred Valiant as Viola Hood acts gracefully

New Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Karno; Resident and Acting-Manager, Mr Frederick Sandy.—The Zigeuner Quartette have charmed all by their pleasing melodies; the Selbinis accomplish a host of daring and clever cycle feats; Jolly Jimmy Walker is a breezy and cheery comedian; and Richard Finberg contributes excellently executed character studies from famous plays. Mary Law, a brilliant violinist, is well received; the Sisters Henderson are clever speciality artists; and Amy Burton a charming comedienne; the Hippodrome pictures completing an attractive programme.

FALKIRK.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace W. Ebbutt.—Miss Marie Dagmar's company is here this week in The Tyrant, which is excellently staged and exceedingly well dressed. Mr. Roy Fortescue in the title-rôle looks and acts the part to perfection; Miss Marie Robson fills the character of Tisbe with ability; Lady Catherine is well represented by Miss Jean Scott; and Miss Lallah Shelton as Edlie acts with becoming grace; Mr. Percy Folliss (the Avenger) has a strong part, and undertakes it with distinction; and Rudolph is well interpreted by Mr. Edward E. Louis. The humour of the drama is well supplied by Miss Katie Lever and Messrs. Wilson Summers and Fred Luard.

FOLKESTONE.—Pleasure Gardens Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company presented The Little Damozel to full houses the first three nights of the week. Miss Ida Molesworth again charmed her numerous admirers in her latest rôle as Julie Alardy; and Mr. Mark Blow distinguished himself as the lackadaisical Hon. Fitzroy Lock. Mr. Frank Lacey brilliantly portrayed the character of Recklaw Poole; and Mr. George A. Brandram and Mr. Townsend Whitling proved their ability as typical men-about-town. The members of the orchestra at the Café Angélique were enacted to the life by Mr. Julian Cross, Mr. William Stack, and Mr. Reginald Hargreaves; Miss Eva Stuart was successful in the small rôle of Sybil Craven. The play was preceded by a pleasing comedietta, Curing a Selfish Husband. Mr. Gaston Mayer's company, in Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, is billed for the remainder of the week.

GAINSBOROUGH.—King's Theatre.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Lewers and Bennett; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—A strong variety company opened here to good houses on Monday for three nights. It consisted of Consul, the almost man, who gave a remarkable example of animal training; Burnetti, a clever quick-change imitator and musician; the Almas, balancing and equilibristic act; Chas. Cranston, comedian; Miss Maggie Rimmer, dainty dancer; the Evalos, comedy gymnasts; and Mr. E., in picture illustrations and patter.

GATESHEAD. — King's Theatre. — Lessees, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Local-Manager and Licensee, Councillor Harold Arnold.—A carefully trained chimpanzee, George the First, is leading the way at this house, and is immensely entertaining; the Merrions are highly amusing in a musical act; Tom Kelso and Edie George make a hit in Yoicks and a Yokel; Oliver Martyn, in the duologue Boxing, is appreciated; May Gibson daintily renders two pleasing songs; France and Stewart provoke much laughter in the sketch, The 100 to 1 Chance; Percy Curry, a local comedian, finds favour; and the Kingscope provides a pleasing "turn."

Metropole Theatre.—Sole Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Dixon.—Mr. Montague Beaudyn's company in Send Him Victorious provides the attraction here. An extremely pleasing impersonation of Colonel Kaufman is given by Mr. Hugh Carmichael; Mr. Howard Hardy does the part of King Ravonia full justice; Capt. Frank Allison is faithfully portrayed by Mr. Herbert Skardon; Sergt. Max is well played by Mr. Frank Holyoake; the acting of Miss Sidney Crowe as Countess Kara leaves nothing to be desired; Miss Netta Mitchell as Ethel Harding creates a favourable impression.

Queen's Theatre.—Proprietors, Mr. F. W. Bolam; Acting-Manager, Mr. Steve Smith.—The principal films shown here this week are The Freebooters and The Albanian Rebellion. Joe Humphreys, character vocalist, is well appreciated.

Ravensworth Hall.—The chief pictures at this house are The Call and Aviator's Romance. An added attraction is F. W. Barrett, a clever comedian.

Black's Picture Palace.—Taming a Husband and Fate are the "star" lines here, and there are also two capital variety "turns" in the Carlsens on the bouncing table and Chas. Voltaire, a roller-skating expert.

GLASGOW.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. W. Wyndham and Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy O. Humphrys.—The Fires of Fate is presented in first-class style by Mr. Vedrenne's company. Mr. Stephen T. Ewart plays the Lewis Waller part (Colonel Egerton) most creditably; and two well-defined studies are seen in the Rev. Samuel Roden of Mr. Herbert Vyvyan and the James Roden, M.D., of Mr. Charles Francis. The ladies of the company are admirably chosen, Miss Ruth Bower for the part of the American girl, Sadie Adams; Miss Gwendolen Floyd for the Aunt; and Miss Alison Trent as Mrs. Belmont. Mr. Stanley Logan makes a hit as the languid young swell, Brown; the Frenchman is admirably portrayed by Mr. Gerald Merrielees; the other tourists, Brodie and Belmont being cleverly represented by Messrs. Herbert Moule and Edward A Coventry. Mr. Alfred C. Sandoe excels as the Dragoman; Mr. Frederick Worlock bears himself well as Capt. Archer; and the Rudkin of Mr. Arthur Ancell is also good.

King's.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. W. Wyndham and G. T. Minshull; Business-Manager, Mr. Hugh Macfarlane.—The mystic play, The Servant in the House, is being given here for the first time in Glasgow, and, as interpreted by Mr. Henry Miller's company, is followed with evident interest. Mr. Matthew Boulton as Manson, a butler, acts the part of the servant most impressively. In striking contrast is the Drain-man of Mr. Harry Parker, a realistic and convincing performance; Mr. Ernest H. Paterson as the hypocritical Bishop of Lancashire plays well; and a specially fine rendering is given by Mr. Walter Gay of the Rev. William Smythe, whose wife is well played by Miss Nellie Hodson; their niece, May, having a clever exponent in Miss Laurie Flockton. Mr. Forrester Harvey as Rogers completes an able cast.

Royalty.—Sub-Lessees, The Scotttish Playgoers, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Wareing.—The success of the late St. John Hankin's play, The Cassilis Engagement has been so decided here that the run has been extended into this week. On Thursday a three nights' revival of What the Public Wants was begun.

Grand.—District-Manager, Mr. B. G. Macfachlan; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Christie Grant; Assistant-Manager, Mr. C. L. Sealy.—Miss Lena Ashwell's company is presenting Diana of Dobson's, which is played with much spirit from start to finish. As Diana, Miss Emilie Polini acts with great earnestness, and invests the part with much interest throughout. Mr. Leslie Rea makes a very acceptable Captain Victor Bretherton; Miss Eva Leonard Boyne, Miss Nannie Hume, Miss Winifred Trevor Lowe, and Miss Cicely Oats sustain their respective rôles with effect. Miss Mary Ault deserves praise for her impersonation of Miss Pringle, a part she ably doubles with the old woman in the last act. Mr. Alfred A. Harris gives a characteristic study of the pompous Sir Jabez Grinlay; Miss Hilda Franks fulfils all the demands of the rôle of Mrs. Cantelupe; and Miss Mary Crewe plays naturally as Mrs. Whyte Fraser; as also does Mr. Leslie Crowther as P.C. Fellows. Out West precedes.

Princess's.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdoch.—Mr. Tom H. Taylor's company is here with Can a Woman be Good? which was well received by a large audience on the opening night. Mr. J. Millane and Miss Blanche St. Albans as Manuel Errington and Esther Howard respectively gain widespread sympathy; Mr. Harry C. Robinson and Miss Florence Hunt fill their parts excellently. The play is effectively staged, and the dresses all that could be desired.

Metropole, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—The attraction here is The Nihilist. Mr. Geo. Mitchell gives a manly rendering of Ivan Nowasky, the village blacksmith; the Princess Olga is finely depicted by Miss Mary Dawson; Alexina Orloff is effectively played by Miss Edna Clare; and the villain is ably portrayed by Mr. O. Silverstone. The child Alexina is pleasingly played by Little Minnie Halstan; the comedy is ably provided by Mrs. O. Silverstone as Katrina Zindoff, and Mr. Henry Wright as Bobbie Smart. Mr. Cowell Clark, Mr. C. Newton Buckland, Mr. J. Brunelle Harvey, Mr. Edward Dowds, Mr. James Hamilton, Mr. Morgan Dale, and Mr. S. C. Eugene complete an effective cast.

Lyceum.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—A Fast Life is presented by Mr. Walter Steele's company. Mr. Steele in the rôle of John Dixon, the repentant bank manager, shared the honours of the evening with Mr. Fred Garratt as Sir Oliver Franklin, his evil genius for the time being; Mr. Thos. Beasley as Harris Goldberg did all that was required of him as a money-lender; while Mr. James Selwyn as Lockfast, a warder, gave a spirited exhibition of brutality. The humour of Mr. W. Barratt as Tommy Burk, burglar, was interspersed with tragic seriousness, and his song and dance was a feature of the performance. He was ably assisted by Miss Maude Ryder, a dainty little lady, as Juliana; Miss Beatrice Hone as Lady Franklin drew quite a pathetic picture of wedded misery; Miss Lillian Ross as Mrs. Dixon had a difficult rôle, but kept her hold on the audience to the close; Mr. Ed. Kingsley as Lord Craven sang twice during the evening with good taste. The scenery and effects reflected great credit on all concerned.

Empire.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Reynolds.—The Mirza Golem Troupe head the bill here, and give a wonderfully varied and interesting turn; Wish Wynne is a comedienne of originality; that clever musical couple, Alexandre and Hughes, once more provide a most enjoyable turn of music and patter; Witty Watty Walton receives a hearty welcome, and obliges with his clever recitation, "Casey at the goal"; Marie Pera and Thos. Kennard take well in a comedy duologue; Alf. Gibson's eccentric songs and method once more secure him his due meed of applause; Gustave Fasola gives a clever display of Indian magic; Katie Moss, vocalist and violinist, submits an enjoyable turn; Frank Melvin contributes several clever parodies; and the Bioscope concludes.

Pavilion, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Evan Good; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest R. Foster.—A cleverly arranged condensed version of Trilby occupies the leading place in the programme, and is ably enacted by Messrs. Chas. Garry and J. B. Gordon, assisted by their company, Miss Grace Illingworth making an extremely good Trilby. A little sketch, Music the Conqueror, serves to introduce a clever young Spanish violinist, Senor Angel Blanco, whose selections are much enjoyed; the Bros. Webb, musical clowns, provide a most acceptable turn; La Belle Morgan is a vocalist and comedienne of much more than average merit; Haley's Garden of Girls introduces a lot of smart young dancers and vocalists; Dick Tubb, as an eccentric comedian, took the fancy of the audience; Rose Cabani, a clever comedienne and expert dancer, and Larola, in his speciality turn, were both well received; Baddow, ventriloquist, completes a varied and interesting bill.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—The new numbers of Maidie Scott, rendered in her own inimitable style, have gone far to enhance the reputation of this sprightly little artist; Victor Newman includes in his character impersonation an excellent representation of the late Sir Henry Irving in The Bells; a telepathic act is submitted by the Marriotts, who give an interesting display of thought-reading, &c.; the Whittington Trio of comedy acrobats get through a lot of smart work, and provide plenty of fun; a good appearance is made by Flora Macdonald, who is possessed of a good voice, and dances gracefully; Hilton, with his dummy Jock, supplies a good ventriloquial turn; Cromo and Hamilton, burlesque artists, are clever, a like remark applying to Tennyson and Wallis, comedians. The latest Palacescope films terminate.

Coliseum.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.—A feature of the programme is the turn of Helen Trix, and the talented American comedienne is particularly popular; Fred Kitchen and Frank Lister's company present a capital Australian sketch, The Sundowner; Alec Hurley and company appear in Cockneys in Japan, which is carried through smartly; the dancing being neat and the songs catchy; the Three Cape Girls are always favourites; Vandinoff, who is assisted by Mlle. Louise, gives a capital exhibition of lightning painting in oil; the Comedy Meisters are possessed of excellent vocal qualities, and are also responsible for much genuine mirth; the Courtiers (under the direction of Paul Mill) are likewise old favourites, and their work is ever appreciated; the Bros. Redmond are funny in the acrobatic work , which is clever; the Stowe Brothers do many novel balancing feats. The Bioscope films are most enjoyable.

Gaiety, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. J. J. Bennell; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Dickinson.—Good houses are still the order here. Staunch Comrades, Servant and Guardian, Punch the Benefactor, and An Outlaw's Sacrifice are excellent films, while unbounded hilarity is occasioned by many humorous subjects. The talking and singing number, When You Know You're Not Forgotten, goes very well. Pleasant variety is lent to the show by Jessie Fraser, with a tasteful rendering of "The Homeland," and Bob Campbell, a clever one-legged artist, in patter, song, and dance.

Panopticon.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—George Mackay sings several songs in fine style; and Chandos Brothers with amusing patter attract more than ordinary attention. Ruby Lester proves an acceptable comedienne and dancer; Jack Blair sings three songs with success; and Charles Coll, light comedian, and the Bioscope, with a list of pictures funny and dramatic, complete the programme.

Hengler's Circus.—Proprietor, Mr. Albert Hengler; Manager, Mr. Harry Milne.—There are crowded houses at Hengler's each night. The latest pictures include The Clown's Crime, The Livingstone Case, Taming a Husband, and The Garibaldian Boy. The Macdonald Troupe of dancers, with their clever exhibition of national dances, win rounds of applause. Miss Nellie Macnab, illustrated songstress, and Marcill, novelty ventriloquist, also add to the enjoyment of the evening.

Jungle and Arel.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank C. Bostock; General-Manager, Mr. Harry E. Tudor.—This is the concluding week of this wonderful entertainment, which has proved highly popular. The sensation of the week is, of course, the wedding of a Glasgow couple in the steel arena, surrounded by a group of lions, which was fixed for Friday night.

GLOSSOP.—Theatre Royal and Picturedrome.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sydney Spenser.—A good house assembled on Monday to see some fine pictures, most of the films being hand-painted. They included Robbery by Hypnotism, The Deserter, The Incendiary, Foolshead in Love, The Black Hand, The State Secret, Flower and Crowns, Reverse Side of Life, Tooth and a Slap in the Face. Mr. Raymond Synott is a capable vocal comedian; Miss Maudie Vere contributes catchy chorus songs charmingly; and the Suttons render duets excellently.

GLOUCESTER. — Palace. — Lessee, Mr. Will Smithson; Manager, Mr. B. T. Rea.—Mr. John Preston's company, in Secrets, is paying a visit here. Mr. Charles Homer is prominent as Lieut. Markham; Miss Hazel Dent wins sympathy as Ismalia; and Noureddin Ali is ably enacted by Mr. John Rochester. Mr. J. Temple Ellis gives a capital impersonation of Ibrahim; Kara Mustapha is well played by Mr. J. Cullen; Mr. Dan F. Roe is good as the Hon. Cecil Cholmondeley; and suitable comedy is introduced by Mr. George Whillis and Miss Jennie Hackett as Peter and Winnie Wilkins. Mr. Hamilton as Breezy Bill is noticeable; and Miss Maud Rochester is well suited as Zuleika. Mr. F. Churchill appears as Alma Meleda with success; as does Miss A. Churchill as Thyrza Meleda. Speciality dances are introduced by the Three Jewels.

GRAVESEND.—Grand Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Wright.—Horace Pollock and company, in Pinero's brilliant comedy Hester's Mystery, are very popular. Mr. and Mrs. Royston Deane, in their sparkling comedietta My Lady's Chamber produce considerable mirth; Lilly Hales is a dainty singer and expert dancer; Aldro Lukos, in his man-monkey speciality, acts admirably; Ethel May, vocalist and comedienne, is well received; Sam Williams, character comedian, is extremely funny; and the Judges, with their well-trained cockatoos, parrots, and macaws, give a marvellous exhibition. The Edisonograph is good.

GREENOCK. — King's Theatre. — Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. A. B. and J. J. Wright.—The Greenock Amateur Operatic Society is this week giving its annual operatic production in aid of local charities, the work selected being Falka, which is produced under the able direction of Mr. J. T. Savage. Special mention should be made of the exquisite scenery, painted for the production by Mr. John Panner, the scenic artist at the King's. Praise is also due to the chorus and augmented orchestra for their admirable work, under the direction of Mr. Percy Harmon.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. L. Skivington.—The Sutcliffe Troupe of Scottish pipers, dancers, and acrobats top the bill here, and their turn is keenly enjoyed; Irve Hayman and company appear to advantage in their sketch, Christmas Eve; Gracie Graham as a comedienne and dancer is decidedly good; Harry Farrow, comedian, secures loud applause; and others on the list are Fame and Fortune, comedians and burlesque boxers; Helen Martin, ballad vocalist; and Hinton and Wooton, expert cyclists.

Hunter.—An excellent variety entertainment is opened by Walter Lintone, musical expert; Dainty Dorretta is a charming comedienne; some bioscopic pictures are shown; Len Hall is a good dancer; the Sisters Wayland are attractive comediennes and dancers; C. Ibbotson, America's black dame, is highly amusing; and a marvellous rope-walker is seen in Tamamoto.

HORWICH.—Prince's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Chas. Durie.—Mr. W. Graham Arthur's company in The Mockery of Marriage provides the attraction here. Mr. W. Graham Arthur paints Dick Kenyon, or Sir Montague Jephson, in very lurid colours; Mr. G. Brown as Ned Stanley does full justice to the part; Mr. J. McKenzie as Seth Pearse plays satisfactorily; Mr. J. Barker's Old Peter receives unstinted applause; Mr. Fitzroy Wharton gives a grand rendering of Jack Stanley, the soldier lover; Mr. David Phillips is a funny farm servant; and Mr. J. E. McCann a typical P.C. Miss C. Middleton plays the part of Rose Verham gracefully; Miss Kate Hughes has a capital part in Mary Ann Barnicoat; and Miss Lucy Downs plays Nellie Kenyon with feeling. Miss Bella Liston's Alva Kenyon, the deserted wife of Sir Montague, is a most artistic and meritorious performance.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING. — Gaiety. — Proprietors, Messrs. Hall and Ainsley.—Mr. Andrew Emm is presenting The Diver's Luck here. In the chief rôle of Martin Faber the diver Mr. William Macready is capital; as Helen Wyngate, the diver's sweetheart, Miss Chrissie Bickerstaff meets with success; Mr. Edmund O'Grady as Barney Bawn, Mr. William Dexter as Cranston, and Mr. Harry Bristow as the Nigger, give good impersonations; and Miss Phyllis Spalding, Miss Pearl Noyle, and Miss Mary Stewart contribute largely to the success.

Picture Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood.—On Monday night a packed house enjoyed the lengthy programme, the chief items being The Stage Driver, Judgment, and the Mana Rapids. Miss Victoria Rich, lady baritone, makes a welcome reappearance.

HOYLAND.—Hippodrome.—Owner, Mr. Scott Alexander; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Terry.—The star turn is Mr. John Warren, dramatic illusionist, and his company, in The Conjuror at Home and The Magic Carpet, both being very clever and mystifying. The L.V.O. Trio, in Those Troublesome Slavays, are very entertaining; Clarke and Mostol, comedians, are well received, their dancing being particularly smart; Miss Fanny Humber, novelty dancer and instrumentalist, wins favour; F. G. Fenn is an excellent elocutionist; and Jackson Collis, comedian, is very good. The Bioscope, with new and interesting pictures, completes.

HUDDERSFIELD.—Hippodrome, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—Fred Karno's company is the chief attraction, playing Perkins, M.P., and The G.P.O. That sound comedian, Albert Bruno, scores heavily, and is supported by a strong cast. Purvis and Partner are responsible for a harmonious duologue; the Four Jumels appear in a musical act; Miss Lola Patey has a cordial reception for her Dutch impersonation songs; the Sisters Oswald sing and dance gracefully; Leo Fields creates lots of laughter with his comedy characterisations. The pictures are well chosen.

Palace.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Herbert Garside.—A well-varied bill is headed by J. W. Rickaby, who has to sing four songs to appease the demands of his admirers. The Bros. Victor are a couple of neat acrobats; George Acre is a character vocalist with a good voice; Drew and Alders submit a funny medley, entitled The Coastguard; Misses Florence and Rose Showell sing duets with acceptance; the Four Vagabonds are a quartette of highly-trained singers; the Narow Bros. do a lot of clever and comical things on bicycles; and the pictures are interesting.

HULL.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Mortons, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—The Little Damozel at the Grand this week is one of the most interesting plays we have seen for some time, and the company selected is of much excellence. Miss Roxy Barton, to whom is entrusted the principal part, is an artist whose acting is of the finest order; Mr. Alick Chumley gives a fine portraiture of Recklaw Poole; as Sybil Craven Miss Angela Murray is impressive, and furnishes a contrast to the study of Julie; and the Hon. Fitzroy Lock is well played by Mr. Guy Newall.

Alexandra Theatre.—Morton's, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—A Daughter of the Sea is the type of play that always meets with a great reception at this house. The title-rôle, allotted to the keeping of Miss Florrie Green, is well sustained; the Mark Glensdale of Mr. Gilbert is an interesting study; in heroic mould Mr. Roy Denman casts his rôle; the comic relief is well furnished by Mr. Monkhouse.

ILKESTON.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. Albert Leigh.—Mr. Oscar Mills and company present here an amusing sketch, My Friend the Count; another sketch of a more serious nature, entitled A Gambler's Wife, is cleverly presented by Mr. Jack Fortescue and company; Crawford and Johnson (colôured gentlemen), in song and sand-dance, are highly successful; and the Three Verns are excellent dancers. Mr. Harry Bland, comedian, is responsible for a couple of good songs; Ivy Leaf quickly sings and dances herself into favour; and Philip Levard, illusionist, is well received.

IPSWICH.—Lyceum Theatre.—Miss Ethel Van Praagh and J. Edward Whitty's company is here with The Eyes of the World, Miss Ethel Van Praagh playing her original part of Helene de L'Orme, a powerful piece of acting. Miss Flora Hastings makes much of the cynical Esme, and Miss Nellie Garside is an excellent Susanne; Avice de L'Orme is charmingly portrayed by Miss Elsie Capel; Gaston de Carnac is played in a dignified manner by Mr. Will Casey; Mr. A. Wilson Wynne takes the part of Octave De Carnac; Mr. Charles O'Connor is a forcible Hector de L'Orme, and Achille Fanfarade was in the capable hands of Mr. J. Edward Whitty.

Hippodrome.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—Raymond, the great man of mystery, heads the bill this week, and gives his delightful entertainment to crowded houses, and for over an hour bewilders and dazzles his enthusiastic audience; the Brothers Durrant create much fun with their eccentric airship and grotesque acrobatic work; Morris and Moore are a couple of excellent dancers; Luella Cross, assisted by Master Wilbur, sings pleasantly; Little Sunbeam is an excellent juvenile singer and dancer; and the Vampire dance by Les Grossi is weird and fascinating. Some good films on the Bioscope conclude.

JARROW.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Lionel Locke.—Mr. James Bell's company is paying a visit here with The Idol of Paris. Miss Annie Bell as Flare-Flare proves herself a talented artist; and Mr. Cyril Austen Lee plays Philip D'Esterre forcibly. Mr. Henry Watson gives a manly portrayal of Victor Cashelle; Mr. Gordon Robey makes an excellent Prince Sergius; Mme. Sancterre is capably portrayed by Miss Frances Bruce; and Tatave and Anne have excellent representatives in Mr. H. Vivian Thomas and Miss Annie Megson.

JERSEY.—Opera House.—Lessee, Mr. Edward Marris; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley Hope.—The Sarnthaler Troupe proved themselves so popular that the management induced them to remain until the end of the present week. The audience is most enthusiastic in its applause. Of Albany Ward's electric pictures, the pièce de résistance is Shackleton's Dash to the Pole; another most interesting film is A Trip Around the German Zoo.

KEIGHLEY. — Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. T. Barrasford.—Mr. George Dance's company is delighting large and appreciative audiences here with Miss Hook of Holland. Miss Gertrude Melville is a fascinating Sally Hook; Miss Cissie Sephton is a big favourite as Mina; Mr. Edmond Russell causes much amusement as Mr. Hook; Mr. Arthur Ballance scores as the Bandmaster; Mr. Wood Mansey sings well as Captain Paap; Mr. Fred Dark is another big favourite; and Mr. G. Mudie, jun., deserves praise.

KIDDERMINSTER.—New Opera House.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. Jas. P. Moore; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. C. Gudgeon.—This week the boards are occupied by Messrs. Stewart Lorraine's company, The Rainbows, in burlesque, comedy, and farce. An all-round comic display causes roars of laughter.

KING'S LYNN.—New Royal Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. B. Pareezer; Resident-Manager, Mr. Reginald Pareezer.—For three nights this week Messrs. Elliman presented A Heart's Desire with great success. As Lord St. Ives Mr. R. Ferriss won great favour; Mr. Victor Howard showed much talent as Bertie Beresford; Mr. Edward Ray was good in the part of Luke Forrest; Miss Doris Brookes was a graceful Olya; Miss Flo Bevan a delightful Elsie Beresford; and Miss Linda Arthurs an effective Gwendoline Ross.

KIRKCALDY.—New King's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Cavanah.—Mr. Chas. Majilton and company are here with Round the Clock, &c. As Gadforth Mr. Charles Majilton acts capitally; Mr. James Bond depicts Burke in fitting style; Mr. Jock Laughran as the Policeman exhibits qualities of low comedy which gain hearty applause; and Messrs. George Hunter and Tom Carrol and Misses Clifford, Christie, Valli, and Majilton are valuable members of the cast.

Corn Exchange Pavilion.—General-Manager, Mr. W. D. Walker; Manager, Mr. George Lee.—A pictorial programme is submitted by the Safety Bioscope Company, in which that favourite A. B. art film, What Drink Did, tops the bill. Other spools contain equally good pictures, of which The Fireman's Wedding and Springheel Jack are worthy of mention. Variety turns have been successfully inaugurated here, and this week Messrs. Roy and Fenton, Mr. R. C. McGill, and the "star" turn, Rudge Whitworth, are appearing with great success.

LANCASTER.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. C. Howitt.—It is many years since The New Barmaid made its appearance here, but it is nevertheless still popular as presented by Miss Violet Osmond's company. As Bertie White Mr. Alexander Loftus is a success; Mr. Chas. Adeson as William White works hard; and as Captain Lovebury Mr. Burlington Rigg is successful. In the Miss Vera Grafton gives a fine portrayal of Brenda Louth; Miss De Terry makes the most of Lady Moulton; and Miss Beatrice Erle plays the Lady Journalist to perfection.

LEAMINGTON. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessees, Messrs. Dottridge and Longden; Manager, Mr. Chas. H. Longden; Assistant-Manager, Mr. John Halifax.—Dare-Devil Dorothy is being played to large and appreciative audiences by Mr. J. W. Cordiner's company. Mr. George A. Fox invests Captain George Fielding with manly bearing; whilst Captain Edward Dudley finds a capable exponent in Mr. Robt. Gilbert. Mr. Edward Aldworth is also an admirable Hawkins; Mr. James Salter proves himself a clever comedian in the rôle of Silas Crump; and as Dare-Devil Dorothy Miss Gertrude De Lacy plays with much dash and vigour. Miss Kathleen Stewart gives a commendable performance of the part of Ruth Montrose; other characters being creditably portrayed by Mr. Deane Cliffe, Mr. W. H. Troutbeck, Miss Madge Delta, and Miss Nellie Harcourt. Excellent specialities are introduced by Miss Gertrude De Lacy, soprano; Miss Nellie Harcourt, soubrette; Miss Kathleen Stewart, vocalist; Misses Lillie and Iris Elvido, Continental dancers; and Mr. James Salter, comedian.

ELECTRIC THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Gillsmiths, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Harry Plant.—Pictures and variety meet with the hearty approval of large audiences daily. Mr. Norman Griffin makes a very successful appearance in humorous items; and Mr. Harry Lewis, baritone, is as popular as ever.

LEEDS. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietor, Mr. Francis Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. Nathaniel Hepworth.—Mr. Frank Lindo's popular play, Home, Sweet Home, is drawing good houses. Mr. Lindo takes the part of Stephen Armitage with much success; Miss Marion Wakeford is equally successful as Joan. The play is interspersed with songs and dances given by a number of children who recently took the principal parts in Mr. Laidler's Bradford pantomime. They give a most creditable performance.

THE EMPIRE.—District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Manager, Mr. Alex. Galley.—Mr. Whit Cunliffe is a big draw here in some smart songs; Harold Nuttall's company appears in an interesting sketch, The Ghost of Jerry Bundler, in which Mr. Martyn Roland is a conspicuous figure as Hirst; Kathleen Gray is an attractive comedienne with good songs; Herbert Shelley appears in a protean play Dan the Outlaw; Walker and May are big favourites; Francis and Alfred appear in a clever act; and other favourites include Sydney James's Strolling Players, Leslie Brothers, and Betty Green.

THE HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Harry Dunford. —Charles Austin, in his sketch Parker, P.C., causes endless amusement; Goodfellow and Gregson appear in clever comedy; Tom Gott is making a welcome return visit; and the Rangers, A. W. Scott, Bijou Juvenile Troupe, Dorothy Gould, Sims and Sims, Bertisch, and Emerson and Baldwin are all capital turns.

QUEEN'S.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Bush.—A most effective sketch, The Flood Tide, is given by Harry P. Selwyn's company; Max Waldon's dancing and singing turn is highly appreciated; and other artists include Queenie May, Rowlands and Ford, the Lannons, the Three Comerfords, and Hal Bert.

THE VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Jones.—Les Reubens are appearing in a picturesque gipsy encampment scena; and Martin Henry, assisted by Irene Ross, in a pathetic sketch, The Silver Medal.

LEEK.—GRAND THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Leek Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. James Bibby.—This place of amusement is opened for the week as a hippodrome. A good variety programme includes Vinto (ventriloquist), who gives a clever performance, Walter Ford (comedian), Blanche Ford (vocalist), and Master Sydney Ford (speciality artist, in songs). There is a capital series of pictures on the Bioscope.

LEICESTER.—ROYAL OPERA HOUSE.—Business-Manager, Mr. Trueman Towers.—We are having a return visit this week of Messrs. Lyn Harding and Sidney Cooper's company in the naval play The Flag Lieutenant. Mr. Ralph Roberts does exceedingly well in the part of Richard Lascelles, and Miss Rita Johnson acts charmingly as Lady Hermione Wynne; and others who do full justice to the characters allotted to them are Mr. Fredk. Leister as Major William Thesiger, Mr. Mark Paton as Vice-Admiral Sir Berkeley Wynne, and Miss Mabel Rees as Mrs. Cameron.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Acting-Manager, Mr. P. Allerton Turner.—Mr. Evelyn A'Dell and company are here in The Old Home. Miss Nina Blake-Adams as Hazel Dean and Mr. Evelyn A'Dell as the Rev. Eric Armstrong are both very good. Other parts are also admirably played by Mr. Fred L. Connynghame as Sam Adams, Miss Ethel Ashleigh as Polly Pop, Mr. Charles Frenmore as Daddy Dean, Miss Harrette Loydell as Bridget Donoghan, Mr. Horatio Sinclair as Lord Avondale, and Mr. Fred Stone as Timothy Twaddle.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. S. Buccleuch.—The juggler par excellence, Cinquevalli, is here this week, and goes through a remarkable performance with a neatness and cleverness that evoke unstinted approbation. As an entertainer at the piano Tom Clare takes high rank, and he is also meeting with a hearty welcome; Winifred Ward is a charming male impersonator whose songs meet with well-merited appreciation; James Eadie and Cissy Ramsden again score a success in their quaint creation Charlie's Visit, the male partner being particularly smart; T. B. Vaughan and John Lawson's company are good in W. W. Jacob's dramatic sketch The Bo'sun's Mate; Syd May's mimicry of various stars is lifelike, and is a most popular item; the Haytors (Frank, Walter, and Winnie) create endless merriment in their comedy skit The Electrician; the Great Northern Troupe of international and speciality dancers are receiving their usual hearty reception; and Johnny Fuller, the acrobatic cat on the wire, and the Bioscope are other attractions.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joseph Lawrence.—Miss Jessie Danvers and company take the lead this week in a thrilling episode of real life entitled The Key; Ross and Grayson, a really funny comedy couple of great versatility, are making a hit; the Donnas Trio present a clean, clever, and attractive gymnastic act on the trapeze; Silly Billy Elliott creates plenty of merriment with his tales and songs; May Paulton is a capital comedienne; in place of Rosie Cross, Linton and West, two local cross-talkers and dancers, are appearing. Pictures always loom large in the programmes here, and this week very fine films are shown in Lines of White on a Sullen Sea, A Spanish Bull Fight, and The Vagabond's Adventure.

EMPIRE.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. R. Craig. —The principal picture this week is The Golden Spider, a beautifully coloured film. Eric Dean, vocalist and impersonator, is an attraction.

LEIGH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Tolfree and Slingsby.—Miss Hilda Beverley's company is here in A Destroyer of Men. Mr. Stephen Langton shines conspicuously as the rascally Count Starevitch; Mr. Herbert Pearson, in the triple rôle of Karl Mishla, Herr Runz, and Uno, is deserving of considerable praise; Mr. James Jarrett is satisfactory as Michael Mishla; Mr. Jack Armitage is excellent in the dual rôles of Fedor Strelitzcke and Paul Starevitch; Miss Hilda submits a powerful portrayal of Countess Starevitch; Miss Mary Brammer gives a careful study of Vida Ravel; and Mr. Edward Keith and Miss Dorothy Hildebrande as Coco and Nina Pattacake are amusing.

GRAND THEATRE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Secretary and Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Woolstencroft.—The Geni Family of Risley acrobats evoke rounds of applause for their feats of daring and skill; Bennett and Martell, comedians, create much laughter; the Three Gascoignes, comedy jugglers, are clever and original; Bert Errol has a flattering reception; the Spanish Goldini Troupe display skill in a carpet-spinning act; the Emsons, comediennes and dancers, are well received; Bruce Green makes a funny Dame; the De Nebos provide an acceptable song and dance sketch; and the Hippodrome pictures are good.

LEITH.—NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Licensee and Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Davidson.—Mr. Herbert Fuller has been here with his own company in his own play, As Your Hair Grows Whiter, which has received a cordial welcome from large and appreciative audiences. Mr. Hubert Helliwell very ably fills the heroic rôle of the Rev. John Albery; and Miss Agnes Collier is successful as Alice Waters. Mr. Cuthbert Taylor is prominent as the hard-hearted squire, Jake Stonely; Mr. Louis Weston makes a good Nebucanezza Mozart; nice studies of an old couple are given by Mr. R. Nelme Grasswell and Miss Lilian Burne, who play Farmer and Mrs. Walters; and the comedy element is in the safe hands of Mr. Fuller as Timothy Slough and Miss Lily Fuller as Diana Vanderbout. A song by Miss Collier forms a pleasing feature of the last act. Trilby was billed for Wednesday and Friday, with Mr. Fuller as Svengali and Miss Collier as Trilby.

LIMERICK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. George Victor Fogerty.—This week the Jameson Picture Company, direct from the Rotunda Theatre, is with us, and a pretty little vaudeville arrangement, including the clever sisters Colley, form a delightful combination. The theatre has been overhauled for the season's opening, and new scenery introduced to meet the needs of the patronage

LINCOLN.—ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, Messrs. Payne Seddon and Ernest Pope; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ernest Pope.—Mr. J. A. Watson's company is paying a successful visit with The New Boy. Mr. F. G. Thurstan as Archibald and Miss Phyllis Manners as Mrs. Rennick are especially successful.

PALACE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. E. Dobney.—The Donaldsons had a big bill with Sports in a Jungle, a very diverting and effectively presented show. The Miltons give a skating act that is distinctly smart; Burley and Burley's contortion work is sensationally clever; and George Laurence, Colin Mail, Joan Deering, Norah Emerald, and the Palace Perfection Pictures complete an entertaining show.

LIVERPOOL.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Lawrence.—A return visit of the D'Oyly Carte Company to Liverpool has given genuine satisfaction The week's stay opened on Monday night with The Mikado, in which Mr. Fred Billington occupied his customary place as Pooh Bah, playing with all his former oddity and humour; Mr. Henry A. Lytton was Ko-Ko, and pleased his audience immensely with his merry pranks; Mr. Henry Herbert capably filled the rôle of Nanki-Poo; an admirable Mikado came from Mr. Leicester Tunks, whose singing and acting were alike perfect; Mrs. Arthur Rousbey charmed everybody with her sweet singing as Yum-Yum, and gained repeated encores; Miss Louie Rene handled the part of Katisha in accomplished style; Miss Beatrice Boarer earned applause for her rendering of several numbers as Pitti-Sing, and Miss Marjorie Stone made a neat Peep-Bo. The chorus was admirable, the appreciation of their work being cordial in the extreme. On other evenings The Gondoliers, Pirates of Penzance, Patience, Pinafore, and The Yeomen of the Guard were given.

SHAKESPEARE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wentworth Croke; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney.—The Liverpool public have this week had a first peep at Pinkie and the Fairies, presented by Sir H. Beerbohm Tree's full company, and the general opinion has been very approving, the lovely musical fairy play affording the utmost delight to everybody who witnessed it. All the little ones performed their duties in commendable fashion, Miss Iris Hawkins, as Pinkie, showing exceptional ability for a girl of her years; Miss Florrie Lewis was a particular favourite with her Queen of the Fairies, and danced in finished style; Master Philip Tonge did everything required as Tommy; Master Burford Hampden was a humorous and pompous Herald; Molly found in Miss Hilda Antony a most capable exponent; the aunts, Imogen and Caroline, were worthily represented by Miss Kate Forter and Miss Augusta Haviland; a funny Uncle Gregory was presented by Mr. Ambrose Manning; and other well-held parts were Mr. Irons (Mr. Walter R. Creighton), Cinderella (Miss Gwennie Brogden), Sleeping Beauty (Miss Dora Rignold), and Elf Pickle (Miss Patty Jacob). The choruses were delightful to listen to, the dancing gracefully executed, and the scenery beyond praise. Three matinées, well patronised, were given during the week.

ROTUNDA THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. M. Montgomedy.—Here this week we are having Mr. Frank M. Thorne's strong drama The Woman Pays. Miss Alice Greenwood shows high accomplishments in the rôle of Madge Armstrong; Mr. Ramond Thomas impersonates Roger Marchant with much dramatic force; Cyrus Threadgold is ably handled by Mr. Beresford Innes; a charming Tibatha comes from Miss Florence Thorne; and the unfortunate Nell Morland was most creditably presented by Miss Kate Blair. Mr. Phil Harper was satisfactory as the fisherman, Sid Armstrong; Mr. Charles Arthur did well as Dr. Trevor; and some excellent comedy was furnished by Mr. Joseph McGrath (Micky Maloney) and Miss Lily Beverley (Patty Stokes). The mounting was a feature of the play.

STAR THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—The attraction this week is Mr. Stanley Carlton's Her Life in London, which is being enjoyed by large audiences. As the young clergyman Mr. Carlton earns great popularity, his acting being greeted with loud applause; Miss Rubie Maude affords general delight with her tenderly portrayed Astra Bell; Mr. Claude Aymond shows a deal of talent as the blind burglar; a strong part is that of Collini, capitally handled by Mr. John Croudace; Miss Katie Randolph makes a natural lady detective, Madge Rendall; and Miss Evelyn M. Walton thoroughly grasps the part of the villainous Sarah Shafte. The lighter parts are in the good hands of Mr. W. Vernon (Percy Plunker) and Miss R. B. Douglas (Dolly), both of whom have capital songs and dances.

KELLY'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant.—An excellent company has been sent here this week by Mr. Wentworth Croke to present The Bondman. The character of Jason is admirably interpreted by Mr. Philip Darien; Mr. Stanley Harrison presents the exacting part of Michael in masterly style; very creditable work comes from Mr. W. H. Rotherham, who impersonates the grandfather and Father Ferrati; Miss Violet Macaree delights everybody with her Greeba; and also excellent were the efforts of Miss Madge Lanerton (Mrs. Fairbrother), Mr. Wilfrid Beckwith (Adam Fairbrother), Mr. Fred J. Walker (Doctor Boni), Mr. Alfred Fisher (Governor Testa), Miss Emelie May hew (Christian Ann), and Mr. Cecil H. Ford (Marshal of Police). The play was staged in Mr. Croke's well-known able style.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. George Mannere.—Topping a strong bill here this week is George Formby, who receives a nightly ovation, encores being in great demand. His latest, "Playing the Game in the West; or, Leading a reckless life in London," is richly enjoyed. That capital pair of eccentrics, the Bros. Griffiths cause endless laughter; Cyril Clensy and company provide an admirable sketch, The Last Chance, which gives Mr. Clensy opportunities of showing his histrionic powers in the impersonation of well-known actors and comedians. His supporters are George White, Archibald MacLean, and E. Gordon Philliott. Jack Lane, at the piano, makes a hit with his amusing version of the ditty "Kelly"; the Delevines keep the audience in a merry mood with their lively Flipp and Flopp at the Village Inn; Selkirk's Boy Scouts spectacle gains loud applause; the operatic vocal selections by Les Silas are much appreciated; some accomplished acrobatic work is gone through by the Avolos; Stewart and Morgan have a unique vocal speciality; and Ethel Beech, comedienne, also appears.

LYRIC.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C Arnold.—Paul Barnes heads the programme here this week, and keeps his audience in shouts of laughter with his witticisms; the Eight College Girls have a beautiful scena, Schoolgirls at Play, into which they introduce some smart singing and dancing; Randolph King pleases immensely with his one-man show; Susie and Protti have a clever dancing creation, "The Human Tee-to-tum"; Harry Conlan brings his latest songs; Nellie Coleman dances and sings to everyone's satisfaction; much laughter follows Elizabeth and the Baby, a merry sketch by Benson and Rose; Kenneth and Kane, a lively duo, include in their latest, "Oh, oh, oh!" and Flo Bennett, chorus vocalist, provides a good turn.

ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—Foremost this week are the Six Brothers Luck company with The Demon of the Cellar; Sandy McNab and company are causing roars of laughter with their funny sketch The Egyptian Mummy; the Columbia Comedy Trio receive a hearty welcome for their excellent turn; Fred Land is as eccentric as ever, and earns applause; Marie Paul is an accomplished violinist, and has a hearty greeting; The Romps proves a most satisfactory turn provided by the Bellew and Stocks' company of entertainers; Professor Welson shows ability as a gymnastic equilibrist on the Swedish bar; the coster songs and sayings of Phil Bransby take exceedingly well; and Jessie Templeton sings in good style.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole. —So great has been the success of the pantomime Cinderella, provided by the stock company, that a third week is being put in. The performance concludes with an amusing shadowgraph harlequinade, and specialities are provided by the Elduns (Viola and Fred), operatic duettists.

OLYMPIA.—District-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—Ching Ling Soo is here this week with his marvellous conjuring feats and illusions; Heeley and Meeley cause endless laughter as eccentric tramps; Holden's mannikins prove as interesting as ever; Grant Gardner and Marie Stoddard provide a brilliant vaudeville turn, which is rapturously applauded; the Korries have a neat musical act; Takio displays singular gifts as an imitator of sounds; Frank H. Fox shows himself to be a very funny comedian; Cumminger and Colonna are a couple of excellent dancers, and win rounds of applause; and Rossi Ashton has some pleasing "song sketching." The trial turns Thursday matinée are now an established success.

PAVILION. — Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. George F. Slatter.—The Yellow Fang is here this week, ably supported by Messrs. George Pickett, Francis Annesley, Laurence Osborne, Aubrey Stuart, Edgar L. Hocking, and Miss Violet Campbell. The play is under the direction of Miss Mary Mayfren. Some capital xylophone playing is done by the Two Brilliants; Archie Glen tells rich stories and dances in good style; the popular Jennie Johns has a flattering reception for her songs; Charles Prelle's bijou circus is as interesting and amusing a ever; a very beautiful and greatly appreciated turn comes from Mlle. de Louvois and company, their posings being extremely artistic; the Six White Boys in song and dance afford satisfaction; Thomas and Taylor deserve the cordial reception they have for their quick-change comedy Fun on the Midland; and Arthur Aiston, comedian, is also in the list.

LLANDUDNO.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arnold Macara.—The Dunlops, comedy cyclists and skaters, top the bill here, and give clever exhibitions. George Caselli contributes expert dancing; Dolly Brough is seen to advantage in song and dance; Karl is a smart juggler; Lillian Sivado presents a good gymnastic act; and Wee Doris finds favour in captivating songs. The Biographic Pictures are fully appreciated by enthusiastic audiences.

PIER PAVILION.—Secretary, Mr. Sam Hughes.—The orchestra under Mr. Walter Haigh continues to draw large crowds, the vocalist this week being Miss Rosina Beynon.

LOUGHBOROUGH. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Proprietors, Messrs. Payne Seddon and George Robertson; Lessee, Mr. W. Payne Seddon; Business-Manager, Mr. Lindsey Edwards.—Mr. Eustace Day's company is here with For Love of a Woman. Mr. Edmund Grogan ably portrays the part of Ned Merrick; Mr. Ernest Regent acts cleverly as the villain, Guy Manor; Mr. Eustace Day is good as Allen Paget, the blind grandfather; Mr. Chas. Ninian is sufficiently touchy as Major Hulmes; and Mr. Harry Angers as the dude, Albert St. Everamond, is amusing; Miss Dorothy Oswald as Nell Paget plays with feeling; Miss May Day is clever as the child Nance Manor; and Miss G. De Clifford as Marjory Hulmes and Miss Eva St. Vincent as Jane Manor fill their parts creditably.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Lessees, Weisker's Picture Palaces, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. A. Evanson.—The World in Motion entertainments here maintain their popularity, and the pictures this week are a very good series. Variety is provided by the Lynches (American song illustrators), Laurie Leyton (juvenile ventriloquist), and Vio Sand (comedienne).

LOWESTOFT.—MARINA.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. Pareezer.—With Edged Tools is presented by a thoroughly capable company.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. W. Alvar.—The bill includes The Tymes, in a well-rendered duet; Dan Yoxley, ballad vocalist; and Reg. Ewen, light comedian. The pictorial subjects include several highly instructive and interesting films.

MACCLESFIELD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. K. Gatley.—Mr. Chas. Harrington's American combination in Uncle Tom's Cabin is here this week. Mr. J. H. Boehm gives a capital impersonation of Uncle Tom as Phineas Fletcher; Mr. A. Hayes presents a finished representation; Mr. Chas. Harrington does full justice to the part of George Harris; Legree is well depicted by Mr. Tom Bowron; and Marks amusingly played by Mr. Reginald Kloof. Miss Hero Hathaway proves herself an excellent Eliza Harris; as Aunt Ophelia Miss Helen Douglas deserves praise; Miss Florence Tyler is a pleasing Emmeline; and as Little Eva Miss Gem Lloyd leaves nothing to be desired.

MANCHESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, The United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edmondstone Shirra.—The Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company are still here in répertoire, the event of the week being the production of Goldmark's The Queen of Sheba on Tuesday, a notice of which appears in another column.

PRINCE'S THEATRE. — Proprietors, The United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Lee.—Mr. Herbert Sleath and company are here this week in that powerful play The Woman in the Case, and are playing to enthusiastic houses. Miss Violet Vanbrugh, as the decidedly unpleasant Claire Forster, scores an artistic success; Miss Ellis Jeffreys (often very reminiscent of Mrs. Kendal), plays exceedingly well as Margaret Rolfe; and Mr. Herbert Sleath plays with reserve as Julian. Mr. William F. Grant's study of Thompson, the solicitor, is clever and effective; whilst excellent support is rendered by Miss Mary Griffiths (Nell Hughes), Miss G. Wren (Elsie Brewster), Mr. Fred Benton (Louis Klanfferty), Mr. W. Kershaw (Jimmy Smith), and the remaining parts are all in capable hands. By Mutual Agreement, a neat curtain-raiser, is well presented by Miss Gwendoline Wren (very good as Muriel), Mr. W. P. Grant, Mr. Kershaw, and Mr. M. Tompson.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietor, Miss A. E. F. Horniman; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edwin T. Heys.—A new play, Subsidence, was produced here on Monday. A notice appears elsewhere. The piece was followed by Basil Dean's one-act play, Mother to Be.

ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—An interesting change of fare here is provided by Mr. Allan Wilkie and company in Shakespearean répertoire. The programme includes Hamlet, The Merchant of Venice, Taming of the Shrew, Othello, Merry Wives of Windsor, and Richard the Third; truly, an elaborate and exacting venture. Mr. Allan Wilkie, however, is cut out for the work, being seen to great advantage in principal parts; while ample talent is shown by the members of his company, of whom the next most prominent is Miss Carrie Baillie, the Ophelia on Monday night. The dressing and staging of the plays is admirably done, while the acting throughout is well-studied and enjoyable.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Hearn. —Geo. A. de Gray and Harry Masterman's company are appearing here successfully in a pathetic drama, The Angel of His Dreams. Mr. Geo. A. de Gray makes excellent use of his opportunities as the Rev. Christian Esdaile; Mr. Wallace Campbell plays Major Ferrars with distinction; Mr. Charles Arnold as Sir Francis Tregarthen puts in forcible work; Miss Effie Bartlett gives a telling interpreation of Hilda Revelle, the woman who comes between; and very smart acting is done by Little Doris Brereton as Lulu. In lighter rôles Miss Etta Turner and Mr. Mayo Stanley cause considerable laughter.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brearley.—Mr. J. A. Campbell's company are paying a return visit in the popular drama The Sin of Her Childhood. Miss Mary Fulton is still in her part of Mary Haysel, and her admirable work is well matched by that of Mr. Guy Hastings as the Rev. Alan Grey. Mr. Cecil Mannering as Stephen Haysel makes a good villain; and a good impersonation is also that of Capt. Thornton by Mr. Frank Liston; while great praise is due to Miss Marjorie Joy as Mary in the prologue. Acceptable humour is added by Miss Pollie Denville and Mr. Hugh Brady. The staging is very pleasing.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—A capital programme here is headed by John Tiller's spectacular production In Japan, employing a company of fifty clever artists. The Mystic Hussars, a fine stage illusion, is also a special turn; while the Ellesmere troupe of trick cyclists are well to the fore. Other good things are provided by the Eight Cocktails, dainty dancers; Cissy Iris, comedienne and dancer; the Phillipi Brothers and company in their comic speciality; Baby's Park Parade, by May Merry and chorus; the Twelve Forget-me-nots, clever juvenile singers and dancers; and the Pavilion Serenaders, accomplished vocalists.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—The beautiful series of fantastic and art dances by La Pia is one of the prime attractions here. Excellent and prominent also is the new musical fantasia, A Duo in Dreamland, presented by W. Talleur Andrews, the well-known tenor, and Vivien Talleur, première danseuse; while sharing the honours of the programme is Brinn, in his sensational "Pastimes on a Battleship." Other good turns are done by Dot Stephens, musical comedy actress; James Curwell, the wonderful boy musician; Great and Good, Australian comedians; Barney Armstrong (and Kelly), in a comedy act; Signor Persichini, mandolinist; and the Sisters Barnes, duettists and dancers.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—Mme. Elis Russell, the world-renowned prima donna, is here this week, and is accorded a great reception. The Albert and Edmunds troupe of comedians cause no end of fun in the sketch The Tower of London; Addie Dorina is particularly good in her protean act, Dr. Spot's Patients; A. Ba-Be's Picture Postcard Album introduces graceful posing; the Brothers Bright are neat athletes; Ryan and Hall are clever knockabouts; the Maples cause laughter with their skit Hamper-ed; and Victor's Juveniles are smart singers and dancers. On the occasion of our visit Tom Costello, the well-known comedian, did not appear, his place being successfully taken by Barney Armstrong (and Kelly). Some good pictures complete. On Thursday a flying matinée performance of Samson and Delilah was given by the Moody-Manners' Opera Company with great success.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—The great Little Tich is here this week, and meets with a deserved big reception. Jack Lorimer, the versatile Scottish entertainer, is also very much to the front, and is well received. Young and Evans are good Hebrew comedians; Maurice is a great card manipulator; Ray Espinosa is excellent in a neat dancing scena; Curwen and Bell give a pleasing miniature musical comedy act; L. W. Harris is a first-rate light comedian; Lee and Bentley are good in The King's Council; and Hayes and Watson give some entertaining novelty dancing. A very good all-round show.

TIVOLI.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Foot Gera, the famous French comedian and mimic, tops the bill here this week with much success. Charming Billie Barlow, the well-known burlesque artist, scores as usual; the Sisters Selwyn are good dancers and vocalists; and other enjoyable items are contributed by Garti and Law, in novel vocal act; Angela Ward, in song-scena; Sewell and Dudley, in sketch The Sun Bath; Marie Lord, comedienne; and Ruby Emerson, comedienne. Some fine pictures complete.

KING'S THEATRE, LONGSIGHT.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jas. R. Trippett.—Messrs. Henry Chattell and Jack Denton's excellent company are the attraction here this week in Max Goldberg's successful play Through the Divorce Court, after two weeks' good business at the Royal Osborne and Grand Junction theatres. Miss Hattie Chattell is still in the company, and plays exceedingly well as Lady Dolores Penarth.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Dry.—Fred Karno's company is here this week in the amusing extravaganza The Dandy Thieves, with George Hester as Sergeant Lightning, and, as usual, is greatly enjoyed. Another good turn is Wash. W. Evans and company in the American pocket musical comedy Paradise Alley. Wallace Whitney, a capital comedian, is well received; Burns and Bentley score a big success with their expert dancing; Lucy Coventry dances smartly, and is loudly applauded; and other good turns are those of Bert Bowden, comedian; Beattie Foster, comedienne; W. F. Reno, in comedy cycle act; and Chas. Baron's burlesque menagerie, introducing the boxing cats. Pictures complete.

RUSHOLME PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Leslie; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. Phillips.—A first-rate all-round programme is offered here this week. Fred Field, a capital comedian, meets with a great reception; dainty Cecily O'Shea, who sings and dances nicely, makes her first appearance in England, and is deservedly well received; Harry Smith, tenor vocalist here for a third week, is encored at every performance; Gloria Sarti, a very clever mola soloist is greatly enjoyed; whilst other entertaining items are those of Ernie Percival, light comedian, and George Curzon, baritone vocalist. Selections on the piano are given by Willie Bailey.

MANSFIELD.—GRAND.—Mr. George Edwardes's company, with The Merry Widow, was greeted by a packed house on Monday. Miss Mary Reaby was soon a favourite with her delightful rendering of Sonia; Mr. Robert Needham got no less hearty a reception as Prince Danilo, the famous waltz being encored time after time; Miss Mabel Rope successfully played Natalie, whilst Miss Nesta Laurie received hearty applause for her dancing with Mr. Harry Emario, who as Nisch scored a hit; Mr. H. Sinclair Cotter was screamingly funny as Baron Popoff; Mr. Ronald Pomeroy sang well in the part of Viscomte Camile de Jolidon. The scenery and effects are good.

MARGATE.—HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Mayall.—The bill is headed by Miss Dorothy Grahame, who presents, with great success, her dramatic dancing playlet entitled Ma Fille, in which she is assisted by Mr. Paul Armand and Mr. Alex Clifton; Lucia Collins, comedienne, has given great pleasure by her songs, rendered in piquant style; Kydd and Kydd, comedians and dancers; the Three Orleans, harmonious vocalists; Harry Cooke, eccentric comedian; Kitty Leon, comedienne and dancer; and Bertini, instrumentalist, have all contributed acceptable items.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, The South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson.—The Better Land, presented by Mr. Fred Granville's company, is here. Mr. Douglas Watson admirably fills the part of Philip Radcliffe; Mr. Leonard Booker gives an effective study of Hubert Radcliffe; Miss Kitty Terriss proves exceedingly amusing as Polly; Miss Margaret Trevosper makes a sympathetic Doris; Mr. Fred Richards amuses with his Tom Tadpole; Mr. Hill Cremer is successful as George Grave; and valuable support also comes from Miss Gertie Moody (Harry), Elsie Jones (Tessa), Bella Moody (Aunt Jemima), and Madge Trevelyan (Mercedes).

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Lessee, Mr. Israel Price.—Cullen and Carthy and Little Cluley top an excellent bill here, and other artists successfuly appearing are the Phœnix Trio, Harry Keeble, Gladys Wells, the Mayes, and Norman and Noyes. The pictures, as usual, are excellent.

MEXBOROUGH.—PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. H. Melton.—Mr. W. V. Garrod and company are this week presenting Are You the Man? Mr. W. V. Garrod gives a finely studied rendering of Captain Beaumont, whose treacherous cousin Sidney Beaumont is played with vigour and ability by Mr. Wm. Bradford; Mr. Frank Dallas is thoroughly at home in his impersonation of Solomon Moses; Mr. Chas. Halling does well as Joshua Beaumont; a droll village constable is found in Mr. Owen Redmonde; Miss Bertha Kingston plays the heroine, Lilian Brandon, with charm and grace; and Miss Ethel Crawford is an excellent Flo Dalton.

MIDDLESBROUGH.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. K. Chatto.—Mr. William Mollison's company is meeting with well-deserved success for a fine presentation of The Chorus Lady. The title-rôle is most efficiently sustained by Miss Annie Hughes; and as Don Mallory Mr. William Mollison, who is a valued favourite in the iron town, is a pronounced success. The comedy is preceded by the playlet The Touch of a Child, with Mr. Mollison as Colonel James Fullard, D.S.O.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. J. Chas. Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. Imeson.—Misses Nora Carton and Beatrice Selwyn's company are appearing in Temptation. Miss Carton is seen to distinct advantage as Hilda Dundonald, and Miss Selwyn capably portrays the character of the adventuress Ivra Blight. The other characters have been placed with care and discretion, and the drama is very well staged.

EMPIRE. — General-Manager, Mr. Chas. G. Rembges.—The chief attraction here is provided by Barnold's animals, who present their surprising comedy sketch A Hot Time in Dogville. The antics of Dan, the drunken dog, are wonderfully clever and funny. Other good turns are supplied by Vere and Neildon, novelty artists; the Sisters Allen, duettists and dancers; the Glenroy Troupe of dancers; Rose and Challoner, variety entertainers; Miss Madge Brownie, comedienne; Tom Stuart, comedian; and the Empire Bioscope pictures. Good houses rule.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Frank D. Todd.—The programme fully sustains the reputation of the "Hip," as one of the best picture halls in the country.

MORLEY.—ALEXANDRA PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Tom Diacoff; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Izon.—Mahatma, the "Queen of Second Sight," causes quite a sensation with her clever and mystifying performance; the Two Lees introduce a novelty musical act, which wins enthusiastic applause; Will Penn, comedian, and Fred Gilbert, a local descriptive vocalist, gain appreciation.

MOTHERWELL.—NEW CENTURY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chisholm Taylor.—Mr. George Edwardes's company, in The Merry Widow, is here this week. In the title-part Miss Phyllis le Grand is distinctly successful; Miss Ada Thomas acts with grace and ease, and her fine voice is heard to advantage in the various numbers allotted to Natalie; Miss Katie May is sweet and graceful as Frou-Frou, her dancing calling for special praise; Miss Lucie Donati is clever as Prascovia; Mr. Fred Leslie is fresh and debonair as the Prince; and Mr. Edward Darcy is exceedingly droll as the Baron. Mr. Fred Fowler is a source of continuous merriment in the rôle of Nisch; Novakovitch is cleverly enacted by Mr. Clifford Seyler; Mr. Ripley Evans sings with style and finish as De Jolidon; St. Brioche, Khadja, and Cascada are excellently depicted by Messrs. Sherry, Climpson, and Allison; Lo-Lo, Gow-Gow, Clo-Clo, and Margot are finely portrayed by Mesdames Midgley, Bingham, Baye, Pennington, and Wilde. The production is beautifully staged and dressed, and there is an excellent chorus under the bâton of Mr. Harry Burton.

NEATH.—PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Leon Vint. General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Noice.—The pictures here are attracting crowded houses. Comedy and tragedy are quite up to the usual high standard. A beautiful subject is A Midsummer Night's Dream.

NELSON.—PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Benson.—An attractive programme is headed by Ralph and Nellie Howard, who provide a capital musical comedy sketch entitled Military Mad. The artists also include Lucy Gillette and the funny dumb boys in an original juggling novelty. Martell, a clever equilibrist; the Primrose Quartette of male vocalists; the Zarachs, aquatic acrobats; Lew Peterman, Hebrew comedian; the Loveleces, song illustrators; and Jack Hayton, comedian and dancer.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. W. C. Horner; Manager, Mr. Parker.—Messrs. G. M. Polini and Austin Melford's company, in The Silver King, is on a welcome return visit. Mr. Fred W. Davies sustains the title-rôle with much distinction, his interpretation of Wilfred Denver, John Franklyn, and Daft Dickey being highly meritorious; Mr. Sydney Wynn makes a powerful Spider; Mr. Edward J. George displays all his old power as the faithful Jakes; whilst a very fine portrayal of Elijah Coombe is supplied by Mr. Arthur Wright; Miss Mildred Surrey makes a charming Nellie Denver; and Olive Skinner is ably presented by Miss Mary Glanbrane. The production throughout is excellent.

NEW BRIGHTON.—WINTER GARDENS.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Jones and Douglass.—An immense success has been achieved by La Berat, in her wonderful fire and other dances. A capital programme has also been contributed to by Mr. W. McEwan and Miss L. Pollard, in a neat sketch Duval Outdone; Messrs. Reski and Reski, gymnasts; Mr. D. W. Watson in a musical interlude; Mr. Albert Sember and company in a mock melodrama; Mr. W. G. Webber, bass vocalist; and Mr. P. Burt, comedian. The animated pictures are instructive and entertaining.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessees and Managers, the New Brighton Pier Co.—Why Smith Left Home is giving satisfaction. The company is managed by Mr. Eric H. Aldbury, and every part is in safe hands, the audience laughing heartily over the comical situations.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Teale Lingham.—Unusual interest has been shown this week in the visit of Mr. George Edwardes' special company, in The Dollar Princess. As Freddy Fairfax Mr. Leonard Mackay's cultured singing and smart acting make a strong appeal; Mr. W. Louis Bradfield as Harry Q. Conder receives unbounded appreciation; as Bulger Mr. Eric Thorne makes the most of his opportunities; Mr. Paul Plunket as John, Earl of Quorn, Mr. Howard Cridland as Dick, and Mr. Percy Davison as Sir James Macgregor, are excellently cast, the latter being exceptionally good in an eccentric duet and dance with Miss Norah Barry. Olga, the Lion Queen, is irresistible as played by Miss Norma Whalley; and Alice is delightfully portrayed by Miss Norah Barry. A charmingly piquant performance is that of Miss Daisy Elliston as Daisy.

TYNE THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessees, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham; Manager, Mr. Fred C. Sutcliffe.—The Newcastle Amateur Operatic Society, in Princess Ida, occupies the boards here.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. W. Rowe; Business-Manager, Mr. E. B. Clark.—Mr. Morton Powell's company, in How Girls Are Brought to Ruin, is a powerful attraction here. Mrs. Morton Powell achieves success as Minnie Waters; Miss Isla Garnet-Vayne plays with tact and sympathy the rôle of Jessie Burton; Mr. H. Scott draws a manly portrait of Harry Hailing; and Mr. E. M. Heanley cleverly portrays the villain of the piece, Mr. Phillip Edge; Mr. A. Burton's Solomon Sleek is a fine performance; the rôle of Mrs. Burton is effectively sustained by Miss Kathryn Eckhart; and Miss Addie Adair as Mrs. Slutt and Mr. Sydney Bryant as Jack Jossle are also successful.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; Manager, Mr. Chas. E. Linney.—Variety turns are provided here by Polo and Florence, two smart Continental artists, in a speciality act; the Sisters Hula, vocalists and dancers; and Harry Bennett, a capital comedian.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Manager, Mr. W. P. Wells; Assistant-Manager, Mr. J. W. Kilgour.—The charm of Van Biene's music is never-failing, and this week the talented artist is as great an attraction as ever in a sketch which affords him opportunity for several rôles. Another great favourite is Horace Mills, who appears in a farcical sketch with great success; Siems, coin and card manipulator, performs some excellent new tricks with fine effect; and Harvey's American Boys and Girls appear in an original scena, with immense success. Miss Ray Wallace's imitations of popular music-hall celebrities are wonderfully clever; and Miss Millie Payne's new songs, including an up-to-date "Chantecler" ditty, were fully appreciated. A clever and entertaining turn is provided by Tom and Marie Motramo; and other attractions are Stang's Steeplejack Cyclists, Beatty and Blanche, and Frank Cass.

NEWPORT.—LYCEUM.—A Message from Mars pays another most successful visit here. Mr. Fredk. Mouillot's company presents the play excellently staged and capitally acted. Mr. F. Vernon Travers as Horace Parker gives a fine, polished rendering of his part; Mr. W. H. Brougham as The Messenger from Mars gives a striking and powerful interpretation; Miss Rose Helene is a graceful Minnie Templar. The electrical effects reflect great credit on the stage-management.

EMPIRE.—The most imposing turn on this week's strong programme is Rameses, the Egyptian wonder worker, who produces a series of mystifying illusions. Barnard's Mannikins are very clever; Miss Millie Engler and company are seen in the humorous sketch Beauty and the Burglar; a fine gymnastic display is given by the Rhoda Brothers; King and Benson in a musical burlesque are very popular; Florence, the lady mimic, gives some fine impersonations of well-known performers; and John Macauley sings excellent songs in character.

NORTHAMPTON.—TEMPERANCE HALL.—Secretary, Mr. G. Skempton; Resident-Manager for Andrews' Pictures, Mr. Frank Lyndon.—The chief subject this week is the world-renowned Faust, a most excellent film; A Child's Forgiveness is a sweetly pathetic story; and The Dancing Girl of Butte is a vivid Western romance. Amongst the comic films are The Policeman's Revenge and Foolshead at the Ball. Miss Margaret Payne has up-to-date songs.

NORTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Lee.—For Wife and Kingdom is being presented here by Messrs. Matthew H. Glenville and Fred Osmond's capable company. As Captain Maximilian Lubeck Mr. Reginald T. Fox is deserving of high commendation; Mr. Frank Sutherland plays with ability as General Von Nestolde; Mr. Albert Guyon proves a capital Baron Breslaw; and Mr. Charles H. Gallier makes the most of Sergeant Offenbeck; as the Duchess Marie Miss Hettie Zillwood appears to considerable advantage; Miss Lillian Malvern as Esther is worthy of praise; and Miss Margaret R. Frame is clever as Camillie Von Nestolde. Some enjoyable comedy is introduced by Miss Alice Buckland as Nita Constadt, and Mr. Fred Osmond as Karl Ludhayr.

CENTRAL PALACE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. William Mould.—The pictures here continue to draw large audiences. A Change of Heart proves a great attraction, and Bobby Wideawake, An Apish Trick, A Maiden's Suicide, and None but the Brave are all well received. Sam Redfern, the favourite negro delineator, comes in for a very hearty reception; the Redmonds, vaudeville artists, meet with general approval; the Two Acadias prove themselves to be a smart comedy duo; and Percy Hannen's songs gain him applause.

NORWICH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Morgan.—This week here Ibsen plays are being produced. On Monday Hedda Gabler was given, the title-rôle being excellently rendered by Miss Octavia Kenmore, who deserves every praise for her powerful acting; Mr. Lovel was admirable in the part of the infatuated lover; Mr. Arthur Rodney did well as Judge Brack; Mr. Claud W. Sykes was good as Hedda's husband; and other characters were ably filled by Miss Daisy Rale, Miss Katherine Maynard, and Miss Gladys Everard. On Tuesday A Doll's House was given.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—Hal Forde, who heads the bill here, is well received; Harry Levaine keeps the house in continued laughter; the Borellis are entertaining comedy artists; Fred Sinclair and Gracie Whiteford are amusing in their duologue Getting Even; Stirling and Love are successful in their Harmony and Discord; Hattie Petro and Pete Leon are clever comedy gymnasts; Wilson Hallett evokes smiles as a child humorist; and Chorley and Connor score with their comic patter and eccentric dances. The Hippo. Bio. pictures complete.

THEATRE DE LUXE (Old Victoria Hall), St. Andrew's.—The electrical Theatres (1908), Limited, opened this place on Saturday last, under the management of Mr. Edward W. Burgess, as a cinematograph entertainment continuous performance. The place has been extensively decorated, and the pictures are of the best and most interesting.

NOTTINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Farney.—The charming children's play, Alice in Wonderland, is giving great pleasure to patrons here. Miss Ivy Sawyer plays Alice with delightful sweetness, her singing and dancing also being admired. Miss Girlie le Claire makes quite a lovable Cheshire cat; while Miss Bertha Schwartz (White Rabbit), Miss Doris Walker (March Hare), and Mr. Dan Leno, jun. (Caterpillar), all acquit themselves well. The haughty Duchess is represented by Miss Amy Fanchette, and the cook by Miss Yvonne Schofield. Mr. Franklyn Vernon is an amusing Mad Hatter; and a genuinely comical couple is seen in Messrs. Tom Graves and Ronald Henry as Tweedledum and Tweedledee. The trial of the Knave of Hearts creates hearty laughter, thanks to Miss Iris Damon and Mr. Edmund Goulding; and the ballets, under the supervision of Mlle. Lilian Leoffler, are cleverly executed.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Harry J. Crane.—Mr. Haklane Crichton's company, producing The Cingalee, is attracting large and appreciative audiences. In the rôle of Chambhuddy Mr. Jack Crichton uses with great effect his powers of comedy; Mr. Arthur Cartwright sings and acts well as Harry Vereker; and a successful Bobby is found in the person of Mr. Scott Cullen; whilst Messrs. Douglas Munro as Boobhamba and F. W. Ford as Sir Peter both work hard. Miss Florence Watson, gifted with a pleasing voice and presence, makes an excellent Nanoya; Miss Ida Ernest as Peggy Sabine does well; and Miss Pauline Hague as Lady Patricia adds no little to the success of the production.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—As musical specialists the Elliott Savonas hold high place, and their beautiful Palace of Orpheus attains a great success; Lydia Yeamans is equally at home in ballad and children's songs, her comedy being especially smart; Spry and Monti work assiduously in The Song-writer and Soubrette; John Scott and company have a clever sketch in Dolly's Deception; Wood, Wells, and Wilkins supply an entertaining vocal item; Florrie Gallimore gains in popularity by her bright songs; the Three Delaries produce some novel trapeze effects; Bertha Winder shows her expertness in dancing; and Phil Parsons proves an able comedian.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller.—A powerful dramatic sketch, entitled The Hold-Up, is played realistically by an excellent company, including Messrs. E. E. Ashby, E. Webster, and Paul Lovett. Acrobatic feats by the Havannas troupe arouse excitement; Cissie Carlette's delightful vocalism is well rewarded; Tom E. Finglass comes in for a good share of applause; Brady and Johnson have an entertaining sketch; Mozzetto provides some clever juggling; Avon and Crest make a smart pair of eccentrics; Will E. Stopit proves both an acrobat and comedian; the Sisters Edwardes sing and dance in pleasing manner; and Harry Vardon's ventriloquism is decidedly smart.

NUNEATON.—PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietors, Theatre and Entertainments Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brown.—Mr. John H. Tomkinson's Royal Gipsy company is here. The bill includes Elsie Rubins, in her clever performance on the wire; the Three Recars, in their smart acrobatic and gymnastic displays; Wee Winnie, a child singer and dancer of much skill; and the Two Potters, in their eccentric trampoline act.

OLDHAM.—GRAND THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge.—The visit of the Moody-Manners opera company in grand opera has been eagerly awaited, and on Monday evening a good house was present to give them a hearty welcome. The opera selected for the opening night was Saint-Saëns' Samson and Delilah, and a rich treat was provided. Mr. Philip Brozel appeared in the rôle of Samson, and his singing gained hearty applause; Mlle. Zelie De Lussan as Delilah enjoyed a reception no less hearty, her singing being enjoyed to the full; Mr. William Dever as the High Priest of Dagon appeared with great success; Mr. Charles Moorhouse, Mr. C. Magrath, Mr. F. Davies, Mr. W. Bland, and Mr. R. Woolland also sang well. The chorus, a very powerful one, gave an excellent rendering of the various numbers, as did the augmented orchestra under the bâton of Herr Richard Eckhold. The programme also includes Tannhäuser, Faust, Il Trovatore, Madame Butterfly, Carmen, and The Bohemian Girl.

COLOSSEUM THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—Her Marriage Vow is being played here by Mr. J. Forbes Knowles and company, who have been well received; Miss Violet Lytton as Kate Walters acts admirably; Mr. Knowles gives a fine portrayal of Ned Benton, whose enemy, Gilbert Carlton, is made sufficiently villainous by Mr. Edward Avinal; Miss Nellie Shirley makes a capital Hester Norton, and Miss N. Waddington is very good as Almira; Miss N. Clare as Maggie Clare is a lively and capable artist, and along with Mr. R. Nugent as Larry Leary, provides excellent comedy; Mr. William Burgess acts cleverly as William Walters, and Mr. Harry Momber as Daffy Dan is capital; Mr. Chauncy Morris is very amusing as Eben Chobb, and Messrs. Keith and Simpson do well as Jim Burke and Jenks.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—Mr. Ernest R. Abbott's company opened to good business in Sapho. Miss Ada Abbott as Fanny Legrand won much applause, and Mr. Edward Ouston's acting as Jean Gaussin was excellent; Mr. John Drake proved his ability as Henri Dechelette, and Mr. Stephen Crossley was very good as Flamant; Mr. Edwin Keene was an amusing Uncle Ceasaire, and Mr. John Lester ably represented Caoudal; Miss Florence North made a dainty Lucy, and Miss Ethel Tinsley was capital as Aunt Divonne; Mr. Weedon Ross playing smartly as Old Legrand.

ROYAL THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Kilrow.—The pictures are excellent, Little Blue Cap being interesting. The Enchanted Vase is cleverly portrayed, and a picture of the sugar cane industry is well worth seeing. The Rivalry of the Two Guides is depicted with success, and The Lady's Train causes much amusement. Mr. Roger Alwyn is very successful with his songs.

HIPPODROME.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. L. King.—On the Watch is a good dramatic story. A Western Maid is also very exciting; The Engadine Mountains provide some fine scenery, and the Fire at Sea is thrilling. Playing Patience, One Night and Then——, and Invigorating Electricity are also in the bill. Mr. King contributes "The Holy City."

OSBORNE HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. W. Hughes.—Faithful Unto Death is a capital film among a series of good dramatic and humorous pictures.

BROWN'S ASSEMBLY ROOMS.—Proprietor, Mr. W. Brown.—A capital bill includes Faithful Unto Death, Fire at Sea, Phaedra (a fine picture), and Taming a Husband. Comedy films also provided.

ODDFELLOWS' HALL (SHAW).—Proprietor, Mr. A. Ashworth.—The Patriot's Daughter is a thrilling dramatic film, and an everyday drama is Innocently Suspected, and an attractive list of pictures are greatly enjoyed.

OXFORD.—NEW THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. C. C. Dorrill; Assistant-Manager, Mr. G. T. Lucas.—This, the last week of Mr. Milton Bode's variety season here, is proving also the most successful. Harry Tate's company in Fishing tops the bill and causes roars of laughter; the Woodwards give a thrilling performance in their cycle balancing act, and included in the really first-class programme are Alf. Holt, the American mimic and comedian; Miss Ethel Stephenson, in vocal titbits at the piano; J. Milton Hayes, a breezy comedian in song, story, and monologue; C. H. Charlton, a clever conjuror; and the Brothers Leo; and the programme concludes with the Premier Imperial pictures, the subject being the Grand National.

EAST OXFORD THEATRE.—Lessees, East Oxford Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Stuart.—For the first three nights of this week Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stuart's stock company presented The House of Mystery, including (by special request) the resident-manager's popular wife, Miss Winifred Stuart. Mr. Karl Edwards was highly amusing as Teddy Tozer; Mr. Harry Leyton made a good impression as Roland Carr; and praise is due to Mr. E. Holland Day for a consistent rendering of Jack Desmond; Miss Elma C. Turner excelled with a clever portrayal of Muiga; Miss Vida Rogerson did well as Jenny Joyce; little Gladys Hunter was a capital Eve; Miss Mabel Parker was quite in her best form as Mrs. Tozer; and Miss Evie Conway worked strenuously as Margaret Carr; Miss Winifred Stuart gave a sympathetic study of Vera. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday was produced Uncle Tom's Cabin.

PAISLEY.—PAISLEY THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—The management is again devoting a week to varieties, and an excellent company has been engaged. A highly diverting sketch, Scots Folk's Wooin', is played by Lambeth and Robertson in characteristic style; the remarkable and clever show by Les Wambas, in their instrumental and trapeze act, arouses a deal of interest; Ray Raymond obtains much applause for her songs, rendered in dainty and pleasing style; Wren and Sadler are highly successful in their burlesque extravaganza; the Long Brothers are eccentric comedians and dancers; Mabel Cameron, in her song-scena, The Boy Scout, scores a success; Charles Ousley, coon vocalist and clog dancer, is a good turn; as a Scotch comedy artist Sheila McNeil is entertaining; and Græme Atholl is seen to advantage in his mystifying sleight-of-hand exhibition.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jack R. Bostock.—The Seven Perezoffs, who head the bill this week, present their original and hilarious juggling act, An Animated Supper at Maxim's, and meet with the applause they so well merit; the Brothers Corcorran furnish an exceedingly good and pleasing musical turn; Will Garvey, a popular and well-known comedian, causes a good deal of laughter; McLallen and Carson demonstrate their skill and ability on roller-skates by giving a marvellous exhibition; Stanley and Vandyke are responsible for much merriment in their novel comedy act; the Rosses win the heartiest applause for their artistic dancing; May B. Brilliant is a delightful vocal comedienne and dancer; Maxford and O'Neil are smart eccentrics and are well received; and the Bioscope forms, as usual, a pleasing feature of the evening's entertainment.

PENTRE.—TIVOLI.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Will Stone; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lacy Lyne.—The special feature of this week's bill is Carlton, whose sleight-of-hand card manipulation and mysterious cross proves a tremendous draw. Henry Herne and company in a powerful sketch, entitled The Colleen Bawn, arouse much enthusiasm; Allsop and Beckwith are clever comedy artists; a laughable turn is given by Newham and Latimer; Percy Wright scores as a ballad vocalist; and interesting films are shown on the Tivoliscope.

PERTH.—PERTH THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Aldridge.—Sears, the American illusionist, is a strong attraction here, the smartness of his tricks quite mystifying the audience. The Royal Tokio Troupe please both with the daring and grace of their performance; the Lavelle Bros. are clever comedy acrobats; Mr. A. J. Gamble is a quaint Scotch comedian and dancer; Miss Anita Wayman uses a well-trained voice with good effect; and Miss Marie Beresford, a pretty musical comedy artist, makes her chorus songs go.

PETERBOROUGH. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietor, Mr. Fred Karno; Manager, Mr. Percy Hart.—The Faludy Troupe of Hungarian acrobats top the bill, and are deservedly encored; Edith Chantler, vocalist, meets with approval; Neville Delmar, comedian, pays a return visit, and is highly successful; Daisy Graham's birds are clever and entertaining; Norman Osbourne is a novel ventriloquist; Salida and Vone, singers and dancers, have a hearty reception; and Tom Drew is a funny comedian.

PLYMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—Mr. Horace Lingard and Arthur Shelton's company staged on Monday Fanny and the Servant Problem, to which full justice was done. As Fanny Miss Beatrice Moreau was responsible for a brilliant exposition of a trying part; Miss Gwenlyan Cattell well impersonated the frigid and immovable housekeeper, Jane Bennett; the Misses Rita Sponti and Miriam Holt gave a delightful old-world study of the maiden aunts, the Misses Wetherell; as Martin Bennett, the butler, Mr. Horace Lingard was the recipient of much approbation; Mr. Russell Davis was admirably suited to the part of Lord Bantock; Mr. Wilfrid Compton made a shrewd and business-like manager of George Lent; and Mr. Roland Hope was a satisfactory Dr. Freemantle. The piece was preceded by a first-rate curtain-raiser, entitled The Admiral, of which Mr. Lingard was the central figure. Divorcons and Is Marriage a Failure? are also in the week's bill.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—Arthur Roberts and company in The Importance of Being Another Man's Wife are starred, and proved a very strong attraction, Mr. Roberts well sustaining his established reputation. The Five M.P.'s are responsible for an original and acceptable musical turn; the Three Cunards supply some finished and attractive dancing; Robins and Collier are hugely enjoyed in their diverting sketch, The Lady and the Porter; Daisy Hicks, comedienne, Witt Rhodes, comedian and vocalist, and Andie Burns, speciality dancer, are all of a high order of merit.

PONTEFRACT.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. Tom Diacoff.—Mr. Arnold Richardson and company are appearing with success in the comedy sketch Ferdie's Ma-in-Law. Teresa da Silva has a fine contralto voice, and sings tuneful ballads; De Lilo and Metz present a smart acrobatic and equilibristic act; the Brennans are clever dancers; Marion Scott is a good character vocalist; Will Candlish, the dusky Scotchman, appears in a comedy musical speciality; and Will Lindsay has made himself a decided favourite with his funny patter and songs. The Alexscope show some excellent animated pictures

PONTYPRIDD.—ROYAL CLARENCE.—Sole Owners, Messrs. Trenchard and Jones; Manager, Mr. Charles Trenchard; Acting-Manager, Mr. Willie Trenchard.—When it was Dark is presented to good houses by Mr. Oswald Cray and company. The piece is excellently staged and the effects are good. The various characters are worthily filled.

PORTH.—PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Poole's, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. W. Bynorth.—The Great Albus, who introduces a most sensational head slide on the wire, tops the bill here this week; Little Lillie Shaw is a miniature Vesta Tilley; Hyman Travers is a capital coster comedian; the Maningos are marvellous equilibrists; Edna Barrett, expert dancer, makes herself quite a favourite; Speedwell, the "Wizard Painter," is a great success; and the King's College Boys and the Palascope, with up-to-date pictures, are other attractions in a good bill.

PORTSMOUTH.—ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—A return visit of Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company, in Brewster's Millions, is being paid. Mr. Hutchison as the spendthrift, Monty Brewster, again wins golden opinions for his energetic impersonation; Miss Cicely Stuckey plays Peggy with charm and grace; Miss Lilias Earle as Mrs. Dande Mille is delightfully natural; Mr. A. P. Kaye is very successful as M. Bargie. The play is particularly well mounted, the steam yacht scene attracting great attention.

PRINCE'S.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Agate.—Miss Marie Dagmar and Mr. Percy Brown's company is paying a visit here with Geoffrey Langdon's Wife. Mr. John S. Milward acts the part of the hero in a vigorous and capable manner; Mr Wilson Coleman's interpretation of the villain, Felix Beverley, is very realistic; Miss Amy Ellam renders the part of the heroine, Mary, with great pathos and restraint; Mr. Percy Brown as Thomas, and Mr. Victor Raymond as Charles supply the humorous element. The following members of the cast deserve praise for their efforts; Mr. Creagh Hunt as Geoffrey Langdon, Mr. Cyril Grier as Col. Miles, Mr. W. Annesley as Arthur Bellairs, Miss Kathleen Magee as the Hon. Mrs. Sands, and Miss Winnie Goepel as Sweet Nancy.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Captain E. H. Warren-Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—The chief feature of an attractive programme is the visit of the Julius Gebhardt Troupe of Tegernseer, vocalists and dancers, who are enthusiastically applauded for their magnificent rendering of Bavarian mountaineer songs and dances; Cliff Diamond is a juvenile comedian and dancer, with a promising future. Lauri and Beatty present, with great success, a humorous, musical, and protean mélange; Zaleski is a remarkably clever contortionist; the Three San Remo Girls are charming and graceful dancers; Walter Wade is a versatile comedian; Paul Corrix and Co., perform clever equilibristic and juggling feats; Cissie Esdaile is a dainty soubrette; Payne's Bio-Photoscope concludes the performance.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—Sam Mayo is the top line this week; Fred Russell's humorous dialogue with his automaton, "Coster Joe," is very entertaining; Lennie and Hast's musical idyll, "The Maid of Polaria," is appreciated; Ida Barr's songs and choruses catch on; Josh Dixon in an amusing eccentric comedian; the Wagners are clever instrumentalists; a daring wire act is submitted by the Onllaw Trio; the Eglington Trio are wonderful hand-balancers; Will Driscoll's song and dancing win applause.

KING'S.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Claude Marner.—George Ali (the original "Buster Brown Dog") and company, in Papa's Day Off, heads the bill. As a wonderful animal impersonator, George Ali has few equals. His juvenile colleague, Tommy, likewise gains the favour of the audience. An amusing sketch, Her Husband; or, The Burglars, is presented by Walter Bird's company, Mr. Ernest Luck giving a highly humorous interpretation of a cowardly burglar; the Serenaders, in vocal scena, "Old Venice," are on a welcome return visit; the acrobatic act of the Carlens Trio is undoubtedly smart; Josie Delaine is admired for her singing and dancing, accomplished exponents of which are found in Pitts and Gould; W. E. Gillin's ventriloquial entertainment was highly amusing; the Oakes Duo present a laughable comedy act, Making a Man of Her; and Harriett Rose sings a good song.

GOSPORT THEATRE.—This new house of entertainment seems increasing in popular favour. The Idlers are a clever and refined vocal quartette; Maudie Carewe is a bright and diverting comedienne. The principal films from Ruffell's Bioscope are What's Bred in the Bone and The Cloister's Touch.

PRESTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, the Exors. of the late W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Alban Newton.—Mr. J. Constant's No. 1 company is paying a special visit with Florodora this week. Mr. Johnnie Schofield is admirably suited with the part of Tweedlepunch; Mr. R. Courtier Dalton gives a good rendering of Frank Abercoed; Mr. Johnnie Junior is a capital Capt. Donegal; and Mr. Jack Parker makes up well as Leandro. Mr. Stanley White is satisfactory as Cyrus Gilfain; Miss Daisy Lake is decidedly good as Dolores; and Miss Louie Danby is a dainty Angela. Miss Kate Leicester is repeatedly recalled for the very chic rendering of her songs, and is a decided hit as Lady Holyrood.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—The Royal Banzai Family of Japanese artists, including "Little Togo," give a most wonderful exhibition of balancing, &c., and meet with vociferous applause; Billy Mersom, a comedian with something new, is paying a welcome return visit; the Three Favorites, with their burlesque Park Pets, render some excellent selections; Geo. Hyam is a quaint comedian; Chiko performs equilibristic and contortion acts; Nellie Rose is a pleasing serio and dancer; Harry Kirk, comedian, contributes some catchy songs; Beatrice Bonnie, a charming comedienne with a really good voice, is well received; Stylo introduces some novelties in the shape of hoop "juggling"; and an excellent film on the Bio concludes.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page; General-Manageress, Mrs. M. M. Clarkson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. E. Clarkson.—Mr. Will Casey's company, in the drama An Unwedded Wife, is a good one, and Mr. Leonard Crowther makes a most accomplished villain as Philip Blackstone; Mr. Gilbert Elvin is a manly John Hawthorne. The comedy element is in the hands of Mr. Will Casey, a humorous Napoleon Boomer, and Miss Annie Mitchell, who puts much fun

Hall (an Attendant at the Theatre). As for the ladies, Miss Violet Lewis undertakes with much skill the portraiture of Topsy Grey, the actress, who demands everything to be in accordance with her slightest whim and fancy; Miss Nellie Christie is a big success in her presentation of Mrs. McTurtle, the strong-minded agitator for women's rights; Miss Lucie Conway's Rosa Matilda, the beloved of poetical Twigg, is a capital piece of work; and the same remark applies to Mrs. Mark Kinghorne (Mrs. Pounceby), Miss Agnes Allen (Susan, maid at the McTurtle's), and Miss Dorothy Sellen (an atendant at the Frivolity Theatre). The special scenery and properties, all by Mr. Francis H. Bull, are quite new, and the whole production is under the capable supervision of Mr. Alfred Hemming. The comedy is preceded each evening by the new one-act play of dramatic type A Fatal Likeness, by Tod Anderson. In this the characters are capitally assumed by Mr. Gerald Alexander (Doctor Hatton), Mr. Kendal Chalmers (Dick Hansard, a convict, and Felix Hansard, a financier, twin brothers), and Miss Lucie Conway (Elsie Holton). The scene is laid at Dartmoor, and deals with the escape from prison of a wrongly-sentenced convict and the subsequent tragic death of his guilty brother. It was well received.

RAWTENSTALL.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessees, The Manchester Electric Theatres Company, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. W. E. Renshaw.—Another good selection of pictures is seen here this week, and includes Scenes in Washington, U.S.A., Brussels, Jean Valjean's Life in the United States Army, Man Hunt, Skating Carnival, and Cured by a Tip.

READING.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Proprietors and Managers, Mr. Milton Bode and Mr. Edward Compton; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. A. Evans.—Charley's Aunt is again here, played in first-class style by Mr. Brandon Thomas's company. Mr. Stanley Cook is inimitable as the soi-desant Charley's Aunt, his quaint impersonation causing roars of laughter; Mr. John Sims Woolley as Jack Chesney and Mr. Robert Burnett as Charles Wykeham both sustain their parts well; Mr. MacCausland Stewart acts effectively as Sir Francis Chesney; Mr. Roy Byford is capital as the portly and amorous Mr. Spettigue; Mr. Sydney Compton is good as the stolid College Scout; Miss Audrey Stafford is admirable as the real Donna Lucia, and Miss Ruth Henton as Kitty Verdun, Miss Phyllis Back as Amy Spettigue, and Miss Bertha Wilson as Ela Delahay are all charming representatives of their respective characters. The play is preceded by The Colour-Sergeant, which is well acted by Messrs. S. Compton, R. Burnett, C. A. R. Shum, and Roy Byford, and the Misses Ruth Henton and Nancy Harding.

THE PALACE.—Managing Director, Mr. G. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco; Stage-Manager, Mr. A. Burridge.—J. G. Graham and Zerlina Harrington appear here successfully in a dramatic episode, entitled Olga's Oath, Miss Harrington's impersonation being very powerfully rendered; Unita and Paul gave a novel gymnastic display; Fred Elton, an old favourite, appears in his popular scena Life on an Ocean Liner; Carlotta Levey sings very effectively; Johnson and Hart are dexterous hoop manipulators; the Boriskis, comedians and patterers, give an amusing turn; Seener and Fridkins, Imperial Russian Troupe, who are attired in rich national costumes, give a good exhibition of Russian singing and dancing; and the Bioscope, as usual, concludes an excellent show.

THE NEW CENTRAL SKATING RINK in West-street is now approaching completion, and will shortly be opened.

THE VAUDEVILLE ELECTRIC THEATRE, West's Picture Palace, and Bio Picture Land are giving good shows of living pictures, and are all being well patronised.

ROTHERHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Nacnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Holbery Hardy.—Was She to Blame? is presented by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley, Travis Green, and Arthur Hinton's company. Mr. G. Kimberley, who is a local favourite, is highly successful as William Clark; and Mr. George Keene is very smart as Captain George Courtney. Mr. Henry Rutland does well as John Norman; and Mr. Clavering Craig is deserving of mention as Frank Roselle. Mr. F. Wilson Lowther scores as Dr. Forbes; and Mr. Fred Astley is seen to advantage as Jim Harford. Miss Florence Steyne effectively depicts the part of Alice Firearms; and Miss Nita Owen is sprightly as Sarah Swales. Miss Ellen Beverley is deserving of mention as Mary Norman; and Miss Constance Laurie is a capital Lillian Norman. Miss L. Addison (Mrs. F. G. Kimberley) as Mrs. Kate Rosselle gives a clever portrayal of a difficult part.

HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. E. Smith; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur R. Hollands.—James Hare and company present a clever dramatic and humorous episode, Wrong 'Uns; Alberto Troupe of lady equilibrists give a highly finished act; Mooney and Holbein are deservedly recalled; Edith St. Clare is a pleasing comedienne; Yost and York give a very clever and novel military imitative act; Sauleron Wonders are well received; Madge Allen is a sprightly and dainty dancer and comedienne; Clifton and Gibson are most amusing eccentrics; John Partington, the singing mill lad, is deservedly applauded; and the Hipposcope projects an admirable film, Building Trans-Continental Railway.

RYDE.—ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, The Cinematograph Industrial Corporation, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. George Aubert.—The patrons of the Theatre Royal continue to be well catered for, the films shown being interesting and up to date. Miss Lettie Lingard, soubrette and dancer, is a great favourite.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES' THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Miss Winifred Ward and her company are delighting audiences with The Sins of a City. The heroine, Seaweed, is excellently presented by Miss Winifred Ward; Mr. Arthur L. Read makes a capital hero of Sandy McDonald; Mr. Maurice Jones duplicates the parts of the twin brothers Joe and Jasper in an able manner; Mr. Mark Fenton as Jonathan Blyme and Miss Minnie Millwarde as Midge provide a lot of comedy business; Mr. Harold Heath, Mr. Morris Maud, Mr. Victor Du Cane, Miss Wingold Lawrence, Miss Mona Leslie, and Miss Gipsy Alexander give good studies of their various parts.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director and Licensee, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. R. H. Lee.—Austin Rudd, comedian, has some comical songs, which keep the house in roars of laughter; the funny animal impersonations in the sporting absurdity, The Cockney Huntsman, by Queen and Le Brun, are very clever; One Night Only, by Henry Carlton and company, is very smart; the Burnells, comedy artists, are well received. Other good turns include Harry Taft, whistler and amusing patterer; Ethel Thomas, soprano vocalist; Carina Sisters, in musical act; J. G. Aitken, Scotch comedian; and Maron Duo in their three-bar act.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H Broadhead and Son; General-Manager, Mr. H. Winstanley; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. J. Boyle.—Spasms is an extravaganza by Edward Thano which catches on; Leick and Keith (John S. and Mabel) give a clever cornet, &c., performance; Miss Eva Chadwick captivates the audience with her charming singing; Five Bohemians are capital musical entertainers; Ida Keesanly's troupe of fox terriers show excellent training; Rob Gilmour, comedian, is a favourite; Bert Raymond, a quaint singer of quaint songs; the Martons (Louise and George), in Sweethearts Still; and Penstone and San-go, in vaudeville varieties, fill a most enjoyable programme.

OPERA HOUSE AND ASSEMBLY ROOMS, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Shepherd.—The Regent New Animated Pictures (twice nightly) include a number of effective films. "Some day when dreams come true" is an illustrated song by Mr. Tom Sherlock, who is lustily assisted in the chorus by the crowded houses.

CENTRAL HALL (Blackfriars-road).—Proprietors, Messrs. Matt. Raymond; Manager, Mr. A. H. Gilbert.—Pictures twice nightly are drawing big houses, who are also entertained by songs from Mr. A. H. Gilbert.

NEW CENTRAL HALL (Pendleton).—Proprietor, Mr. Thos. Whiteley; Manager, Mr. Gilbert Bruce.—Full houses are (twice nightly) the rule here. Among the pictures are The Boatman's Daughter, Balloon Trip Over Turin, A Torpedo Attack, and Hamlet.

SCARBOROUGH.—THE AQUARIUM.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. W. Kitchingman; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Bench.—A good programme here includes the Pichel troupe of acrobats, Ben Richards (baritone), Harry Colton (comedian), J. H. Carney (comedian and stilt dancer), Wyndham and Kitty (wire artists), James Brady (eccentric joker), and Dalvere and Wallace in By the Sideboard.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock.—A Royal Divorce is being excellently played here by Mr. W. W. Kelly's company, including Miss Violet Ellicott as Josephine, Mr. Keith Fraser as Napoleon, Mr. J. H. Roberts as Talleyrand, Miss Winnie Tempest as Marie Louise, Mr. George Hudson as Grimaud, Miss Dorothy Smith as Stephanie, Mr. Ernest Plumpton as General Augereau, Mr. Chas. Stirling as Marquis de Beaumont, and Miss Dorothy Hudson as the Little King of Rome.

THE SPA.—Proprietors, Cliff Bridge Co.; Manager, Mr. H. T. Chambers.—Baroness von Eckardstein's private band (conductor Mr. C. H. Allen) supplies excellent music here, being ably assisted by Mr. Oldbury Brough (humorous and musical entertainer), and Mr. B. B. Wilson and Miss Ethel Beetlestone (vocalists).

SEACOMBE.—KING'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Kiernan.—Miss Olga Andre's company is here this week with The Great Awakening. Mr. Chris A. Olgar does well as James Selby; and Mr. Basil Mitchell gets in some capital heavy work as Jack Merton; Miss Ethel Tooney proves her worth as an emotional actress; and Miss Hetty Farrell sustains the lighter portions in conjunction with Mr. Walter Rousby as Billy Brass. Mr. Charles H. Mortimer acts strongly as Capt. Harry Lambert; Mr. Tom Arkinstall scores as Guy Logan; and Miss Olga Andre is successful as Lola Selby.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. A. C. Harrison; Manager, Mr. Wallace Childs.—A Woman's Past is being successfully presented here by Messrs. Clifford Hamilton and Charles Locke's company. David Heath is powerfully depicted by Mr. Percy Dawsone; Mr. Charles Locke finds ample scope for his ability as Frank Dellannoy; Clement Harper is efficiently embodied by Mr. A. Hamilton Warden; the villainy of Uriah Craven is effectively shown by Mr. James McLeod; Miss Dora Pass submits a capital portrayal of Bessie; Clara Darrell is skilfully enacted by Miss Phyllis Elton; Miss Cherry Veheyne as Dorothy Heath wins praise; Kate is well played by Miss Mabel Northam; and as Mrs. Brown Miss Laura Bitterne is good. The mounting of the play is admirable.

SHEERNESS.—HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Adam Seebold.—Her Fatal Marriage is being presented here by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hinton and Mr. Travis Green. Mr. Jerrold Heather makes an effective Zaco Malleto; Miss Hilda Shirley a forcible Myra Malleto; Mr. Colin Heather a studious Wilfred Grey, who is well supported by Miss Winifred Rutland as Lily; and Mr. Gerald Byrne as Paul, the half-witted, is decidedly good.

SHEFFIELD.—LYCEUM THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont.—Bernard Shaw's whimsical play You Never Can Tell began a return visit on Monday. All the characters were cleverly acted by Messrs. Platt and Towers' company, special merit distinguishing the work of Miss Ida Southern as Dolly Clandon, Miss Winifred Beach as Gloria, Miss Edith Hunter as Mrs. Clandon, Mr. Graham Colmer as Valentine, Mr. Claude Haviland as the Waiter, Mr. Geoffrey Wilkinson as Philip; and Mr. J. Edward Pearce as Fergus. The mounting was first rate.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont; Assistant-Manager, Mr A. Henfrey-Aldred.—Mr. and Mrs. Kimberley's excellent company began a second week here on Monday, and appeared before a large audience in A Sister's Sin. The scenery was very effective, and the artists received hearty applause, Miss Cissie St. Elmo, Miss Scudamore, and Miss Edie Macklin being cordially greeted by their many local admirers.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—Driving a Girl to Destruction, the new realistic drama by Mrs. Morton Powell, was performed to a crowded house on Monday, when the capital scenery and admirable acting of Mr. Morton Powell's dramatic corps created a favourable impression. The two sisters, Ruth and Ruby, were acted in a graceful manner and with emotional ability by Miss Kate Sydney and Miss Maud Powell; Miss Maggie Stewart was a lively Bessie Butts; Miss Eva Norman secured keen sympathy as the cripple Ned; Mr. Leslie Austin earnestly portrayed the character of Robert Ray, a fine representative of the Mercantile Marine; Mr. F. C. Leighton was effective as Lucas List; and a striking character sketch was Mr. Henry Scathard's Octavius Screw; a distinct contrast being Mr. William Berson's study of a model clergyman. Other characters were well played by Messrs. Edward Swinton, Wallace Curnock, Mackintosh Clyde, W. Whitty, G. S. Darling, Miss Mabel Kelling, Miss Edith Taylor, Miss Rachel Rhodes, and Miss Doris Drude.

EMPIRE PALACE.—The Moss Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—An attractive variety programme was submitted to a big audience on Monday, the performers being Mr. Jack Pleasants, a comic singer with a quaint and laughter-provoking personality; the Two St. Johns; Miss Rhoda Paul, character vocalist; the well-known Kellino Troupe of acrobats in a humorous and smart tumbling act; Miss Madge Carew, Mr. Russell, and clever children in a pleasing little sketch; Mr. Nelson Jackson, drawing-room entertainer; Humsti-Bumsti, the screaming knockabout act; Mr. Tom Moore, comedian; Mr. Harry Friskey, a laughable burlesque juggler; and the handsome Parisian artist, Mlle. Liane D'Eve in catchy chansonettes and piquant sartorial displays. The Bioscope pictures concluded the generous programme.

THE HIPPODROME.—The Thomas Barrasford Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Poole.—Crowded houses are the rule here with the following talented artists: The Six Brothers Luck and company in H.M.S. Perhaps; Mr. James Basnett, vocalist; Miss Iris Banfield, comedienne; Mr. G. S. Melvin, vocalist; Miss Phœbe Mercer's farce company in Mistakes Will Happen; Mr. Lloyd Morgan, vocalist; Miss Iris Fox, serio-comic; Hayes and Merritt, novelty artists, as the "bounding tramps"; Mr. Ernest Rees, vocal comedian; the Eight Elves, vocalists and dancers; the Hippodrome artistic pictures; and Mr. Arthur Aldridge, ballad vocalist.

SHREWSBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPO.—Lessee and Director, Mr. W. Yates Gregory; General-Manager, Mr. Thos. Baugh.—Mr. F. R. Benson's admirably balanced North company is here this week in a welcome and appreciated revisit, playing Hamlet, The Tempest, King Lear, The Taming of the Shrew, King Richard the Second, As You Like It, and Macbeth. Hamlet was finely staged and enacted on Monday evening. Mr. Henry Herbert, the leading male actor of the company in the répertoire, took the part of the Prince of Denmark with consummate ability, his elocution, interpretation, and moderation being consistently commendable; Mr. John Cairns was talented as Claudius; Mr. Robt. Atkins played the part of Polonius with success, Mr. John Hood merited high praise as Horatio; Mr. Cyril Sworder made a thoroughly capable Laertes; Mr. Sharrow as First Player acquitted himself creditably; Miss Lilo Barclay was effective as Second Player; Mr. Atkins made an exceedingly good First Gravedigger; Mr. Chas. Sparrow as the Ghost of Hamlet's father acted with care and ability; Miss Kate Turner as Queen Gertrude acted conscientiously and well throughout; Miss Gladys Vanderzee spoke her lines with expression and gave a feeling interpretation of her exacting part; Miss Dorothy Radford took her part in commendable fashion as the Player Queen; and the minor parts were capably sustained.

SMETHWICK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. Barnard; Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson.—Miss Renee Glendower and company supply the attraction here in What a Man Made Her. Dr. Mark Haven is befittingly portrayed by Mr. J. M. Olivert, who delivers his lines with good effect; Mr. George Arthur depicts the scheming Rupert Danescombe in a skilful manner; Mr. Martin Alwyne essays the character of Sir Ernest Cavendish in convincing style; Mr. Bert Goldin as the conventional Jew moneylender with a tendency towards comicality is received with roars of approval; and as Deborah Miss Tessa Myers makes a prepossessing Jewess. Miss F. Russell Spiers is a forcible Dowager Countess; Miss Stella Carmichael puts plenty of go into her impersonation of Lady Thora; and Miss Renee Glendower gives a finished delineation of Jane McAllister.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. B. Pareezer; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—The Girl from Kay's has attracted good "houses" this week. Miss Florrie Millington gave a pleasing performance of the title-rôle; and the Misses B. Courtenay and J. Vere are clever as Ellen Chalmers and her maid, the latter dancing well. Mr. Henry Adnes as Max Hoggenheimer is particularly good; and other successful members of the cast are Messrs. J. A. Latham as Harry Gordon, R. Andean as Percy Fitzthistle, B. H. Heron as the porter, and W. H. Pink the page.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Southend Hippodrome, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lewis de Burgh.—The artists here this week are Eli Hudson; Olga and Elgar, whose flute-playing is creating quite a sensation; Ian Colquhoun, bari tone vocalist; Mart and Pepe, tumblers and head-to-head balancers; Daisy James, comedienne; Bros. Hobs, comedy acrobats; and Flo Cecil, comedienne and dancer.

SOUTHPORT.—OPERA HOUSE, WINTER GARDENS.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Percy Hutchison; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Clarkson.—Mr. Mouillot's capable company is appearing in two musical comedies, A Greek Slave and The Geisha, the former being presented to a large and appreciative audience on Monday. In the part of Heliodorus Mr. Edward Carlton is irresistibly quaint; Miss Adela Crispin was very successful, both histrionically and vocally, in her impersonation of Isis; Marcus Pomponius had a capital representative in Mr. Leonard Braham; Miss Aimee Gray depicted Maia in a charming manner, her vocal numbers being very well rendered; Mr. Walter J. Douglas submitted a capital study of the lovelorn Diomed; Mr. Sam Lockridge very efficiently represented the character of Archids; Miss Clarice Eldon was good in every way as Antonia; and Miss Renee Reel introduced some effective dancing.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. John Coulson.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Draycott are presenting Her Path of Sorrow here. Mr. Charles Draycott is seen to advantage as Richard Burfield; Mr. Frank Eaglesfield makes an effective villain; Mr. Theo Balfour does well as Markham Ferrars; Mrs. Charles Draycott is charming as Pauline; Nellie Rayne is sweetly depicted by Miss Fay Garnet-Vane; Miss Nellie Freeland is good as Ma'mselle Lucille; and good comedy is introduced by Miss Daisy Carlton as Polly Green, Mr. Will Hook as Tommy Onions, and Mr. Wilson Saunders as P.C. Bridge.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, the South Shields Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ernest Bridgen.—The Abdullah Arabs, a marvellous troupe of acrobats, give a grand pyramid building and tumbling performance here; the Kratons submit an original hoop-rolling novelty "Hoopland"; Harry Herbert is a funny eccentric comedian; Fatmah Diard, prima donna, is well received, and sings in good style; and some good illustrated songs are introduced by Olive Lizette. Other items are supplied by Conan and Doyle (comedians and dancers), Musical Silvo (soloist on the musical glasses and the Silvo chimes), and C. J. Johnson (the Black Diamond). The Bioscope is attractive.

SPENNYMOOR.—CAMBRIDGE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. David Collins.—Heading the bill of varieties here is Tom Bassett, Shakespearean burlesque actor and vocalist. The Three Clarks in their speciality act of club throwing, juggling, &c., are good; Tom N. Mills as a descriptive vocalist is well received; Miss Nellie Langtry is a good contralto vocalist; and other turns of note are Fred Conway, the Two Midgets, and Lilah Brett.

STALYBRIDGE.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. K. Stewart McDonald.—Rollicking Rory is delighting audiences here. Mr. Chalmers Mackey is in the title-rôle, and mirth is prevalent; and Mr. J. P. McBride is an excellent Desmond Fitzgerald.

ST. HELENS.—THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. A. McLeod Loader; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Harry E. Johnson.—Mr. T. Edward Ward's play His Real Wife is here this week. A fine impersonation of Martin Avondale is given by Mr. J. W. Evelyn; Mr. Clifford Rean is seen to advantage as Herbert Barton; Miss Ward as the heroine, Rose Avondale, presents a touching picture; as Lady Sybil Wilton Miss Gabrielle Romero plays with power; Miss Clarrie Yandell is a pretty and effective Betty Tuttlebee; Messrs. Charles Yorke (Colombe) and Mr. Walter Walmesley (Alf Snickers) are both successful in the portrayal of a pretty pair of rogues; and Mr. T. Edward Ward is excellent as Simon Bletherall.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. Leo Weisker.—A fine performance is given by the great Stavordale Quintette, which is greatly enjoyed; Victor Kelly, assisted by Miss Agnes, causes much laughter; Fred Spencer's facial contortions are excellent; Archie Royer's acrobatic feats are applauded; Pearce and Ward's patter is funny; and T. E. Johnstone's songs are always popular. Will Nosam also sings well. The Hipposcope picture concludes.

ST. LEONARDS-ON-SEA.—AMERICAN PALACE PIER.—General-Manager, Mr. M. Leopold.—Mr. Montague Lane and his brilliant little company appear in Still Waters Run Deep. The scheming adventurer, Captain Hawksley is remarkably well undertaken by Mr. Montague Lane; Mr. Hubert Woodward handles the part of Cotter with exceptional ease and skill; and Mr. Norman Cannon, in the character of John Mildmay, gives a natural rendering. Dunbilk is well portrayed by Mr. William Mallalieu; Mr. Scott Fraser and Mr. Leo St. Clair ably represent Langford and Markham; in the part of Mrs. Sternhold Miss Ida Chapman shows a delicacy and deep feeling; and Miss Gertrude Savage is excellent as Jessop. In the part of Mrs. Mildmay Miss More Dunphie gives an interpretation conspicuous for its winsomeness and charm.

STOCKPORT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—Pete has been much appreciated by large audiences. A fine and impressive impersonation of Pete is given by Mr. Frederick Victor; Philip Christian is sustained with marked power by Mr. Alfred Lugg; Mr. Ellis J. Preston makes a capital Cæsar Creegan; Nancy is pleasingly portrayed by Miss Alys Eden; and Miss Constance Bachner acts with pathos and feeling as Kate Creegan.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, the Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—That genuinely funny comedian Tom Foy and his company in The First of April evoke hearty laughter; the Three Borella Brothers perform clever gymnastic feats; Harry Bickley entertains with his patter; the Brothers Obo are amusing comedians; Amy Bellwood is a pleasing comedienne; and Harry Lowther, Hulo Hodgson, and company present a laughable sketch entitled Barmaids with much success.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—CASTLE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson; Acting Manager, Mr. Cecil Imeson.—Messrs. Milton Bode and John Hart present their first-class company here in Les Cloches de Corneville. Mr. E. St. Alban scores a great success as Gaspard; Miss Vera Dorien makes a charming Gaspard's niece; and Miss Gurney Delaporte as Serpolette sings and acts well.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Stainton.—The Venetians appear in a charming act, in which the arts of sculpture, singing, and painting are artistically presented. Bonnetti and Corrie, in an eccentric juggling act, Derrington Family, in a sensational cycling act, Hilda de Grey, a pleasing vocalist, the O'Hanlon Trio, in a scena, Romps in a Drawing-room, Dorma Morgan, a clever comedienne, Jack Holland, with popular songs, Tom and Eileen Melbourne, in a burlesque sketch, and the Bioscope are other attractions.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—The Heathen and the Christian is played here this week. Mr. Frank Adair appears with distinction as Eli, the Avenger; Miss Louie Adair is an excellent Mira Sampson; Miss Stanley Burt is good as May Berresford; and Mr. Ellis Carlyle deserves mention as George Berresford.

STOKE-ON-TRENT.—THE HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr Arthur Burton.—The outstanding feature of the week's programme is the Gaumont Co.'s film production The Martyrdom of Adolf Beck. Juliat Mack, the talkative Dame, proves diverting; the Shadowgraphic act of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wilde is one of the best in its line; and also to be noted are Bill and Bellay; the Dancing Gilberts; Godfrey Price; the Unites; and Charles North.

STOURBRIDGE.—ALHAMBRA THEATRE, VARIETY HALL, AND PICTURE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Douglas C. Phelps.—Mint and Mart, smart paper manipulators, head the bill. Ike Bradley, Hebrew comedy cyclist, is very clever; Carrie Dale is a pretty dancer and refined comedienne; Harding and Preston foot the bill with a capital sketch called The Editor and the Sub; and the pictures include The Last Deal, The Postman, Foolshead's Crime, The Ugliest Queen on Earth, and Calino Plays Billiards.

SUNDERLAND.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. S. F. Davidson; General-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Townrow.—Mr. Alexander Leighton's company in Havana are attracting well-filled houses. Mr. William Pringle gives an intensely humorous performance as Nix, and, in conjunction with Mr. R. Edwards as Reginald Brown, arouses endless laughter; Miss Hebe Bliss is given a most flattering reception for her charming impersonation of Consuelo, the able artiste rendering her several numbers in meritorious style; Miss Winnie Brown finds general favour as Anita; an excellent Isabelita is provided by Miss Edith Barwell; the Don Aldolfo of Mr. Cyril K. Percival proves a source of merriment; Mr. Chas. Boulting is good as the scheming Diego; Mr. J. Brian Ridout is well placed as Frank Charteris; Mr. Savill Foster distinguishes himself as Jackson Villers; and worthy support comes from Mr. Lauri Aster.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Eeden; Acting-manager, Mr. George Dunn.—Mr. J. E. Barnes' company is presenting The Drama of Life. Miss Pattie Hastings is in the rôle of Sylvia Beech, a part for which she is admirably suited; Miss Beatrice Hudson makes much of her character of Betty Black; and as Robert Beech Miss Bessie Chetwyn proves to be a clever juvenile. Mr. Grantham Woods gives a fine performance as Harry Beech; and Mr. George B. Davis is good as Richard Brenton. Villainy has capable exponents in Messrs. Archie Helsby (Walter Beech), Marshall Meade (Jack Lawton), and George Bryne (Count de Foi). The humour is in the excellent hands of Miss Alice Oliver as Lady Jane, and Mr. Sydney C. Cranston.

AVENUE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Eeden.—The Delroys, American comedians, head the bill and give a very acceptable item; Chas Tempest is an eccentric comedian of a high order; and Joe Dixon proves himself a master of mimicry. The principal picture is Cowboy and Squaw, a fine dramatic item.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managers, Hamilton's Picture and Variety Company.—The Paul Kramer Trio is here with clever head-balancing and trapeze work; Seely, West, and Rhodesia, in juggling, music, and comedy, delight all; and Horace White gives a pleasing ventriloquial turn at the piano. Deer Feeding in Bavaria is a very interesting film.

EMPIRE THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Eeden.—Heading a good bill here is Mephisto, illusionist, who completely mystifies his audiences. The Four Mayos are very amusing in their roller-skating demonstration; Mabel Sinclair stands out among ventriloquists; Verno and Voyce are seen and heard to advantage in a clever sporting act; the Real McKays, juvenile artists, gave an entertaining turn, introducing skilful dancing; Elmo and Rego submit an uproarious knockabout act in capital style; Lydia and Amely dance in good style; and Frank Lynne is an entertaining comedian.

SWINDON.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Wiltshire Entertainments Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Manners.—Mr. Junius Booth and company are here with Way out West. Mr. Booth is a manly Jack Hamlin; Col. Starbottle is successfully undertaken by Mr. Wm. Kenion; Mr. Harry Bannister is effective as Bat Masterton; Mr. J. Sanger provides a capable impersonation of Abner Byers; Jim Harkins is forcefully portrayed by Mr. Millar Anderson; Mr. Chas. H. Brooke sustains the part of Ah Foo with ability; Mr. Walter Langford is very good as Monte Pete; Miss Alice West gives a sympathetic rendering of Helen Masterton; and Miss Arethusa Byers is quaintly enacted by Miss Emmeline Rosselle.

COUNTY ELECTRIC PAVILION.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur E. Melborne.—In addition to several humorous and singing films the programme includes those of The Ascent to the Sea of Ice, Romance of Insect Life, Cagliostro, The Newly Weds, Trained Birds, and The Cowboy and the Squaw.

TODMORDEN.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Richard Dewhirst.—Mr. Edmund Tearle is here with his répertoire company, and on Monday presented The Three Musketeers to a good house. As D'Artagnan Mr. Tearle was all that could be desired, and was ably supported by Miss Kate Clinton as Miladi; King Louis XIII. of France and his consort were ably depicted by Mr. P. P. Millar and Miss Mary Campbell; Athos, Porthos, and Aramis were exceedingly well portrayed by Mr. Stuart Black, Mr. Ernest Lodge, and Mr. Henry Pettitt; Mr. Horace Price was good as Richelieu; Miss Constanti A. Brooks was a delightful Constance; and Mr. Richard Henry Lace was funny as Boniface. Other plays in the week's bill are Jeanie Deans, The Merchant of Venice, Hamlet, East Lynne, and It's Never Too Late to Mend.

OLYMPIA PICTURE PALACE.—Proprietors, Messrs. A. and H. Andrews; Manager, Mr. Chas. Tyers.—A capital series of pictures is exhibited here to full houses. Among films of a dramatic nature are False Oath and In Little Italy. My Lady Nicotine is a fine scientific picture, and a Silkworm series proves instructive. Much fun is afforded by Vagabond's Adventure, Mustard Plaster, &c. Mr. F. Gilmartin is enthusiastically applauded for his two illustrated songs.

TON-Y-PANDY.—ROYAL.—General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth.—Mr. C. Watson Mill's company is appearing in The Love of the Princess. Prince Conrad is admirably portrayed by Mr. F. Harvey; and the villainous Count Danilo is cleverly played by Mr. R. Vane. King Josef is safely entrusted to Mr. Jno. Burton; Mr. B. Bould makes the most of Lieut. Orlans; Miss Dorothy Haigh gives a skilful interpretation of Princess Idalia; and Miss M. Steeple shines as Lady Irene.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Will Stone; General-Manager, Mr. Edgar Harper.—Mr. E. C. Gittin's Condensed Opera Company meets with great success; Karr and Kooney soon make themselves popular; the Three Langfords are well received; and Milton and Horton and Bert Williams also appear. The leading film depicts The Galley Slave.

EMPIRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Walter Wright.—Topping the bill in a satisfactory style are the Sisters Macarte. Pallas and Cussic create great laughter; Tiny Arnold takes well; and Perrier is a new star ventriloquist. Sandon, Jack Warman, and Tony Freedman do well. The Empiroscope shows some good pictures.

TORQUAY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Alderman W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearce.—Messrs. Lyn Harding and Sydney Cooper's company is making a welcome reappearance here in The Flag Lieutenant. Mr. Edgar Kent in the title-rôle is excellent; Mr. George Mallett makes a typical Admiral; Mr. Montague Love is seen to advantage as Major Thesiger; as the two Midshipmen, Mr. Hugh Wakefield and Mr. Olaf Hytten introduce much quiet humour; Mr. John Wheatman does well as Mr. Palliser; the part of Mrs. Cameron is undertaken by Miss Florence Jackson, who is as popular as ever; and Miss Dorothy Ripley is a charming Lady Hermione.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. Welton Dale; Manager, Mr. Harry Ball.—This week a return visit of When Knights Were Bold is once more being well received, Mr. Langdon Bruce scoring a great success as Sir Guy de Vere.

SKATING PALACE.—Although the season is drawing to a close, the fancy dress carnival last week showed no falling off in the number of competitors or the excellence and variety of the costumes. The carnival was a great success.

GREAT HALL.—On Tuesday evening an amateur performance of Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme was successfully given in aid of the local hospital.

WAKEFIELD.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Sherwood and Co.—Messrs. Dottridge and Longden's company is appearing this week in the drama The Midnight Mail. The leading parts of Harry Steyne and Mary Steyne are admirably filled by Mr. John F. Traynor and Miss Trissie Humphries.

NEW EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Sherwood and Co.; Manager, Mr. S. H. Laycock.—The programme this week includes Ted Karno and company, pantomimical sketch artists; Sid Cotterell and company in a sketch entitled The Substitute; Elroy, the armless wonder; Billy Richardson, negro comedian and stump orator; the Mosaics, comedy couple; Bert Edwards, silfleur and raconteur; and George Castrey, actor-vocalist.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—Mlle. Jenny Mills, kaleidoscopic dancer, heads the bill, and is supported by the Gwynne troupe, sketch artists; James Hawkes, actor-vocalist; Dan Hendy, acrobatic comedian; Denny and Leo, knockabout comedians; Nora Doone, speciality dancer; and Mundill and Maude, in a farcical sketch.

WALLSEND.—BOROUGH THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Hugh Duffy.—The Denaro Brothers, acrobats, &c., head the bill, and are accorded a flattering reception. Blanche and Zeyna prove to be trick cyclists of exceptional ability; the Ellimans are seen to advantage in a refined musical act; Flo Melville, comedienne, is a dainty singer; Wall Langtry, comedian; T. W.'s Tiny Stars in song and dance; the Sisters Lillian, ballad vocalists; the Crown Trio, vocalists; and the Carney Brothers, comedians, also contribute to the programme.

LONDON AND SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, April 11, the Musical Comedy, by Paul Rubens and Austin Hurgon, entitled

"MISS HOOK OF HOLLAND."

Miss Hook's reception on Monday evening was exceptionally enthusiastic, and as personified by Miss Marie Studholme she has provided attraction enough to crowd the capacious King's Theatre nightly. Apart therefrom, there is sufficient brightness in the entertainment furnished by Mr. Paul Rubens' delightful comedy to satisfy the most capricious of playgoers. The dialogue is smart and the music is of Mr. Paul Rubens' best, some very melodious music being included. Encores are most plentiful, and in many instances well deserved; while the Dutch scenery and costumes add much picturesqueness to the piece. Miss Marie Studholme, as stated above, is an attraction in herself, and in the part of Miss Sally Hook she proves herself to be a distinct gain both as actress and singer, her songs being prettily rendered and re-demanded. Mr. Frederick Hobbs deserves recognition for a capital impersonation of Captain Adrian Paap, his fine voice being heard to great advantage. As Lieut. de Coop, Mr. Lacey Mills is excellent; and Mr. Charles Ross is a capable Ludwig Schnapps. Most original and exceedingly comical is Mr. Alfred Wellesley in the character of Mr. Hook of Holland, and his performance is a thoroughly enjoyable one. A huge success is made by Mr. Frank H. Crimp as Bandmaster Van Vuyt, the lover of Miss Hook, his songs receiving ample applause. Mr. Burford Thorp as Hans Maas, Mr. Frank de Lane as Hendrick Draek, and Mr. Len Neville as Van Eck, are all equally efficient. Mr. Fred Lyne creates a good deal of merriment by his clever embodiment of the loafing Simon Slinks. Showing marked ability and skill, Miss Maud Denny's impersonation of Mina is one of the gems of the comedy. Her clear delivery of the songs allotted to her is alone worthy of the utmost praise, which the audience were not slow to recognise. Miss Lillian Constance is an attractive Gretchen; the Sisters Voos are vivaciously undertaken by Miss Hilda Gordon and Miss Lina Imperiali; and Thekla is charmingly played by Miss Violet Ashley. The numerically large chorus comprises pleasing singers and faces, and the orchestra is ably directed by Mr. Clement Locknane.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, April 11,

"THE SIGN OF THE CROSS."

The late Mr. Wilson Barrett's play The Sign of the Cross is the attraction here, and the play apparently still possesses strong attractive powers. The mounting is most excellent, and the company engaged by Mr. William Greet is in every way a very capable one. Mr. Laweon Butt is responsible for the part of Marcus Superbus, and plays the character in a masterly fashion, with genuine ability and intelligence; Mr. W. Mayne Lynton plays impressively as Nero, Emperor of Rome, and Mr. Chas. Aldred as the tyrannical Tigellinus has plenty of scope in which to portray his unpleasant characteristics, and does so with great effect and power; Glabrio is humorously portrayed by Mr. Frank Wood, and Philodemus is cleverly impersonated by Mr. Harry Jones; Mr. H. Thurston Harris invests the part of Servilius with praiseworthy intensity and power; and Mr. Martin Palmer is decidedly good as Strabo, the spy; Mr. J. Weatherall acts with commendable care as Licinius, and Mr. Phil Ellis gives a graphic delineation of Virturius; Mr. Walter Fleet essays the rôle of Favius with marked success; Titus being ably depicted by Mr. Henri Raymond; Miss Winifred Delevanti plays the part of the boy Stephanus with an intensity that makes her performance very sound, her appeal being most effective; as Mercia Miss Evelyn Hope handles a difficult rôle with artistic delicacy and refinement; Berenice is ably delineated by Miss Dorothy Lart. The remainder of the numerous company ably contribute to the success.

THE CORONET.

On Monday, April 11, the Italian Opera,

"UN BALLO IN MASCHERA."

All the principals show to particular advantage in this opera. Signora Protti gives a very artistic and finished rendering of the music allotted to her, and the flexibility and sweetness of her voice are especially apparent in Act II., whilst she has able assistance from Signor Barbato's fine, powerful, and passionate vocalisation in the charming duet, "M'ami Amelia." Both artists act with verve and intensity. As Riccardo, Signor Barbato sings remarkably well in the scene in the saloon at the Governor's house; and Signora Protti is highly effective in her appeal to Renato in Act III., Scene 1; whilst both excel in the death scene of the finale at the masked ball. As Renato Signor Azzolini is quite at his best, and his impassioned and poignant expression of grief, as well as his rich, mellifluous tones in his song in Act III., Scene 1, win him a well-deserved encore. Signori Massia and Quintina are good as the conspirators, Samuel and Tom; Signora Gorrita is good as the sorceress Ulrica; and Signora Gavlosca discovers a remarkably clear and bell-like voice in the small part of the page, Oscar. A word of praise is due to Signor Wehils for his excellent and helpful work as conductor of the augmented orchestra. In Ernani, Rigoletto, and I Puritani a new and highly commendable baritone, Signor Modisti, makes his appearance. On Tuesday was presented Il Barbière de Seviglia; at Wednesday's matinée Ernani, with Carmen in the evening; Rigoletto on Thursday; and La Favorita on Friday.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, April 11, the Drama, entitled

"THE TICKET-OF-LEAVE MAN."

That old-established favourite, The Ticket-of-Leave Man, is being given this week by Messrs. Travis Green and Arthur Hinton's company, and, judging by his reception at the hands of the fine audience, still finds many friends, the action of the play throughout being followed with intense interest. As Bob Brierley, the ticket-of-leave man, Mr. Albert Ward puts in some fine acting, and gives a generally all-round good performance; Mr. Fred G. Kay fully realises the brutal qualities of that hardened criminal, James Dalton; Mr. Arthur Hinton is an alert and chivalrous Hawkshaw; Mr. Travis Green, an excellent character-actor, makes the most of his opportunities in the part of Melter Moss; Mr. Charles Clifford makes a gentlemanly bill-broker of Mr. Gibson; and Miss Lelia Zillwood is a very effective May Edwards. Miss M. Canfield scores greatly as the loquacious Mrs. Willoughby; and Miss Effie Dene makes a precocious youngster of Sam Willoughby. The scenery and mounting are well done.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, April 11, the drama entitled

"THE SINS OF SOCIETY."

A distinct novelty to Brixton playgoers was presented here on Monday, when Mr. F. W. Bolam's company appeared in the highly successful Drury Lane drama above named. A crowded and highly appreciative audience gave Messrs. Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton's play a cordial reception. The arduous rôle of Lady Marion Beaumont is faithfully portrayed by Miss Grace E. Leslie, who gave a pathetic, natural, and womanly rendition of the character. Miss Cissy Carlton may be warmly congratulated on her assumption of Lady Goldbury; her scenes with Hogg were wholly to the taste of the audience. Mr. Maitland Marler does every justice to the part of James Hogg, and he brought out capitally the humours of the good-natured vulgarian. Miss Rosamund Bunton makes a deeply interesting Lady Gwendolen Ashley; Mr. C. F. Collisge depicts remarkably well the villainies of Noel Ferrers; Mr. Morris finds a clever exponent in Mr. Sidney C. Sinclair; and his faithful servant in the hands of Mr. Edwin Palmer is a clever character study. Youthful, buoyant, and gay is Mr. H. Bonhote Wilson as Sir Dorian March; Policeman Bates' foibles find in Mr. Edward De Vere a useful exponent; the steamship captain is well represented by Mr. Percy Uden; the Duchess of Danbury is ably played by Miss Janet Hodson; Mr. Walter Schonberg (Colonel Gretton) and Mr. James Miles (Captain Thorpe) are deserving of praise; Mr. Edwin Palmer delivers the lines of the Rev. Martin Hope in a most effective manner; Miss Elsie Gardner is admirable as Mrs. Murgatroyd. A word of praise is deserving the drilling of the numerous auxiliaries, especially on board the steamship and in the church scene. The play is beautifully staged and dressed, and Mr. J. M. Glover's incidental music nicely rendered by the orchestra of the theatre under Mr. W. T. Gliddon's direction. Mr. Newman Maurice is, as usual, to the front as Mr. Fred Melville's capable manager; and Mr. Frank J. Pitt, the courteous manager for Mr. F. W. Bolam.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, April 11, the Musical Play,

"THE DAIRYMAIDS."

Filled with tuneful melodies and replete with genuine fun, The Dairymaids, the farcical musical play by Messrs. A. M. Thompson and Robert Courtneidge, has been accorded a rapturous reception here by Mr. Robert Macdonald's company. In Mr. Edwin Dodds the company has found a strong asset, and his Joe Mivens, the sailor, who assists and upsets the plans of his officers with cheerful disregard of their feelings, is a very rich piece of work. His eccentric dancing and humorous singing are alike very clever. Mr. Dodds has an admirable colleague in Miss Edie Martin, whose maid-of-all-work shows a keen sense of character, her results, in the shape of much laughter, being achieved without any effort. Mr. William Spray is full of life and humour as the Lieutenant whose visit to his aunt's farm causes so much commotion. His work with Mr. Dodds was especially appreciated, the poacher duet being productive of intense amusement. Miss Dorothy Grasdorff is a very dainty dairymaid, thoroughly suited to the lively lieutenant, her masquerading as a boy being notably piquant. Her principal "comrades" in the dairy and academy were Miss Vivien Carter (whose powerful voice made her a strong favourite), Miss Doris Hodgson, Miss Mina O'Dell, and Miss Elsie Bull, to mention only a few, and they enhance the popularity of the play by their charm. Of the remaining members of the cast Mr. Bernard Vaughan was very good as the Irish doctor.

THE GRAND, FULHAM.

On Monday, April 11, for the First Time in London, the Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, by Charles Windermere, entitled

"WHERE IS WILLIAM?"

Sir William Gregory...Mr. Charles Windermere
Harry ..... Mr. Edmund Hollick
General Rubbub ..... Mr. Leslie Norman
William Jolly ..... Mr. Rule Pyott
Joe Budge ..... Mr. Fred Lake
Policeman ..... Mr. T. Mackenzie
Lady Gregory ..... Miss Belle Donaldson
Phyllis Patterson ..... Miss Clare Manifield
Emily ..... Miss May Rosine
Eliza ..... Miss Zoe Davis

If it isn't the coat that makes the man, that garment certainly plays an important part in distinguishing the husband, to judge by the new farcical comedy Where is William? which is introduced to London this week at Fulham, having been originally tried at Richmond last September, and subsequently taken on tour. Though hopelessly exacting on the score of probability, the piece has many witty lines and is rich in ingeniously contrived situations that carry their humour on the surface. A crowded house at the admirably appointed Fulham theatre on Monday had their fill of wholesome fun, roaring their approval throughout three acts.

Details of the plot of the piece were given in our notice of its first production, but its chief features may be recalled. The search for William is carried on in the house of a retired grocer, who bears the name of Sir William Gregory, and between whom and his butler, William Jolly, an amazing likeness exists. It is only by the livery he wears that the butler can be distinguished from the baronet, and even that does not prevent Lady Gregory from kissing the man in mistake for the master. Complications are, therefore, numerous, and give rise to hilarious results. Jolly, who is married to Sir William's cook, receives a letter from his first wife Eliza, whom he had supposed to be dead, saying she is about to return from Australia, and in despair the butler resolves to shoot himself. His revolver comes in handy, however, for a burglar, who breaks in when Sir William and his man are alone in the house. The butler shoots and the burglar falls; but the latter is only shamming, and after allowing them to cover him with a cloth, substitutes for his supposed corpse a lay figure that stands in the corner of the room, and decamps. Sir William and the butler conceal the "body" in a settee, and Jolly rushes off with the design of going abroad. Left to face the situation, Sir William resorts to the whisky bottle to sustain his failing courage, and in his fuddled condition puts on the butler's coat, and is thus mistaken by his wife on her return from a party for the fugitive Jolly, her ladyship inquiring vainly, "Where is William?"

The first Mrs. Jolly turns up and claims Sir William, still garbed in his butler's coat, and unable to establish his identity, while Lady Gregory is dismayed to learn from the newcomer that Sir William is a bigamist. To add to the confusion her ladyship's father, a retired general, arrives to be introduced to Sir William, whom he had hitherto refused to acknowledge, and on hearing of his duplicity, resolves to chastise the bigamist. Matters are still further involved when Jolly is brought home by a policeman, who had discovered him floundering in a pond, and much fun is created by the spectacle of the General chasing Sir William and Jolly about the house with a whip in his determination to secure revenge.

The tangle is unravelled when Sir William and the butler, both hiding from the General, witness a meeting between the burglar and Eliza, who turn out to be man and wife, and thus relieve Jolly of his embarrassments. Sir William, discovering that he is wearing the wrong coat, changes it without delay, and is restored to his proper position.

The effect of the farce, as will be gathered, depends entirely upon the resemblance which can be attained between the two principals, and in this respect Mr. Charles Windermere was particularly fortunate in securing an actor, who in voice and appearance, was his absolute double. The author himself played Sir William, and made of the affable, h-less grocer a most whimsical personage, revelling in his own absurdities, and giving rise to peals of laughter by his quaint attitudes. Apart from the merit of his make-up, Mr. Rule Pyott, a clever comedian, gave a mirth-provoking performance of William Jolly, the butler's tragic expression of horror at the perpetration of his deadly deed, and his subsequent efforts to extricate himself from his difficulties, being particularly diverting. The two parts were admirably played, and the laughter aroused was well won. A pair of lovers were capitally presented by Mr. Edmund Hollick, a refined and well-spoken actor, and by Miss Clare Manifield, a dainty and prepossessing heiress, by whom the task of proposing to the penniless Harry was accomplished with charming artlessness. Miss Belle Donaldson was tall, graceful, and ladylike as Lady Gregory; and Mr. Leslie Norman, as her peppery father, General Rubbub, acted his part realistically. Miss Zoe Davis gave a droll caricature of Eliza; a skilful characterisation of a policeman was that of Mr. T. Mackenzie; Mr. Fred Lake was a typical burglar; and a thoroughly adequate cast was completed by Miss May Rosine as the buxom cook.

The comedy, which was preceded by Clause No. 6, a comedietta also by Mr. Windermere, produced some years ago, has caused the thermometer of mirth in Fulham to go up appreciably, and if Monday night's audience communicated their impressions to their friends, courteous Mr. Frederick Merer, the manager, has no doubt had the felicity of providing for overwhelming audiences throughout the week.

THEATRE ROYAL, STRATFORD.

On Monday, April 11, for the First Time in London, the Comedy-Drama in three acts, by Joe Ellis, entitled

"FOLLY'S FORTUNES."

Folly Vaughan ..... Miss Maude Western
Biddy Boyd ..... Miss Maudie Lambert
Myra Burritt ..... Miss Ada Hender
Eleanor Vaughan ..... Miss Nellie Lambert
Ben Burritt ..... Mr. John Levey
Wilfred Esmond ..... Mr. Alex Alexander
Ralph Grimes ..... Mr. William May
George Foster ..... Mr. Laurie Lawrence
Alfred Vaughan Esmond .. Mr. W. Buckstone
Billy Boyd ..... Mr. Walter Buckstone

The customary bill of fare at this popular melodrama theatre is somewhat changed this week, for Folly's Fortune, which is making its first appearance in the metropolitan area, can be best described as a brisk mixture of singing, dancing, and dramatic action, but the story is so easily followed that the interpolations do not interfere with the enjoyment of the piece, which is capitally mounted and very suitably dressed.

Folly is the daughter of Squire Esmond in his less palmy days, and when the story opens he is living with, and under the impression he is lawfully married to, Myra Burritt, whose son, Wilfred, by a former marriage, the Squire has adopted. The Squire's real wife, who has not a scrap of evidence to prove her marriage, but is very eager to obtain it for her daughter's sake, seeks to enter her husband's service, but her disguise is penetrated by Wilfred, a dissipated man, who at the time is squeezing his father for money for debts, who denounces his stepfather, all the time realising the lever he has for blackmailing him. Determining to make reparation to his wife, he himself possessing their marriage lines, Squire Esmond repairs to his library for that purpose, and overhears a conversation between Myra Burritt and Wilfred, the latter now learning that his mother is also married to a loafer named Ben Burritt, and that all she wants is the Squire's money. Denouncing the pair, Esmond orders them from the house, but they, contriving to return, add murder to their wrongdoings by strangling the Squire. They endeavour to fix the crime on Eleanor, but through the good offices of Billy Boyd, Folly's admirer, who masquerades as a policeman, she escapes, and the precious pair are well content to let the murder go unsolved.

Their object now is to destroy the certificate of the Squire's previous marriage and so retain his wealth, and thus it is a battle royal between villainy, as represented by Myra Burritt and her son Wilfred, with the husband and father, Ben Burritt, skirmishing round, and virtue, in the persons of Eleanor Vaughan and her daughter Folly, with their ubiquitous friend Billy Boyd. One of villainy's fell designs is to consign Eleanor into a gorilla's den, but even here her champion, Billy Boyd, is to the rescue, coming to the place disguised as a youthful nigger (and incidentally giving a song and dance). He enters the den, kills the animal, dons its skin, and then and there puts their persecutors to flight. This is but the prelude to the triumph of virtue, for Myra is killed while impersonating Eleanor, Wilfred is hoist with his own petard through a bomb exploding which he had intended for others, and the end sees Folly and her mother establish their claims to Squire Esmond's wealth.

Miss Maude Western's company do adequate justice to the piece. Mr. Joe Ellis as Billy Boyd is a prominent personage throughout, and he is decidedly entertaining in his speciality numbers, his dancing being very loudly applauded. Miss Maude Western is charming and interesting as Folly, and her vocal numbers and impersonations win much favour. The part of Myra Burritt affords insufficient scope for the skill of Miss Ada Hender, whose acting is powerful; Miss Nellie Lambert's impersonation of Folly's mother, Eleanor Vaughan, is sincere and natural; Miss Maudie Lambert is a bright and attratcive Biddy Boyd; Mr. John Levey's unobtrusive methods are very effective in playing the sneakish Ben Burritt; Mr. Alex. Alexander portrays Wilfred Esmond with strength and conviction; Mr. Walter Buckstone is a fluent exponent of Squire Esmond; and Mr. William May is well placed as Ralph Grimes.

THE PAVILION, MILE END.

On Monday, April 11, the Drama, entitled

"A GIRL'S TEMPTATION."

Mr. Morton Powell's company is playing here in A Girl's Temptation, which is remarkably well received, the theatre being packed night after night with an appreciative audience. The play claims to "expose some of the temptations which are purposely placed in the way of many working girls, and to deal with subjects of every-day occurrence, which are of the greatest interest to and concern every man and woman." As Guy Warren, the hero, Mr. Frank Fenn played his part exceedingly well, and won much applause; Miss Gertrude Gilbert as Kate Stirling, a working girl, was the favourite of the evening; Mr. Clifton Earle as Mark Klaw received much applause, which says a great deal for the excellence of his acting, as it is not usual for an East-end audience to acclaim the villain of the piece; Basil Warren was played in a very creditable manner by Mr. Charles Herbert; as Geoffrey Stirling Mr. Gerald Nolan displayed excellent dramatic ability; and Mr. Fred Mace as Jim Judd was good. Mr. Freddie Bentley was the cause of much laughter as Sammy Sniggles, a limb-of-the-law, his acting being very original. Mr. W. Grande as Karl Schwartz made a typical German. Miss Winnie Donovan deserves much praise for the fine rendering she gave of Lady Constance Heathfield. Miss Blanche Lee as Annie Brown acted "a victim of temptation" skilfully, delivering her lines in a clear and effective voice. The remainder of the company acquit themselves creditably.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, April 11, the Musical Play, entitled

"THE GIRLS OF GOTTENBERG."

Mr. T. C. Wray and Mr. Austen Hurgon are this week presenting the Gaiety Theatre success The Girls of Gottenberg, which is keeping Dalston audiences in the best of good humour. The piece is produced by Mr. Austen Hurgon, and the full chorus and orchestra are under the direction of Mr. Bertram J. Paterson, the stage-manager being Mr. Charles Berkeley. Foremost in the cast is Mr. Phil Smith, who sends the audience into convulsions of laughter with his eccentricities as Max Moddelkop. Mr. Murray Moore is thoroughly well received as Otto, and the way in which he renders the song "The girls, they call me Otto" is quite sufficient to secure him popularity. In addition, he is encored for the song "Jericho," and takes part in a charming duet with Mitzi, a part sustained with considerable vivacity by Miss Hilda Vining. Miss Nellie Laurence is very entertaining as Clementine, the Burgomaster's daughter, and she accompanies Max in a duet which proves the ability of both artists. Mr. Ralph Forster is a quaint Burgomaster; Mr. George Robertson is equally amusing as an eccentric Town Clerk; and Mr. James Cook as a policeman sings in splendid bass voice a song about German beer, which, apart from its seductive attributes in this respect, is one of the prettiest little compositions in the piece. Miss Nan Stuart as Elsa sings nicely; while Miss Ethel Waine as Katrina, the only girl in Rottenberg, Mr. Charles Hoddy as Corporal Schmidt, Mr. Harry Clarke as Albrech, Mr. Charles Berkeley as a Sergeant of Hussars, Mr. Lionel Yaldwyn as a General, and Mr. Percy Clarbour as Colonel Finkhausen prove how admirably they have been cast for their respective parts.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

On Monday, April 11, the Drama, entitled

"THE WORLD, THE FLESH, AND THE DEVIL."

Lovers of strong dramatic fare will find all their hearts' desire at the Alexandra Theatre this week, where Mr. Cowen is presenting The World, the Flesh, and the Devil. The play teems with moving incidents, and the interest in the contest between virtue and villainy is never allowed to flag until the curtain finally falls. As Nicholas Brophy, barrister-at-law, Mr. Henry Doughty is unremitting in his efforts to present the wrong-doings of this arch-villain in the most uncompromising light. Mr. E. Eardley-Howard is a very earnest hero, and as the wrongly-accused Robert Hall gains for the character its full share of sympathy. To Mr. Will Harman is entrusted the task of providing the greater part of the fun, and that he is thoroughly successful is proved by the roars of laughter his performance of Mr. Johnson evokes. As Beatrice Cuthbert Miss Violet Hammersley is duly pathetic, and Miss Dora Hammersley evinces power as an emotional actress in the part of Gertrude Grant. Miss Maggie Lindsay as Caroline Stranger does excellent work, and Rupert Dyke is presented in a quite original manner by Mr. John Sargent. Miss Constance Coopman is seen to great advantage as Mrs. Jenkins, and of the remaining parts special praise is due to Mr. Frederic Jacques for his well-considered performance of Sir James Hall, and to Misses Margaret Halstead and Doris Whyte for their clever sketches of the coster-woman, Sarah Isaacs, and the suffragette, Sylvia Trevor, respectively.

BROADWAY THEATRE.

On Monday, April 11,

"OUR MISS GIBBS."

This famous Gaiety production is drawing overflowing houses at this theatre, and richly deserves its success. The bright and pretty musical play is admirably acted and sung, the dresses are rich and tasteful, and the scenery and appointments are excellent. Mr. Tom Shelford makes a hit as the Hon. Hughie; and Mr. Theodore Leonard is a richly-humorous Timothy Gibbs. Mr. J. E. Stevenson is a capital Slithers. Mr. R. M. Strachan as Mr. Toplady is very good. Mr. Henry de Solla is a clever Mr. Beavis. Mr. Ernest Darrell is a dignified Earl of St. Ives. Mr. Crauford Kent is a highly-satisfactory Lord Eynsford. Mr. Albert Cavendish is a typical Taxi-Cabby; and Mr. Murray Stephen is a competent Mr. Amalfy. Miss Kathleen Courtenay as Our Miss Gibbs is clever and attractive, and wins hosts of admirers for her charming performance. Miss Nancy Hervyn as Mme. Jeanne acts with ease and finish, and assists materially in the general success. Miss Jennie Richards submits a clever portrait of Mrs. Farquhar, Miss Winifred Knightly exactly realises the character of the Duchess of Minster; and Elizabeth is charmingly played by Miss Gladys Ivery. Other parts are well filled by Mesdames Nancy Alwyn (Nora), Dorothy Dickens (Sheilah), Violet Lingard (Kathleen), Ella Merton (Lady Connie), Susie Beardon (Lady Sybil), Marion Gordon (Lady Trixie), Cissy Gordon (Lady Angela), Kitty Mead (Lady Muriel), and Hilda Grundy (Lady Gwen). The chorus is strong in numbers and vocalisation and attractive in appearance. Mr. Cecil Klein is manager and Mr. H. de Solla stage-manager of the company.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, April 11, the Drama, entitled

"THE STILL ALARM."

After an interval of about two years, the ever green and highly-popular American drama The Still Alarm is making a welcome re-appearance, and, as usual, is attracting good houses. The elaborate and realistic scene in Act III., the Central Fire Station, New York, in which the two highly-trained horses Pegasus and Bucephalus appear, is the prominent feature, and continues to contribute in no small measure to the success of the play, which is accorded an enthusiastic reception from every part of the house. Mr. Mathew H. Glenville gives a powerful rendering of the intrepid fireman, Jack Manley, which appeals to the audience, and is the recipient of flattering applause; Mr. Gerald Kennedy is entirely successful as the villain, John Bird, and offers a good representation; Doc Wilber is amusingly portrayed by Mr. Henry C. Gilbin, who scores considerably; Mr. Edward Hobart as Willie Manley has also a part that suits him nicely; Joe Jones is a quaintly-humorous individual in the capable hands of Mr. J. Sutton Pateman; Mr. Lewis Gordon gives a good delineation of Franklyn Fordham; Miss Beatrice Shirley as Elinor Fordham infuses sincerity and pathos into her characterisation; Miss Lydia Andre makes a piquant and attractive Carrie Wilbur, and acts with ease and charm; and Miss Mabel Veriton in the character of Mrs. Manley supplies a clever study of an old lady. The Lyric Comedy Four gain approval for their harmonious contributions.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, April 11, the play, entitled

"THE PROUD PRINCE."

A Lyceum success is the attraction at the Borough Theatre this week, and a well-filled house witnessed the performance of Mr. Justin Huntly McCarthy's play on Monday night. All the original scenery and appurtenances are carried, and a strong cast has been engaged for the interpretation of the piece. Mr. E. Vassall-Vaughan as that handsome despot King Robert looks the part well, and acts with much ability, afterwards portraying the monarch's humiliation when transformed into a misshapen jester with breadth and feeling, the contrast between the two parts being strikingly defined. Miss Eileen Kerin enacts Perpetua with a girlish grace well befitting the pretty maiden of the hills, and her agreeably clear enunciation is to be commended; Mr. Clifton Boyne portrays the scheming Count Hildebrand very powerfully; and as the Archangel Mr. Cowley Wright declaims his lines with much dramatic effect. Mr. Terence O'Brien submits a rugged, convincing portraiture of Theron; Mr. Frank Ward is responsible for a clever character sketch as Diogenes; Mr. Ernest Stidwell plays impressively as the priest Hieronymus; Mr. R. Leigh Ellis makes a soldierly Sigurd; and Mr. Charles Boult is duly dignified as the Archbishop of Syracuse. Miss Vashti Wynne looks handsome and imparts much histrionic ability to the unthankful character of Lysabetta, the Queen of the Courtesans, whose favourites and ladies have quite adequate representatives in Miss Esther Whitehouse, Miss Lilian Dacroy, Miss Nora Jones, Miss Ethel Miller, Miss Georgina Milne, Miss Doris Reynolds, and Miss Kathleen Ferrers. The orchestra is this week under the direction of Mr. Arthur Roby.

"Scene Painters of the Past" (Illustrated), by George Tweddell. Price 6d. Published at The Era Buildings, 5, Tavistock Street, Strand, W.C.

"LUCKY LIZA."

Musical Comedy, in Three Acts, Produced, for the First Time in London, at the Royal Artillery Theatre, Woolwich, on Monday, April 11.

Silas Slim ..... } Mr. Dickie Clare
The Judge ..... }
The French Waiter }
Peter Pettitoe ..... Mr. T. W. Benson
Paul Pettitoe ..... Mr. Leonard Maitland
William Biffins ..... Mr. J. W. Forest
Barnaby Blatherwick ..... Mr. Harry George
Tompkins ..... Mr. Bert Collins
P.C. McGuke ..... Mr. George Minto
Billy ..... Mr. Will Merry
Maude ..... Miss Amy Malvern
Lily ..... Miss Nellie Lister
Daisy ..... Miss Edna Evelyn
Sadie Potts ..... Mme. Constance Bellamy
Marie Pettitoe ..... Miss Belle Russell
Virgina Blatherwick ..... Miss Hettie Gale
Eliza Bird (Lucky Liza) .. Miss Vesta Browne

Lucky Liza was produced at the Paisley Theatre on May 7, 1906, and from that time up to the present has been maintaining a successful tour of the provinces. It was only on Monday last that it was first introduced to a London audience, when it was accorded a warm reception. Like numerous other musical plays of the present day, the comedy under notice contains but the vestige of a story; in fact, there is just sufficient plot to form an introduction for numerous songs, dances, jests, and amusing absurdities, which we may here state are rendered throughout, the comedy in a very lively and diverting fashion. The play is adequately mounted and dressed, and Mr. Dickie Clare, whose company it is, has surrounded himself with a number of very able artists, who keep the ball of fun rolling the whole evening.

In the first act the scene represents Two Villas up the Thames, with their gardens adjoining. One is inhabited by Peter Pettitoe, a barrister, his wife Marie, and their son Paul, a dude; while the other is occupied by Barnaby Blatherwick, also a barrister, and his daughter Virgina. Of course, the close situation of the gardens leads up to love-making "over the garden wall" by the young couple. Eliza Bird (Lucky Liza), who is the maid to the Pettitoe family, also finds time for "business" of an amorous description with the gardener next door. The advent of Silas Slim, a detective, who believes that Liza is about to inherit a large amount of money, leads to complications, which do anything but conduce to the peace of the two families, and the act ends with a ludicrous situation, which is made the most of. A very laughable Court Scene is presented in the second act, in which Mr. Dickie Clare as the Judge produces considerable hilarity, and he is amply assisted in this respect by Miss Vesta Browne as Lucky Liza, and the curtain falls to much laughter and applause. Numerous comical situations also occur in Act 3, the scene representing the Hôtel Pomme de Terre, in which Mr. Clare and Miss Vesta Browne again figure conspicuously.

Mr. Dickie Clare scores well in all three characters of Silas Slim, the Judge, and the French waiter, and is well rewarded for his singing of "Silas Slim" and "Why" having to respond to several encores. Miss Vesta Browne is a clever comedienne, and her vivacious manner in the portrayal of the character of Lucky Liza produces for her emphatic expressions of approbation, and her numerous songs are rendered with plenty of "go." Among them are included "You pretty monkey," "Barney," and "My girl isn't a London girl." Her agile dancing is also duly appreciated. Mr. T. W. Benson makes an excellent Peter Pettitoe, and does ample justice to the part, particularly in the Court Scene. Mr. Leonard Maitland supplies a diverting characterisation as Paul Pettitoe, and his song "Tobe Mory" goes well. Mr. J. W. Forest is a comedian of no mean merit, and in the part of William Biffins proves the fact. Barnaby Bladderwick is well undertaken by Mr. Harry George. Miss Hettie Gale acts Virgina with charm and daintiness, and evokes much applause by her dancing and by her rendering of "Over the garden wall" and "Fishing for a husband." Mme. Constance Bellamy possesses a well-cultured and powerful voice, which she uses to the best advantage in the well-known songs of "Kathleen Mavourneen" and "Asthore," both of which are encored. Miss Belle Russell is suitably placed as Marie Pettitoe. The Jesmond Trio, consisting of Miss Amy Malvern, Miss Nellie Lister, and Miss Edna Evelyn, merit commendation for their assistance in many dances and songs, including "I could learn to love a soldier" and "Kissing-time." The comedy concludes with the concerted number entitled "Lucky Liza."

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, April 11, the Drama, entitled

"THE BAD GIRL OF THE FAMILY."

The thrilling story of the adventures of Bess, the naughty one, who, after all, is not so black as she is painted, has been drawing crowded houses to the Kingston playhouse. The exciting piece has awakened a lively interest amongst all classes of playgoers, and it says much for the excellent stage-management that the heavy work of arranging the quickly-succeeding events is carried out without a hitch. The title-rôle is sustained by Miss Violet Crossley, who artistically resists the many temptations to overdo the part. She was the prime favourite all through the play. The sympathies of the audience were divided between the fateful Bess and Gladys Erskine, excellently acted by Miss Daisie Cook. Mr. W. Henry Hargreaves made a fine breezy naval lieutenant as Richard Marsh. A very fine picture was also presented by Mr. Frederick W. Freeman of the haughty Lord Erskine. Much of the success of the production is undoubtedly due to Mr. Luke Forster, who appears as the Jew, Barney Gordon, and invests the part with an interest of its own; as well as to Mr. George W. Montford, who, as the good-looking villain of the piece, earns his reward in the audible execration of the "gods." Some very good light comedy work is put in by Mr. Tom May, who, as Sammy Snozzle, serves to keep the house in roars of laughter, and in this he is ably assisted by Miss Amy Randolph as Sally Smithers. The general-manager and stage-director is Mr. Chris. Mason, and Mr. Fredk. Carr is stage-manager.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, April 11, the Play, in Four Acts, entitled

"UNDER TWO FLAGS."

Founded on Ouida's famous novel, the above play, with its stirring incidents and pathetic episodes of love and self-sacrifice, proved very acceptable to local playgoers on Monday last, and the members of Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company were received with great enthusiasm. Bertie Cecil Royellieu has an excellent representative in Mr. Douglas Murray, who gives a meritorious performance. Mr. Francis Curtis is a capable Berklie Cecil Royellieu; and Mr. Charles Brooke does well as Lord Royellieu; Mr. Harry Benson is accorded much applause for his humorous portrayal of the dare-devil, but loyal, Rake; and Mr. Arthur Redmond is a natural Lord Rockingham. The evil qualities of Colonel Chateauroy are well depicted by Mr. Charles E. Johnson; and Mr. A. Holmes as Capt. Claude de Chanrelion and Mr. Horace Stewart as Ezry Baroni contribute valuable assistance. Miss Agnes Verity enacts the rôle of Cigarette with considerable skill and energy. The quickly-changing moods of love, passion, and hate are faithfully portrayed, and the intensity of her acting makes a deep impression. A charming Princess Venetia Corona is seen in Miss Elizabeth Dundas; Miss Gwendoline Verschoyle appears as Lady Beatrice Guinevere; and Miss Mary Morrell is seen to advantage in the part of Lavinia.

THE LIONEL BROUGH SALE.

BY TOM CRAVEN.

"A sail, a sail, and I haven't got a catalogue!" Don't wince; I'm not going to spring the hoary-headed chestnut upon you. It was buried decades ago—died, poor beggar, of overwork and senile decay. This yarn was first pelted at me by my lost friend and sometime partner, Lionel Brough, oh! years and years ago, just when I was trying to look normal over my first pipe. Of the effects of the story I have but a hazy recollection, but I can taste that pipe as I write now, for Brough smoked shag, if you please. The first time I met him, I can faintly recall, he was in the York Hotel, Margate, and I was in petticoats. He gave me a shortcake and a long anecdote. Yes; that was the first time I met this late monarch of mirth, as they would put it in the variety theatre bill, and well over forty years later I bade good-bye to brilliant, easy-going, gentle-hearted Bohemian "Lal." Yes; I saw him a few hours, you might say, before he took his last "call."

I could tell I don't know how many original stories about this staunch and estimable "mate," but they would be digressive—it would be looking for the blue pencil, asking for trouble; but I knew him and all the members of his delightful family so long, so intimately, that all his cherished petted household gods were as familiar to me as my own. As a proof of this I had the honour of being chosen out of many willing scribes to write the programme appreciation for his grand testimonial matinée, which took place on June 15, 1905. As I write I have before me Brough's letter, thanking me in affectionate and all too eulogistic terms for my inadequate labour of love. In 1908 we toured together as theatrical partners, and I wrote him his last very own piece, The Yarn-Spinner, and before he realised that the end was within a stone's throw he chatted to me quite hopefully about renewing the partnership this coming summer. When touring we frequently stayed in the same hotels—he, his daughter (that unrivalled character-actress, Mary Brough), and myself. My pen gets the bit between its teeth here. I really must tell you this, even at the imminent risk of being blue-pencilled off the journalistic earth. We were playing at Brighton, and during the matinée I'd found I'd run out of grease paint—"make-up," you know—so I borrowed "Lal's." At the end of the first act of Milky White I laid predatory hands upon his violet-powder. During the evening show I begged the loan of his "lining" pencil, and later on put the copingstone on my beggary by imploring him to let me have a clean towel. "Daddy," as the company affectionately called him, didn't expostulate, but in his own dry, inimitable way soon got his own back, for when I entered our dressing-room next evening I found, neatly arranged upon my dressing-table, new specimens of all the articles I had borrowed, with the following laconic message pinned to the towel: "Is there anything else you'd like?" I turned towards him and saw the twinkle in his bespectacled, but still expressive, eyes, and replied that I would make out an exhaustive list of my dressing-room necessities. "No, no," he answered, "don't do that—make out a list of the things you possess—it will take up much less time." If the blue pencil will be merciful, I'll tell you just another little anecdote, and then I'll cut the cackle and get to the 'osses. It takes us to merry Margate once again—where Irving was wont to fraternise with Johnny Toole—where George Grossmith, Edward Lloyd, Arthur Sketchley ("Mother Gamp") used to entertain proprietor Edwin Villiers' patrons at the elegant old Assembly Rooms in Cecil Square, when Sarah Thorne, sister of Tom Thorne, of Our Boys fame, managed successfully the quaint old Theatre Royal—one of the few remaining patent theatres, and which was independent of a licence. Well, all right, I am a-moving on—here you are: My father, Villiers, Brough, and a Dr. Hamilton were chatting at the foot of the jetty, when Brough proposed that they should club together and have a few hours' line-fishing. Villiers at once volunteered to provide the "Henry Clays'," Hamilton the wine of the country, my father the edibles, and Brough a liberal supply of Bryant and May's matches—guaranteed to "strike on the box only." He did it in his humorous, pawky way, and raised a roar of expostulatory laughter. The only thing our bold fishermen caught was one consumptive, devoid of three legs, and very diminutive crab. This Brough, with infinite gravity and precision, tied somehow to a huge piece of rope, and told Villiers—who was by way of being a bit of a dandy—to lead it home to the Royal Hotel, have it dressed, and invite them all to supper. The jovial party reached the shore "fishless," and dreaded the ridicule with which they knew they would be greeted, but "Lal" rose to the situation. From his overcoat pocket he drew a somewhat bulky, greasy-looking parcel, and from it extracted a bunch of Aberdeen Haddies, very darkly smoked. "But," said one of the party, who had about as much sense of humour as a drayhorse—you know the sort of fellow I mean, aren't they thundering wet blankets?—"but, these rotten things will give us dead away—they're dressed and smoked." "It's all right," replied Brough, "they're respectable haddocks, so, of course, they're dressed; and we can say they were smoked by the sun."

The Lionel Brough sale, to be held at the rooms of Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson, and Hodge, is of such proportions as to cover two days—Wednesday and Thursday, April 20 and 21. There are no less than 313 lots, and there are things being put up calculated to make the most exacting virtuoso smack his lips. The pictures are graced by the names of Sir D. Wilkie, Whistler, Alfred Bryan, Hogarth, and some 140 others, many of them presentations to Brough. There are no less than fourteen Phil Mays, all signed, and some eight or nine Cruikshanks. The second day's sale will be devoted to some valuable old china and theatrical relics. We have, too, a collection of punchbowls, drinking-cups, presentation cigar and cigarette cases, old-time breastpins, fobs, and what not; 203 is a "star turn" in lots, being a Sheffield-plated cigar-box, presented in 1863 by President Lincoln to Professor Anderson. As to books—well, they are too numerous to name in detail, but Dickens lovers will find something to please them vastly. Lot 284 is a remarkable autograph-book, the property of the late H. T. Craven, the mid-Victorian dramatist, and in it will be found interesting letters, ranging from George III. to Sir Henry Irving. It is to be earnestly hoped that Miss Mary Brough, the beloved daughter and sole executrix of Brough's estate, will reap a golden harvest when all the lots have fallen under the hammer. There will be no little sentiment in this sale and many must be anxious to secure some sort of memento of the genial, gifted actor who claimed hundereds of real friends and not a single enemy.

ON Monday, Councillor Harold Arnold, the manager of the King's Theatre, Gateshead, is to take a well-deserved benefit at that house, having recently been appointed manager of the Tynemouth Palace, which is leased by the same company that at present employs Mr. Arnold. The Mayor and Corporation of the town have signified their intention of being present at the "first house" performance, as also have the players of the Manchester United Football Club. The managers of the various houses of amusement in the district are giving their best support, and there is abundant evidence for the conclusion that the occasion will result in a bumper benefit to a gentleman who has made many sacrifices for the benefit of the public, and has always been popular with his patrons.

MR. FORBES-ROBERTSON IN NEW YORK.

Mr. Forbes-Robertson was the guest of the Lotos Club at a supper in its new clubhouse, 110, West Fifty-seventh-street, New York, on the 2nd inst. Mr. Forbes-Robertson sat upon Mr. President Frank R. Lawrence's right, and on Mr. Lawrence's left was William Winter, "dean" of American dramatic critics, who will soon celebrate his seventy-fourth birthday. Mr. Winter described Mr. Forbes-Robertson as a splendid survivor of the old school of actors, a school that he said seemed to be the subject of much disparagement in these days. The supper was attended by about 300 members. The menus, as is the rule of the Lotos Club, were artistic. They bore a steel-engraved portrait of Mr. Forbes-Robertson in the right-hand corner, with Mr. Forbes-Robertson as Hamlet below. In other parts of the card appeared the names of the plays in which Mr. Forbes-Robertson has gained his greatest fame, and around the whole was a quotation from William Winter expressing sentiments appropriate to the occasion.

"It is no new thing," said the President, Mr. Frank R. Lawrence, "for the Lotos Club to welcome a distinguished actor. In its early days the dramatic element in this club was large and influential. When I become a member John Brougham was its President, while among its active members were Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, John T. Raymond, John McCullough, and many other distinguished men of the stage.

"It therefore is appropriate that to-night we should have as our guest one of the most illustrious actors of the English-speaking stage. It is a delight to honour Forbes-Robertson, an actor who for so many years has illumined the stage of England and America. Our esteem and affection for him grow with the years, and may this night mean a nearer alliance in the future between this club and the stage."

"Your President," said Mr. Forbes-Robertson in reply, "has overwhelmed me with his kind words. The dinners of the Lotos Club are famous throughout the English-speaking world. You have entertained many of the most distinguished of my own countrymen, as well as your own, and I deem it the greatest of honours to be chosen as one to be the guest of this club.

"As to the drama and its interpreters, I am an optimist. I feel that in many ways the drama has advanced enormously. In England and in America the average acting of to-day is very high, and I may venture to say that I consider this average higher than ever before. We may not have as remarkable interpreters as of old, but the general level is higher than when I first became an actor.

"As regards the drama, I feel strongly that there have been and are plays, produced recently which are what I may call of a feverish nature. That only means one thing—they are just a little too spicy. There is no doubt that in recent years we have had an undesirable element of this kind, but I think it is but a wave, and that it will soon pass away."

Mr. Forbes-Robertson then spoke hopefully of the future of the New Theatre, of which he is a director. He said that the institution was sure to do good, and that he considered the undertaking a splendid one.

"That magnificent temple," he said, "will teach the man in the street that the drama is a great art, a sister art of music and painting and literature. There you have a young child that is doing wonderfully well. That child will have the measles and the whooping cough, but I am sure that Dr. Ames will be able to cure it."

"There was a time, perhaps," said Mr. Winter, "when I might have paid an adequate tribute to Forbes-Robertson. My meaning is earnest, but my words are few. My friend stands in the front rank of intellectual actors. As an actor he received in the old school, now sometimes disparaged, the training that made him what he is to-day." Mr. Winter said the conditions of the stage were deplorable to-day, but he added that he was happy to say he believed those conditions were only temporary. The best actors of to-day, he said, were Forbes-Robertson and Robert Mantell, who, he said, were "survivors of the old school or adherents to the old faith." Mr. Laurence Irving made a brief speech.

"BY MUTUAL AGREEMENT."

Episode in One Act, by R. A. Brandon and George Bull, Produced at the Prince's Theatre, Manchester, on Monday, April 11.

Muriel Dainty .....Miss G. Wren
Harry Dainty .....Mr. W. Kershaw
Carlton Brookes .....Mr. W. F. Grant
Parker .....Mr. M. Thompson

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The scene is the office of Carlton Brookes, lawyer, in which his clerk, Parker, is discovered completing the disposition of papers relating to the impending separation of Muriel and Harry Dainty. As an old friend of the families of both parties, Lawyer Brookes is much concerned about the serious step the young people are about to take, and he confesses to Parker his regrets and his intention to dissuade them, if possible, from their purpose. The attempt seems hopeless, but he is relying to some extent on the potency of a certain blue paper that lies upon his desk. Parker wishes him luck as he goes off. Muriel is the first to arrive, and with her the lawyer proceeds to discuss the situation. She is not amenable to argument. Her complaint is that her husband, who took her from a country home three years ago, and has given her the opportunity to enjoy life in society, wishes now to shut her up in a country home once more, away from all the pleasures to which she has grown accustomed, and which she is enjoying to the full. Even now she has so many immediate engagements that she has barely time to look at the agreement which the lawyer has drawn up for the necessary signatures; but instead of allowing her to append her name in so casual a manner, he persuades her to go into an ante-room and read the paper carefully through. This she is doing when the husband arrives. The change towards gaiety in his wife has its antithesis in Harry Dainty, whose liking for the pleasures of his set has taken a turn in the opposite direction. He takes the matter very quietly, realising that the separation is inevitable. There is a marked difference between his mood and the thoughtless frivolity of his wife. Suddenly the latter emerges from the ante-room, impatient of the agreement and the delay, and the parties to the arrangement are face to face. Now the matter is gone into in detail, interlarded with the further inducements of the lawyer for a reconciliation. There are houses to apportion, and the rest of it. Then, finally, finding all else fail, the lawyer brings out quietly his blue paper, embodying something which both, he says, appear to have overlooked. Everything belonging to them is to be equally divided, but who is to take possession of the grave of the little child they buried not so long ago? He leaves them to consider this intimate question, with the result that the chord he has touched in each brings about what all other argument has failed to do, and the deed of separation is afterwards torn up by the delighted lawyer.

Miss Gwendoline Wren played the part of Muriel Dainty exceedingly well, and as Harry Dainty Mr. W. Kershaw was quietly effective. Mr. W. F. Grant filled the rôle of Carlton Brookes with considerable sympathy and skill; while Mr. M. Thompson made a satisfactory Parker.

PROVINCIAL MANAGERS.

A CHAT WITH W. PAYNE-SEDDON.

Observations upon theatrical business in the provinces by such an experienced manager as Mr. W. Payne-Seddon should prove invaluable.

"How is business in the country?" was our representative's first inquiry.

"Much as usual. If anything, a little better."

"You have not found skating rinks affect it?"

"I have heard managers attribute bad weeks to rinks and picture shows, but they must put it down to something. I think I would rather have a skating rink against the theatre in every town for twelve months than one General Election hovering over the country for six weeks. It appears to me that all such temporary booms in amusements must ultimately assist any permanent amusement business. It wakes the public and brings them out. Every pound lost to the theatre during the height of the skating boom will be returned tenfold."

"You think business depends more upon the management than the circumstances?"

"Undoubtedly. Just as there are farmers and people who farm, there are managers and people who manage. You do not often find a man take a 300-acre farm after a year's experience as a pupil, yet there are hundreds of men and women who take a theatre or a company on tour without the necessary capital or knowledge of the business. I do not know of any business where more money is lost through inexperience. In what other trade or profession would a man dare to take the control of management of a large establishment with as little knowledge or capital as some of your recent examples of bogus management. Such failures—or 'dry-ups,' as they are called—are taken as a matter of course in the small provincial towns. Theatres and touring companies spring up like mushrooms, and most of them disappear as quickly."

"You do not, then, consider the theatrical business speculative?"

"Not at all. The result is a foregone conclusion when undertaken by business men. I mean not only men of business, but men who have served their apprenticeship in every department of their particular business. I consider it as steady and safe as any other."

MR. W. PAYNE-SEDDON.

"Have you had experience of other businesses to enable you to make a comparison?"

"Oh, yes. When I left school I was for some years with my father, who was a corn merchant, miller, and brewer. I had several years in the country, attending the markets at Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Hull, &c., and two on Mark Lane, and I think that the corn trade, with its fluctuations of the market, is more speculative than the theatrical business. For example, I bought a theatre from a local company which had never paid the shareholders a cent; the amount I paid for the building just cleared their mortgage and bank overdraft. The first year it showed a good profit, the second a better, and now it is paying well. I won't go into figures, the income-tax people already worry me about these. I have recently been offered double what I paid for it, but wouldn't sell it for treble.

"At Lincoln, where the population is 50,000, they have a music hall, picture show, and skating rink. I took the theatre over on a long lease three years ago. My partner, Mr. Ernest Pope, lives there and looks after the management. We book light attractions the first three nights, once nightly, and drama the other three nights, twice nightly, and get two distinct classes of audience each week. The receipts this year are exactly double those of any previous year when each company stayed six nights.

I had the management of the only place of amusement in Bridlington for six years. I booked one play, Charley's Aunt for three nights every season during that six years, and the average receipts were £100 in the three nights. Six years ago a new theatre was built, and for the next four years the piece was booked by my successor, and did the same average. The year before last I undertook the booking of this piece myself, and persuaded the local manager to book one night. The receipts were £132 some odd shillings (or nearly half as much again on the one night on its eleventh visit, as it took in any three nights in the previous ten years).

During my theatrical life I have visited every town in great Britain and Ireland, large and small, but have made a speciality of the small towns. I think when you know them they pay better than the large ones. At any rate, I had to start on my savings as an actor."

"How did you start in management without capital?"

"Well, I did not exactly start myself, and had no idea of going into management. I was playing a part and looking after 'the front' for Messrs. Erskine and Macdona, who were both travelling with the company. One Sunday when I brought them the weekly balance-sheet they told me they thought of sending out a fit-up company. Knowing that I had been on tour in the fit-up towns with Miss Maggie Moreton and others for several years, they asked me if I would care to book the tour and undertake the management on a salary and commission. I accepted their offer, and ran their fit-up companies until they dissolved partnership, when I took over two of their plays and started a company of my own, which happened to turn out all right."

"And you have kept to the small towns ever since?"

"Yes, with the exception of an occasional tour in the large towns. I have my books with the receipts and comments on each town for eighteen years."

FRIENDS of Mr. W. Christie Grant, manager of the Grand Theatre, Glasgow, will regret to learn that his wife died on March 31 last, after having undergone an operation at the Western Infirmary, Glasgow. We tender Mr. Grant our deep sympathy.

"SUBSIDENCE."

A Drama, in Three Acts, by Fred E. Wynne, Produced, for the first time on any stage, at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, on Monday, April 11.

Ellen .....Miss Louise Holbrook
Jane Lythgoe .....Miss Darragh
Ab Hesford .....Mr. Edward Landor
Adam Lythgoe .....Mr. Charles Bibby
Walter Travers .....Mr. Basil Dean
James Bent .....Mr. Ian Maclaren
Mr. Elliot .....Mr. Leonard Mudie
Mrs. Holmes .....Miss Muriel Pratt
A Detective-Inspector of Police
Mr. Montague Elphinstone

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Fred E. Wynne's play, Subsidence, was followed with considerable interest by a large audience at the Gaiety Theatre, Manchester, on Monday evening last. Its prime merit is interest, made up of well-studied characterisation, a clever arrangement of material, and natural and pertinent dialogue. An element of originality pervades the theme, but the conclusion is apparently illogical and certainly unsatisfactory.

We are introduced to the affairs of Lythgoe's farm, on the borders of a Lancashire manufacturing town. The last of the Lythgoes, whose family has held the farm for the past two hundred years, is a bad-tempered, but probably honest, old man, whose pride in his antecedents is only equalled by his disappointment in having a daughter left to him by his dead wife instead of a son, and by the extraordinary violence of his temper for the things that cross him. A less amenable disposition it would be hard to conceive; but he is not ill-matched in temperament by his daughter, who is so passionate, selfish, and unfeeling that one really wonders at the devotion of the two men who are rivals for her hand. These two men, however, are themselves of not too admirable a character. One—the favoured one—is a bank clerk with potentialities for evil (he has already, by way of a hobby, made duplicates of the keys of the bank, and got himself "sacked" on suspicion); the other is a market gardener, who lounges jealously about, and has much to say in a common-sense, dogged fashion about his love for Lythgoe's daughter and things of current interest in general. Lythgoe just now is approached by a neighbouring colliery about the purchase of the coal under his freehold. It is common knowledge that the subsidence of the district must shortly engulf the farm, also that the colliery-owners will get the coal whether Lythgoe sells or not. But the old man is mulishly obstinate, and will not be guilty of converting the home and its associations into money. To his daughter Jane this means not only inevitable loss, but the continued curtailment of her opportunities to "live" instead of dragging out the unsympathetic existence her father has made for her by his masterful self-sufficiencies. The persuasions of his daughter of James Bent (the market gardener), and of Mr. Elliot (the manager of the mine, whom Lythgoe drives away with a stick) are all of no avail.

In these circumstances Jane is cast upon her chances with Walter Travers, the bank clerk. The latter's situation, however, is not what she thinks. His prospects rest upon the hope of a successful literary career, based upon nothing more substantial than an editor's acceptance of a story for two guineas. But he mentions the duplicate keys of the bank, intending to destroy them; and she, preferring him to Bent, and quite resolved to be rescued from her horrible home life, tempts him to use the keys for the purpose of stealing a hundred pounds, with which they may start life in London. It is to the credit of Travers that he repudiates the notion at first and consents only at last under the spell of his love for her, upon which she plays with effect. Some of their talk is overheard by Ellen, the charwoman, who subsequently communicates her knowledge to James Bent, such as it is. He surmises that Jane is going to London that very evening with Travers, but he cannot understand the allusion to "money out of the bank," since he believes Travers to have none there. Bent thus gets on the trail of the impending tragedy. That afternoon he goes for an interview with Travers, and utters some plain talk. While he is there Adam Lythgoe comes, too, meaning to have an end of Travers's interest in his daughter whom he designs for Bent; and neither suspects the presence behind the door of a previous visitor none other than Jane herself, who has come to make final arrangements about the robbery, and who at last comes out and treats her father and James Bent to a pretty scene. Old Lythgoe is seen at his worst here. The fight for mastery between father and daughter is powerful and dramatic. The former apparently conquers; but what he bids the girl to do, in token of obedience, she does because she sees an opportunity in it for a sinister end of the matter. She is to meet him on the waters of the subsidence in a boat laden with flour; and the next we hear of Adam is that he has been drowned in twelve inches of water. Certainly he was subject to fits but his daughter was in the boat, and did not help him; she has the satisfaction of riddance and of knowing that she is morally a murderess.

Things are bad at the farm on the night of the funeral. There are wind and rain, and the sound of the "flash" (the waters), and strange noises in the ceiling and the walls of the house. Terror is well suggested, not only by these omens but by the talk of one Ab Hesford, who is the last to go, and the awesome apprehensions of Ellen, the servant, who cannot work nor face the prospect of sleep, nor check her woful dread of the night. Meanwhile, Jane has intimated her desire to sell the coal under the house, and is feverishly awaiting a reply from the colliery. Pending its arrival, Travers makes a furtive entry. He has been to London, made his way back surreptitiously to commit the burglary, as arranged, and is now here with the proceeds, eaten with fear and remorse. The pity is that Jane has been unable to stop the project, deeming the money and the enterprise unnecessary since her father's death. More is it the pity that James Bent has meanwhile had Travers shadowed by the police, who are even now at the door. There is no escape. All Jane can do is to promise fidelity and a home for her lover when he has paid the penalty. So Travers is arrested, and Jane is left face to face with James Bent and their joint work. Bent's argument for tolerance and justification is rational enough, but she will not listen. She tells him the truth about herself, and about Travers's temptation. Travers seems the only sufferer. "Subsidence" solves the difficulty for the two remaining. The house begins to rock, the waters rush; Jane stands there and will not move, and Bent takes his place beside her. It should be added, by the way, that her resolve to die is due to the arrival of the expected letter, which informs her that the colliery cannot see its way to negotiations.

One cannot praise the acting of Miss Horniman's company too highly. Miss Darragh gave a remarkably effective rendering of Jane Lythgoe, a piece of intensely realistic and thoroughly consistent character delineation. As Adam Lythgoe Mr. Charles Bibby submitted one of the best things he has done, and that is saying a great deal. No better impersonation could be desired. Mr. Basil Dean's Walter Travers gave him fine opportunities for the exercise of his clear, incisive style, his acting in the second and third acts being really excellent. A quiet and perfectly-finished character-sketch of Ab Hesford was given by Mr. Edward Landor, and Mr. Ian Maclaren as James Bent acted with his usual studied force and finish.

"THE QUEEN OF SHEBA."

Karl Goldmark's Opera, in Four Acts, Produced, for the First Time in England, by the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company, at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, on Tuesday, April 12.

King Solomon .....Mr. Charles Victor
Assad .....Mr. Walter Wheatley
High Priest .....Mr. Alexander Richard
Baal-Hannan .....Mr. Hebden Foster
Sulamith .....Miss Beatrice Miranda
Astaroth .....Miss Annie Van Dyck
The Queen of Sheba .....Miss Doris Woodall

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Karl Goldmark's opera, The Queen of Sheba, was first produced in Vienna thirty-five years ago, and made its composer's name. It is a large, elaborate, and beautiful work, reminiscent at times of other great work, but opulent, stimulating, and satisfying. It tells of the love of Assad for the Queen of Sheba. But he is betrothed to Sulamith, the daughter of the High Priest. The action begins in the Hall of Solomon's Palace, where maidens sing the praise of Sulamith and her lover, and the High Priest holds forth to his daughter upon her forthcoming marriage with Assad. To the sound of a march Assad enters, and Sulamith greets him as becomes a lover. He, however, repudiates her, declaring that he is hers no more. Consternation ensues in the whole assembly, whose wonder waits upon Assad's relation to King Solomon of a vision he has seen of a lady at a forest well, with whom he has fallen in love. This has occurred during the fulfilment of the King's mission to him to meet the Queen of Sheba and bring her to his Court. Solomon responds with advice, and decides that the best remedy for Assad's ailment is to push forward his marriage with all speed. The entrance of the Queen ensues upon this, and when she removes her veil Assad sees that she is the lady of the well. Possessed by his infatuation, he addresses her; but she is discreet, and Solomon intervenes. Not to be entirely baulked, Assad, on opportunity, reminds her of an evening in Lebanon. She has not forgotten, but she still repudiates him, and the people imagine that his mind is unhinged. It is not till the twain meet in the palace garden that the Queen acknowledges him. There she sings alone of that evening in Lebanon, and it transpires that she had held Assad to her breast. Jealousy of the possibility of another loving him enters into her singing, and when Assad at length approaches her a passionate love scene takes place.

The wedding of Sulamith, however, cannot be put off, and in the Temple Scene that follows, when he takes the marriage ring from the hand of the High Priest, in the presence of Solomon and the Queen, he brings the situation to an issue by flinging the ring away. Madly he repeats his love for the Queen, but again the latter denies him. His declaration of passion amounts to a profanation of the Temple. The High Priest and all the people and priests rise and crowd about him in horror, demanding that he shall die. At the end Solomon decides to be Assad's judge. He has by this time suspected something, and now the Queen, prevented from going to Assad as he stands among the priests, falls at the King's feet in supplication. The following act is devoted to the intercession of the Queen and Sulamith for Assad's life. To the former Solomon refuses to concede anything, but the grief of Sulamith, whose intention is to join the Holy Virgins, softens him to sympathy. He afterward condemns Assad to exile in the desert, where we next see the unfortunate lover. The Queen comes to him here, eager now to enter his embraces, but Assad's love has changed; she is but a mocking temptress in his sight. When she has gone, he prays for death, and a sandstorm arises, which sweeps and darkens the desert, hiding him from sight, and leaving him in a dying state beneath a withered palm-tree. Sulamith enters, attended by twelve virgins from the neighbouring asylum, and the condolences of the latter with Sulamith reach the ears of Assad. He calls out to her, and when she takes him in her arms, begs forgiveness, and so dies.

The action is accompanied by beautiful love-music, wild and impressive marches, characteristic music of the Temple, brilliant openings and finales, with many other incidental varieties of masterly melodic and orchestral appeal. The staging and the dresses were magnificent too, and in keeping with the beauty and importance of the production a splendid rendering was given by a well-selected cast. Miss Doris Woodall as the Queen scored a triumph, her acting and singing being in every way worthy of the part and its responsibilities. Mr. Charles Victor as Solomon used his fine voice and good presence in an effective and dignified rendering. Mr. Walter Wheatley as Assad expressed well the passion and despair of the lover. The clear voice of Miss Beatrice Miranda was also heard to great advantage as Sulamith. Of the remainder, Miss Annie Van Dyck did well in the somewhat weird rôle of Astaroth; Mr. Alexander Richard was successful as the High Priest; and an acceptable effort as Baal-Hannan was added by Mr. Hebden Foster. The opera was produced under the joint direction of Messrs. Eugene Goossens and George Beale, and Mr. Fred W. Walmsley is responsible for the scenery, while the dresses are by Miss T. Harwood. The Queen of Sheba has been long in coming, but there can be no doubt it has come to stay.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, April 11, the Drama, entitled "TWO LITTLE DRUMMER BOYS."

Military dramas are always a success at this house, and Two Little Drummer Boys is no exception to the rule. Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company is a most adequate one. Mr. Edward Bikker is seen once more in his original part as General Kingsley, V.C., and excellent he is in it. Mr. J. L. Leigh gives a fine performance as Captain Frank Carsdale; whilst Mr. Polson Turner as the villain of the piece, Captain George Darrell, shows his great skill in heavy parts. Mr. Vernon H. Vayne is decidedly good as Lieut. Allen Kingsley. A pair of really good comedians are Mr. Will Percy and Mr. Dick Seddon, who are Quiney O'Quirke and Timothy Trimmer respectively. In the title-rôle Miss Maggie English is a plucky, but pathetic, little Eric Carsdale; whilst the bully drummer boy, Jack Smith, is cleverly acted by Miss Maude B. Douglas. As Margaret Rivers (Drunken Meg) Miss Violet Ingram gives a particularly effective piece of acting, and deserves high praise; Miss Violet Langley is a sweet and pretty Alma Kingsley. A lively performance, full of humour, is given by Miss Patricia Connaughton as Molly Meadows, the Regiment's sweetheart. The band of drums, bugles, and fifes play decidedly well, and the staging, both scenery and uniforms, is quite satisfactory. Mr. Edward Bikker also acts as Mr. and Mrs. Kimberley's general-manager; whilst for Mr. Wentworth Croke Mr. Fred S. Jennings continues to act as general-manager with never-failing courtesy.

MR. WILLIAM A. BRADY has secured the American rights of The Balkan Princess.

THE North Shields Borough Theatre was burnt to the ground early on Saturday morning last, in the space of three hours from the actual time of the outbreak of the flames. The audience and attendants had left the building half an hour before the fire was discovered, and the theatre was ablaze from end to end in twenty minutes. The theatre was built some ten years ago as a circus, and subsequently converted into a first-class theatre by Mr. Arthur Jefferson. It afterwards passed into the hands of Mr. Black, cinematograph entertainer. The artists engaged (The Moncktons and Mr. Geo. Bernard) lost all their stage properties, including music, scenery, and uniforms.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Sir Herbert Tree will conclude his Shakespeare Festival at His Majesty's on Saturday, the 30th inst., with a performance of The Merchant of Venice, and on the following Monday will open at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham. He will afterwards visit Dublin, Southport, Harrogate, Liverpool, Cardiff, Southampton, and Bournemouth. Sir Herbert's repertory will contain The O'Flynn, The Merchant of Venice, and Trilby. Miss Evelyn D'Alroy, who made such a success as Ophelia, will appear in her original part of the Lady Benedetta in The O'Flynn, and will play Portia in The Merchant.

The opening performance of the Theatre Club, Knightsbridge, will take place on Sunday, the 24th, under the patronage of Sir Herbert Tree. The programme will consist of three new one-act plays, two of which are by Miss Ella Erskine, The White Hair, founded on a French play, and The Thirst for Knowledge, adapted from the German of Felix Philippi, the celebrated Viennese playwright. In the former Miss Erskine and Mr. Cyril Keightley will be seen in the principal parts; and the Baroness Voynich will play the rôle of a French maid. Mr. Walter Pearce and Mr. Bruce Winston are appearing in The Thirst for Knowledge, Mr. Pearce's part being somewhat on the lines of Willy Beach in Arnold Bennett's Cupid and Commonsense, in which character he made such a great success at a Stage Society performance some two years ago.

The third play is by a young Irish author, Mr. Alfred Fahey, who has already won fame as an artist, having had no less than eleven pictures "on the line." One of these was the celebrated "Conception of the Cross," which created such a sensation two years ago, and which is now in the possession of Mr. Tindal-Atkinson, the well-known K.C. Mr. Fahey is also a member of the Middle Temple, and is at present at work upon a life of Goldsmith. Poor Noll is the principal character in his play A Poet in Purgatory, the scene of which is laid in Oliver Goldsmith's attic in Islington. Mr. Hubert Carter is playing Dr. Johnson; Mr. Arthur Curtis, Goldsmith; Mrs. Calhaem, Mrs. Fleming ("Goldy's" stony-hearted landlady); Mr. Arthur Machen (the author of "The Great God Pan") will be seen as a bibulous bailiff; and Miss Ella Erskine is to create the part of Mary Horneck, the beautiful "Jessamy bride," to whom "Goldy" would never declare his love because of a mistaken sense of honour. Many of the lines used in the play are those actually spoken by the different characters. This should lend a literary interest to the production. Mr. Dion Clayton Calthrop is designing the costumes, and arranging all the details to create the correct eighteenth-century atmosphere. Mr. Hubert Carter is responsible for the production.

From these particulars the members of the club and their friends may congratulate themselves that the opening performance will indeed be worthy of the high dramatic and literary aims of the club, and, if the future Sunday evening programmes are of this high level, the beautiful white theatre—a veritable temple of art—will be the favourite resort of the leaders of society and the aristocracy of art.

Everyone has been talking of the success achieved by Mr. Fred Terry's daughter, Miss Phillida Terson, as Viola in Twelfth Night at His Majesty's last week. Though only seventeen, Miss Terson shows remarkable talent and promise. She had been quietly obtaining experience in Henry of Navarre at the New Theatre, but her Viola was a surprise even to her best friends. Mr. Terry is to be congratulated on what is, we believe, his clever daughter's first essay in a Shakespearean character.

Coutts's historic bank in the Strand is to be transformed into a modern West-end playhouse, which, when finished, will hold nearly 400. The builders have started operations, and on or about Oct. 1 the "Little Theatre," as Miss Gertrude Kingston, the projectress, has decided to call it, will be opened. It has always been a belief of Miss Kingston's that London could do with a "little theatre." The repertory will chiefly consist of three-act comedies of a bright and lively character. There will be no orchestra, but a most comfortable foyer and tea-rooms will be provided. The "Little Theatre" will be open forty weeks in the year, with a stock company. The chief entrance will be in John St.

"Antony and Cleopatra" has been selected for the next dramatic reading of the British Empire Shakespeare Society, and will be given on Monday afternoon next at University College, Gower-street, W.C., with Mr. Acton Bond and Miss Charlotte Granville in the name parts. Mr. Athol Stewart will be the Cæsar and Mr. Leonard Shepherd the Enobarbus. The cast will also include Mr. George Silver, Mr. J. Edwyn Holloway, Mr. Maurice Elvey, Mr. James Gelderd, Mr. Walter Armstrong, Mr. Herbert Lester, Mr. Roy Beard, Mr. L. A. Hutchinson, and Mr. H. L. Owen; Miss Eve Tame, Miss Dora Jesslyn, Miss Mona Hungerford, and Miss Victoria Addison.

The eighth annual dinner of the Incorporated Stage Society will take place at the Criterion Restaurant to-morrow (Sunday). The Right Hon. Sir John Eldon Gorst, K.C., in the chair, will propose the toast of "The Incorporated Stage Society." The speakers will also include Mr. Frederick Whelen, who will propose the toast of "The Repertory Theatres," Miss A. E. F. Horniman and Mr. W. B. Yeats, who will respond, and Mr. W. Lee Mathews. The next production of the Incorporated Stage Society will be Champions of Morality, a comedy in three acts, from the German, by Ludwig Thome.

Miss Isabel Jay, taking advantage of the present crisis in "matinée hats," with the assistance of Mr. Reville, of Hanover-square, has devised some charming toques. The hats were suggested by the delightful headdress worn by the popular prima-donna in the second act of The Balkan Princess at the Prince of Wales, and will be known as the Balkan Princess toque.

Mr. William Poel will superintend the revival at His Majesty's on Wednesday evening of The Two Gentlemen of Verona, under conditions as similar as possible to those of the early Elizabethan stage.

Mr. Fred Terry is busy rehearsing the play by Mr. Sydney Carroll which is to follow The Scarlet Pimpernel at the New Theatre. In this Mr. Terry, whose powers of humour are boldly displayed at times in the present attraction at the New, will enact a shrewd and droll Jew financier, who falls in love with the leading female character, which will be sustained by Miss Miriam Lewes, Miss Phillida Terson appearing as the financier's daughter.

At the Wealdstone Sessions on Tuesday Frank Burgess, a well-dressed man, was charged with burglary at Grimsdyke, the residence of Sir William S. Gilbert. On the 9th, when the accused was discovered in the house, Sir William went to the assistance of his servants, and Burgess was secured, the police telephoned for, and the man, who had been bound with ropes, taken in Sir William's motor car to the police station. The accused was committed for trial to the Middlesex Quarter Sessions.

Mr. J. Bannister Howard will be accorded a testimonial benefit on Saturday, April 23, at the Crystal Palace Theatre. The programme will be of unusual length, and will include Act I. of The Private Secretary, given by kind permission of Mr. Eugene Stafford, the cast comprising members of Mr. Howard's companies, Cattermole being played by Mr. Howard himself, supported by Mr. W. Herbage as the Rev. Robert Spalding. The orchestra will consist of the Crystal Palace Military Band (by kind permission of Mr. Geo. O. Starr), under the conductorship of Mr. Herbert Godfrey. The Private Secretary will be followed by a grand minstrel entertainment by the "After Darks," a combination which includes many well-known artists.

The second half of the programme will comprise a variety concert, the artists taking part in it being Misses Venie Clements, Maisie Ellinger, Florence Hersee, Dorothea Clarke, Lily Gullick, and the Sisters Allen, and Messrs. Passmore Bros., Woodhouse and Wells, Herbert St. John, Arthur Helmore, Paddy Dupres, Arthur Poole, Stacey and Williams, Arthur Passmore, Harvey White, Scott Russell, Herbert Godfrey, and Gerald FitzGibbon. A programme of such length and quality should certainly draw a crowded house.

The Mayor of Stratford-on-Avon presided at an ordinary meeting of the Stratford-on-Avon Town Council on Tuesday. Councillor A. D. Flower said a suggestion had been made, not only by members of the corporate body, but also by the burgesses, that the time had approached when some public recognition should be made of the services rendered by Mr. F. R. Benson to the borough of Stratford-on-Avon. The obvious way to do that would be by admitting him to the honorary freedom of the borough; but under a certain section of the Municipal Corporations Act that could only be done at a special sitting called for the purpose. Should the Corporation be unanimous, he would like to ask the Mayor to call a meeting, in order that the matter might be considered and, if approved, duly carried out.

Mr. F. R. Benson's association with Stratford is wholly in connection with the Shakespearean Festival. The annual performances were first played under his direction in the spring of 1886, and he was again entrusted with them in the two subsequent years. In 1889 and 1890 Mr. Osmond Tearle was in command, but in 1891 Mr. Benson was again charged with the programme, and, with the exception of 1895, when Mr. Ben Greet took his company to Stratford, he has conducted the festival up to the present time. When Mr. Benson first went to Stratford the programme was confined to a week; in 1897 it was extended to a fortnight, in 1902 to three weeks, and at the present time it runs into a month. Mr. Benson has staged thirty-four out of a total of thirty-seven Shakespearean plays since he first went to Stratford, and that he and his company should be able to offer so diversified a programme as that presented during recent years speaks highly of his ability as an actor and actor-manager. Mr. Benson has also worked enthusiastically in connection with the recent movement for extending the scope of the festival.

The cast of The Taming of the Shrew at His Majesty's Theatre on Monday includes Mr. F. R. Benson as Petruchio, Mrs. Benson as Katharina, Miss Nora Lancaster as Bianca, Mr. Alfred Brydone as Baptista, Mr. H. O. Nicholson as Gremio, Mr. Eric Maxon as Biordello, Mr. Guy Rathbone as Hortensio, Mr. Murray Carrington as Lucentio, and Mr. Harry Caine as Grumio, in succession to the late Mr. George Weir.

In Coriolanus, which is to be given at the matinée on Tuesday, Miss Genevieve Ward will play Volumnia to the Caius Marcius of Mr. F. R. Benson, the Virgilia of Miss Nora Lancaster, and the Valeria of Miss Violet Farebrother. Mr. Nicholson plays Menenius Agrippa, the Two Tribunes are represented by Mr. Murray Carrington and Mr. Moffat Johnston, and Mr. Eric Maxon is the Tullus Aufidius.

Though never accounted one of the most popular of Shakespeare's plays with playgoers, Coriolanus has frequently held the stage in Mr. Benson's repertoire since first it was revived at Stratford-on-Avon in 1893. Miss Alice Chapin was then the Volumnia, Mrs. Benson the Virgilia, and Mr. Otho Stuart the Tullus Aufidius. Since then Mr. Benson has generally prevailed upon Miss Genevieve Ward to take the part of Volumnia, and her performance during the London seasons will be remembered. But in one series of performances given by Mr. Benson in the Northern towns a few years ago, Miss Elizabeth Robins was the Volumnia, and at other times Miss Frances Wetherall has played the part. Among Miss Nora Lancaster's predecessors in the rôle of Virgilia, in Mr. Benson's production, have been Miss Lily Brayton, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Miss Mabel Hackney, and, of late, Miss Helen Haye.

Amongst the lots in the sale of the late Lionel Brough's collection next week are about 100 theatrical and other autograph letters from celebrated actors and actresses and others, from the collection of the late H. T. Craven, father of Mr. Tom Craven.

Mr. Walter Howard's drama, The Prince and the Beggar Maid, will be put on at the Lyceum at the close of the run there of the successful drama The Fighting Chance, and he has also finished a new piece called The Boy King, which will be seen at the Lyceum in September. Miss Annie Saker will play the heroine.

Mr. Frank Curzon was summoned at Bow-street on Friday for assault by Mrs. Blanche Eardley, who insisted on wearing a big matinée hat at the Prince of Wales's Theatre. After hearing evidence, the magistrate dismissed the case, with five guineas costs against the complainant.

"The Winter's Tale" was performed at the New Theatre, New York, on the 28th ult., and Miss Edith Wynne Matthison won new honours as Herimone. Following so closely as it did her signal success in the rôle of Sister Beatrice, Miss Matthison's praiseworthy interpretation of the Shakespearean heroine served to confirm the congratulatory expressions called forth by the announcement of her engagement at this theatre. The play was performed in the Elizabethan manner, without scenery. This in itself is no novelty here, but tradition was followed more closely than usual, for the stage was reconstructed and extended over the space usually occupied by the orchestra to give the effect of the "main stage" of olden times. At the back of this was the "inner stage," with an alcove which served to represent such places as a cave, a shepherd's hut, or a room in a palace. The two side entrances to the "main stage" were hung with tapestries. Faultlessly staged by Mr. Louis Calvert, the play was delightfully interpreted by the excellent company engaged for this revival. Mr. Henry Kolker appeared as Leontes, Miss Leah Bateman-Hunter played Perdita, Mr. Henry Stanford was the Prince Florizel, and Miss Rose Coghlan the Pauline.

Mr. Wentworth Croke will be the enterprising manager to introduce to this country the celebrated American play The Dawn of To-morrow, which he will present at the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool, of which he is managing-director, on May 2. A brilliant cast will include Miss Gertrude Elliott (Mrs. Forbes-Robertson), Mr. Henry Ainley, who will play the hero slum-boy, Mr Herbert Waring, Mr. Jameson Lee Finney—an American who was to have created the part—Mr. J. H. Barnes, Mr. Charles Weir, Mr. John Tresahar, and Mr. Felix Pitt. The play will have its London production on May 9.

Mr. George Edwardes has made arrangements with Messrs. A. and S. Gatti to produce at the Vaudeville Theatre in May a new musical play entitled Die Geschiedene Frau (The Divorced Wife), written by Mr. Victor Leon, one of the authors of The Merry Widow, with music by Mr. Leo Fall, composer of The Dollar Princess. The cast will include Mr. Robert Evett, Mr. Rutland Barrington, Mr. Fred Emney, Mr. Huntley Wright, Miss Clara Evelyn and Miss Phyllis Dare. Mr. Charles E. Brookfield will do the adaptation and Mr. Adrian Ross will write the lyrics.

"Chantecler" will be produced at Drury Lane in French on June 27, with the company, the dresses, and the scenery as have been used at the Théâtre de la Porte St. Martin since February. Mr. Arthur Collins and M. Hertz, co-director with M. Jean Coquelin of the Porte St. Martin, have signed a contract for a visit of a fortnight, with the option to extend to a month. Guitry will play the Cock, M. Jean Coquelin will be the dog, and Mme. Marthe Mellot the Nightingale.

On Tuesday evening there will be produced in front of The House of Temperley at the Adelphi Theatre, the new "one-act tragedy," entitled A Pot of Caviare, by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The cast will include Mr. Murray Carson, Mr. Stratton Rodney, Mr. Claude King, Mr. A. G. Craig, Mr. A. Corney Grain, Mr. Arthur Burne, Mr. Arthur F. Thorne, Miss Hetta Bartlett, and Miss Dorothea Desmond. The period is 1900, the date of the Boxer Insurrection. Scene: The Professor's Bungalow in the Besieged European Quarter in Ichau, China.

Two members of The Merry Peasant company, Mr. Harry Bates and Mr. F. Bates, who are brothers, accomplished a very commendable piece of work at Croydon the other week. They came across a policeman who was being maltreated by about half-a-dozen rough characters, being attracted to the scene by the sound of the officer's whistle. Like true Britishers, they doffed their coats, and took the policeman's part, and, as a result of their efforts, the ringleader was taken into custody, and the other assailants were subsequently arrested and severely punished.

The police did not allow this incident to pass without placing on record the commendable conduct of the Merry Peasant actors, and a few days ago the latter received from New Scotland Yard the following letter: "Sir,—I am directed by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to convey to you his thanks for the valuable assistance you rendered to the police on the occasion of the arrest of a violent prisoner, at Addiscombe Road, Croydon, on the 30th ult. Had it not been for your timely aid, the constable concerned would no doubt have been more seriously assaulted. I am also to thank you for subsequently attending at the police-court and giving evidence.—Your obedient servant, C. Bathurst."

An appeal has been filed in the Bombay High Court on behalf of Mr. Maurice E. Bandmann, proprietor of the Bandmann Opera Company, against the judgment of the Hon. Mr. Justice Beaman, who, some weeks ago, awarded Mrs. Henrietta Torriano (professionally known as Miss Hettie Muret) Rs. 9,000 (£600) as damages for breach of contract, &c., with costs.

In the absence of Miss May Blayney, the title-rôle in The Little Damozel at Wyndham's Theatre, has been charmingly played by Miss Ruby Miller, a promising young actress, who recently made a pronounced success in The Parents' Progress, which precedes The Little Damozel.

Mr. W. V. Garrod's tour of A Country Girl in London is meeting with such sustained success that he will continue throughout the summer. This is Mr. Garrod's seventh year of travelling with his own companies, and in that time but seven weeks have been devoted to vacations, three of which were occupied in rehearsing.

Mr. Bernard Shaw's Getting Married was performed at the Lessing Theatre, Berlin, last Saturday, but met with a distinctly hostile reception, and the critics are unanimous in their condemnation of the piece, especially of the last act. It is pleasant to find our insular opinions endorsed by the best Teutonic thought.

Mr. William Lockhart, we are happy to learn, has quite recovered from his recent illness, and is once more playing with all his accustomed vigour.

Miss Edie Martin, who has been successful in the part of Eliza in The Dairymaids for three successive tours, has been re-engaged by Mr. Robert Macdonald for a further lengthy engagement with No. 1 company, commencing July next.

Mr. Harry P. Towers, Mr. Workman's business-manager at the Savoy, has purchased the production and entire British rights of The Mountaineers, the new comic opera by Guy Eden and Reginald Sommerville, which was Mr. Workman's first venture in management at the Savoy last September, and was only withdrawn to make room for the Gilbert-German opera Fallen Fairies. The entire production, with a number of the original London cast, will visit all the big provincial towns in the autumn, and an excellent tour has already been booked.

Various rumours have been circulated to the effect that, owing to the expiration of the present lease of the Garrick Theatre, Dame Nature, like Lady Frederick, would have to start on a grand tour of the West-End houses, Mr. Gilbert Porteous asks us to state that no move is in contemplation at present. Arrangements have now been satisfactorily settled by which the successful run of the play will be continued at its original home, and, as Miss Ethel Irving has now entirely recovered from the slight indisposition which kept her out of the bill for two nights, the play-going public are not likely to be deprived of the opportunity of seeing her in one of her finest performances.

The fourth performance organised by the Dramatic Sub-Committee of the Lyceum Club will take place on Wednesday, April 27, at 3.30, when two one-act plays will be given. Jim's Sweetheart, by Mrs. Wakeman Lathrop and Mrs. Annie Bonnett (first production), in which the characters are taken by Miss Jessica Salaman and Mr. Ivan Berlyn, and A Hundred Years Hence, by Margery Stanley Clark, which will be performed by Miss Muriel Currey as Astræa Dacres, a lady of the future; and Mr. John Beamish as the Hon. Billy Windermere, a strange survival from to-day. This will be the first London performance of the little piece, which was, however, successfully produced at the Royalty, Glasgow, in 1907, and toured in front of Lights Out in the provinces and suburbs. In the course of the afternoon Miss Beatrice von Holthoir will give some selections from her repertory.

Some significant observations will be found in a chat with Mr. W. Payne-Seddon, the well-known provincial manager, in another part of this paper. Mr. Seddon says:—"I have heard managers attribute bad weeks to rinks and picture shows, but I think I would rather have a skating rink against the theatre in every town for twelve months than one General Election hovering over the country for six weeks. It appears to me that all such temporary booms in amusements must ultimately assist any permanent amusement business. It wakes the public and brings them out. Every pound lost to the theatre during the height of the skating boom will be returned tenfold."

An interesting football match was played at Celtic Grounds, Belfast, on the 6th inst. between the Theatre Royal and Pantomime and the Grand Opera House, Belfast. The Grand Opera House won the toss, and played with the wind, but the Theatre Royal forward line got going, and a fine run by the centre-forward (S. Thompson, jun.) resulted in a goal. Play was fast, and the Theatre men kept at it, and from a crush in front of the Opera House goal S. Sullivan put through for the Theatre. The Opera House commenced to be aggressive, but the Theatre backs and goalkeeper put up a splendid defence until near half-time, when Jeff Mooney got through and scored for the Opera House, the Theatre leading at half-time by 2 to 1.

On the resumption of play it was a very one-sided affair, as the Theatre got through three times in about ten minutes. The Opera House played stubbornly, but there was no stopping the Theatre forwards, well backed up by the halves, and the final result found the Theatre successful by 8 to 1. The Theatre centre-forward (S. Thompson, jun., scored six goals and Sam got one, and S. Sullivan's one made up the eight. The staffs of both theatres and the entire pantomime company were present.

The Rehearsal Company will present Sheridan's School for Scandal on Monday afternoon, April 25, at the Rehearsal Theatre, with the following cast: Mr. Clive Currie as Charles Surface, Mr. W. R. Staveley as Sir Oliver Surface, and Miss Ursula Keene as Lady Teazle, supported by Messrs. Montague Mazeran, Osborn Adair, Victor Wiltshire, E. Shepherd, G. Carlton, C. Brown, and Dennis Clough, Misses Maud Bowyer, May Saker, Edith Carter, Clarice Laurence, Irene Delisse, and Mary Forbes.

"The Blue Bird" at the Haymarket Theatre now begins at 8.30 in the evening and at 2.30 at matinées, so those playgoers to whom dinner is a sacred function can enjoy the delightful fantasies without hurrying over their meal.

Owing to the change in the proprietary of the Theatre Royal, Wolverhampton, Mr. Lewis M. Chapman is relinquishing his appointment as resident-manager to take up a similar position at the Theatre Royal, Aston. Although Mr. Chapman's stay in Wolverhampton has not been of very long duration, he has, by his unfailing courtesy, made many friends, both in front and behind the curtain, and will carry away with him their sincere good wishes for his future welfare.

"The Upstart," a comedy, in three acts, by Tom Barry, was produced for copyright purposes at the Court Theatre on April 9.

Mr. Frank Howard, who has just concluded his third engagement as general-manager for Mr. Walter Melville's The Beggar Girl's Wedding company, has been engaged by Mr. Douglas Bruce to play the juvenile part and discharge the duties of general-manager for his summer tour of The Female Swindler. Mr. Howard is re-engaged by Mr. Walter Melville for autumn and Christmas.

Miss Nora Lancaster will appear with Mr. and Mrs. Benson at His Majesty's next week, on Monday as Bianca in The Taming of the Shrew, and on Tuesday as Virgilia in Coriolanus. During the Festival at Stratford-on-Avon the accomplished young actress will enact the romantic part of Luce in The Knight of the Burning Pestle, Viola in Twelfth Night, Rosalind in As You Like It, Calphurnia in Julius Cæsar, Sylvia in Two Gentlemen of Verona, and Perdita in A Winter's Tale.

The Eccentric Club will give their annual ladies' afternoon concert at the Connaught Rooms, Great Queen-street, Kingsway, on Tuesday, May 3. The concert is an event that is always looked forward to, and an entertaining afternoon is assured.

At the matinée which Lady Alington is arranging for the Waifs and Strays Society at the Playhouse on May 2, Miss Winifred Emery, Mlle. Gaby Deslys, Miss Louie Freear, Miss May Grey, Miss Rosalind Ivan, Mlle. Lydia Kyasht, Mr. Clarence Blakiston, Mr. H. B. Irving, Mr. Harry Lauder, Mr. James Welch, Mr. C. H. Workman, and Mr. Huntley Wright will appear, and Miss Gertrude Glyn, Miss May Hobson, Miss Ruby Kennedy, Miss Dorie Keppell, Miss Marion Lindsay, Miss Olive May, Miss Mickie, Miss Nancy More, and Miss Marjorie Napier will sell programmes.

Mr. Herbert Trench is rehearsing for eventual production at the Haymarket Theatre a comedy called Priscilla Runs Away, by the Countess Von Arnim, author of Elizabeth and her German Garden, in which Mr. H. Nye Chart and Miss Helen Haye will appear.

Mr. Robert Courtneidge has kindly lent the Shaftesbury Theatre for the production of Mr. Keble Howard's new three-act comedy, The Cheerful Knave, at a matinée there on May 10.

At a matinée at the Court Theatre on Monday, May 23, two new plays by Mr. Laurence Housman, entitled The Lord of the Harvest and A Likely Story, will be performed. In The Lord of the Harvest the principal parts will be sustained by Miss Sydney Fairbrother and Mr. Robert Farquharson. Miss Decima Moore and Miss Margaret Bussé will appear in A Likely Story.

Keith G. Kenneth's Woman of Kronstadt company again played to full enthusiastic houses at Sheerness last week. Miss Betty Fairfax is making a great success in the name part, getting overwhelming applause at the end of the second act.

Mr. Norman V. Norman is making a special production of the famous comedy, Caste, with Miss Beatrice Wilson as Polly Eccles. Mr. Norman Leslie will be the Eccles, Mr. Lock-Whittaker the Sam Gerridge, Miss M. Thenchard Esther Eccles, and Mr. Norman will play Captain Hawtree and George D'Alroy alternately.

Mr. Frank Bertram was the hero, or, rather, the victim, of the following amusing incident: During his last pantomime engagement at the Theatre Royal, Plymouth, there was a postman's concert at a neighbouring hall, and the artists were asked to assist. Mr. Bertram arranged a "cod" scene with the Demon King, and after the show they walked over to the concert hall, where his friend mounted the platform and began to sing "The Diver." After the first line, Mr. Bertram exclaimed, in a loud voice, "What a rotten song!" The singer stopped and looked annoyed, and the audience shouted "Silence!" He started again, and Mr. Bertram shouted, "What a rotten singer!" when he was immediately pounced on by six postmen and thrown outside. His friend on the stage hastened to make an explanation, and Mr. Bertram was carried back to his place, but the song was not interrupted again.

Miss Constance Moxon, who returned to town thoroughly invigorated some time since, was among the artists who gave their services at a matinée benefit at the Borough Theatre, Stratford in aid of the funds of West Ham Synagogue and Schools, on Thursday last. Miss Moxon, who can recall many comic opera triumphs, never sang better, and looked the picture of health. Among other "stars" in the programme were Miss Marie Lloyd, Miss Kate Carney, Mr. Ernest Shand, Miss Elise Craven, Mr. John Lawson and company, and Mr. Harry Paulton.

Councillor Henry Masterman, J.P., the esteemed manager of the Theatre Royal, Castleford, for the sixth time represents the largest ward in the town on the Council, on this occasion being returned unopposed. At the Council's first meeting Mr. Masterman was appointed one of the Overseers of the Poor.

"The Little Damozel" has made a triumphant entry into Hull, where Mr. Mark Blow and Miss Ida Molesworth's company has this week been playing to tremendous business at the Grand Theatre. The audiences have been most enthusiastic, and at the conclusion of each performance Miss Roxy Barton as Julie, Mr. Alick Chumley as Recky, and Mr. Guy Newall as Fitz have received veritable ovations.

Mr. Neil Forsyth, general manager of the Grand Opera Syndicate, Covent Garden, has written to the Paris Press, contradicting the announcement made by the Metropolitan Opera of New York in many French papers that Mme. Emmy Destinn will sing at the Châtelet in the Italian season, which is being organised in that theatre by the American management. Mme. Destinn could not be spared from Covent Garden.

Mr. A. E. Erlanger, who arrived in London on Tuesday, has decided, in co-operation with Mr. Charles Frohman, Mr. Henry W. Savage, Mr. Joseph Brooks, Mr. William Savage, and Mr. A. E. Erlanger to establish in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago next autumn a European theatre where no American plays are to be presented. Mr. Charles Frohman has promised a visit of the company from his London repertory theatre.

We regret to record the death from pneumonia of Mr. Compton Coutts, which took place in Guy's Hospital early on Monday morning. Mr. Coutts leaves two sons.

Mr. Charles Hannan has been engaged for several months upon a new musical comedy, the book and lyrics of which he has now completed, and negotiations for its production in London are in progress. Heather Belles is the pretty title of the piece, which is in two acts, the scenes being laid partly in England and partly abroad. The score is by Mr. Waldemar Sommerfelt, a composer who has had long musical experience at Continental opera houses.

Mr. George Dance's Our Miss Gibbs company met the Wakefield County Hall team, who have this year carried all before them, at football on Saturday. Several hundred spectators lined the beautifully-situated enclosure adjoining the Wakefield Public Park, and thoroughly enjoyed the game, which was carried on at an extremely furous rate. The play of the Gibbs team entirely upset the calculations of the homesters, who had expected a "walk-over," that of Durant (captain), Burnaby, Beresford, and Erne being really fine. Neither side was able to obtain the coveted goal, although the Gibbs company in the last ten minutes, had to submit to a gruelling time, but score the County Hall team could not. It is interesting to note Saturday was the first home game the County Hall team had failed to win, and the visitors had a hearty reception.

Mr. James Willard's famous drama In the Shadow of Night has triumphed in Dundee. "House Full" is the order of the day, and the unimpressionable Scot is shouting himself hoarse with enthusiasm over the varied vicissitudes of the hero and heroine of the play, well put on and well acted from beginning to end.

Mr. Robert Courtneidge, with characteristic generosity, will present the entire receipts at the first anniversary of The Arcadians at the Shaftesbury Theatre on the 28th inst. to the Fresh Air Fund.

Mr. Charles Gibbon has acquired the rights of The Little Stranger, which had such a successful run at the Criterion Theatre, and intends sending it on tour shortly. For the title-rôle he has a remarkable "find" for smallness and talent, who is bound to create a sensation in every town visited. The cast will be a strong one, and will include Miss Nellie Clyde, who is making a host of fresh admirers by her charming performance of Annie Meadows in Alone in London. Mr. Gibbon is sending Alone in London on another long tour, starting August Bank Holiday, and is making arrangements for an important new production, of which we shall have some interesting details to communicate later on.

Miss Titiell-Brune will, by permission of Mr. H. B. Irving, appear as Chorus in Mr. Lewis Waller's revival of Henry V. at His Majesty's Theatre on Thursday.

The twenty-first annual meeting of shareholders of the Bolton Theatre and Entertainments, Ltd., was held at the registered offices on Wednesday, when the usual dividend of ten per cent. was declared, and the directors complimented on the results, especially considering that the state of trade in Lancashire is far from being prosperous.

The old Liverpool Prince of Wales's Theatre, which closed as a theatrical house some years ago, has been acquired by a firm of auctioneers. When last put up for sale the property, which has the finest site of its special character in the city, having an extensive carriage drive in front, was withdrawn at £10,000, but there was a private bid of £12,090. That was some three years or more ago, since which time the once popular resort has been a sad sight in a busy thoroughfare. "The little house in the Square" was noted for its charming and amusing pantomimes, and many members of the theatrical profession, now occupying front positions, will readily recall their visits to the theatre in days when success was a regular visitor there. And now furniture will be sold in it!

The commodious Stratford Borough Theatre was packed from floor to ceiling on Thursday afternoon at the special matinée in aid of the funds of the West Ham Synagogue and Schools. The theatre was kindly lent for the occasion by the proprietress, Mrs. C. Ellis Fredericks, and the orchestra and staff gave their services. The artists who volunteered and appeared included Miss Marie Lloyd, Miss Elise Craven, Miss Constance Moxon, Mlle. Dolli, Miss Violet Essex, Mme. Ethel Dyer, Miss Vera Witmond, Miss Raie Estelle, Miss Bella Terry, Mr. J. J. Dallas, Mr. Leonard Teel, Colley and Scott, Mr. Harry Zetter, Mr. Archie Gervase, Mr. Arthur Boyne, Mr. Harry Paulton, Miss Dolly Harmer, Mr. Frederick Ross, Mr. Harry Brown, Miss Daisy Dormer, Mr. Harry Tate, in Motoring; Mr. John Lawson, in The Monkey's Paw and A Quiet Evening, in which Mr. Roland Bottomley, Mr. Robert Bottomley, and Miss Edith Bottomley appeared. Mr. Sam Fredericks (Theatre Royal, Stratford) stage-managed, and the musical directors were Mr. Ben Barrow (Borough Theatre) and Mr. Albert Whipp, Mus.Bac. (Stratford Empire), with Mr. Frank Rothsay "in front."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Mrs. Billington's Experiences.

Mrs. John Billington, interviewed by a Chronicle representative, has said, in reference to her early life: "We did not earn such big salaries in those days, and we did not have the music halls to fall back upon. When I first went on the stage at Hull I received 5s. a week and had to find my own dresses. The dressmaker did not play such a part in pieces in those days as is the case now. When my husband was first engaged for 'general utility,' as it was called, he received 12s. a week. We had plenty of hard work, but we had also an excellent training in our profession. Even now, when I look back at the old playbills, I can hardly imagine how we got through so much. For instance, this is a typical week, when I and my husband were playing in a provincial company at Birmingham—Monday, The Bottle; Tuesday, Seven Poor Travellers; Wednesday, Hamlet; Thursday, The Wren Boys; Friday, School for Scandal; Saturday, Ship on Fire.

"My husband, who was playing at that time all the juvenile and light comedy parts, was never out of harness. I remember once, when we were at Glasgow, an actor complaining to the then manager of the Theatre Royal that he was worked so hard he never had a chance to see the country; but the manager was not sympathetic. He just called to a scene shifter to let down a rural drop. 'There, sir,' he said to the complainant, 'there is green grass for you, sir, and trees for you, sir, and miles of country for you, sir. What more can you want?'

"Macready, I remember well, Mrs. Helen Faucit and Fanny Kemble. Helen Faucit was the most fascinating love-maker in the world. When I and my husband joined the old Adelphi company, those were the great days of Paul Bedford, Wright, and Mme. Celeste. It was the patronage given by Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort that really made theatre-going fashionable; and it led to the front rows of the pit being changed into stalls. Queen Victoria came more than once to see The Colleen Bawn at the Adelphi."

Of Mrs. Dion Boucicault, Mrs. Billington said he was fond of practical jokes. "I remember once, when embracing me on the stage, she took the opportunity to slip a small piece of ice down the back of my neck. Ugh! It makes me shiver now to think of it!" Toole, said Mrs. Billington, anxious to work up the necessary emotion and tears for his part in Dot, was found behind the scenes with a big onion!

Dr. Cowen on Composers.

Dr. Frederic Cowen, the famous musical director, who will lead the Festival of Empire orchestra at each of the concerts to be given in the provinces on the tour, was recently invited to express some comment on the music of to-day and his views on the position of the British composer. "In all the history of music," said Dr. Cowen, "there was never a period when the British public was so ready and willing as now to recognise genius in a composer. And there was never a time when the public exercised so keen a discrimination. For genuine talent, for unmistakable genius, the public has ears and sympathy; rigorously it sets its face against the imitator, no matter how clever may be his imitation or how skilfully cloaked in modernity. Originality in theme and treatment will always command attention and appreciation. I know that among young composers there is a pessimistic feeling that genius waits in vain for adequate appreciation, but to those composers I would say: 'Convince yourself that the fault lies solely with the public.' To achieve success in music one has carefully to consider many prejudices. While the composer's work itself must ring true with the note of genius and individuality, his attitude towards his fellows in the social sense must be carefully studied.

"When a man comes to me and in a despairing voice villifies the public because it has refused, steadfastly, to recognise his talents, I am almost compelled to be sceptical regarding those very talents of which he speaks. If genius be there, the British public will detect and appreciate it, and no amount of influence—I care not from what quarter—can detract from a composer's genius once the public has made up its mind about it. 'It is weary work,' some composers complain, 'this waiting for recognition.' It is enough to point to the almost meteoric rise of Sir Edward Elgar or Richard Strauss to obtain corroboration of my statement that real genius is not allowed to languish. My advice to the young composer? Just this: 'Work, and work hard; avoid the pitfalls of imitation, and if your work merits it, recognition and success will come as a natural sequence.'

"All over the country, and especially in the provinces, there is a growing desire to pay homage to good music. This tour of the Festival of Empire orchestra is bound to arouse the interest of the music-loving public. The men who have been engaged and whom you see here to-day rehearsing, have been students in the best schools, and I feel sure that the public will appreciate the programme that is to be played. It is my experience that an orchestra concert finds greater favour with the public than a choral concert, but the merits of the orchestra must be undeniable. In the provinces, if I may say so without giving offence, the appreciation of good music is more marked than in London; there is no attempt to follow what may be termed the 'fashionable' in music."

A Happy Hamlet.

The American actor Creston Clarke, whose death we recently recorded, thought the public would better appreciate the uncompromising extremity of Hamlet's gloom if they first saw in the flesh the Hamlet of whom Ophelia, supposing him to be mad, regretfully and passionately speaks—the Hamlet she had known in the happy days, matchless in beauty, the leader of fashion, the mirror of elegance, the writer of love songs, or, as the "dear maid" calls them, "music vows"; the heir of Denmark's throne. He should come thus upon the stage (said Creston Clarke), not only as a word-portrait, but as a figure and a fact. And so, in a version of the tragedy given by Clarke in a small American town, he did.

A Cheery Tableau.

To the astonishment even of a South American audience, the play was preceded by the presentation of a tableau showing Hamlet, a gaily attired gentleman, strolling bravely and buoyantly about the room of state, evidently the pet of the entire Court; "as happy as a king who is not a king"; paying (in dumb show) witty compliments to courtesying beauty; actively hobnobbing with the sport and valour of the throng; and going up to his beloved father at intervals to kiss his hand and to have his head stroked in return. It was a risky experiment to make, but it passed off without any shooting being done; and a local paper alleged that the tableau was a great improvement.

Appropriate Productions.

A new theatre having been opened at Reno, Nevada, where the divorces come from, a local newspaper has suggested that the following plays be performed there: Divorçons, The Great Divide, The Struggle Everlasting, Her Husband's Wife, The Girl He Couldn't Leave Behind Him, Just a Wife, and The Bachelor's Baby.

We shall be obliged if our readers will send us any amusing anecdotes they may hear, or accounts of any quaint incidents they may witness while acting or rehearsing.

On Monday Evening, April 11, at His Majesty's Theatre, Shakespeare's Tragedy,

"HAMLET."

Claudius	Mr. Edward Sass
Hamlet	Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree
Polonius	Mr. William Haviland
Horatio	Mr. Norman Trevor
Laertes	Mr. Henry Ainley
Rosencrantz	Mr. Henry Morrell
Guildenstern	Mr. Shiel Barry
Marcellus	Mr. Harry C. Hewitt
Bernardo	Mr. Frank Esmond
Francisco	Mr. Clifford Heatherley
Priest	Mr. C. H. Croker-King
Ghost of Hamlet's Father	Mr. Lyn Harding
First Gravedigger	Mr. E. M. Robson
Second Gravedigger	Mr. Nigel Playfair
First Actor	Mr. Hubert Carter
Second Actor	Mr. Frederick James
Court Jester	Mr. Arthur Cleave
Gertrude	Miss Helen Haye
Ophelia	Miss Evelyn D'Alroy
Player Queen	Miss Hilda Moore

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree made his first appearance in the part of Hamlet at the Haymarket Theatre on Jan. 21, 1892, with Mr. Kemble as Polonius, Mr. Macklin as Claudius, Mr. Fred Terry as Laertes, Lady Tree as Ophelia, Miss Rose Leclerq as the Queen, and Mr. Fernandez as the Ghost. The success of the performance was complete and undeniable; and an equally enthusiastic reception was given to the revival of the play at His Majesty's on Monday, with Sir Herbert Tree in the part of the Prince. It is unnecessary, so well known is his rendering, to discuss or describe it in detail now. The clear, deliberate delivery of the lines of the poet; the conscientious development of the deeper meaning of every word and sentence; the plentiful ingenuity of the "business" with which the production is embellished; and the sensitive, expressive earnestness of the performance of the principal part, mark Sir Herbert's treatment of it in 1910, as they did his essay in the character of Hamlet in 1892. It is still the same original, effective, and picturesque performance. The cast, however, is new, and there are some interesting and excellent achievements. A bright, animated, and picturesque personage is Mr. Henry Ainley's Laertes. Mr. Ainley makes him a dashing, impulsive, spirited youth, warm in affection for his father, and with a very natural anxiety for his sister's safety. This view of the character makes Laertes' longing for revenge for the murder of his father more natural, and is well worth considering. Miss Evelyn D'Alroy won all hearts on her entrance by her "sweet petitionary grace" and refined and maidenly beauty, and retained her hold on the audience by the exquisite delicacy and sensitiveness, the fine expressiveness and the picturesque variety of her performance. Miss D'Alroy's depiction of Ophelia's madness was very unexaggerated and natural, and she spoke her lines with a pathos which was irresistible. Her singing of the snatches of old ballads was most melodious, and the gentle, sensitive Ophelia was depicted with a distinctness and tenderness that were worthy of the warmest praise. Mr. Edward Sass, an actor who can always be relied upon, was an admirable Claudius; and Mr. Norman Trevor ably suggested the honesty and affectionateness of Horatio. Mr. William Haviland's Polonius was a sound, careful, and characteristic rendering, and his delivery of the Lord Chamberlain's advice to Laertes was a model of elocution; and Rosencrantz and Guildenstern had excellent exponents in Mr. Henry Morrell and Mr. Shiel Barry, Mr. Harry C. Hewitt and Mr. Frank Esmond being quite satisfactory as Marcellus and Bernardo, and Mr. Clifford Heatherley doing well as Francisco. Mr. Lyn Harding, whose Ghost was, by ingenious contrivance, given an illusive air of mystery, spoke the lines of the part with mysteriously moderated emphasis; and Mr. E. M. Robson gave a rich, quaint, and mellow rendering of the First Gravedigger, Mr. Nigel Playfair well supporting Mr. Robson as the Second Gravedigger. Mr. Hubert Carter's delivery of the "Hecuba" speech was a fine instance of bold and flamboyant elocution; and Mr. Frederick James deserves praise for his performance as the Second Actor. An interesting performance was given by Miss Helen Haye as Gertrude. The lines of the Player Queen were spoken with excellent distinctness and emphasis by Miss Hilda Moore; and Mr. C. H. Croker-King was effectively stern and ecclesiastical as the Priest. The play was performed against a simple background, the effects being created by a clever system of lighting; and some fine incidental music was introduced to intensify the situations.

On Tuesday Afternoon, April 12,

"KING LEAR."

Lear	Mr. Norman McKinnel
King of France	Mr. Franklin Dyall
Duke of Burgundy	Mr. E. A. Warburton
Duke of Cornwall	Mr. J. Fisher White
Duke of Albany	Mr. Kenyon Musgrave
Earl of Kent	Mr. Charles V. France
Earl of Gloucester	Mr. James Hearn
Edgar	Mr. Charles Quartermaine
Edmund	Mr. Dawson Milward
Doctor	Mr. Edward Rigby
Fool	Mr. H. R. Hignett
Oswald	Mr. Norman Page
Curan	Mr. J. Sherard
Gentleman	Mr. Warburton Gamble
Herald	Mr. Cassells Cobb
Servant to Cornwall	Mr. F. Ridley
Captain to Goneril	Mr. R. W. Hutton
Attendant to Lear	Mr. W. R. Haines
Messenger	Mr. Dickson-Kenwin
Cordelia	Miss Ellen O'Malley
Goneril	Miss Ada Ferrar
Regan	Miss Marie Polini

Distinguished visitors have this week contributed to the Shakespeare celebrations at His Majesty's, the first to answer Sir Herbert Tree's invitation being Mr. Herbert Trench's Haymarket company, who staged King Lear at Tuesday's matinée. The production was in all respects the same as that given at the house opposite last autumn, and the cast remained practically unchanged. Headed by Mr. Norman McKinnel, the company gave a deeply interesting performance, and the close of each act was marked by enthusiastic applause.

It is in its rugged passion and intensity that Mr. McKinnel's Lear excels, and the actor was magnificently impressive in the depiction of Lear's rage, the kingly outbursts being declaimed with thrilling effect. The venerable figure of the dethroned monarch stood out impressively in every scene, and if the more emotional parts of the dialogue were not imbued with that depth of fervour which one would wish, the facial expression clearly denoted the anguish which the royal mind was undergoing. Miss Ellen O'Malley again charmed with her sweet and tender portrayal of Cordelia, admirable alike in its maidenly modesty and graceful expression. Miss Ada Ferrar represented realistically the venomous nature of Goneril, and the spiteful malevolence of the undutiful Regan was vividly pictured by Miss Marie Polini. Mr. Charles V. France repeated his fine performance of the devoted Earl of Kent, his artistic elocution being agreeably noticeable.

The artistic qualities of Mr. Charles Quartermaine's Edgar were once more recognised in a skilfully varied performance, and Mr. J. Fisher White again demonstrated his sterling dramatic ability as the Duke of Cornwall, his depiction of the fiery noble being eloquently expressive in voice and gesture. Mr. James Hearn gave his touchingly pathetic impersonation of the faithful Gloucester, and Mr. E. A. Warburton and Mr. Kenyon Musgrave as Burgundy and Albany respectively again submitted excellent readings.

One notable change in the cast was made in the case of Oswald, which was originally played by the late Mr. Trevor Lowe. The rôle on Tuesday was entrusted to Mr. Norman Page, who clothed it with a wealth of sinister suggestion that made the part quite fascinating. Mr. Franklin Dyall well interpreted the chivalrous and noble character of the King of France. Mr. Dawson Milward's fine physique lent added effect to his depiction of the recreant Edmund, and Mr. H. R. Hignett was a genial and resourceful Fool. The remainder of the parts were ably enacted by their respective exponents, and the mounting and effects lacked nothing of the breadth and elaborateness that marked Mr. Trench's former revival.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Arthur Bourchier and company were seen in a most interesting revival of

"THE MERCHANT OF VENICE."

Shylock	Mr. Arthur Bourchier
Jessica	Miss Enid Sass
Tubal	Mr. Michael Sherbrooke
Prince of Morocco	Mr. Bertram Forsyth
Prince of Aragon	Mr. George Bealby
Duke of Venice	Mr. Clive Currie
Antonio	Mr. Acton Bond
Bassanio	Mr. Arthur Wontner
Gratiano	Mr. A. Holmes-Gore
Lorenzo	Mr. Godfrey Tearle
Salarino	Mr. William Burchell
Salanio	Mr. Douglas Imbert
Salerio	Mr. Alfred Bristowe
Launcelot Gobbo	Mr. A. E. George
Old Gobbo	Mr. Claude Edmunds
Leonardo	Mr. Dallas Cairns
Stephano	Miss Daisy Markham
Clerk of the Court	Mr. C. Dallas
Portia	Miss Dorothea Baird
Nerissa	Miss Muriel Beaumont

The representation was announced "As played at the command performance at Windsor Castle, Nov. 16, 1905." But this, however, only refers to the arrangement of the scenes, and not to the cast, which, with the exception of two of its members, is entirely different to that playing at Windsor on the occasion referred to.

Mr. Arthur Bourchier's well-considered embodiment of Shylock once more won the favour of a critical audience, who followed the play with the rapt attention one expects from lovers of Shakespeare. The antipathy against the merchant in the third scene of the first act was expressed with concentrated power, and there was a gleam of malignant triumph as Shylock uttered the words, "I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him." There was a tone of dignified protestation in the Jew's telling the merchant of his abuse. The crescendo of passion came when Shylock learns of his daughter's desertion, and the fit of hysterical rage in the presence of Tubal made its customary deep impression, the venom of hate towards Antonio being expressed with uncommon virulence. The great contrast came in the Trial scene, first in Shylock's servile adoration of the supposed lawyer, and in his affecting departure from the judgment hall.

Miss Dorothea Baird's Portia is new, and therefore the actress may be pardoned the nervousness which affected her opening lines with Nerissa; but she played the scene with a command of delicate raillery that captured the house. Later there was real feeling in the scene where Bassanio chooses the casket, and the maidenly apprehension of the heiress was very clearly expressed. She made Portia a Venetian maid of sense and sensibility, and the delivery of the famous mercy speech lacked nothing of elocutionary grace. Mr. Arthur Wontner's Bassanio rose to the heights of sentimental devotion in the choosing of the casket scene, and his chivalrous utterances to the fair chatelaine of Belmont were full of southern fervour. Mr. Bertram Forsyth's speech as the Prince of Morocco had all the simple dignity required; Mr. George Bealby realised the conceit of the Prince of Aragon; and the tender melancholy of Antonio found an apt and dignified interpreter in Mr. Acton Bond, who put much pathos into the farewell of Bassanio. The optimist of the play, Gratiano, who "speaks an infinite deal of nothing," was in the capable keeping of Mr. A. Holmes-Gore, whose speeches to the Jew in the Trial scene had their full measure of indignation. Mr. Clive Currie's Duke of Venice was sonorous and gently dignified in the appeal to Shylock to "glance an eye of pity" on the merchant's losses. Mr. Godfrey Tearle infused a strain of tender dalliance into the lines of Lorenzo in the moonlight scene with Jessica, sweetly played by Miss Enid Sass. Mr. A. E. George's Launcelot Gobbo was quite in the spirit of the Shakespearean clown, and was played on unctuous lines, without descending into mere buffoonery; and Mr. William Burchill, Mr. Douglas Imbert, and Mr. Alfred Bristowe, as Salarino, Salanio, and Salerio were responsible for spirited performances. Miss Muriel Beaumont's Nerissa had the true touch of comedy; and Mr. Claude Edmunds did well as Old Gobbo.

On Thursday Afternoon, April 14, Revival of

"HAMLET."

Claudius	Mr. Edward Sass
Hamlet	Mr. H. B. Irving
Polonius	Mr. A. E. George
Laertes	Mr. Arthur Wontner
Horatio	Mr. Eille Norwood
Osric	Mr. Stuart Musgrove
Rosencrantz	Mr. Frank Randell
Guildenstern	Mr. J. Patric Curwen
Marcellus	Mr. H. Lawrence Leyton
Bernardo	Mr. King Fordham
Francisco	Mr. Ronald Pertwee
Reynaldo	Mr. W. Graham
First Player	Mr. Frank Cochrane
Second Player	Mr. Alex. Scott-Gatty
Priest	Mr. Charles Beaumont
First Gravedigger	Mr. Tom Reynolds
Second Gravedigger	Mr. Arthur Curtis
Ghost of Hamlet's Father	Mr. Henry Vibart
Gertrude	Miss Esmé Beringer
Ophelia	Miss Dorothea Baird
Player Queen	Miss Dora Barton

In continuation of the series of Shakespearean plays at His Majesty's Theatre Hamlet was played on Thursday afternoon by Mr. H. B. Irving and his company. Mr. Irving has appeared in several of the characters in which his distinguished father won fame, but no severer test of his ability to worthily follow in the footsteps of Sir Henry Irving could be found than the embodiment of the Danish Prince. All who were admirers of the father will rejoice in the fact that the son has come out of the severe ordeal with flying colours, and that his Hamlet is a performance upon which he can be sincerely and heartily congratulated. Old and experienced playgoers on Thursday afternoon discerned in Mr. Irving's rendering of the character many points of supreme excellence, and certainly clear evidence of a careful and conscientious study of a complex character, respecting which there has always existed amongst Shakespearean authorities much diversity of opinion. Mr. Irving's power of expressing intensity of feeling has been shown in other less trying parts, but the rôle of Hamlet allows him greater scope for the display of this power. He is also admirable in those passages which a quaint humour renders so effective; more particularly does this remark apply to the encounters with tedious old Polonius. Mr. Irving's Hamlet is not specially remarkable for the introduction of novel business; but in the scene with his mother he seizes the portrait of Claudius and, dashing it down on the table, extinguishes the taper, leaving only a single light burning in the rear of the stage. This proved highly effective. Mr. Irving was called before the curtain twice at the conclusion of the first and second acts and several times at the end of the performance. Finally, he spoke a few words, stating that he was proud of the privilege of taking part in the Shakespearean Festival at His Majesty's and of appearing before such an appreciative audience. He would take the opportunity of thanking Sir H. B. Tree for kindly permitting one of his own company—Mr. Edward Sass—to play, at short notice, the part of the King in the place of Mr. Frank Tyars, who had been taken suddenly ill. He and the members of his company were very grateful for the way in which they had been received that afternoon, and he thanked the audience with all his heart.

Miss Dorothea Baird did excellent work in the part of Ophelia, her portrayal being marked by much charm of manner, whilst in the "mad" scene she stirred the deepest sympathies of the audience. Mr. Edward Sass gave an admirable impersonation of Claudius, and Miss Esmé Beringer was successful in her rendering of the Queen. Mr. A. E. George was quite safe and sound in his performance of Polonius; Mr. Arthur Wontner played with commendable spirit the part of Laertes; and Mr. Eille Norwood was a satisfactory Horatio. Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and Osric had good representatives in Mr. Frank Randell, Mr. Patric Curwen, and Mr. Stuart Musgrove. Marcellus and Bernardo were ably embodied by Mr. H. Lawrence Leyton and Mr. King Fordham. Mr. Frank Cochrane and Mr. Alex. Scott-Gatty as the First and Second Players and Miss Dora Barton as the Player Queen did very well. Mr. Tom Reynolds was genuinely humorous in his impersonation of the First Gravedigger, receiving adequate support from Mr. Arthur Curtis as the Second Gravedigger. Mr. Henry Vibart as the Ghost spoke his lines impressively; and Mr. Chas. Beaumont as the Priest, Mr. Ronald Pertwee as Francisco, and Mr. W. Graham as Reynaldo completed a thoroughly competent cast.

STRATFORD-ON-AVON FESTIVAL.

The 1910 Stratford-on-Avon Shakespeare Festival celebrations bid fair to constitute a record. The Memorial Theatre of the quiet little Warwickshire town will in a week be the scene of a series of performances of Shakespeare's plays by the pick of England's actors and actresses, under the direction of Mr. F. R. Benson. Pilgrims from America and the Colonies—an increased number of visitors from Canada is expected this year—will be there for the worship of Shakespeare, and they will be joined by hundreds of English trippers. Both the rich and the poor inhabitants of the town welcome these visitors, and there will be very few houses without a paying guest during the three weeks commencing next Saturday, and the hotels will be full.

Local ladies and gentlemen are very enthusiastic over this year's programme, and apart from the performances in the theatre there will be many interesting features and impressive ceremonies. One local gentleman has promised one mile of festoons towards the amount required to decorate three miles of town. According to Mr. F. R. Benson the Provisional Committee have worked hard to elicit the practical sympathy and support of enthusiasts throughout the civilised world, and birthday wreaths or their equivalent will be forthcoming from all parts of England and Scotland, from New Zealand, Canada, America, and from Weimar, the birthplace of Goethe. From Eton, Oxford, and Cambridge, and other centres of learning shields, wreaths, &c., will be sent. A fine collection of national flags has been augmented with emblems from New South Wales, South Australia, the Netherlands, Natal, India, the Cape of Good Hope, Servia, Bolivia, Peru, and Mexico. Over forty invitations have been issued to the representatives of different countries to take part in the unfurling ceremony.

Mr. Benson and the Memorial Committee have arranged a splendid series of performances, a special feature of which will be the prize play. The Memorial Committee offered a prize of £300 for a new play to be produced by Mr. Benson during the Festival. The Piper is the title of the successful play, and the authoress is Mrs. Lionel Marks, a lady not unknown in American literary circles. The competition was open to the world, and it is gratifying to Englishmen to know that the authoress of The Piper is connected with a Birmingham family. Mr. R. Halford, Mr. Benson's manager, became acquainted with this interesting piece of news through the following letter, which he recently received from Mr. Lionel Marks, the husband of the successful authoress: "It was the intention of Mrs. Marks to write to you yesterday, but her convalescence has not proceeded far enough to admit her to do it. It is her intention to sail from America on April 9 and to go to Birmingham, where my parents live. She will leave there her eighteen-months-old daughter and her one-month-old son, and then she will be willing and glad to assist Mr. Benson, should he desire it, in any way she can." So we may expect Mrs. Marks to see the production of her play on Thursday evening, May 5, after which she will be presented with the prize of £300.

"ORPHEUS" AT THE SAVOY.

On Tuesday afternoon the first of the six matinées of Gluck's Orpheus in English, produced by Miss Marie Brema, was given at the Savoy Theatre. For this occasion the chorus have been personally trained by Miss Brema and Miss Florence von Ettlinger, new scenery painted specially by Mr. Bruce-Smith for Acts 1, 3, and 4, and, to quote the programme, an endeavour made "to put as much Greek atmosphere as possible in Gluck's classic work, and to represent this latter, not as a conventional opera, but as a production in which song and dramatic action are as closely associated as in the Wagnerian drama." It was evident on Tuesday afternoon that great pains had been taken with the production of Orfeo, and the result was a complete artistic success. Miss Marie Brema's impersonation of Orpheus has long been known and widely esteemed for its fine pathetic expression and her delightful singing of the familiar "Che farò." Miss Viola Tree sang Eurydice's music with much sympathetic grace, and the part of Amor was charmingly sung and acted by Miss Pearl Ladd. After the first act Miss Brema was called on four times, and at the close all three artists had a most enthusiastic greeting. The solo quartett was admirably sung by Miss Dorothy Gandy, Miss Florence von Ettlinger, Mr. Hubert Bromilow, and Mr. Ernest Groom; and Miss Margaret Morris deserved special praise for her clever arrangement of the graceful classic dances, and her own efforts as principal dancer. Mr. Bruce Smith's lovely scene, The Elysian Fields, was greatly admired, and the conductor, Mr. Michael Balling, of Bayreuth, also shared in the honours of the afternoon. In this score used by Miss Brema the changes made are from the adaptation by Mr. F. A. Gevaert (Paris, Lemoine), and adopted in the performances she gave in Brussels and Paris. For the chorus "The god of love" a chorus from Gluck's Echo and Narcissus is substituted, and the three acts of the opera are arranged into four scenes, while the florid aria sung at the end of the first act is omitted.

Miss Brema's revival of Orpheus is given under the patronage of H.R.H. Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll.

THE REPERTORY THEATRE.

On Wednesday, April 13, at the Duke of York's Theatre, the Pierrot Play, in Three Acts, by Laurence Housman and Granville Barker, Music by Joseph Moorat, entitled

"PRUNELLA."

Pierrot	Mr. Charles Maude
Scaramel	Mr. Arthur Whitby
Kennel	Mr. O. P. Heggie
Callow	Mr. Harold Chapin
Mouth	Mr. Frederick Lloyd
Hawk	Mr. Hubert Harben
Doll	Miss Mary Jerrold
Tawdry	Miss Evangeline Hilliard
Coquette	Miss Nell Carter
Romp	Miss Sybil Thorndike
Prim	Miss Florence Haydon
Privacy	Miss Penelope Wheeler
Prude	Miss Agnes Hill
Queer	Miss Ada Marius
Quaint	Miss Mary Barton
First Gardener	Mr. Whitford Kane
Second Gardener	Mr. Leslie Carter
Third Gardener	Mr. E. W. Garden
Boy	Mr. Donald Calthrop
Statue of Love	Mr. Lewis Casson
Prunella	Miss Dorothy Minto

There is a weird fascination about Messrs. Laurence Housman and Granville Barker's play, Prunella, which was originally produced at the Court Theatre on December 23, 1904. The simple theme is embellished with some neatly-turned and clever verse, and Mr. Joseph Moorat's sympathetic music adroitly heightens the effect of the situations. The Pierrot of this story is a queer, fantastic creature, who believes himself to be without a heart. Prunella, the heroine of the tale, is a young girl who has been secluded in the quaint old house whose Dutch garden forms the single scene of the play. Pierrot, who passes by with a troupe of mummers, ascends to the maiden's room by a ladder, and induces her to come down into the garden, where a Statue of Cupid, which becomes eloquent for a while, advises her to elope with Pierrot. Years afterwards Pierrot, who has lost sight of Prunella, returns to the Dutch garden; and now all the world is old for Pierrot. His masquerading friends are worn and decrepit, his spirits are low, and he has an aching heart. With his valet, Scaramel, he returns to the garden. He has bought the house of the proprietress, now grown poor, and he enters with his crew of stale revellers for yet another bout of folly. While he is indoors Prunella, in rags, enters the garden, is disclaimed by Scaramel, and is set by him to brush up the dead leaves. Then she disappears, and Pierrot, whose thoughts will return to her, in pure fantasy ascends the ladder to her room as he did when she ran away with him. The emptiness of the apartment strikes him with horror, and he conceives the idea of evoking the ghost of Prunella. After the Statue of Love has been re-animated, and has spoken wise words, Prunella appears from behind it; and when Pierrot realises that it is really his old love, and not her spirit, he takes her in his arms.

The part of Pierrot requires light and delicate handling, and Mr. Charles Maude was able to endow his reading with just the needed quaintness and oddity; Miss Dorothy Minto's delivery of the pretty lines which are put into the mouth of Prunella was clear and emotional, and the charm of her plaintive pathos was very tender and winning; the grim and cynical valet, Scaramel, had an excellent exponent in Mr. Arthur Whitby; and the three old maids were tactfully depicted by Miss Florence Haydon, Miss Penelope Wheeler, and Miss Agnes Hill. The speeches of the Statue of Love were delivered with commendable distinctness and point by Mr. Lewis Casson, the original representative of the rôle; and the three comic gardeners were humorously embodied by Messrs. Whitford Kane, Leslie Carter, and E. W. Garden. The motley crew of masqueraders were well represented by Messrs. O. P. Heggie, Harold Chapin, Frederick Lloyd, Hubert Harben, and Misses Mary Jerrold, Evangeline Hilliard, Nell Carter, and Sybil Thorndike; and Miss Ada Marius and Miss Mary Barton were excellent in every way as Queer and Quaint. All the subordinate characters in Prunella are individual, and are vividly sketched, and each impersonation deserves praise, the mummers' costumes being fancifully designed by Miss Pamela Colman Smith. Mr. Theodore Stier conducted an orchestra which rendered the incidental music perfectly well.

THESPIDS C.C. ANNUAL DINNER.

Mr. George Alexander presided over the second annual dinner of the Thespids Cricket Club at the Criterion Restaurant last Sunday night. A very full attendance was recorded, and a most enjoyable evening spent.

Mr. Geo. Alexander said he was glad to hear from their energetic secretary, Mr. Cameron, that the Thespids C.C. was in a prosperous condition, both financially and otherwise. He regretted that it had not been practicable to buy a ground, as had been originally intended, for their private use, but there was consolation in knowing that they had secured their old ground at New Malden. It always gave him very great pleasure to preside at these dinners, and it was an even greater pleasure still to congratulate Mr. Ernest Cameron, the secretary, on his splendid work in connection with the club, and in wishing good luck to and toasting the club, he had a pleasant task in coupling the name of Mr. Cameron with it.

In a brief response, Mr. Cameron expressed his pleasure in seeing Mr. J. M. Barrie present with them, and hinted that there was a possibility in another year's time of getting all the vice-presidents there. Mr. Cameron then read a letter from Mr. Aubrey Smith, their captain, who was in America, regretting his absence from the function. That gentleman, however, stated that he hoped to be back and in the best of form, by the end of May. In the meantime, Mr. Brian Egerton had been elected vice-captain, and would carry on the duties of chief in Mr. Smith's absence.

Mr. J. M. Barrie, in proposing the health of Mr. Geo. Alexander, made some characteristically humorous remarks. He mentioned that he was one of the few Scotsmen who were driven out of Scotland, and, like those who had preceded him, he came to the nearest place. The nearest place was London. But it was left to Geo. Alexander to be the first to lure him on to play cricket. As a slow bowler he was quite sure he was an extraordinary individual. He had seen slow bowlers at Lords, but he thought they should be labelled "fast." His bowling was so slow that against bad batting it was sometimes ineffective; but, strangely enough, good batsmen could do nothing with it. He remembered how Mr. Alexander once led an eleven to Esher to play a match against the oldest inhabitants. None of Mr. Alexander's eleven knew much about cricket. But going down in the train Mr. Alexander said: "Oh, don't worry; we shall do all right. Intellect is bound to tell in the end!" Remembering this statement of Mr. Alexander's when his side went into bat, Mr. Barrie thought it best to put Mr. Alexander in first.

The artists who contributed to an excellent programme after the few speeches had been recorded, were Mme. Perelli, Miss Saumerez, Miss Dolly Harmer, Mr. Leslie Stiles, Mr. Bleackley, Mr. Hubert Harben, Mr. Archie Naish, and Mr. Harry Nye Chart.

Lady Hay's production of the Pageant of Empire at the Shaftesbury Theatre on May 30 and June 7, in aid of the Junior Branch of the Watford Habitation of the Primrose League, will be stage-managed by Mr. Charles Cruikshanks.

A "PROBLEM" PLAY.

Miss Mary Mannering, an American actress, after experiencing some difficulty in finding a good play, seems to have secured one at last that is well suited to her, and one that is pleasing to the public. The play was produced on Feb. 8 at the Comedy Theatre, New York. It is called A Man's World, and was written by Miss Rachel Crothers, who will be remembered as the author of Three of Us. The entire action of the play takes place in the different apartments of a boarding house occupied by artists, musicians, and literary folk. "Frank Ware" (Miss Mannering) is the pen name of a lady novelist who devotes her spare time to missionary work among women. She has adopted as her own a little boy known simply as "Kiddie," the nameless child of an unfortunate woman whom she met some years ago in Paris. The mystery surrounding the paternity of this child gives rise to a scandal in the house, there being a strong suspicion that the youngster is the son of "Frank Ware" herself and Malcolm Gaskell, a publisher, who is known to be in love with her, and who visits her frequently. Leonie, a singer, who boards in the same house, and who is very jealous of "Frank," is largely responsible for the growth of the scandal. It is she who discovers in a miniature portrait of "Kiddie" a resemblance between the child and Gaskell, and points it out to her fellow-boarders. "Frank" is shocked at the suggestion, and declares that the resemblance is purely imaginary. Then the repentant Leonie, seeing the pain she has caused, proceeds to argue from the general point of view in opposition to the decided opinions held by the heroine of the story. What these opinions are may be gathered from the bit of dialogue that follows:

Leonie: I'm sorry I stirred this up. I ought to have kept my mouth shut. It was imagination. You can see this thing in almost any picture. Let it alone. It's the wildest, most improbable thing in the world.

"Frank": You don't understand. Whoever "Kiddie's" father was, I've hated him all these years. Every time I look at the child and think that somewhere in the world is a man who branded him with shame, I boil with rage. Every time I see a girl who's made a mess of her life because she loved a man, I think of "Kiddie's" mother, with the whole burden and disgrace of it and the man scot free and going gaily on.

Leonie: But you can't stir up any man's life. You're lucky if it looks right on top. If you love this man take him—that's the point, and leave this thing alone. It's a man's world. That's the size of it. What's the use of knocking your head against things you can't change? You can't change anything to save your neck. Men are men.

"Frank": If women decided that men should be equally disgraced for the same sin, they would be.

Leonie: Oh, yes. If—if. That's easy enough to preach. When it comes to morality a woman never holds anything against a man. What good would it do if she did? She'd be alone.

"Frank": It's because women allow men to live on a lower plane, and then take them as husbands, that men are as they are.

Leonie: But look here, what if Malcolm Gaskell were "Kiddie's" father? You love him, and love is no joke with you. What are you going to do about it? Throw him over because you happen to find a little incident in his life that isn't creditable to him? Where will you be? What becomes of you? Not much fun for you for the rest of your life, with something gnawing inside of you like so many wolves. He's the man you want—take him, and thank your lucky stars you've got him. That's all I see in it.

"Frank" questions Gaskell, however, and when she names the child's mother he at once confesses that it was he who wronged the unfortunate girl who died in Paris. He denies having deserted her, however, and of the child's existence he has had no knowledge. But the fact remains that he is the father of an illegitimate child, and this makes it impossible for "Frank Ware" to marry him. She believes in the same moral standard for men as for women, and although she is strongly tempted to do otherwise, she remains true to her principles and dismisses him.

Miss Mannering played "Frank Ware" in an unaffected and womanly way, and won the sympathies of the audience. Mr. Charles Richman as Malcolm Gaskell gave a forceful portrayal of a practical business man. Miss Ruth Holt Boucicault was good as the jealous Leonie, and Miss Helen Ormsbee, as Clara Oaks, a miniature painter, contributed a clever characterisation.

"THE GREATER LOVE."

Play, in Four Acts, by Vincent Brown, Performed at the Theatre Royal, Edinburgh, on Monday, April 11.

Paul Penfold .....Mr. Campbell Goldsmid
Mrs. May .....Miss Marion Fawcett
Jack May .....Mr. William Clayton
Mary May .....Miss Violet Thorold
Andrew Isted .....Mr. Algernon J. Hicks
Rev. Arthur Warren .....Mr. Henry Nunn
Constable Drayton .....Mr. Harry Wren
Sarah Higgs .....Miss Ethel Russell
Ned Stubbs .....Mr. Arles Conway

Tentatively produced at the Theatre Royal, Brighton, ten years ago, the above drama was revived, with unqualified success, on Monday evening last by Mr. H. Armitage and company. Founded on the text "Greater love hath no man," &c., the piece deals with the theme of a titled personage, who, having betrayed a village maiden, and refusing to make restitution, is murdered by the girl's brother. The murderer escapes justice by flying to a foreign land, leaving wife and children, widowed mother, and injured sister; and a friend of the unhappy family—a hunchback, and the hero of the drama—goes to the scaffold in the real murderer's stead. The dramatic power of the piece is beyond question; it quite thrilled the audience with its scenes and incidents in the court, within and without the prison, the details of the execution, and the developments of human strength and weakness, brotherly affection, passion, friendship, and repentance.

The performance was most effective throughout, going with the smoothness and precision of a well-toured production, and acted from first to last with admirable skill. Mr. Campbell Goldsmid achieved great distinction by his study of Paul Penfold, the hunchback, the characterisation of a well-drawn part being almost perfect; Mr. William Clayton gave a suitable rendering of the part of Jack May, the murderer, whose mother was represented with conspicuous ability by Miss Marion Fawcett; and to Miss Violet Thorold fell the rôle of the injured sister. A refreshing rustic lover was found in the Andrew Isted of Mr. Algernon J. Hicks; Mr. Henry Nunn made a fine manly curate of the Rev. Arthur Warren; the drolleries of the village constable, Drayton, were happily realised by Mr. Harry Wren; and the two remaining parts, Sarah Higgs and Ned Stubbs, were well filled by Miss Ethel Russell and Mr. Arles Conway. The heartiest demonstrations of approval were bestowed on the play and the players.

Mrs. Guy Mitchell, the authoress of A Daughter of Doyle's, which was produced at the Theatre Royal, Worthing, last week, has presented both Mr. Karl Seebold, the conductor of the orchestra, and Mr. Malcolm Spurgin, the stage-manager, with a set of waistcoat buttons as a mark of her appreciation of the services rendered during the production of her comedy.

"MY LADY BELLAMY."

Sim Waring .....Mr. Patrick Alexander
Mr. Hemming .....Mr. Albert Burke
Sudwell .....Mr. Derek O'Connor
John Hemming .....Miss Nelly Lomas
Maurice Hemming .....Miss Norah Johns
Sir Gervas Bellamy .....Mr. Alex. Maclean
Queen Mary II. .....Miss Mary Palmer
Mrs. Bathsheba Hemming.Miss Maud Harcourt
Mrs. Mackie .....Miss Syril Maurisse
Henrietta Lady Bellamy ....Miss Laura Leigh

(from our own correspondent.)

Betrothed from the cradle, married from the nursery, parted from the husband at the church door, not to meet again until years of discretion were arrived at, seems to have been the fate of little maidens in the seventeenth century, and Miss Dorothea Moore has taken that subject for her well-written and all-absorbing romantic play of My Lady Bellamy. At its production on Monday night the many good points in the play were quickly grasped and fully appreciated by the audience, who followed the development of the story with keen interest.

In the first act, which takes place in the garden of Mrs. Hemming's house, Lady Bellamy is seen as a twelve year old child, playing with her cousins John and Maurice. Her life is dominated by her aunt Bathsheba, a strong adherent of William of Orange, and who plays upon the knowledge that poor Henrietta's husband is a Jacobite who is known to be hatching plots with the supporters of King James. When the Williamite spy, Tarfax, comes to the house with a view to trapping Bellamy, Henrietta overhears the plot that is being hatched against her husband, and determines to warn him of his danger. Hunted by the Dutch Guard, he seeks temporary shelter at the hands of his child wife, and both become, by the time the pursuers are thrown off the scent, aware of their relationship. There is to be a meeting the same night at the hut of Waring, a smuggler, at which Bellamy is to be betrayed, and Henrietta arrives in time to warn him and his companions of their contemplated capture. Lady Bellamy escapes with her "big man husband," getting to Edinburgh, but are followed and overtaken at the Bagpipes Inn by the relentless Tarfax, captured and handed over to the spy's care for removal to and trial at London, with the hope that Bellamy will be sent back to Scotland to be dealt with by the bloodthirsty Crawford, president of the Privy Council of Scotland, who wishes by torture to wring from him the name of the other principal conspirators.

The next act is set in a room at Kensington Palace, wherein there is a stormy interview between the prisoner and William of Orange. Bellamy candidly admits that he has plotted against King William, but he denies that bloodshed or assassination formed any part of his scheme. King William seems impressed with the manly bearing of the fearless and dashing young Irishman, both he and the Queen are influenced by the position of My Lady Bellamy, and the result of her pleading and the Queen's intercession is that Bellamy consents to banishment for four years, and to use his sword for King Philip. Before the period of Bellamy's banishment has fully expired, he is permitted to return and to rejoin his wife, who has been the Queen's ward, and who is now "a full-grown woman of sixteen."

To Mr. Alex. Maclean as Sir Gervas Bellamy, and to Miss Laura Leigh in the charming rôle of Lady Bellamy, most of the hard work fell, and it was done by both in a painstaking and realistic manner. Mr. Maclean was in turn the happy-go-lucky Irishman, the adventure-loving soldier and conspirator, and the tender lover, playing in a manner that left nothing to be desired. Miss Laura Leigh was a delightful Lady Bellamy, her impersonation of the child-wife being charming throughout. Mr. E. H. Brooke's rendering of William III. was excellent to a degree, and his acting elicited well-merited applause. Mr. Arthur Baxendell, in the unthankful rôle of the spy Tarfax, and Mr. Arthur Layland, in the equally thankless part of Lord Crawford, gave meritorious performances. Miss Mary Palmer made a captivating Queen Mary II.; and Miss Sybil Maurisse rendered good service as Mrs. Mackie. Mr. Patrick Alexander was good as Sim Waring, the smuggler. The remainder of the characters were all admirably sustained. My Lady Bellamy should enjoy a long run and should secure a good welcome in the provinces, where it is intended to tour before taking it to London. The authoress was called before the curtain and accorded hearty and encouraging applause.

"GARIBALDI."

To the Editor of The Era.

Sir,—I wrote, and produced in 1902, also toured for four years, a play entitled On Circumstantial Evidence, a tale of the English Brigade of Garibaldians, in which General Garibaldi was the central figure.

The principal incidents were taken from the private papers of my father, the late Colonel W. L. Clifton-Browne, who served for a number of years under, and was a personal friend of, the famous Liberator.—Yours faithfully,

CHARLES CLIFFORD.

Elephant and Castle Theatre, S.E., April 13.

The Dulwich Philharmonic Society will give a grand concert to-night (Saturday) in the Concert Hall of the Crystal Palace. Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" and Rossini's "Stabat Mater" will be rendered under the conductorship of Mr. James Brown, Mus.Bac.Cantab. This society is very popular with the musical public.

The Crystal Palace has long been famous not only for its great musical festivals but also for its great shows, and of the latter the dog shows are among the most popular. Therefore the announcement that on Tuesday and Wednesday next (19th and 20th inst.) the Great Dane and Borzois Clubs will hold their annual joint show at the Palace should prove of great interest. The entries are of a record number, and the prizes include 50, 40, and 25 guinea challenge cups and numerous silver medals, as well as handsome money prizes.

At this season of the year the Crystal Palace Gardens are especially attractive. The gardens cover 200 acres of ground, and a walk through them is not only a feast for the eyes, but must certainly afford the greatest interest to botanists. Here one can see plants and trees not discernible anywhere else in England, many of the said trees, moreover, having stood the storms of nearly half a century. Not only are trees and plants in evidence, but there is a profusion of beautiful flowers, and Mr. Geo. O. Starr, the general manager of the Crystal Palace, is to be congratulated on having secured the services of Mr. G. Caselton, who has for many years filled the post of superintendent of gardeners for the company. Those connected with the Festival of Empire are fortunate in being able to command these gardens for their Pageant.

"THE MARRIAGE MART."

Musical Play, in Two Acts, by Gilbert Payne, Music by Gilbert Payne and Louis Elgar, Produced at Her Majesty's Theatre, Carlisle, on Monday, April 11.

Richard Mannering (alias Darling) .....Mr. Hervey Bruce
The Rajah of Nanty Poro ..Mr. Lloyd Torons
Chutney .....Mr. Cliff Astley
Jumbo .....Mr. J. McLeod
Thumbi .....Mr. B. Colan
Jos Bunkum .....Mr. H. F. Housden
Ray Desmond .....Miss Nellie Dyson
Vera Mannering .....Miss Ethel Errol
Flossie Fluff .....Miss Fannie Adamson
Christopher Crackett .....Mr. Gilbert Payne

It is difficult to estimate the chances of success of a musical play by its first performance, but if bright and catchy music, smart comedy, and excellent scenery and effects go for anything The Marriage Mart makes a bold bid for popular favour. Richard Mannering has made an unhappy marriage and emigrates to India, leaving his wife behind. At Calcutta he opens a Marriage Mart, which proves a decided "frost," and he gets into serious financial difficulties. The "man in possession" appears on the scene just as Mannering secures a commission from the Rajah of Nanty Pore to procure a new housekeeper. If successful, this will free him from his numerous embarrassments. He is also visited by the heiress Ray Resmond, searching for a husband. Complications ensue when Vera Mannering turns up as companion to Ray Desmond, and recognises the proprietor of the "Mart" as her husband, from whom, unknown to him, she has already obtained a divorce. In the meantime Mannering and Ray Desmond have found an irresistible attraction in each other. Mannering, driven to desperation, resolves to impersonate the housekeeper himself. Christopher Crackett, the office boy, is imbued with the same idea. Flossie Fluff turns up at the Palace disguised as a boy attendant, and Ray Desmond and her companion, Vera, also gain admittance. In the end the tangle is unravelled. Vera finds in the Rajah an old lover, Mannering and Ray Desmond, with Crackett and Flossie Fluff, are made happy, and all embarrassments vanish.

Bright and sparkling music is undoubtedly the feature of the performance, and some excellent comedy scenes keep the audience in good humour. Mr. Gilbert Payne, a smart comedian with a quiet and unobtrusive style, is the principal funmaker, and scores at every opportunity. His song "Merry England," a topical ditty quite up to date, was rendered in excellent style, and he was also successful in a "Christy Minstrel" duet and in "Derby Day." Both of the latter were sung with Miss Fanny Adamson, who as Flossy Fluff soon won her way into favour. A bright and clever little soubrette, she had excellent opportunities in two capital songs—"Hold me just a little bit tighter" and a "Swing song" with a taking chorus, both of which met with well-deserved applause. Miss Nellie Dyson made a charming and dainty heiress, her skilful rendering of "Arabella" and "The blue moon"—two smart numbers with catchy choruses—being very successful. Mr. Hervey Bruce has a nice voice, which he used effectively in "The dear old home"; Mr. Lloyd Torons as the Rajah scored in a topical song; Mr. Cliff Astley made the most of Chutney; Miss Ethel Errol appeared with some success as Vera Mannering; Mr. H. F. Housden made a humorous Bailiff; the Godfrey Girls contributed a dancing turn; and admirable support was given by the chorus. The scenery was distinctly pretty and the piece nicely dressed and staged.

G. Bernard Shaw has reached Australia at last, and a crowded house at the Royal, Sydney, greeted Arms and the Man. Mr. Julius Knight was the Captain Bluntschli, the chocolate soldier, and he made the most of the Shavian mediocrity; Miss Katharine Grey let Raina into the secret of doing what seemed most expedient, a waste of a good actress on such a part; Miss Susie Vaughan limned the wife of the inept Major Paul Petkoff with all her acknowledged skill and finesse; and the Major himself had full justice done to him by Mr. Leslie Victor. The stiff, consequential, vacillating Major Sergius Saranoff gave Mr. Reynolds Denniston some good verbal exercise; and Mr. Sydney Stirling was a capital Nicola. The mercenary, cunning maid, Louka, could not have been better represented than she was by Miss Elsie Wilson. As a curtain-raiser Conan Doyle's Waterloo was billed, to let Mr. Julius Knight show his versatility. His Corporal Gregory Brewster was a very fine adoption of senility, pluck, and loyalty. No one could recognise in the rôle the man who played Napoleon, whom the Corporal helped to defeat. A strong cast of the one-acter was made up of Miss Florence Kelly (Nora Brewster), Mr. Reynolds Denniston (Sergeant Archie McDonald, R.A.), and Mr. Winter Hall (Colonel James Midwinter). The Royal will close at the end of this week until the Grand Opera company opens in Madame Butterfly, conducted by Signor Roberto Hagon, on March 26.

Mrs. Annie Yeamans, at the age of seventy-five is preparing for her next season's work on the stage. A part has been written for her in a musical play called The Echo, to be produced by Mr. Charles Dillingham.

Apropos of Mr. Ernest R. Abbott's visit with his Sapho company this week to the Empire Theatre, Oldham, the following conversation, which took place in a local fried-fish shop, is recorded:—It was late evening, and the lady was ordering a "pennyworth on a paper." "Well," said the man as he turned the browning potatoes with his scoop, "how do you like Sapho?" "Oh, you know," was the reply, "I don't like Shakespearean pieces as a rule, but I think Sapho's a champion."

Mrs. Ethel Greaves and Miss Sydney Cowell, both natives of England, are guests of the Edwin Forrest Home at Springbrook, near Philadelphia. Sir Charles Wyndham, accompanied by Mr. Sam Sothern, called to see the ladies during his recent visit to Philadelphia, and found them very well cared for in the beautiful home founded by the eminent American tragedian.

Mr. J. C. Williamson, the well-known Australian theatrical manager, is a great racing man. His Blue Book by True Blue out of Lady Mar ran a dead-heat with Aborigine for the last Caulfield Cup, starting at the respective prices of 20 and 33 to 1. And now Mme. Melba, who was elected a member of the Victoria Racing Club (better known as the V.R.C.) last year, has registered her racing colours as olive-green, mauve sash, and white cap.

At a very interesting musical at-home, which was given at 2, Whitehall-court, on Monday, by Mrs. Charles Garvice, several rising artists appeared. Amongst them were Signor Chiti, who won, not long since, the Grand Prix for violin playing at the Bologna Conservatoire; Mr. Emerson Whithorne, a pupil of Leschetizsky, who is both pianist and composer; and Miss Margaret Huston, whose singing is based on a special method of voice production.

A concert on behalf of the North Stafford Infirmary was held in the Grand Theatre, Hanley, kindly lent by Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone, on Sunday night last. The North Staffs. District Choral Society, conducted by Mr. Geo. Clarke, rendered four pieces perfectly. The Hanley and District Orchestral Society (forty-two strong), conducted by Mr. J. H. Cartmell, of the Grand Theatre, gave four pieces in a masterly manner. Mrs. Hewitt (soprano) and Mr. Harry Ault (tenor) also successfully appeared. The house was well filled.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

PARIS, Thursday, April 14.—We have had a very busy week. The Ambigu opened the ball with Prostitude, a five-act drama by Henri Desfontaines, founded on Victor Marguerite's well-known novel. It is a sad story, dealing with the social evil, which had already been treated by M. Brieux in Les Avariés. It is grimly realistic, and the scanty plot is replaced by long-winded speeches that tend to become tedious. The object of the play is to bring about reform in the national treatment of prostitution and its consequences, but this problem cannot be discussed on the stage. Admirable acting added force to the message of the play, and caused it to be well received.

The Théâtre des Arts, whose mission is to encourage young dramatists, has brought out Les Yeux qui changent, by MM. T. Cyril and Maurice Froyez. The story, which plays in Russia, is intensely dramatic. Ivan Daniloff is the husband of Sonia, and father of two children. He was adopted by a certain Nicolas Ogareff, who stood him in father's stead, and, hearing that his benefactor has fallen seriously ill, he decides to go to his assistance. Sonia tries to dissuade him from undertaking the journey. She reminds him that the country is overrun with Napoleon's soldiers (for we are in 1812), and that many weeks will elapse before he can reach the sick man. But Ivan disregards her advice, and he departs, after having confided Sonia and his two children to the care of his faithful old servant, Catherine. Four months elapse. One night a knock is heard, and a man enters the room. The children, recognising their father, rush at him and smother him with kisses. But Sonia feels ill at ease. Her husband's manner seems not the same, and she notices a curious difference in the expression of his eyes. Ivan's kindness of heart was reflected in his looks, whilst Ivan who returned speaks in an abrupt tone to Catherine, and there appears at times a wild stare in his eyes. He explains that the trouble and hardships he underwent have had this effect on him, and Sonia tries to reason with herself that she is the victim of a hallucination. For all that, her fears do not leave her, and she gets up in the middle of the night to open her heart to the faithful Catherine. Whilst the two women are whispering their doubts to one another, the man enters. Sonia starts questioning him, and he replies in a hesitating manner. Suddenly Catherine shrieks that secret voices have told her that her master has been murdered on his way home by a man who is his double. On hearing this, Sonia goes mad, and, rushing at the man, chokes the life out of him.

"LE PHENIX."

Vaudeville, In Three Acts, by M. Raphael Valabrégue, Produced at the Nouveautés, on April 13.

Lola Prune.....Mlle. Carlix
Mme. Prune .....Mme. Caumont
Mme. Delamare .....Mlle. Bignon
Mariette .....Mlle. Parys
Valanetine .....Mlle. Rose
D'Outreval .....M. Germain
Docteur Delamare .....M. Coquet
Ducastel .....M. Gorby
Saint-Mamaet .....M. Landry
Tourbillon .....M. Laurent

The author of the above farce is not the Albin Valabrégue to whom we owe many amusing vaudevilles, but one of his relatives. This relative has not gone far out of his way in search after novel effects. He has constructed his farce on time-honoured lines, and most of the situations lack the charm of novelty. The plot, moreover, is a little complicated. There is a certain Dr. Delamare, married to a charming woman. He is faithful to her so long as he remains in Paris, but the moment he leaves town he indulges in wild pranks. He gambles, he seduces widows and virgins, yet he always manages to escape the consequences of his escapades, thanks to the "phœnix trick." Having read that this fabulous bird rises from its ashes, he follows the same course. In other words, he goes to watering-places, where he is sure to meet pretty women, under an assumed name, and when the place is beginning to grow too hot for him he goes with his friend on a tour in the mountains, and the friend returns an hour later crying that his companion has fallen down a precipice, and that his body can never be recovered. And whilst the wily young doctor assumes the names of Durand or Duval, his devoted companion gives himself out as Dr. Delamare, leading an exemplary life, so that Mme. Delamare, in Paris, and her father, M. D'Outreval, only hear the best reports about the truant husband. When the play opens Delamare—under the name of L'Escopette—has seduced Lola, the daughter of Mme. Prune, whose skill with the revolver secures her many engagements in music halls. His friend, Ducastel, who impersonates him as Dr. Delamare, then goes with him for a long walk, and returns with the usual story of L'Escopette's death. This time, however, things do not go so smoothly. Ducastel is suspected with having caused the death of L'Escopette, and in order to avoid arrest he has to rush off to Paris, where he finds Delamare in the bosom of his family. Then comes the usual imbroglio, and things end happily.

But the hit of the evening was the one-act farce On Purge Bébé, by M. Georges Feydau. The audience shrieked with laughter, for the farce is really irresistible. There is not a coarse word in the piece, yet it is not intended for prudish ears. The story is as follows. Folavoine is a porcelain manufacturer, a quiet, harmless bourgeois. His wife, however, although an excellent housekeeper and mother, has a terrible temper, and leaves her poor husband hardly any peace. They have a little boy, Toto, who, when the story opens is not very well. According to Mme. Folavoine he wants medicine, but he refuses to take the glass of Hunyadi, which his mother offers him with the promise of a cake afterwards. This simple incident is the cause of terrible trouble in the Folavoine household, for M. Folavoine has invited to luncheon a Monsieur Chouilloux, clerk in one of the Government offices, who is to help him to secure a Government contract. The luncheon is ordered, but the frantic mother will not dress herself nor listen to anything until Toto has taken his medicine. Whilst husband and wife are disputing M. Chouilloux arrives, and he, of course, is dragged by Madame into the discussion. Madame at last becomes so enervated that she forgets herself, and calls her visitor a name that is applied to those suffering from conjugal misfortunes. M. Chouilloux is so overcome that he seizes a glass on the table and drinks half its contents. M. Folavoine, likewise overcome, drinks the rest. It was the tumbler for Toto, but nobody notices this except Toto, who shows his mother the empty glass, and says, "Look, mother! I took my medicine!" "My darling!" cries Mme. Folavoine, and clasps her boy to her heart. This therapeutic and Molièresque farce was remarkably well acted by Mlle. Cassive, M. Germain, and M. Simon.

The French Shakespeare Society have scored another interesting success in the performance of Les Joyeuses Commères de Windsor at the Salle Femina. All the parts were played by an excellent company, who are becoming more and more Shakespearean in spirit as these performances proceed. The part of Dame Quickly had been allotted to M. Decaye, a remarkably funny young actor, but who ought to check his tendency of trying to be too funny for the benefit of the gallery. M. Menaud, as Falstaff, extracted all the fun he could out of the part, and the whole performance reflects much credit on the management.

The Prince of Wales, accompanied by Prince Edward of Wales, witnessed the performance of The Balkan Princess at the Prince of Wales's Theatre on Thursday evening.

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

"DAS LEUTNANTS-MUENDEL."

Farce, in Three Acts, by Walter Leo Stein, Produced at the Luetspielhaus, April 8.

Von Bernewitz .....Herr Schindler
Dönhoff .....Herr Schonemann
Baron Liebenow-Memmingen ....Herr Dietsch
Von Norkitten .....Herr Impekoven
Flora .....Fraulein Cerigioli
Weber .....Herr Paulmuller
Meia .....Fraulein Waldmann
Milly .....Fraulein Euler
Ines de Sagasta .....Fraulein Mueller
Marie .....Fraulein Hiller
Punschke .....Herr Penkert
Goldstücker .....Herr Arnold
Otto .....Herr Bachwitz

(from our own correspondent.)

BERLIN, Thursday, April 14.—An amusing novelty, very brightly interpreted, Herr Stein's efforts were rewarded with a distinct measure of success. The author was called before the curtain at the close of each act and warmly applauded, while the chief artists came in for their well-merited share of the appreciation. The plot is simplicity itself, and is told in a few words. A young officer of the Dragoons, Lieut. Horst von Bernewitz, has been made the guardian of the daughter of his father's friend for some reason or other. The ward, who is a native of Peru—Ines de Sagasta—is at a boarding-school in Germany, but appears one day in her guardian's rooms, to set everything and everybody by the ears. Ines has a will of her own; she has quarrelled with the school authorities and declines to return to them. Horst expects to find a child of twelve, and buys her a doll; but, greatly to his surprise, and not a little to his disgust, he finds his ward a very pretty girl of seventeen, and a flirt to her finger ends. Her heart is in the right place, however, and she does all sorts of generous deeds, paying some of her guardian's debts unknown to himself, and ordering in supplies of champagne and other delicacies appreciated by young officers. The end may easily be imagined. After various phases of wounded pride, annoyance, &c., the guardian is conquered. Horst is as good a fellow as ever was made, and soon falls in love with pretty Ines, who of course reciprocates, and all ends to the distant chime of wedding bells. The fun of the piece is in the dialogue and some of the "situations." There is plenty of good work for the actors, one of the characters—Goldstücker, Horst's moneylender—being a capital one. All the parts were admirably sustained, and the farce should enjoy a lengthy run.

The Lessing Theatre did not achieve much success with its first attempt at a Shaw production. It was the three-act play Heiraten (Marriage), translated and adapted by Siegfried Trebitz. In spite of faultless acting the piece fell very flat, the long discussions upon wedded felicity or otherwise being obviously a little wearisome to the audience. The critics—usually well disposed towards anything Mr. Shaw writes—are unanimous in considering this to be a weak production.

"Das Nesthakchen," a three-act comedy by Edmond Guirand, did not make a particularly favourable impression at the Hebbel on its production last week. It is the story of a youth, tied to his mother's apron-strings, and tyrannised over by her in the name of affection. He is released from bondage by a far-seeing old uncle, whose amiable character is the redeeming point of the piece. The interpretation was good, but a long run will scarcely be accorded to the play.

The event of the week has been the celebration of Frau Anna Schramm's seventy-fifth birthday. Frau Schramm has been a member of the Royal Schauspielhaus company for many years, and is undoubtedly the very best comedienne on the German stage. To see her is to laugh; to know her is to love her. All Germany combined to do honour to the famous actress. From the Emperor and Empress, from the Crown Prince and Princess and other members of the Imperial family, as well as from other Royal families, came signed letters or telegrams of congratulation couched in warmest words, whilst felicitations arrived—as a matter of course—from all Frau Schramm's colleagues and from prominent German citizens in every branch. Her house was transformed into a garden of fragrant blossoms, and the ovations were repeated when the popular actress appeared before the public at the Schauspielhaus on Tuesday as the old market woman Hanne in Neumann's comedy Wie die Alten Sungen, a rôle she has played hundreds of times with the same success. Frau Schramm is as active as ever. On the night of her birthday, when her friends thought she had left home merely to avoid the many ovations planned, she was acting the rôle of Hanne in Leipzig. She is also busy studying two new parts at the Schauspielhaus, and has not the least intention, she says, of retiring into private life for another quarter of a century. And all her admirers believe her.

Fraulein Kierschner, one of the leading members of the ballet at the Royal Opera House, is retiring from the boards to marry. She has been the recipient of many expressions of appreciation from the Emperor downwards, and receives, of course, a substantial pension from the State.

The Charles Mortimer Prize for composition at the Royal Academy of Music has been awarded to Nellie Fulcher, of Whitchurch, Salop. The examiners were Messrs. Arnold Bax, Neville Flux, and Daniel S. Wood. The Battison Haynes Prize for composition has been awarded to Adela Hamaton, of Uxbridge. The examiners were Messrs. A. von Ahn Carse, Percy Pitt, and J. C. Ames. The Goldberg Prize (basses) has been awarded to William J. Samuell, of Swansea, Harry Milner, being commended. The examiner was Mr. Frederick Keel. The Sterndale Bennett Prize (pianoforte) has been awarded to Evelyn Dawkin, of London, Adela Hamaton and Elsie Jones being commended. The examiners were Messrs. Russell Bonner, Fritz Read, and Graham P. Moore (chairman). The Louisa Hopkins Memorial Prize (for pianoforte) has been awarded to Evelyn Dawkin, of London, Adela Hammerton being highly commended. The examiners were Miss Elsie Horne, Miss Gertrude Peppercorn, and Mr. Ernest Fowles (chairman).

"The Palace of Truth," by W. S. Gilbert, was recently revived by the Ben Greet Players at the Garden Theatre, New York. This "fairy farce" is quite a novelty to present-day audiences. It had not been performed in New York, it was said, since Lester Wallack scored such a success in it a quarter of a century ago. King Phanor was played by Mr. Ben Greet. Miss Grace Halsey Mills was the Queen, Miss Violet Vivian the Princess, Mr. Douglas J. Wood the Prince, Miss Keith Wakeman the Mirza, and Miss Ruth Vivian the coquettish maid. Our theatre-goers are indebted to Mr. Greet for making them familiar with quaint plays that are quite out of the ordinary. The performance was enjoyed immensely, the audience being demonstrative in its approval. Three of Hawthorne's "Wonder Tales," adapted for the stage, were given at the daily matinées. The stories of Pandora, King Midas, and Philemon and Baucis in dramatic form proved decidedly interesting and enjoyable, especially to the youngsters, being presented with good taste and well acted. Mr. Greet played King Midas, while Miss Violet Vivian made a charming Pandora.

"The Masterman," a drama, in four acts, by A. Rosebery, with music by W. O. J. Damant, was produced for copyright purposes at the Marina Theatre, Lowestoft, on March 30. The play will be sent on tour, and opens at the Theatre Royal, Plymouth, on Monday, coming to the Pavilion, London, the following week.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A. M. C.—If you wish to play your piece as a curtain-raiser at the theatres it must be licensed by the Lord Chamberlain. For the halls only six speaking parts are allowed for sketches.

W. F. B. (Great Yarmouth).—Dan Leno died at his home in Balham on Oct. 31, 1904, aged forty-three.

E. Hague (Walton).—We will make inquiries, and also search our records, and let you know next week. You have not spelt the name correctly.

W. H. Reynolds.—The award only refers to artists as to closing down. The manager is in a different position.

Corn Exchange.—You should write to the United States Consul, at St. Helen's-place, London, E.C., who will give you the necessary information.

Adapter.—You must get permission of the foreign author, as, under the Act of Paris, the foreign author has the right of translation for ten years from first production. If the right of translation has not been exercised within that period the play is free.

H. E. Thomas.—The law as to employment of children on the stage in the United States is different in each State. Write for the necessary information to the Actors' Society, 133, West Forty-fifth-street, New York.

Coventry.—No; there are tragedians and comedians. Very rarely are tragedy and comedy combined in one actor. Buckstone was a comedian; Gustavus Vaughan Brooke a tragedian, though he occasionally played comic Irish parts.

Edwd. Davies.—It depends on where the theatre is situated. In some towns, the licensing authority is a Watch Committee, in others an Urban Council, and in the large centres the Town Council. In London the safety of the building has to be passed by the London County Council before it is licensed by the Lord Chamberlain. Make your inquiry more definite, and we will endeavour to answer it.

R. C. Musgrave.—(1) In response to a requisition signed by upwards of 400 influential merchants, bankers, and traders of the metropolis, soliciting a few performances at the City of London Theatre, Gustavus Vaughan Brooke (not "Brooks"), opened at that theatre on Oct. 16, 1854, playing in Othello (the Moor and Iago), The Stranger, The Lady of Lyons, Virginius, and The Hunchback. On Monday, Oct. 23, 1854, he played at the same house the part of Sir Giles Overreach (not "Overrich"). On Saturday, Nov. 25, 1854, he sailed for Melbourne. (2) No; his last appearance on the stage—as it unhappily proved to be—was at the Theatre Royal, Belfast, on Dec. 23, 1865, in the character of Richard the Third. (3) He went down in the wreck of the ss. London, Thursday, Jan. 11, 1866.

BREAKING RECORDS FOR BIG BUSINESS EVERYWHERE.

Mr. Tom Hulme, a lad fra' Lancashire, is going big guns at the Palace, Battersea; and Elsie Kedward is pleasing the London audience with her own well-written number, "Maggie Lee."

On March 24 the action taken by Mr. Cayley Calvert against Mr. Leo Stormont to restrain the latter from performance of the sketch Exposure or A Modern Andromeda, was dismissed with costs, on the application of the defendant, for lack of prosecution. Mr. Calvert claimed that the title A Modern Andromeda belonged to him, and that the sketch had been based on a scenario submitted by him to Mr. Stormont. He applied in October last for an injunction to restrain Mr. Stormont from performing the piece, which was then being played with great success in London at the Hippodrome, with Mr. Herbert Waring and Mr. Henry Neville in the leading parts.

The injunction was, however, refused, pending the trial of the action, Mr. Stormont denying absolutely that he had derived either the title or the plot of the piece from Mr. Calvert. The title, in fact, belonged to Mr. J. E. MacManus, who collaborated with Mr. Stormont in writing the sketch, having been used tentatively by him as far back as 1894. Mr. Calvert failed to pursue his action, and in due course Mr. Stormont applied to have it dismissed, and obtained an order, with costs, against Mr. Cayley Calvert.

Dining one day in a mixed convivial party, surrounded by a set of merry wights, the French language and the pronunciation of that tongue became a subject of conversation. "Well! I'll bet any man in the room a new hat," exclaimed Emery, "and the wager shall be decided by the present company, that I both speak, pronounce, and understand the French language better than English." So extraordinary a declaration and challenge upon such a subject, from the rustic Emery greatly astonished the whole party. At length, however, one of them, not caring so much for the value of the bet, perhaps, as he did for the amusement which he thought would probably be afforded by putting Emery to the test, answered, "Well, Emery, I'll bet that you can do neither!" Emery, putting on a countenance grave as a judge, replied with avidity, "'Adone; 'tis a bet." Then, getting up, he addressed himself to an old friend who sat opposite, and who, he was aware, knew but very little of the French language. "Will you, my dear sir, do me the favour of just saying good-night in French?" The gentleman, with a pronunciation scarcely intelligible, replied, "bon jour." Upon which Emery observed, "you are wrong, my dear fellow, that is good day; good-night in French is bon soir" (which words he pronounced very correctly). Then turning round to the company, he said, "There, gentlemen, I think you must undoubtedly admit that I have won my wager; for, from what you have all just now heard, you must, I am sure, be most perfectly satisfied that I certainly do both speak, pronounce, and understand the French language better than English." The justness of Emery's claim was most fully admitted on all sides when, to the great amusement of the company, it was explained to them that the name of the gentleman whom he had addressed on the subject of the French language was English. Emery got considerable credit for his contrivance of the joke.

THEATRICAL ACCOUNTS FOR BUSINESS MANAGERS.

How the Affairs of a Theatre can be most Efficiently Controlled by the Adoption of Systems of Internal Check.

By CUTHBERT E. SMEDLEY,
Chartered Accountant.

Price, 3/6. Post free, 3/9.

All concerned with the business side of a theatre will find much useful information and many valuable hints in "Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Mr. Cuthbert E. Smedley, published at The Era office.—Referee, Jan. 31, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts," by Cuthbert E. Smedley (The Era, Ltd., 3s. 6d.), shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given. Receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts, audit—each is allotted a separate chapter. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Morning Post, Jan. 27, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (3s 6d., The Era, Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.). The work of accountants has now been brought to a fine art, and in almost every branch of business a different system has been elaborated. The present work deals in a small compass fully and clearly with all the special features of theatrical management on the business side.—Financial Times, Feb. 1, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (The Era, Ltd., London, 3s. 6d.), is a most concise and comprehensive little work, calculated to prove of assistance to the theatre-manager. It shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given, and the chapters treating of receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts and audit will be found to contain much useful information. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury, Feb. 3, 1909.

EXCERPTS FROM EXAMINERS' REPORTS.
I congratulate you heartily on the work you are doing and the success that is attending it.
The pleasure that all your pupils take in their lessons is evident, and it seemed that, with scarcely an exception, their clearness of enunciation and knowledge of giving every word its proper value were remarkable.
To watch each pupil use his or her own individuality, and not all attack the same subject from the same point of view, was very interesting, and, I think, so important; whether they adopt the stage as a profession or not, they are, at any rate, learning how to speak so as to be heard and understood.
(Signed) CONSTANCE COLLIER.
GERALD DU MAURIER.

We were thoroughly satisfied with the excellent quality of the work and the admirable results achieved in the training of the students. We were particularly impressed by the clearness of the elocution shown by the great majority of those we heard. Altogether, the work which we saw did very great credit to the teaching of the school, which seems to be thoroughly practical and useful for anyone seeking to follow the musical or dramatic profession.
(Signed) H. B. IRVING.
ROBERT SYDNEY BROUGH.

We cannot let to-day's examination pass without a word of heartiest congratulation. The general efficiency amongst your pupils was so exceptionally high that it was indeed a most difficult matter for us to adjudicate the prizes. The intelligence shown by one and all was simply remarkable, and when added to that quality we had the thoroughness of your training, the whole effect was indeed splendid. Our sincere wish is that you should go on and prosper, for, to our minds, you have got hold of the right end of the stick—of training the young idea.
(Signed) ACTON BOND.

THE NATIONAL THEATRE.

A letter which Mr. H. B. IRVING has written on the subject of the National Theatre expresses, we believe, the feeling of many in the profession with regard to the movement. Mr. H. B. IRVING says:

I attended a meeting held at the Mansion House, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, in the summer of 1908, when the Executive Committee for the Memorial Theatre was finally elected. As that Executive Committee was originally constituted, out of twenty members only two of them were members of the theatrical profession—Sir John Hare and Mr. Granville Barker. It was only as the result of very vigorous representations made to certain members of the committee at that meeting that the names of Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree and Mr. Forbes Robertson were added to that committee.

I confess that from that moment my feeling towards the scheme was one of mistrust, when I found that, among those who were proposing to found a National Theatre, there was so obvious a desire to dispense with the co-operation of the members of our own and Shakespeare's calling. It led me to believe that their scheme was going to be elaborate and high-sounding, but eminently unpractical, and I resented, as I believe my father would have resented, the slight put upon our calling

I am glad, however, to think that a more liberal and practical spirit now prevails, and that those ladies and gentlemen outside our calling who have interested themselves in the cause are willing to accept the co-operation of eminent actors, at any rate, as advocates of their scheme.

There are two things to be considered in connection with a scheme like the National Theatre. The first is, "Is it desirable?" and the second is, "Is it practicable?" The first query can only be answered in the affirmative. If an English equivalent of the Comédie Française could be immediately established in London, there can be no doubt that the existence of such a playhouse would be beneficial to the drama generally. The Comédie Française, with its "annex" the Conservatoire, has a valuable influence on French dramatic art. We need not discuss the desirability of a National Theatre. In connection with its practicability, there were, when the scheme was started, important obstacles. One was the difficulty of raising the necessary capital; the other was—as Mr. H. B. IRVING says—the exclusion from the committee of all the leading members of the profession, except Sir JOHN HARE and Mr. GRANVILLE BARKER. Though the sum of £70,000, which an anonymous donor has given for the National Theatre, was invested in the names of Lord AVEBURY and the Right Hon. ALFRED LYTTELTON, M.P., and the securities deposited in the London County and Westminster Bank, the subscriptions at first were slow in arriving. The idea that the provincial mayors would, each in his district, collect a goodly sum for the scheme proved illusive; and at the National Theatre meeting at the Mansion House very few of these magnates were present. The fact that no general subscription list was published was not encouraging to the imagination. We shall be glad at any time to publish such a list in The Era.

In one of our articles on the subject we suggested, as a possible solution of the financial difficulty, that His Majesty the King, who is so much interested in everything connected with the drama, should be asked to give his name and support to the National Theatre scheme; and we alluded to the Imperial Institute as an example of what might be done in the way of obtaining subscriptions for an object of which His Majesty approved. We have also pointed out from the first the impossibility of the National Theatre being made a success without the co-operation and influence of actors.

As both our suggestions have been now practically adopted, no cause of complaint remains to us. It is true that the King has not yet been asked to patronise the scheme, but action in the same spirit has been taken by enlisting the cream of the British aristocracy for a great Shakespearean Fancy Dress Ball at the Albert Hall on June 27, the idea of which came from the fertile brain of Lady TREE. When we mention that in the ladies' committee, which is presided over by Mrs. GEORGE CORNWALLIS-WEST, are to be found the Duchess of SOMERSET, the Duchess of MARLBOROUGH, the Duchess of SUTHERLAND, the Marchioness of SALISBURY, the Countess of WEMYSS, MURIEL Countess DE LA WARR, the Countess of LYTTON, CORA Countess of STRAFFORD, the Countess of LONDESBOROUGH, Lady GWENDELINE CHURCHILL, Lady HELEN VINCENT, Lady MAUD WARRENDER, Viscountess RIDLEY, Lady ASHBY ST. LEDGERS, Lady CUNARD, Lady HAMILTON, Lady JEKYLL, Lady PAGET, Lady SAVILE, Lady SPEYER, Lady WENLOCK, Lady WERNHER, and the Hon. Mrs. ALFRED LYTTELTON, it is evident that the co-operation of what used to be called the "upper ten thousand" has been secured. The idea that the dresses shall represent characters either from SHAKESPEARE'S plays or belonging to the Elizabethan period is an excellent one. With some three or four thousand people in Shakespearean costumes; with the advertisement given to the scheme by the ball; and with the flavour of fashionableness which will be added to the movement by this aristocratic patronage, the millionaires and magnates of London may be trusted to open their purses. With regard to the management of the scheme, the earnestness with which Sir HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE—an interview with whom on the subject we inserted some time since—and Mr. MARTIN HARVEY have thrown themselves into their advocacy, and Mr. FORBES-ROBERTSON'S hard work in collecting subscriptions in America, are guarantees that practical advice will not be wanting, and that the experiment of an English National Theatre will, at any rate, have a fair chance of success. It behoves us, therefore, to give our goodwill to the scheme, now that our objections have been removed. As Mr. MARTIN HARVEY, in his eloquent speech at Lady DICKSON-POYNDER'S house, said the other day: "Let us not worry too much about the composition or the administration of the executive—all these things will right themselves in time. Let us feel nothing but indebtedness to the many distinguished ladies and gentlemen of our committee who are pledged to promote this scheme. Let us not dwell overmuch upon the cautious excellence of modern beginnings, but let us, remembering that it is the greatest name in literature we have to honour, do the big thing, and, as Lord MILNER would say, 'Damn the consequences.'"

There are many ways in which the leading London managers might help an English Comédie Française; and if only six of them were to give each an annual season or "festival" in the National Theatre, a great part of the year's pabulum would be assured.

"A DAUGHTER OF DOYLE'S."

Comedy, in Three Acts, by Sybil Michell, Played for the First Time at the Theatre Royal, Worthing, on Thursday, April 7.

Lord Stair ..... MR. ARTHUR BECKINGHAM
Major Lightwood ..... MR. HAROLD TETHER
Colonel Doyle ..... MR. J. G. H. RICHTER
Parkins ..... MR. H. MORSE
Lady Stair ..... MRS. REDAWAY KING
Mlle. D'Arblay ..... MISS RUTH HEATHCOTE
Eleanor Doyle ..... MRS. GUY MICHELL

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The story which has been written round the subject of our notice is to be commended, but the authoress has not quite reached the standard set up by present-day comedy, and her piece requires a large infusion of material to make it appeal successfully for support. The curtain rises on a scene depicting the drawing-room at Kilkennan Castle, the home of Lord Stair, who is entertaining a house-party. Cards are indulged in, and the result is that Colonel Doyle becomes indebted to Lord Stair, whom he eventually pays with a forged bank-note. Lord Stair is in love with the Colonel's daughter Eleanor, but the latter learns of her father's trickery, and when his lordship asks her to become his wife Eleanor insists on him waiting a month for her answer, also stipulating that he must not see her in the meantime. The second act sees Lord Stair in his dressing-room at the Castle. The note he received from Colonel Doyle is placed in the drawer of his dressing-table, and it is round this that the interest of the act is centred. The hour is getting late, and Lord Stair dozes off in his armchair. He is awakened to find Eleanor in his room, she having gone there with the intent of placing a good note in the place of the bad one. The conversation between the two awakens the household, who come on the scene in the belief that there is a burglar in the house. By a smart move on the part of a friendly butler, Eleanor is enabled to leave the house by a side door.

In the third act, the scene of which is laid at Major Lightwood's house, Stair purposes visiting the Arctic regions on a voyage of discovery. Eleanor's father having died in the meantime, Eleanor is employed in a florist's shop, and in the course of her duties she is sent to decorate a fashionable house, where she meets Lord Stair. Matters are eventually explained, and the ultimate result is that Lord Stair cancels the arrangements that he has made for a trip to the Arctic regions.

Miss Ruth Heathcote's exposition of the rôle of Mlle. D'Arblay was delightful, and Mrs. Redaway King as Lady Stair acted well.

THE NATIONAL THEATRE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Mr. Martin Harvey, on Wednesday last, when speaking in support of the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre, suggested that our Society would prove a powerful organisation for the collection of subscriptions.

May I point out that at our recent annual conference, held at Seaford House, a resolution was passed to the effect that the British Empire Shakespeare Society would not give official help to the scheme as at present projected.—Yours faithfully,

ACTON BOND,
Joint Hon. General Director.

MR. EDWIN T. HEYS recently delivered a lecture at the Leeds Art Club, the subject being "The Theatre of the Future." Mr. Alfred Turner, editor of the Yorkshire Evening Post, presided, and there was an animated discussion. Considerable prominence has been given to the meeting in the local press, where the proposal that Leeds should have a repertory theatre has met with much favour.

ON the termination of Mr. A. Bradshaw's long engagement as assistant acting-manager at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, on Saturday last, advantage was taken of the occasion by the staff of the theatre and a few friends to present him with a cheque for a substantial amount as a memento of the respect in which he has been held during his sojourn at the theatre.

"THE NAKED TRUTH."

Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, by George Paston and W. B. Maxwell, Produced at Wyndham's Theatre, on Thursday, April 14.

The idea of persons naturally unveracious being forced by some magic spell to speak the truth has been frequently used on the stage, Sir W. S. Gilbert's Palace of Truth being a famous example. The Naked Truth, by George Paston and W. B. Maxwell, which was produced at Wyndham's Theatre on Thursday, is based on the supposition that a curious old ring can make anyone who wears it speak the whole truth. On whom is the obligation of veracity forced by the magic of the ring? On a suave, persuasive, plausible young man, named Bernard Darrell, otherwise "Bunny," the son of an adoring mother. Mrs. Darrell has devoted herself since her husband's death to the bringing up of her boy, and he is satisfactorily engaged to a nice young lady named Norah Creighton. He is conventionally agreeable, untruthful, and flattering. But "Bunny" has a weakness for flirtation, and has entangled himself with a certain Mrs. Hayter, the wife of an elderly and indifferent Oriental student. She turns up jealous and troublesome, and it is at this juncture that "Bunny's" Uncle James, who has made a fortune in India, gives "Bunny" the magic ring. With this upon his finger, the young man is compelled to speak the exact truth. He tells the directors of the Syrian Cement Company, of which he is secretary, exactly what a fraud the concern is, and there is a storm of indignation and abuse; he dictates honest replies to would-be investors, he reproves Mrs. Hayter for her immorality, he finds fault with his ancée's features and his mother's false hair, and is bluntly rude to his rich uncle. Mrs. Hayter arrives in a state of excitement, and talks most compromisingly to "Bunny," while Norah is listening in the next room. "Bunny" would fain defend himself by prevarication, but, like George Washington, he cannot tell a lie, and "all the fat is in the fire." His servants leave on account of his remorseless truth-speaking, and poor "Bunny" is in despair. Fortunately Mr. Hayter, who is a student of Oriental literature, discovers the secret of the ring, and Norah, to make certain that there shall be no more inconvenient veracity, drops it into the garden well.

Mr. Charles Hawtrey's famous excellences—his perfect polish, his unconsciousness, and his absolutely natural and easy style and bearing—are invaluable in the part of "Bunny"; and they double and treble the effect of the droll situation in which the unfortunate young man is placed. To see Mr. Hawtrey's facial suggestion of plaintive surprise when he is irresistibly impelled to say unpleasant things to people is to laugh heartily. The part, of course, is predominant in the play, but some excellent opportunities for character-acting are given to the "supporting" artists. Mr. Arthur Playfair's uncle from India is full of "peppery" tyranny and egregious self-importance, and is a study of real merit; and Mr. Eric Lewis contributes a clever and quaint creation as the irritable husband, Mr. Hayter. The part of Prosser, again, is individual and ingeniously conceived; and Mr. George Bellamy does full justice to the secretary's meanness and servility. Another amusing sketch is contributed by Mr. Lyle as the pretentious medico, Dr. Masters; Miss Frances Wetherall does good work as Mrs. Darrell; and Miss Vera Maitland is decidedly effective as Mme. Rosalie Favre, a French governess. An excitable shareholder, Mrs. Duckett, has a droll and active exponent in Miss Claire Greet; and Miss Gwynne Herbert is good as a high-toned domestic; that charming actress Miss Phyllis Embury being very sweet, clear, and natural as Norah Creighton. The other rôles have competent representatives. The Naked Truth had an encouraging reception.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

This entirely new and original light opera was produced on Monday by the Morecambe Amateur Operatic Society, under the direction of the composer, and author of the libretto, Mr. John Birkett, jun., of Morecambe, and it achieved an instantaneous success. The King is sick, and is supposed to have fallen a victim to an attack of gout, though in reality his life is ebbing through the administration of slow poison by his brother, the Duke of Dulcimara, who has obtained the pot on from the witch Yordas. He desires the death of the Princess Eleanor, and indeed of anyone else who stands in his way. The princess, who is unknown to her father's people, comes amongst them during their merrymaking disguised as Nebulista, the maiden of the mist. The Duke's designs having become so bad as to disgust even the witch Yordas, she decides to betray him. Dulcimara turns up at the merrymaking, where he affirms that Nebulista is the witch, and incites the people to burn her. She is saved by Philomela, but the duke effects the capture of the real witch and Gladiolus, who loves Nebulista, unaware that she is the princess, and throws them into prison. A royal decree offers the princess in marriage to anyone who will cure the king, and a syndicate run by a company promoter named Diddleus enter into competition for the fair prize, offering to cure the king with the aid of a machine known as the "Electro-gullem." Gladiolus and the witch escape, and the electro-gullem having failed to operate successfully, Gladiolus administers an antidote to the slow poison which is gradually killing the king, gains the princess, and the duke conveniently commits suicide by taking a dose of the preparation with which he had determined to finish the king.

The opera is a happy combination of drama, comedy, and broad fun.

AT the final fancy dress ball at Covent Garden on the 8th inst. there was a very large attendance. The music was provided by Mr. Dan Godfrey's band, and the dancing was kept up until early morning. There were special prizes for the two best waltzers and for the best "two-step" dancers.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Before a very large and distinguished audience, including His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, Lady Aberdeen, and the Viceregal party, Mr. Martin Harvey, on Wednesday, produced, and appeared for the first time in, Shakespeare's Richard III. The play was presented in five acts and eighteen scenes, the staging being magnificent. The scenery was by William Telbin and George J. Dodson, and was beautiful and artistic. The overture and incidental music, by Mr. William H. Hudson, added to the effect of the production.

In his latest assumption Mr. Harvey may truly be said to have added another to his long list of triumphs, and to have conceived a character which will appeal to the popular mind as effectually as his Sidney Carton or any other of his celebrated creations, so far removed as it, nevertheless, is from any of his impersonations. Mr. Harvey is at considerable pains to preserve his Richard from being repulsive, and in a large measure succeeds. His Crookback subjects the consciousness of his deformity to the realisation of his intellectual superiority, which dominates the play throughout. As a "bogie man" to frighten the children, Mr. Harvey's Richard is usefulness, but as a rollicking, scheming miscreant, revelling in his villainy, he could not be excelled. Vaunting, arrogant, boastful, but ever whimsical, Mr. Harvey succeeds in being quite fascinating, and plays the fiendish character in such a way as to make Anne's yielding to his wooing possible.

The part of the Duke of Buckingham had an excellent exponent in Mr. Charles Glenney, whose acting throughout was a most careful and clever study. Miss Mary Rorke was the Queen Margaret, and gave a very finished and superb performance. Mr. Owen Roughwood is worthy of praise for his reading of the Duke of Clarence; and as Lord Stanley Mr. Fred Wright, sen., fulfilled the part in a creditable manner. Miss N. de Silva acted the rôle of Lady Anne to perfection, displaying the utmost feeling; and Miss Sybil Walsh was most sympathetic as Queen Elizabeth. Mrs. A. B. Cross gave a highly-interesting study of the Duchess of York; as the young Princes, Edward and Richard, Miss Brenda Gibson and Miss Beatrice Ainley acted very nicely; Mr. P. Stoney did admirable work as King Edward IV.; and Mr. Richard Neville was most successful as Lord Hastings; the remaining parts being in very capable hands.

On the conclusion of the performance Mr. Martin Harvey was presented with a wreath of laurels, and Miss de Silva with several bouquets.

In response to prolonged applause, Mr. Harvey said that he would not detain the audience at that late hour of the night. He could only thank them for the warm-hearted welcome that they had given to himself and Miss de Silva, and for the noble reward that they had given to their efforts. He need hardly say that the preparation for a play like that had taken many months of anxious and careful work. When it was received in Dublin in such a whole-hearted manner they felt rewarded and proud to think that their work had received such a hearty welcome. He could only thank them once more, deeply and gratefully, for all their kindness. (Applause.)

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

At the Council Meeting held on Tuesday, April 12, at 32, Regent-street, there were present: Mr. R. A. Greene, in the chair; Mr. T. H. Mote, Hon. Solicitor; Messrs. Cyril Cattley, F. H. De Quincey, C. F. Collings, C. Hayden Coffin, Henry Le Grand, Langford Reed, Leonard Shepherd, Murri Moncrieff, Edward Morgan, Miss Vita Spencer, Miss Beatrice Chester, Miss Joan Pereira, Miss Rose Cazalet, and Mr. D. Young (Secretary).

The Secretary read a letter from the West End Theatre Managers' Society, and was instructed to thank Mr. Vedrenne for his letter, and to say that the Association would be only too glad to co-operate in any action with reference to bogus management.

The Secretary was directed to acknowledge receipt of Mr. Clemart's letter, and to say that the Council hoped the V.A.F. would use every endeavour to influence their members to curtail the prevalence of free trial shows, as the Council of this Association was doing.

The Chairman read letters from Messrs. Fred Morland and F. J. Arlton, and the Secretary was directed to thank them for their letters, which had been considered by the Council in debating upon the standard contract.

The Secretary tendered the report of the Sunday Defence Committee, and Mr. C. F. Collings gave notice of motion with reference to that Committee.

A further report relative to the recent Strand fiasco was also tendered.

The Finance Committee's report was read by Mr. Morgan, and adopted.

After long discussion, several alterations to the form of contract submitted last year were agreed to, and the Secretary was instructed to present a properly corrected copy at the next meeting of the Council.

Miss Pereira drew attention to the death of the late Miss Elsie Gaunt, and the Council instructed the Secretary to tender their condolence and sympathy.

Election. Mary Dibley; Reinstatement, Archie Bradshaw; Nominations, Arthur F. Armstrong and Bernard Merefield.

THE cost of the French National Opera House, exclusive of the artists' salaries, was for the past twelve months £168,000, which shows an economy of £22,400 on the previous year's expenses. The average cost of mounting each opera was £680. Performances of Faust cost £6,800, of Wagner's Twilight of the Gods £3,320, and of Monna Vanna £1,520. The total of the employees' wages reached £8,000.

O.P. CLUB DINNER.

There was a goodly "Chairman's table" at the O.P. Club Dinner at the Hotel Cecil on Sunday last, Mr. A. E. W. MASON, the president, being flanked by Miss Dorothea Baird and Miss Lily Elsie, whilst also present were Mr. H. B. Irving, Miss Ellen Terry, Mr. George Edwardes, Mr. Robert Evett, Mr. James Carew, Mr. Robert Michaelis, Mr. Algernon L. Collins (hon. treasurer), Mr. Anthony Hope, Miss Jessie Bateman, the Hon. H. J. Greenwood, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred F. Robbins, Miss Pamela Gaythorne, Mr. Ben Webster, Mr. Harry Randall, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hentschel and Miss Hentschel, Mr. George Spencer Edwards, Mr. Frank Desprez, Mr. R. L. Dixon, Mr. Algernon L. Collins (hon. treasurer), Mr. J. Davis Smith and Mr. Stanley Greig (joint hon. secretaries), Mrs. Charles Terry, Mr. T. McDonald Rendle, and Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Croke. Miss Dorothea Baird and Miss Lily Elsie were the chief guests of the evening.

Mr. H. B. IRVING, in proposing the toast of "The Club," said:—I do not know that I am altogether the best person to propose the toast of "The Club," because there are one or two reasons why I am not in sympathy with the Club. One of your great pleasures is to talk about the drama on Sunday nights. One of my great pleasures is to get away from the drama on Sunday nights. In the days of my youth I used to like to come and talk to you about the drama Sunday nights; but I have grown out of that as I got older, and I would rather leave it to you to discuss the drama. A few weeks ago I was at a gathering of a somewhat similar character, and somebody in the confidence of the Club said to me: "It would be very interesting for you if you could be behind a screen some Sunday night and hear what they say about you." Well, I do not mind what you say about us on Sunday evening, as long as you administer to us the balm of so graceful an entertainment as you have given to us to-night. Another reason why I feel a slight resentment towards you is that the last few weeks have been rendered unhappy by the fact that my wife was going to address you this evening. Our home, until now a happy one, has been rendered depressed and anxious by the thoughts of to-night. I, in common with two other gentlemen, have been implored to furnish speeches. I furnished one I thought in every way admirable, and I was told "No, it is very silly; not at all the sort of thing I want." But, for these drawbacks, I have great pleasure in proposing to you the toast of yourselves, and I would congratulate you that you have as chairman to-night Mr. A. E. W. Mason. Mr. Mason is an author who was once a member of my profession. I once saw him act a part which originally had no name, but he insisted before playing it that it should receive a name. I think it is rather a dangerous precedent. Supposing that in the Shakespeare Festival all the first murderers and second citizens insisted on having names; it would lead to an extensive baptismal performance, which might delay the festival. I can only say with what pleasure I have to propose the toast of this Club, and I think I may congratulate you on the charming ladies who are your guests to-night. I am sure that we who are enjoying your hospitality to-night wish every success and prosperity to you in the future. I know that you are interested in the theatre and the drama; whatever you may say about us on Sunday nights, you come to see us Monday night. I look forward to the time when there shall be a beautiful gathering of all the old members of our profession whom you have been kind enough to honour—some day we shall make a very goodly number—that we may recall the kindness you have shown us.

Mr. J. D. A. JOHNSON, vice-president of the Club, having acknowledged the toast,

The PRESIDENT, in proposing "Our Guests, the Ladies," said they might now go to Paris, to Berlin, or to Vienna, and they would not see either in the care of the production or in the finish of the players anything with which our own stage need be ashamed to compare.

Miss Baird, Miss Elsie, and Miss Bateman were presented with fans and bags.

Miss DOROTHEA BAIRD said: I thank you from the bottom of my heart for your kindness in giving me such a lovely memento of to-night. I shall always treasure it, and it will remind me of a very happy evening. I wish I could make a speech; but my gratitude, as Shakespeare says, must appear in other ways than words. You have done me the honour of asking me here to-night as representing the serious side of the drama. I have never spoken on any serious subject in my life, except about babies. There is not much in common between them, although they are both liable to suffer from indigestion as a result of improper and injudicious treatment. At the present time we can congratulate ourselves on the fact that the serious drama is in an exceptionally healthy condition. It is a great delight to us to see here the great actress, Miss Ellen Terry; we hope to see her for many years to come. We must all congratulate Miss Terry on the great success of her niece, Miss Phillida Terson, in her impersonation of Viola at His Majesty's. You will all feel that the drama of the future will not suffer if it has as interpreters those who have the love of the theatre in their hearts. We who belong to the stage may calmly look forward and may say "Our lot has fallen to us on a fair ground; yea, we have a goodly heritage."

Miss LILY ELSIE said: Mr. Playgoers, Mrs. Playgoers, and all the little Playgoers, I want to thank you more than I can say for the honour you have done me in asking me here to-night, and also for the beautiful dinner which I have not eaten, and for which I have been waiting a whole week. On this occasion I have to murder my own lines instead of somebody else's. It has fallen on my shoulders to return thanks for the ladies. On behalf of all the Merry Widows and all the Dollar Princesses here to-night, I thank you most heartily for your charming entertainment. I find myself in the midst of the most brilliant, handsome, and distinguished assembly in which it has ever been my lot to mix. I have so often seen you looking on at the theatre that it gives me great pleasure to return the compliment here. To those who smile, I smile, and to those who frown, I frown. The theatre owes so much to your support that we shall always feel a very, very big lot of gratitude to you. Playgoers, I am your very grateful and obedient servant.

Miss JESSIE BATEMAN said: I feel it a very great honour to be chosen to give the toast of "The Chairman" to-night. We have all been charmed by Mr. Mason's stories. Mr. Mason has also written some beautiful plays, but his chef d'œuvre is still unwritten. We look to him for an epoch-making play, which will put even Sheridan in the shade. Mr. Irving has referred to the fact that Mr. Mason was once an actor. He worked very hard with Mr. Benson and others; in a weak moment he became an M.P., but no sooner had he become associated with the O.P. Club than he was persuaded to abandon this career. I have said all there is to say of Mr. Mason's virtues and have generously overlooked his faults, and I ask you to drink his health with great heartiness.

MRS. GEORGE H. THOMAS, formerly Miss Maude Hollins a daughter of Mr. Redfern Hollins, the well-known English tenor, was severely injured recently at Yonkers, near New York City, through the cab in which she was riding coming into collision with an electric car. Mrs. Thomas is a niece of Mr. Julian Edwards, the composer of Dolly Varden, and numerous comic operas. Her two sisters, Hilda and Mabel, have made themselves popular in musical comedy. The Hollinses are Londoners, and Mr. Edwards is a native of Manchester.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

It is announced that Mr. Oswald Stoll has completed a project to acquire in the autumn a number of American vaudeville theatres in the North Western States of America, and to build others in New York and elsewhere to link up the circuit with the seaport cities.

A new company called the American British Corporation is being formed to work this enterprise, and Mr. Stoll will, it is understood, spend a portion of each year in America looking after its interests, which will, of course, be bound up with the Moss and Stoll circuit in England.

Mr. Gus Elen will go away salmon and trout fishing on Monday next, returning in about five weeks' time to the London Pavilion. At the termination of that engagement he will be off again to Scotland fishing and wild fowl shooting until the end of August.
